The Tatian Hereticks and Encratites, ſaith Jerom, grounding upon this Law, held the drinking of wine to be unlawfull, and the Cathariſts, although they ate grapes, yet would drink no wine, ſaying, that it was gall, and the beginning of darkneſſe, ſo Philaſter, and the Tatians abhorred from the fruit of the vine, becauſe the vine ſprung, ſaid they, from Satan and the earth; ſo Auguſtine: but theſe were vain and groundleſſe practices and imaginations, and a reviving of the ceremonial law aboliſhed under the Goſpel. The word rendred ſtrong drink, is שכר from whence is Sicera in Latine, and σίκερα in Greek, it ſignifieth, as Jerom hath it, whatſoever may inebriate, and Aquila ſaith any liquor made of barly, pulſe, the juyce of fruit, or palms is meant hereby, or made of any other thing. Pliny telleth of waters, which inebriate as well as wine; and that in the Iſland of Andrum in the Temple Liberi patris, there is a Fountain which yearly runneth with water of the taſte of wine, upon the fifth day of January.

Philaſter.

Auguſt. de hæreſ. 24.

Hieron. lib. 9. in Eſa. 28.

Plin. l. 14. c. 22.

Epiphan. hæreſ. 51.

And another ſtory like unto this Epiphanius telleth, that in Cybele a City of Caria, there is a Fountain, the water whereof is at the ſame time likewiſe turned; and in Geraſa a Fountain of Abraham, of which he and others taſted, and this day was the day, before that it is held, that Chriſt turned water into wine.

Plin. l. 23. c. 1, 2. Plutarch. in Catone.

Touching vineger of wine, this Pliny ſaith, hath been uſed to be drunk either alone or with water, and Plutarch ſaith, that Cato drank it with water: and Epaminondas likewiſe, and amongſt the ancients, as Lorinus hath it out of the juriſconſulti, it was uſed inſtead of wine. But the vineger of wine or ſtrong drink did not inebriate, as neither did the liquor of grapes here next ſpoken of, viz. the liquor preſſed out after the firſt preſſing, water being put to the grapes to waſh out all the virtue remaining, ing, nor was there danger in the grapes, kernels or husks, but only becauſe by uſing theſe happily they might be induced to taſte of the wine, to prevent this they are all interdicted. Rabanus applyeth this law touching the Nazarites to ſuch as vow continency, and abſtinence, that is, to thoſe of a Monaſtical profeſſion, of whom the Nazarites were a type. For as they muſt abſtein from wine, ſo theſe from luxury and intemperance ſet forth hereby, and as they muſt abſtain from ſtrong drink, ſo theſe from the divers pleaſures of the fleſh well ſet forth by ſtrong drink, becauſe it is made of divers things: again, as vineger is forbidden theſe, and grapes of all ſorts, ſo the falling back into old vices after a profeſſion of holineſſe begun, and to ſeek glory amongſt men by their abſtinence is forbidden to the religious; thus alſo Beda and Iſidor. Godefridus Tilmanus alſo agreeth in many things, but by drinking wine, he underſtandeth living in open ſinnes; by ſtrong drink, the diſſembling of holineſſe; by moiſt grapes, new ſins; by dryed, an affecting of paleneſſe in the face to get glory amongſt men.

Rabanus. The Myſtery.

Godfrid. Tilmanus in Collect. allegoriarum.

Jerome ſaith, that in forbidding wine, worldly cares are forbidden, which overwhelm the mind, as wine, and the perverting of the holy Scriptures, in ſtrong drink the abuſe of humane learning. But whereas theſe things are altogether applyed to Monaſtical Votaries, the truth is, that they cannot ſo well be alluded to herein, becauſe the Nazarites might be married perſons, and live in the married eſtate, but theſe votaries not, they were not prohibited any meats, but drinks; theſe, as Calvin noteth, are licentious for drinking wine and ſtrong drink, and place all their abſtinence in that from meats: laſtly, no razour came upon the Nazarites head, but theſe have ſhaven crowns. Wherefore they were no more figured out, I mean, the religious votaries amongſt the Papiſts at this day, then light figureth out darkneſſe, or true religion ſuperſtition, for they are a number of raſh ſuperſtitious vowers of that, which is not in their power. The particulars yet pointed at in the wine, ſtrong drink, &c. here forbidden I willingly imbrace, for the mortification of all thoſe, whom God hath ſingularly choſen, and their renouncing of all ſinful pleaſures, and abſtaining from the very appearance of evil, and all occaſions thereof may well be conceived to have been ſet forth by the rules given to this ſingular ſort of people amongſt the Jews, and to be ſuch muſt every one, that would approve himſelf Gods elect, aſpire.

Hieron. in Amos 2.

All the dayes of the vow of his ſeparation there ſhall no razour come upon his head, &c.] That is, he ſhall not cut his hair either with razour or ſizers. How many ſhould be the dayes of Nazariteſhip the Lord hath not determined, but the Hebrews ſay 30 dayes at the leaſt, ſo that if any man voweth to be a Nazarite without ſetting the time, how long, or ſetteth a ſhorter time, he is to continue his vow 30 dayes, becauſe this is the common time of a Nazariteſhip. But if he ſetteth more dayes or years, he is to continue ſo long, as he ſetteth. In like manner he that ſaith, I will be a Nazarite all the dayes of my life, is to be one during life, but then at every years end he may poll his head, and bring the offering here appointed, and they make Abſalom an example herein, who they ſay, was a Nazarite, and he polled his head once every year, but Sampſon they will have to be no right Nazarite, becauſe he vowed not, and although he polled not his head, nor drank wine, yet he might come at the dead, but theſe things, they confeſſe, they had by tradition, which of what account they are, we may ſee, Matth. 15. Lorinus ſaith, that amongſt the negative precepts of the Jewes, the Nazarite was forbidden to kembe his head, leſt any haires thereof ſhould fall off, but this was ſuperſtitious. The dayes of a Nazariteſhip doubtleſſe were ſo many as the Nazarite pleaſed to vow and no more; for as they were at liberty to vow, or not to vow, ſo were they at liberty for the time, ſeeing no number of dayes is ſet by the Lord

Verſ. 5.

Maimony in Nezir. Talmud Babyl. in Nazur.

Lorinus.

One

Anton. Guevara in Habac. 3.

One relateth, that it was of old amongſt the heathen counted an effeminate thing to cut the hair of head or beard, and when they did cut, as when they came to mans eſtate, to conſecrate it to ſome god, or when they returned ſafe from a far countrey, to a god or to a river, which was to them as a god; but herein it is probable, that they ſuperſtitiouſly imitated the Nazarites of the Jewes. Of Pauls ſhearing his head by vow in Cenchrea, ſee Act. 18. 18. and of divers others, Act. 21. 24. touching which ſee the notes there. For the reaſon of this ceremonie. The haire of the head ſaith Rabanus, ſetteth forth the thoughts in the head, we being hereby admoniſhed not to harbour malice or deceit, leſt our heads be hereby defiled; and therefore wee muſt have holy meditations in our mindes all our dayes; as the Nazarite muſt not cut his haire all the dayes of his ſeparation. Origen and after him Cyril of Alexandria by the hairs of the head underſtand good thoughts, like ſprouts and fruit of an holy mind, and ſuch alſo are good ſpeeches and actions, theſe muſt alwaies be nouriſhed and never ſhaven or cut off; and ſhaving the haire ſetting theſe forth is forbidden, becauſe ſuch ſhaving is a ſigu of mourning, and ſo of a lamentable and miſerable eſtate, ſuch as the ſtate of the godly is not, but of the fooliſh, wicked and idolatrous: So Ambroſe ſpeaking of Sampſons haire, ſaith, the haire not cut was a ſigne of divine virtue, faith and religion. But if it be demanded, how that which followeth ſhall then be applied of cutting the haire at the end of the Nazariteſhip, and burning it under the altar? Cyril Alexand. ſaith, that hereby was ſet forth the putting away of old things, when the new law of the Goſpel was come, the aboliſhing of ceremonies, and the putting of them all under the Altar; as it were by the fire thereof to be conſumed, that they might never come into uſe again. Gregory, who by the haires of the head contrary to all, that yet hath been ſaid, underſtandeth vices which grow in thoſe, that profeſſe continency by preſumptuous thoughts, will have the cutting of the haire in the end to deſigne the perfection, that the religious in the end attain unto, when as all vices being put away they are altogether inflamed with the love of God. But this ſeemeth not to be ſo apt an application, becauſe then what ſhall be ſaid of thoſe that are Nazarites all their life time, and ſo never ſhave their haire? The former therefore is better, perſeverance in holineſs to the end is by the Nazarites not cutting his hair ſet forth, and the keeping of a mans ſelfe alwayes undefiled; becauſe when the Nazarite is polluted any way he muſt cut his haire and bring his offerings, and then begin his time again. v. 9. 10. intimating that the pollution by ſinne was the the thing here pointed at, from which we muſt alwayes keep our ſelves free; and if we cannot but are by any means polluted, we muſt renew our reſolutions againſt ſinne from thence forward, and be more watchfull over our wayes for all time to come. And for the cutting of the haire at the end of the Nazariteſhip Cyrils allegory is good; the aboliſhing of the ceremonies of the Moſaicall Law, when the time of their ending was come is aptly ſet forth. For now old things are paſt and all are become new.

The Myſterie, Rabanus.

Origen. Hom 1. in Num. Cyril. Alex. 16. de Adorat.

Ambroſ. in Jud.

Cyril. Alex.

Gregor 2 Moral. c. 26.

2 Cor. 5.17.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth beſides this of keeping a mans ſelfe undefiled, ſaith, or by the not cutting of the haire the Nazarites ſubjection to the Lord was deſigned to be in a ſpeciall manner under him for their further ſanctification, as the womans long haire is a ſigne of her ſubjection to her husband; but I reſt in the firſt.

1 Cor. 11. 5.

Verſ. 6. All the daies of his ſeparation he ſhall come at no dead body, &c.] of being polluted by the dead; ſee before Levit. 21. and how a dead ſoul is put by an Hebraiſme for a dead body, as here. The Nazarite might not by mourning, or touching, or comming neare any dead body defile himſelfe, although it were his father or mother; how many wayes, and how much the dead polluted; ſee Numb. 19. 11. 12. &c. Death came by ſinne, and therefore a dead bodies pollutiug might well ſet forth the polluting of the dead

Rom. 5. 10.

works

works of ſin. The reaſon, why a Nazarite might not come at the dead, was, becauſe the conſecration of his god is upon his head. Hebr. נזר the crown of his god, as the Cald. rendreth it; the Septuag. the vow of his god; but Levit.21.12. it is put for a crown; the high Prieſt is ſaid to have the crown of anointing upon his head, and the Nazarite here the crown of his god, and the high prieſt might not therefore come at the dead, whether father or mother, verſ.10,11. no more might the Nazarite, and for drinking wine it is forbidden to the high Prieſt, Levit. 10.9. and here to the Nazarite, ſo that the Hebrews obſervation is good, that the Nazarite was as a prieſt for holineſſe, during his time, yea as the high prieſt; ſo that he may well be held to have been a type of Chriſt, as the high prieſt. Pſal.132.18.

Touching the not ſhaving the hair, and not coming nigh the dead, Maimony noteth well, that if a Nazarite prove a leper, notwithſtanding this prohibition, he muſt be ſhaven, if he be healed in the time of his Nazariteſhip, becauſe it is commanded Levit.14.8. and a negative precept muſt alwayes give place to an affirmative; and if being upon the way he findeth a dead body, and there is none to bury him, he may pollute himſelf by burying him, and if two Nazarites be together, one having vowed for 30 dayes, and the other for 100 dayes, he that hath vowed for the leaſt time, ſhall bury him. See the like before for the high Prieſt, Levit. 21. 13. Maimony in Nezir. ch.7. Talmud Babyl. c. 7.

What the not coming at the dead ſignifieth hath been ſaid before, viz. the fleeing of defilement by the dead works of ſin, and to ſhew this in all that are devoted to God, is this prohibition, whereas it followeth, The myſtery.

Verſ. 9.

If a man dyeth ſuddenly by him, and he be defiled, he ſhall ſhave his head the ſeventh day, and upon the eighth bring two turtles, and two young pigeons, &c. Rabanus ſaith, if a man hath defiled himſelf by ſin, the ſhaving here preſcribed myſtically taught, that he ſhould ſhave away forthwith out of his mind all ſinfull pleaſures, cleanſing and purging himſelf by true repentance, then he muſt offer the turtles of chaſtity, and the pigeons of innocency of life, and the lamb of meekneſſe, and ſo he ſhall come to the eighth day of heavenly beatitude through the mediation of the high Prieſt Chriſt. This Law of ſhaving in caſe that a Nazarite is made unclean by caſualty, that he may again be cleanſed, is like to that of cleanſing the leprous, Levit.14. and the offering is the ſame with the offerings for uncleanneſſe by iſſues, Levit.15.14. and the times are the ſame; onely here a lamb is more offered then there. This ſhaving was not tyed to the door of the Tabernacle, as at the end of his time, neither is his hair appointed to be burnt; but theſe things are here left untouched: but Maimony ſaith, this hair was to be buried. He alſo noteth, that beſides ſhaving he muſt waſh upon the ſeventh day, and before this upon the third day be ſprinkled with water, and the ſeventh being ended, at even, which was the beginning of the eight, to bring his offering, according to Numb. 19. 12,19. And becauſe the Nazarite is not appointed in any other caſe, but onely for being defiled by the dead to begin again, and to ſhave his head, and bring an offering, he ſaith, that if he hath drunk wine or cut off any lock of his head, wherein he hath erred from theſe rules, he is not for this to bring an offering or to begin again, but he muſt abide in his Nazariteſhip 30 dayes longer for cutting his hair, that his locks may grow again, the time, whileſt they are off, not being counted any part of his time vowed to this order. And in like manner he ſaith, if he hath a running iſſue, or any other uncleanneſſe during the time of his Nazariteſhip, yet the reckoning of his dayes goeth on all the time of ſuch uncleanneſſe. In that the Nazarite is ſaid to be defiled by the dead dying ſuddenly by him, which he could not avoid; Ainſworth well noteth, that even the leaſt ſin defileth the ſoul. Rabanus. Maimony. Note. Ainſworth.

Again, in that by one ſuch caſualty upon the ſudden, many dayes purity are nullified, we may ſee, how dangerous it is to turn from the righteouſneſſe wherein we have begun; he that at any time doth ſo, all his former righteouſneſſe ſhall not be remembred, &c. Again, in that a ſacrifice muſt be brought to cleanſe, and after this the Nazarite muſt begin his time of ſtrictneſſe again; note, both that all cleanſing is by the blood of Chriſt; and we are not hereby cleanſed to live again licentiouſly in ſin, but to begin a new courſe of holy living, having virtue from this cleanſing ſo to do all our dayes.

Ezech. 18.26.

Verſ. 13. This is the Law of the Nazarite, when the dayes of his Nazariteſhip are fulfilled, he ſhall be brought to the door of the Tabernacle, &c.] For theſe words, he ſhall be brought, Hebr. is, he ſhall bring it, or him, for the word is אתו: The Sept. and Junius have it, he ſhall bring it, that is, the offering, as is further explained, verſ. 14. But Sol. Jarchi, he ſhall bring himſelf. Lyranus, the Prieſt ſhall bring him; Oleaſter, the Synagogue ſhall bring him. That of bringing himſelf is followed by Vatablus, Pagninus, Munſter, &c. But it ſeemeth to me to ſound beſt, he ſhall bring this, that is, the offering mentioned verſ. 24. But Act. 21.26. where Paul is ſaid to have entred the Temple, till an offering ſhould be made, ſeemeth to favour that of Sol. Jarchi. The offerings to be brought now by the Nazarite, were an he lamb of the firſt year, an ewe lamb, and a ram; the one for a burnt-offering, the other for a ſin-offering, and the third for a peace-offering; and together with this a basket of unleavened bread, &c. Our new tranſlation, for one ram, hath one lamb; but it is איל, which properly ſignifieth a ram: of the manner of offering theſe, ſee before, Lev. 1.c.3.c.4. Touching the unleavened bread of fine flowr made into cakes, mingled with oyl, and wafers anointed with oyl, Maimony ſaith, that the quantity was 6 tenth deales of flowre, which was made into ten cakes, and ten wafers; of the manner ſee before, Levit. 7.12. and beſides all theſe, he muſt bring their meat-offering and drink-offerings; for to every ſacrifice a meat-offering and drink-offering muſt be added, as was ſhewed before, Levit. 2. and is ſhewed after, Numb. 28. ſo that the Nazarites meat-offering was firſt extraordinary, and then ordinary meat-offerings and drink-offerings. And all theſe ſacrifices the prieſt muſt offer, and his meat-offerings, &c. Theſe things being done, the Nazarite muſt ſhave his head at the door of the Tabernacle, and taking his hair put it in the fire under the ſacrifice of peace-offerings. Whereas it is ſaid, at the door, Maimony noteth, if it were done afterwards, when the Temple was built, in the City, it would ſerve, but the door of the Tabernacle muſt then be open, and before the door he might not ſhave, for that were a contempt, but at the door. The uſuall place to ſhave in, he ſaith, was in the womens court in the Nazarites chamber, which was there in the South eaſt corner, and in ſhaving he muſt not leave two haires, for if he did, his ſhaving was fruſtrate, and he muſt continue yet 30 dayes more and then ſhave again. But herein, I take it, the the Hebrews were over-curious, as in many obſervations more, the naming whereof I therefore omit.

Septuag.
Junius.
Sol. Jarchi.

Verſ. 14.
Ver. 15.

Maimony.

Ver. 16, 17.
Verſ. 18.

Maimony in Nezir. ch. 8.

Verſ. 19. And the Prieſt ſhall take the ſodden ſhoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake, and one wafer, and put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, &c.] When the beaſt to be ſacrificed for a peace-offering was killed and flea'd, and the fat taken off to be burnt upon the altar; whileſt that was burning, the parts were boyled at the door of the tabernacle, as we may gather from Levit. 8. 31. 1 Sam. 2. 14, 15. Now from amongſt theſe boyled parts a ſhoulder was taken out to be waved, as it followeth verſ. 20. and then the Prieſt had it for his own. What ſhoulder this was it is not ſaid, but becauſe the ſhoulder thus taken is ſaid together with the wave breaſt and heave ſhoulder to be the Prieſts, and the heave ſhoulder was the right, Levit. 7.32. it is plain that this was the left. Wherefore Lorinus ſtanding for the right ſhoulder was in an errour. Maimony

Maimony ſpeaking hereof ſaith, that the ram being cut in pieces, the breaſt and the ſhoulder were put apart for the Prieſt, and the reſt ſodden in the womens court, from amongſt which the ſhoulder being taken out was with one cake and one wafer, together with the breaſt and heave ſhoulder put upon the hands of the Nazarite, then the Prieſt putting his hands under waved them, &c. all which tendeth to confirm the ſame. So that the Prieſts ſhare from the Nazarites peace-offering was more by one ſhoulder, then from any other, ſhewing that their thankfulneſſe muſt be greater for grace given them to perform their vowes, ſo Ainſworth. For the reaſon of all theſe offerings and rites, from verſ. 13. hitherto, Cazkuni ſaith, that three ſacrifices were brought to looſe him from three prohibitions, whereby he was tyed before, viz. againſt wine, cutting his hair, and coming at the dead. But an holocauſt being to the honour of God, and a peace-offering for thankſgiving, and a ſin-offering for ſin, it may better be conceived that all theſe were preſcribed him, that he might ſhew himſelf thankful for the grace given him to keep this his vow, and yet acknowledge his imperfections and failings, deſiring, that they might be expiated: whereby, as Cyril hath it, may be gathered, that the life even of the moſt holy Nazarites was not altogether unblameable, but needed purgation, (therefore a female lamb the more imperfect ſexe was brought for a ſin-offering) this being a priviledge onely of Emmanuel to have nothing in him worthy of blame. So that by works there can be no juſtification, as Gal.2.15. the moſt holy, that know nothing by themſelves, yet have ſins cleaving to them, and are not hereby juſtified. Again, he brought his basket of unleavened cakes, to ſet forth a ſingle and ſincere life, the Prieſt bringing them before the Lord ſet forth Chriſt, in whom alone all our devotions are accepted, both praiſes and prayers for the pardon of ſin, and our ſincere endeavours to lead an holy and pure life. Thus Cyril, who alſo goeth through the reſt of the rights, applying them allegorically; but becauſe I think them not ſo apt or uſeful, I paſſe them over. His ſhaving off his hair at the door of the tabernacle, and burning it under his ſacrifice of peace, was to acknowledge that all his holineſſe, whereof his hair was a ſign, came from God, and therefore he gave him all the praiſe thereof. Rupertus hereby underſtandeth Chriſt calling himſelf the door, purging away the hairs, that is, the ſins of the Iſraelites, when in the end they ſhall be converted. But the hairs here not being cut off, as before to purge from pollution, this can be no apt application. If any man be not ſatisfied yet with the former, hereby either may be ſet forth the taking of that quite away from us, which is capable of pollution by ſin; for as the Nazarites hair was at the end of the time of his vow ſhaven quite off and conſumed in the fire, ſo in the end of every godly mans life that nature ſhall be taken away, (when he is at the door of the Tabernacle of the moſt high) which is capable of ſin; for that which is natural ſhall ceaſe, and that under a peace-offering, for he ſhall depart in peace and comfort, in reſpect of his hope of the future change into ſpiritual and glorious. After this the ſodden ſhoulder and cake and wafer being waved before the Lord, he may drink wine; this ſhewed, that finally our offerings that we have made unto God by doing good ſhall come in remembrance, and we ſhall have joy in the Kingdome of heaven, for the ſorrowes and afflictions endured here.

And therefore although it were meant, that he ſhould be at liberty for ſhaving, when he would, and for coming at the dead alſo, yet theſe are not mentioned, but onely, that he might drink wine, one of the three, wherein he was before bound, the reſt being under it underſtood; whereas verſe 20, it is thus concluded: and after that he may drink wine; Maimony noteth, that even when the time of his nazariteſhip is expired, it is unlawful for him to drink wine &c: til the ſhaving and offering here preſcribed be made, be-

Maimony in Maaſeh hakorbonoth.c.9.

Ainſworth.

Cazkuni.

Cyril Alex. de adorat: vitam talium non vacare reprehenſione omnino, ſed egere purgatione, cum fœmina infirmitatem denotet, ſoliq; Emmanueli ſervari nihil habere quod vituperari poſſit.

The Allegory.

Rupertus.

cauſe, till this, he is bound in all things, as a Nazarite.

Verſ. 21. This is the law of the Nazarite, &c. beſides that, which his hand ſhall get. Here is the concluſion of this law touching the Nazarite, being added to make the deeper impreſſion, as at the end of other ordinances, Levit. 7. 37. Numb. 5. 29. the like is done.

Beſides that, which his hand ſhall get.] That is, the oblations before mentioned muſt be brought by every Nazarite, and if any that are of ability, ſhall voluntarily vow more, that muſt at the ſame time be brought alſo. Touching this phraſe, which his hand ſhall get, the meaning is, which he hath, or poſſeſſeth, as it is uſed before, Levit. 5.7,11.

Verſ. 23. Speak to Aaron and to his ſon, ſaying, On this wiſe ye ſhall bleſſe the children of Iſrael: the Lord bleſſe thee and keep thee, the Lord make his face to ſhine upon thee, &c.] After divers ordinances and lawes, here the Prieſts are taught to bleſſe the people, to intimate, that ſuch as hear the will of God and do it, ſhall be bleſſed in the deed: of Aarons, and Moſes his bleſſing of the people, we read before, Levit.9.22,23. but of the form of words to be uſed in bleſſing, not till now. Yet Toſtatus thinketh, that this form was then uſed; but how this could be, I cannot ſee, forſomuch as this form of bleſſing is here firſt taught, unleſſe we ſhall ſay, that God by his Spirit guided them thus to bleſſe in his name, and now, that all the Prieſts from generation to generation might have a rule to go by in bleſſing, the ſame was expreſly taught, and ſet down.

Jam. 1. 25.

Toſtatus.

Maimony the title of Prayer.

For the manner of the Prieſts bleſſing after this inſtitution, Maimony ſaith, it was thus: The Prieſts went up to the bank or ſtage after the morning ſervice ended, and there lifting up their hands above their heads, all but the high Prieſt, (for he might not lift up his hands higher then the golden plate upon his head; of which, ſee Exod. 28. 36.) they ſpread their fingers, and then one read theſe three Verſes, the people anſwering at the end of them. Bleſſed be the Lord God, the God of Iſrael for ever and ever; and the Prieſt, that read pronounced the name of the Lord by theſe four letters יהוה, yet in other places, ſaving in Synagogues, it might not be ſo pronounced; but by this word Adonai.

The number of Prieſts lifting up their hands together are ten, if in any Synagogue there be no Prieſt, but a Miniſter, he lifting up his hands to bleſſe ſaith: Our God, and the God of our fathers bleſſe us with the threefold bleſſing written by Moſes his ſervant, which was pronounced out of the mouth of Aaron and his ſons, the Prieſts, as it is ſaid, the Lord bleſſe thee and keep thee, &c. And the bleſſing here written was by the Prieſts pronounced in the morning, after the ſacrifice then offered, but not after the evening ſacrifice. And this word thus, he ſaith, did imply both ſtanding, lifting up of the hands in the holy tongue, with an high voyce, and their faces being to the faces of the people.

Ver.24, 25, 26. R. Menahem. Procopius. Cyril. Alex.

In this bleſſing the Lord is named three times, verſ.24,25,26. and R. Menahem noteth, that it is every time written with a different accent, implying a myſtery. And what other myſtery can this be, but that of the Trinity of Perſons in one Deity? ſo Procopius, Cyril Alex. Rabanus, &c. The Lord then firſt named here is God the Father, the ſecond God the Son, and the third God the holy Ghoſt; and therefore it is to be held, that this form is the ground of the bleſſings mentioned in the New Teſtament, as 2 Cor.13.14. Rev.1.4,5. wherein the harmony between the two Teſtaments ſeemeth to be admirable for the confounding of the malicious Jews, who abhor from the doctrine of the Trinity. And Galatinus ſaith, that the Prieſts of old pronounced this bleſſing, holding up three fingers of both their hands, intimating the Trinity. In this bleſſing ſix things are pronounced; whereof two are annexed to the Lord firſt named, two to the ſecond, and two to the third: whereupon Rupertus ſaith well, in each verſe the effect of Gods bleſſing is prayed for, which is to enjoy good, and to be ſerved from evil

Galatin. l.2. c.10.

Rupertus.

This

This is prayed for of the Father. V. 24. The Lord bleſſe thee and keep thee, that is, give thee good things, and keep thee from evill; and of the Sonne, Verſ.26. The Lord make his face to ſhine upon thee, and be gracious to thee, which is to the ſame effect, and of the Holy Ghoſt, verſ.26. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. So that this bleſſing comprehends all good things, remiſſion of ſins, the gifts of grace; and temporall bleſſings here, and deliverance from miſery, and hell, and everlaſting deſtruction, and the corruption of our bodies, and the raiſing of them up to glorie hereafter. Cajetan ſomewhat differing here-from ſaith, by the firſt in v. 24. the fruition of good and the keeping away of evill is meant, by the ſecond; v. 25. the illumination by faith, and the remiſſion of ſinnes; and by the third, v.26. the ſpeciall care of God about the means of good to his elect, and their future ſtate in peace. Cajetan.

Toſtatus alledgeth Aben Ezra expounding all of temporall bleſſings, thus. The Lord preſerve thee from adverſitie, and preſerve the good granted thee, that it be not loſt; ſhew himſelf chearfull in giving, and deliver thee from miſery; and if at any time he puniſheth thee, turn again in mercy to thee, and make thee alwaies to live ſweetly and quietly. Rabanus by the firſt underſtandeth bleſſing with ſpirituall gifts, and keeping them by his grace that they may not fall again there-from: by the ſecond everlaſting life and ſalvation, and by the third deliverance from all enemies, whereupon peace followeth. But I preferre that of Rupertus: By keeping, God the Fathers keeping them from evill is meant, Pſalm.121. 7. The Lord will keep thee from all evil, yea it is even he that ſhall keep thy ſoul. John 17. 11. Keep through thy name thoſe whom thou haſt given me, keep them from evil. By theſe words, The Lord make his face to ſhine upon thee; the favour of God in Chriſt is meant, and therefore agreeably to this it is ſaid; God that hath commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſſe, hath ſhined in our hearts, giving the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Ieſus Chriſt. So that he is the King of whom it is ſaid, In the light of the Kings face is life, and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain. The Cald. for face hath Shechinah; whereby Chriſt is meant as was ſhewed; Exod. 34.9. and to Chriſt Theodoret referreth it qu. 11.in Num. For the next words, and be gracious unto thee: nothing is more frequent then to ſpeake of grace by Chriſt; ſee John 1. 17. Rom. 6.20. 2 Cor.13.14. And God hath ſhewed us the exceeding riches of his grace, ſaith the Apoſtle through Chriſt; and again, grace hath reigned through righteouſneſſe unto eternall life by Ieſus Chriſt. Laſtly, by theſe words; the Lord lift up the light of his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace; The applying of Gods favour to the ſoule is meant, whereupon inward peace ariſeth; as Rom.5. 1. and this is by the Holy Ghoſt. Rom.8.15. By the ſpirit we call God Abba Father, and this witneſſeth to our ſpirits, that we are the children of God. And for peace; Gal. 5. 22. the fruit of the ſpirit is love, ioy, peace, &c. Touching the Prieſts that were thus to bleſſe, there muſt ſaith Maimony be in them theſe ſix things. 1. He muſt not ſtammer or liſp. 2. He muſt be without blemiſh in his face, hands and feet. 3. He muſt not be one that hath killed a man, though unawares. Eſa.1.15. He cannot acceptably lift up his hands in bleſſing, neither muſt he be one that hath ſinned by adolatry although it repenteth him. 2 King. 23. 9. 4. He muſt be of the full age required in a Prieſt. 5. He muſt not be one that hath drunk wine, although it be but a quarter of a log. 6. He muſt firſt waſh his hands. If it be demanded what good came of this bleſſing, that ſuch circumſpection was uſed about it?

Toſtatus.

Rabanus.

2 Cor. 4. 6.

Prov. 16. 15.

Eph. 2. 7. 8.

Maimony, of Prayer, c. 15.

Levit. 10. 9.

This is reſolved. Verſ. 27. They ſhall put my name upon the children of Iſrael, and I will bleſſe them, &c.] Their pronouncing of a bleſſing from the Lord upon them ſhould not be vain; as if in ſaying thus, according to Gods ordinance there were nothing but words, but the name of God which is as a ſtrong Tower ſhould be put upon them, which name to bear

Verſ. 27.

Prov. 18. 10.

Cazkuni.

Maimony, of prayer, c. 15.

The Myſtery. Rupertus.

Act. 3. 26. Luke 1.

Gal. 3. 8.

is to be moſt happy. Revel. 22. 4. The Prieſts bleſſing then was not the thing herein reſpected; and therefore Cazkuni noteth, that the Prieſts ſhould never ſay when they had done thus; we have bleſſed, for the Prieſts bleſſing might be ſimple or wicked; and therefore no man ought to ſay how can this ſimple Prieſts bleſſing do me any good? for the holy bleſſed God hath ſaid, I wil bleſſe them: the Prieſt doth the commandment, and God bleſſeth according to his pleaſure. In the Prieſts bleſſing thus, Chriſt our High Prieſt bleſſing us his people was myſtically pointed at, according to Rupertus and others. For he was ſent to bleſſe us, in turning us from our ſinnes, and began with bleſſing, Matth. 5. and ended with lifting up his hands and bleſſing, Luc. 24. 50. 51. And therefore it is to be noted, that when this high Prieſt was now to come into the world: Zachary, one of the chief Prieſts was ſtricken dumb, ſo that he could not ſpeak to bleſſe the people at his coming out from offering incenſe, whereby was intimated, that this bleſſing by the Aaronicall Prieſthood, was ſet up but for a time to figure him out, from whom all bleſſings ever flow upon his people, and that not they, but he ſhould hereafter bleſſe all the faithfull of all Nations. And to this agreeth the fore-recited cuſtome of the Prieſt to bleſſe at the morning, but not at the evening ſacrifice, ſetting forth the evening of the world, when thoſe Prieſts ſhould bleſſe no more, but Chriſt and his Miniſters. Saint Auguſtine entreating upon this, v. 27. ſaith, that the will of the Prieſt pronouncing the bleſſing could not profit nor hinder the efficacy thereof, but onely the merit of him that craved the bleſſing which maketh againſt a tenet of the Popiſh, that the efficacy of the Sacrament of Baptiſme dependeth upon the intention of the Prieſt; for then not God, but man ſhould bleſſe, contrary to that which is here taught. The Hebrews being ſuperſtitiouſly addicted to the name יהוה ſay, that the efficacy of this bleſſing depended upon the right pronouncing of that name, and that this forme of bleſſing was kept in the Temple till the time of Simeon, but then ceaſed: which if it did, it was an argument of the Aaronicall Prieſthood turned into a Chriſtian miniſtery, bleſſing all now in the name of Chriſt.

Auguſt. vet. Teſt. q. 11. Vos ponite nomen meum ſuper filios Iſrael, inquit Dominus, & ego benedicam iis ſic dicitur, ut gratiam traditio per miniſterium ordinantis transfunderet hominibus, nec voluntas ſacerdotis prodeſſe aut obeſſe poſſet, ſed meritum benedictionem poſcentis.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. AND upon the day when Moſes had fully ſet up the Tabernacle, and anointed it, &c. That the Princes of Iſrael, heads of the houſes of their fathers offered] About the time, when theſe offerings were made, there is great difference amongſt Expoſitours, becauſe it is ſaid, In the day that Moſes had fully ſet up the Tabernacle; ſo that it ſhould ſeeme to have been done the firſt moneth of the ſecond yeare, becauſe that was the time of ſetting up the Tabernacle, as appeareth, Exod. 40. but if ſo, how could the people be numbred, and all other things done hitherto related in this booke, and Leviticus, and an end be made of offering theſe gifts, which laſted twelve dayes, and after this the Paſſeover kept upon the fourteenth day, as is ſaid, Numb. 9. This is ſometime reſolved by Comeſtor, as I have already reſolved it, upon Exod. 40. viz. that the Tabernacle was dedicated upon the firſt day, and then the Princes began to offer, immediately after which offerings ended, the Paſſeover followed. And as for other things related in Levit. and Numb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. as coming between, and they were done the dayes following of the ſame moneth and in the ſecond to the twentieth day, which was the time of their remove, chap. 10. 11. ſo that this cometh in here by way of capitulation, as belonging to another place, but hitherto omitted. And ſometime he ſaith, that by the ſame day is meant the like day of another moneth, viz. of the ſecond.

Quæſt.

Scholaſt. hiſtor.

To the first agreeth Lyranus and Tostatus, &c. But because it is said here, the Princes of the people that were numbred; intimating the numbring of them to have preceded this, and the wagons given are now divided amongst the families of the Levites according to their former distinction, chap. 4. implying, that those things were done before this, some stand for the second way of clearing this doubt, as Rickelius. Lyranus. Tostatus.

But if any man not being satisfied with the former, shall flee to this of their offering the next moneth, it were better for him with Oleaster to say, that whilest the Tabernacle was setting up, it being a work of many dayes, the people were numbred, &c. and now it being fully finished, at the beginning of the second moneth these offerings were made. But if there be not a proteron hysteron here, there must needs be one granted, chap. 9. about the Passeover kept the 14 day of the next moneth. Wherefore it is best to hold to the first solution; and for the words objected, Princes of the people, that were numbred, &c. Tostatus answereth well, this might be so spoken, and yet the people not numbred before this, because Moses had set down the numbring before, though after in time, and so he mentioneth their numbring now, as by him set down before, although it were a thing done after. And it is most agreeable with reason, that the dedication of the tabernacle, which was at this time, should be immediately after the consecration and anointing: but of that mention was made, Levit. 8. 9, 10. and here it is expressly said, ver. 84. in the day of anointing this dedication was made, wherefore it must needs be before the numbring of the people, and divers other things in the history placed before this. Oleaster. Tostatus.

Princes of Israel, heads of the house of their fathers, &c. offered. Here is no mention made, saith Calvin, of the peoples offerings, but onely of the princes, and therefore it is most probable that the people brought in their gifts to their princes, whereby they were inabled to offer each one thus largely, who, we cannot conceive otherwise, how they should have gotten together so great substance in gold and silver and other things. But Tostatus thinketh, that they offered them of their own cost. Vers. 2. Calvin.

And they brought their offering before the Lord, six covered wagons, and 12 oxen, a wagon for two of the princes, &c.] These offerings seem to have been brought voluntarily by consent of the Princes for the carrying of the Tabernacle and the instruments thereof; and Jonathan in his Targum saith, that Moses would not receive them, till that he was commanded by the Lord, which is intimated vers. 4. the Lord bade Moses take them for the service of the tabernacle. The word translated covered wagons, is עגלת צב, and the word צב is put for a Tortois, Levit. 11. 29. being so called from the shell that covereth it; and these wagons being so called for the resemblance of a Tortois in their covering. Yet Cazkuni for צב having צבא an army, rendreth it wagons of the army. Two Princes joyned in one wagon, thus bringing six amongst them all, saith R. Menahem, answering to the six-fold blessing before going; and 12 oxen, answering to the number of the 12 Tribes. But that alluding to the blessings, is more curious then sound. Amongst ours there are divers allegorical expositions brought upon this: but that of Rabanus is best, applying it to the first Christians, who ministred of their substance to the Apostles and other Ministers of the Gospel to their support, as it were in wagons drawn by oxen, when they went about preaching the Gospel For other particulars of the number of 6 and 12 in the same authour, I passe them over, as too curious. Vers. 3. Targum Jonathan. Cazkuni. R. Menahem. Rabanus.

Two Princes joyning in a chariot, may well set forth the unity that should be amongst the faithful, and the princes devotion appearing herein above all others may be applyed to teach, that principal men should be most forward in the duties of Gods service, and in promoting the same. Cazkuni saith, that these offerings were brought to make atonement for the Note. Cazkuni.

Numb. 31. 49, 50. the numbring of the people, as afterwards, when after a battel fought, they had been numbred, and none were found missing, an offering was brought for an atonement for their soules. But here there was another reason of their offering, viz. for the dedication of the tabernacle.

V. 6, 7, 8, 9. These 6 wagons, and 12 oxen Moses at the word of the Lord took, giving two and four oxen to the Levites of the family of Gershon, and four and eight oxen to the family of Merari, but none to the Kohathites, because they were to bear the Ark upon their shoulders, and not to carry it, or any of the things committed to them in wagons, against which ordinance when it was transgressed, see how severely it was punished in Uzzah. What need the Merarites had of more wagons, then the Gershonites, see Numb. 4. their carriages were the boards, pillars and barres of the tabernacle, but the Gershonites the curtains and hangings. In that the Kohathites, who were most preferred about the tabernacle, were put to most labour, for they carried all upon their shoulders, note, that the more highly advanced any are in the Church of God, the more they should labour in his work.

2 Sam. 6.

Note.

Vers. 10. And the Princes offered for the dedicating of the altar in the day that it was anointed &c.] The word rendred dedicating, is חנפרת, by the Sept. rendred ἐγκαινίσμῶ, from whence is the Latine encœnia, innovations, or initiations of new things to that use for which they were made with joy and solemnity. And not only the tabernacle and altar now, and afterwards the Temple built by Solomon, and restored after the captivity, and again by Judas Macchabeus is said to have been dedicated, by this word; but also Davids own house, Psal. 30. the title whereof sheweth, that it was made at the dedication of his own house, and other mens houses, Deut. 20. 5. And the Latines, saith Lorinus, say, that writings, images, tables, the capitol, sheilds, auditories and the like are dedicated, ἐγκαίνια, as Suidas noteth, being nothing else, according to the common use of the word, but a feast, καθ' ἣν ἐγκαινουργεῖτο, at which any new thing was made. And Nebuchadnezzar is said to have dedicated the image that he had set up. And this offering now made at the dedication of the altar, saith Sol. Jarchi, was properly made for that, being herein distinct from the other gifts, which were brought only for the carriage of the tabernacle and the implements thereof: they offered their offerings before the altar, that is, as they had presented their chariots and oxen before the door of the Tabernacle, so now they bring their other gifts, which God stirred up their hearts freely to offer in the dedicating of the altar, that afterwards all other sacrifices might be offered acceptably thereupon, but Moses received them not, but by the direction of the Lord, as is intimated, vers. 11. And the Lord said to Moses, they shall offer their offerings, &c. so Sol. Jarchi also, in speaking of which he hath these words, Moses received it not, till he was commanded by the mouth of the power: a like phrase to which is used Matth. 26. 64. It is likely, when he saw so many offerings more brought, he did nothing, till he knew the good pleasure of God, wherefore God directed him, teaching hereby, that in the worship and service of God, we must look for direction from his Word even in minute things, and not go upon our own heads.

2 Chron. 7. Ezra 6. 16. 1 Machab. 4. 54.

Lorinus.

Suidas.

Dan. 3.

Note.

Vers. 11. they shall offer their offerings each prince on his day. To shew, how acceptable these offerings were to the Lord, he appointeth them to be distinctly offered in 12 dayes, and each ones offerings, although they were the same, are written at large 12 times over. By the same things offered by every one of them, Rabanus not unaptly saith, was shewed, that the Doctours of the Church in all times should propound the same doctrines of truth.

Rabanus.

Vers. 12. He that offered his offering the first day was Naashon the son of Aminadab of the tribe of Judah.] For the order of these Princes offerings, it was not according according to the order of their numbring, Chap. 1. but according to the order of their placing about the Tabernacle. Chap. 2. beginning with those at the East, and so proceeding to the South, and then to the West, and lastly to the North. The Prince of the Tribe of Judah is the first, because as the Hebrews say, Judah followed Moses first through the red sea, and we may say, because Christ was to come of Judah, and the Kings his progenitours.

Vers. 13. And his offering was one silver charger, the weight 130 shekles, one silver bowle of 70 shekles of the sanctuary, both of them were full of fine floure mingled with oyle for a meat offering. One spoon of 10. shekels of gold full of incense, &c. The silver charger or dish, for so the same word קערת, Exod. 25. 29. is rendred, by some is taken for a vessell to put vinegar in, rendering it therefore acetabulum, as the vulgar Latine: but this signifieth properly a small dish or saucer, and therefore agreeth not with the weight of this. Rabanus following that reading in his mysticall applications, will have it broad below, and narrow at the top, as figuring out the time of the Law, when divine knowledge was but in a little measure coming forth as it were by drops, but the bason which is the next, to figure out the time of the Gospel, when all things were made manifest. But it is generally taken for a dish or charger, which is broad for meat to be laid into, and the bason for a vessell to contain drinke. But here they are both described, as vessels to hold a meat-offerings of fine flower and oyle. Junius rendreth it scumla, a dish containing eight ounces, some patera à patendo. The Septuagint render it τρύβλιον, which word is used, Matth. 26. 23. for a dish containing meat: for the Lord using this word sai th, He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, shall betray me; whereby it is plain, that a charger or great dish is meant hereby, wherein meat was contained. For the next word פזמק, a bason; the Septuagint render it phiala, a pot or cup with a wide mouth, out of which a man might drinke enough: and so Cyril Alex. παρὰ τὸ πίνειν ἅπας. Junius rendreth it crater a goblet, Vatablus gutturnium, a kinde of vessell with a narrow mouth, out of which the liquor cometh by drops; but how then could it have been filled with fine flower so easily? I referre the most generall acception of the word for a bowle or pot, or viall, for both of such belonging to the Altar, it is spoken, Zach. 14. 20. the bloud of the sacrifices being therein carried and powred upon the Altar, and זמק of which this word cometh, signifieth to sprinkle or to powre out with sprinkling. For the shekel whereby they weighed; see Exod. 30. 13. and Numb. 3. 47. The next thing said here to be brought in Hebrew, כף, is by the Septuagint rendred θυίσκη a vessell for incense, by the vulgar Latine mortariolum, by Junius acerra a cup or censer to hold frankincense, of which word see, Exod. 25. 29. Sol. Jarchi noteth, that frankincense was properly for the golden altar, and never any was offered upon the brasen altar, that we reade of, but at this time onely: but as oyle, so frankincense was to be offered with every meat offering, Levit. 2. 1. Therefore here was nothing extraordinary done; but the Rabbin distinguisheth between the frankincense commonly offered, and this, saying, that this was Ketoreth, the making whereof is described, Exod. 30. 34 that Lebonah, a perfume, wherein happily the note may well hold. The weight of this piece is said to have been ten shekels, v. 8. this is explained, according to the shekel of the sanctuarie; and Jonathan in his Targum saith, the weight of the silver shekels is meant, for those of gold were not so much.

Rabanus.

Junius.

Cyril. Alex. l. 10. de adorat.

Sol. Jarchi.

Jonathan Targum.

Vers. 16. One Kid of the Goats for a sinne offering.] This was appointed to be a sin-offering for a Ruler, Levit. 4. but in the case of some particular sinne committed by him, as Cazkuni noteth, so that it was extraordinarily brought here, because no particular person bringeth a voluntary sinne-offering, but in the case before spoken of, and the incense brought, now was also extraordinary, because no particular person bringeth voluntary incense: so

Cazkuni.

Cazkuni.

Cazkuni. For the myſtery, that of Rabanus, cannot ſtand for the reaſon before alledged. Rupertus by the charger weighing 130. ſhekels, underſtandeth the faith in one God by 100. and of three Perſons by thirtie, having in it three times ten: by the viall of 70 ſhekels, the ſeven-fold graces of the ſpirit under the Goſpel, and the perfect knowledge of the decalogue; becauſe this number conſiſteth of 7 and 10. by the incenſe cup in the faſhion of a mortar full of frankincenſe, the golden body of Chriſt full of pure prayers, which was beaten, as in a mortar for our ſins; by the oyle and fine flower, the ſpirit lying hid in the letter of the Law, &c. For I doe not thinke any more worth the mentioning, becauſe if place be given to allegorizing thus; there will be ſo many opinions, as there are heads. The onely thing as I take it, that may be allegorically gathered hence, is that, who ſo will offer acceptably to God, muſt not perform onely ſome parts of his worſhip, but preſent him with all duties, veſſels full of fine flower and oyle, frankincenſe, holocauſts, ſinne-offerings, and peace-offerings; that is, prayers, and other duties of pietie, mortification and almes, neither ſhould they of ſucceeding ages become more defective, but equall their godly predeceſſors; as theſe Princes to the laſt, offered each one as the firſt had done in every thing.

The Myſtery. Rupertus.

Verſ. 18. In the ſecond day offered Nathaniel the ſon of Zuar, Prince of Iſſachar, &c.] It is remarkable here, and in the Princes following, that each one is ſet forth by the title of a Prince, whereas Naaſſon that offered firſt is not; hereof Cazkuni giveth this reaſon, becauſe he offered firſt, that he might not be puffed up, he is not ſo intituled, but the reſt; becauſe they ſubmitted to offer after him, are thus graced. When the like offerings to thoſe of the firſt Prince, offered by each one of the reſt are at large regiſtred unto v. 84. the whole both of veſſels and ſacrifices are ſummed up to ſhew in what reckoning theſe offerings were with the Lord, to make theſe Princes exemplary to others in ſucceeding ages, that they might be ſtirred up to imitate their pietie, in giving freely to the maintenance of Gods publick ſervice. And thus the Prophet foretelleth, that they ſhall bring gold and incenſe, and the flocks of Kedar, &c. Eſa. 60.6.7. Revel. 21. 24. See the like, Nehem. 7.70. Ezr. 2.68. 1 Chron. 29. 6.7. &c. That which any man doth in this kinde ſhall not be forgotten, but certainly be put into a perpetuall Regiſter of God, and rewarded.

V. 84, 85, 86, 87.

Note.

Verſ. 19. And when Moſes was gone into the Tabernacle of the congregation, &c. He heard the voice of one ſpeaking to him from the mercy ſeat, &c. The Lord had promiſed Moſes to meet him in the moſt holy place, and to ſpeak with him from the mercy ſeat, Exod. 25.22. Wherefore the Tabernacle being now ſet up and dedicated, Moſes for whom it was alwayes free, although Aaron might not goe in but once a yeare, Levit. 16. goeth in, and the Lord ſpeaketh with him according to promiſe: and to put it out of doubt, that it was the Lord, who now ſpake: The Septuagint render it, he heard the voyce of the Lord ſpeaking; the Targum Jonathan, Of the ſpirit ſpeaking, whereas after theſe words, of one ſpeaking it is added, and he ſpake unto him. R. Menahem noteth, that the voyce came from Heaven to the mercy ſeat, and from thence to Moſes. From this familiar collocution had between the Lord and Moſes it is, that Numb. 12.8. Moſes is in this preferred before all other men. The place from whence the Lord ſpake is called, for the words there often uttered, Debir, the Oracle, 1 King. 6.23. And in the free acceſſe of Moſes to ſpeak with the Lord there, Chriſt was notably figured out, by whom God now under the Goſpel continually ſpeaketh to us, as is noted, Heb. 1.2.

R. Menahem.

The myſtery: Rabanus. By Moſes his going in to the moſt holy place where the Oracle was, to ſpeak with the Lord is myſtically ſet forth, ſaith Rabanus, that the preachers of the word ſhould diligently read and meditate upon the holy ſcriptures, wch is their going to the oracle that ſo they may hear, what the Lord would have have them teach the people. Gods speaking from the mercy seat shewed, that it is of grace and mercy that he speaketh unto man, since his fall, and sheweth unto him the way of truth. His speaking from between the Cherubins shewed, that he spake by his angels; and between the two Cherubins, that he speaketh by the two Testaments; and by the hand of Moses, to shew that the law was added for transgressions for a time, by the hand of a Mediatour, till the promised seed should come. Gal. 3. 13.

Chap. VIII.

VV*Hen thou lighteſt the lamps, the ſeven lamps ſhall give light over againſt the Candleſtick*, &c.] Verſ. 2. Here the Lord biddeth Moſes to ſpeak to Aaron to light the lamps being before prepared, Exod.25.37. and oyl provided to burn in them continually, Exod. 27.20. Levit. 24. 2. and Aaron and his ſons appointed to this office of ordering them. But now the Lord ſetteth the time for their beginning to light them, and Aaron did ſo; and here again, the candleſtick is ſaid to have been made of beaten gold, and all according to the pattern by God ſhewed unto Moſes; of all which ſee before, and of the myſteries, Exod.25.37. whereas ſeven lamps are ſpoken of, that muſt give light over againſt the candleſtick, ſix of them were branches of the candleſtick, and one upon the middle part or ſhaft thereof, towards which the meaning is, that all the reſt muſt be ſet to burn. Thus Maimony ſaith, the ſix branches had their faces towards the middlemoſt lamp, & that had the face towards the moſt holy place, and how their faces were turned towards the candleſtick. Sol. Jarchi further expreſſeth, ſaying, that all ſix had their wikes turned towards the middlemoſt in the tops thereof. Maimony. Sol. Jarchi.

Take the Levites from among the children of Iſrael and cleanſe them.] Verſ. 6. Of the ſeparating of the Levites to ſerve under Aaron and his ſons about the Tabernacle it was ſpoken before, Chap.3. But now as the Prieſts had been conſecrated for their ſervice, who were the chief of the Tribe of Levi, ſo theſe are appointed to be conſecrated alſo: whereas he ſaith, cleanſe them, it is to be underſtood, that all the Lords people, when they came to the Sanctuary ſhould be clean and holy: for the unclean were put out of the camp, Chap.5. and none in their uncleanneſſe might come to the ſanctuary, Levit.12.13,14,15. 2 Chron.23.19. but ſuch as were to miniſter there, muſt be cleanſed in a ſpecial manner, to ſhew, that the miniſters of God above all others ought to be holy, and pure, as 2 Cor. 6.4,6. the Apoſtle ſpeaking of himſelf and other apoſtles and teachers, ſaith, as the Miniſters of God, by pureneſſe, &c. Levit. 8.

Thus ſhalt thou do to them to cleanſe them, ſprinkle water of purifying upon them, and let them ſhave all their fleſh, and waſh all their cloathes, &c.] Verſ. 7. When Aaron and his ſons were conſecrated, they were waſhed and ſprinkled with bloud and oyl, Exod.29. Levit.8. but no ſhaving is enjoyned them, neither were they ſprinkled with purifying water: but becauſe the Levites were diſtinguiſhed from the prieſts in their ſervice, they were diſtinguiſhed in their different conſecration alſo, inſtead of ſhaving and ſprinkling with water, they were ſprinkled with bloud and oyl, and it was provided, that they ſhould have no blemiſh upon their bodies, Levit.21.17. and the Prieſts had alſo other holy garments put upon them, their own being put off. For water of purifying. Hebr. here is, water of ſin; ſo called, becauſe it cleanſed from ſin ſuch, as were ſprinkled therewith: the Sept. have it water of purifying. It was by the conſent of all the holy water preſcribed Numb.19. ſo that although the making of it was not ſet down, till after this, yet it was appointed to be made before, yea before the law of purifying uncleanneſſe contracted from the dead, Numb.6. becauſe ſprinkling with it is a rite to purifie ſuch, as are defiled by the dead. For the perſon perſon appointed to ſprinkle them, it was Moſes, but for their ſhaving and waſhing, they did that themſelves, or uſed the help of any other. But whereas they are bidden to ſhave off all the haires of their fleſh, Comeſtor will not have the haires of their head and beard underſtood, but thoſe upon their bodies onely, and privy parts, which is alſo intimated by the word fleſh: the Sept. accordingly render it, all the haires of their bodies: of ſhaving the hair, ſee before in the Nazarite polluted, chap. 6. and in the leper to be cleanſed, Levit.14. and of waſhing the garments, Exod.19. 14. and what was myſtically ſet forth hereby, viz. the cleanſing away of ſin both inwardly and outwardly, for which the Miniſters of God ſhould ſpecially ſtudy and labour.

Scholaſt. hiſt.

Verſ. 8. And let them take a young bullock with his meat-offering, fine flowr mingled with oyl, &c.] How much flowr and oyl made a meat-offering with a bullock, ſee Numb.28.12. viz. three tenth deales of fine flowr, and what oyl and frankincenſe with this, ſee upon Levit.2. viz. of oyl a log or half pint to each tenth deale, and of frankincenſe to the whole meat-offering an handful. The Levites ſprinkling, ſhaving and waſhing was to ſanctifie their perſons; theſe offerings to ſanctifie their ſervice, ſaith Cazkuni. Here are two bullocks appointed to be offered for the Levites, one for a burnt-offering, and another for a ſin-offering, verſ.12. as the Prieſts had a bullock offered for them, Levit. 8. and inſtead of a bullock for a burnt-offering, a ram, and a ram of conſecration. The ſin-offering of the Levites here is as much as the ſin-offering of the high Prieſt and his ſons, and that was as much, as the ſin-offering of the whole congregation, Levit. 4. for the Levites ſerved for the whole congregation, being taken for the firſt born of them all.

Cazkuni.

Verſ. 10. And thou ſhalt bring the Levites before the Lord, and the children of Iſrael ſhall put their hands upon the Levites, &c.] In the verſe beforegoing Moſes is bidden to aſſemble the whole congregation, ſo Levit.8.3,4. it was done at the conſecration of the Prieſts: whereas in this verſe they are bidden to lay their hands upon the Levites, this, ſaith Cazkuni, is to be underſtood of the firſt-born in Iſrael, becauſe the Levites were taken for them, and therefore every one of theſe laid his hands upon the Levite that was to ſerve for him. So that their laying on of their hands was a putting, as it were, of their ſervice upon them, and an offering of them for an atonement for their ſoules, as verſ.17,18. And ſo it is ſaid verſ.11. that Aaron ſhould offer them for an offering of the children of Iſrael; but for offer in Hebr. here is, wave them for a wave-offering: and Toſtatus thinketh, that Aaron did take up ſome of them and wave them, as a ſacrifice appointed to be waved; but becauſe his ſtrength happily would not ſerve him ſo to do, it is rather to be held, that he only preſented them and ſeparated them, as verſ.14. from the reſt of the people to be Gods miniſters for them. But in that this word waving, is uſed for offering, Ainſworth noteth well, that the troubles of Gods Miniſters were aptly intimated hereby, 2 Cor.4.8.

Verſ. 11.

Toſtatus.

Ainſworth.

Verſ. 12. And they ſhall lay their hands upon the heads of the bullocks, &c.] That is, ſaith Cazkuni, upon each of theſe bullocks, firſt of the one for a ſin-offering, and then upon the other for a burnt-offering; for in the Hebrew it is not heads, but the head of the bullocks: of this laying on of hands, ſee before Levit.4.15. And becauſe the Levites were ſo many, that all could not come to lay their hands upon one bullock, it is to be conceived, as Oleaſter hath it, that ſome of the principal of them did it in the name of the reſt, as when the congregation had ſinned, the Elders laid their hands upon the head of the bullock brought for a ſin-offering, Levit.4.15. In that theſe ſacrifices muſt be done for the Levites to make an atonement for them; we may ſee, how unworthy every man is to approach unto God, unleſſe an atonement be firſt made for him by the ſacrifice of Chriſts death: whereas it is ſaid here to Moſes, thou ſhalt offer, and thou ſhalt make

Cazkuni.

Note.

an

an atonement, this is to be understood by the ministry of Aaron, for he did it, vers. 21.

And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron and his sons] That is, standing as men of authority before the door of the Tabernacle to receive them, as offerings for the service of the Tabernacle, and a gift given to them, as Gods Priests, as vers. 19. Vers. 13.

and thou shalt cleanse them and offer them for an offering. Here their offering is the third time repeated, first vers. 11. secondly, vers. 13. and thirdly here, respect being had in this, saith Sol. Jarchi, to the three families of the Levites, the Kohathites, Gershonites and Merarites. Vers. 15. Sol. Jarchi.

Here the reason of taking the Levites is yeelded, viz. they were taken for all the first born, of which see before chap. 3. 12. and vers. 19. they are given to Aaron and his sons, as chap. 3. 9. Vers. 16, 17, 18, 19.

Here is shewed, how all things were executed and done, according to the former instructions both by Moses and Aaron, and all the congregation, and the Levites entring upon their office. Vers. 20, 21, 22.

For the mystery of all, Rabanus saith, that the Levites sprinkling did set forth the Ministers of the Gospel either being baptized, or sprinkled with the tears of repentance; their shaving, the cutting away in them of unlawful and superfluous cogitations, not the plucking of them out by the roots, for that cannot be in this life, but the suppressing and so cutting of them off as it were, that by overgrowing as hair, they deform not the soul; the washing of their cloathes, the amending of their works, that they may be unblameable before God and men. Again, their offering of a bullock, Christs body born of the holy Patriarks and Prophets; by their offering of another bullock for sin, Christ our Mediatour and propitiation: or by the bullock for sin, our repentance for our evil deeds; and by the bullock for a burnt-offering, our thankfulnesse to God expressed by our good deeds. Their presenting before the tabernacle, the Ministers coming to the Apostolical doctrine; and before the whole congregation assembled, their having a good testimony, as fit for this service from many. The peoples laying their hands upon the Levites, their consent unto the Ministers doctrine, and practising it in their lives. The Levites laying of their hands upon the bullocks heads, the Ministers consecrating the beginning of their works by their own labours. The Levites being set before Aaron and his sons, the Ministers making of themselves conspicuous by their good life and doctrine above other men. The Mystery. Rabanus.

From twenty five years old and upward they shall go in and wait upon the service of the Tabernacle, &c.] For the difference of the Levites years here, and chap. 4. 3. see in that place. But for the age of 50, at which it is said, they shall serve no more, this is by the Hebrews expounded of serving by carrying the things of the tabernacle: for any other service by keeping watch about the tabernacle, singing, and keeping strangers off from the tabernacle they did still after the age of 50. and so vers. 26. it is said, they shall minister with their brethren to keep the charge, &c. wherefore Maimony noteth, that this limitation of 50 held but during the time that the tabernacle was carried from place to place, and not in succeeding generations. But whereas he saith, that a Levite was not afterwards disallowable for blemishes, but onely in case that his voyce failed him, and he could not sing, I see no reason for that addition of his, the law being expressly against the blemished Priest, but not the blemished Levite, so that not afterward only, but never were blemishes in the body things disabling a Levite to his service: of the Levites ceasing their service at 50. P. Martyr yeeldeth these reasons: 1. Because the Levites service required great strength for slaying of sacrifices and carriages. 2. Because if the old Levites should have continued in their service, till death, the younger comeing on after would have been rude and ignorant of the rites wherein Vers. 24. Vers. 25. Sol. Jarchi. Cazkuni. Maimony. Levit. 21. 17.

now they might be inſtructed by the old Levites ſtill living. P. Mart. in 1 Sam.1. For the difference before reconciled betwixt the age of the Levite entring here, viz.25. and chap.4. viz. 30. Toſtatus taketh exception to it, ſaying, that the ſervice of the Levites was eaſie to be learned, and therefore they needed not to enter at 25. to learn againſt 30, and if five years were needfull for this, was not ſome time neceſſary alſo for thoſe of 30. wherefore he delivereth this, as his opinion, that the Levites of 25. were here conſecrated, that they might be ready at 30. to ſerve, at what time the Lord foreſaw, that they ſhould be ſtill in the wilderneſſe, and ſo not have any opportunity for a new conſecration. But as this was foreſeen, ſo the Lord foreſaw, that they ſhould be ſo much time in the wilderneſſe, as to wear out all the Levites now conſecrated, ſeeing their tearm for thoſe of the longeſt continuance was but 25 years, and they continued in the wilderneſſe 39 years after this, which being ſo, if by conſecrating before their time he would provide againſt this, the children of eleven years old muſt have been conſecrated at this time, or elſe the ſervice muſt be performed fourteen years without conſecrated Levites. Toſtatus ſeeing this difficulty anſwereth, that God at his pleaſure might imploy unconſecrated Levites, theſe being worn out; but by this reaſon there was no need of conſecrating now five years before the time, it being but the imploying of unconſecrated Levites five years more or leſſe.

Toſtatus.

The beſt reconciling then is, that all the Levites males without reſpect of age were now conſecrated, at 25. years they entred to wait upon this ſervice, that is, they did help under others, who were the chief in doing the work, and at 30 they did the work, according to the phraſe expreſly uſed, Chap. 4. being now amongſt the chief, and ſo continuing to fifty.

Chap. IX.

Verſ. 1. HEre the Paſſeover is commanded to be kept the ſecond time, the firſt moneth of the ſecond year after their coming out of Egypt upon the 14 day. The Lord giveth ſpecial direction to keep this paſſeover, as he did to keep the firſt, Exod. 12. becauſe then he injoyned them onely to keep this paſſeover, when they ſhould come into the land of Canaan, Exod.12.25. ſo that without a new particular command they had no warrant to keep it in the wilderneſſe, neither did they keep it any more, till they came into the land of Canaan, when their keeping of the Paſſeover is firſt ſpoken of again. For the time, of keeping this paſſeover, it was before the numbring of the people, but after the dedication of the tabernacle immediately, as hath been touched, Chap. 7. although ſome think, that the dedication was after that numbring, and ſo after this Paſſeover alſo, viz. in the ſecond moneth of the ſecond year; but this of the paſſeover is placed here, becauſe of the paſſeover in the ſecond moneth here ſpoken of alſo. But the particular denoting of the time of the dedication to be the ſame day, that the altar was anointed, overthroweth this opinion.

Joſ. 5. 10.

Numb. 1.1.

Ainſworth.

Queſt. If it be demanded, why the Lord would have the paſſeover now kept in the wilderneſſe, and how they could do it according to the rites thereof, that is, eat it with unleavened bread, ſeeing they had no bread but Manna, and with ſowr herbs being in the Wilderneſſe, where none grew, and preparing the lambs and ſacrifices requiſite at the paſſeover?

Levit. 23. 8. Numb.28.19.

I anſwer, the firſt paſſeover was kept and eaten in haſte, the people by reaſon of their haſte to depart out of Egypt, not having time ſo adviſedly to conſider thereof, wherefore God would have it now again celebrated, celebrated, when they had nothing elſe to intend, and in the middeſt of other great ſolemnities, that the benefit of which it ſerved to put them in minde, might ever be the better remembred. And although they had not of their own wherewithall to make leavened bread, yet they were not now far from Madian, and ſo might get a ſupply from thence: but happily, as Toſtatus hath it, they keepe not the Paſſeover with eating unleavened bread ſeven dayes, but onely at the time of eating the Paſchall Lambe: yet that which followeth, verſ. 3. Yee ſhall keep it according to all the rites, ſheweth, that nothing preſcribed in Exod. 12. was omitted, God that commanded it now to bee kept thus, doubtleſſe directed them where they ſhould bee ſupplied with all neceſſaries for the purpoſe, and of cattell they had no want, ſeeing they came with their cattell out of Egypt. For the rites and myſteries of the Paſſeover, ſee before, Exodus 12. Toſtatus.

And there were certain men, who were defiled by the dead body of a man that they could not keep the Paſſeover on that day, &c.] Men being defiled by the dead were unclean 7 dayes, and in all this time they might not come to the ſanctuary, nor eat of the holy things: wherefore ſome being at this time thus defiled, come to Moſes to declare their caſe unto him, that from him they might have direction about their keeping of the Paſſeover. In the celebration of the Paſſeover the firſt time in Egypt, there was no ſuch difference between the clean and the unclean; but all ate the Paſſeover alike; but now the ſanctuarie being ſet up, and divers lawes made to define the unclean, and to barre them from eating of the holy things, the caſe was not like that it had been before the making of theſe lawes, and the uncleane could not eate the Paſſeover, being as it is called, an offering of the Lord, verſ. 7. Verſ. 6.

We are defiled by the dead body of a man, why are we kept back that we may not offer the offering of the Lord in the ſeaſon thereof, &c.] For dead body, Hebr. 10. נפש ſoule: ſee the like, Levit. 19. 28. The offering of the Lord; the Paſſeover is thus called, and Exod. 12.27. becauſe it was killed at Gods command, as other ſacrifices, and that Religion to the honour of God, and it was accompanied with many ſacrifices and oblations all the 7 dayes thereof, Levit. 23. 8. Numb. 28. 19. Why are we kept back? the Septuagint, ſhall we be deprived? the Hebrew word may be rendred, are we defrauded or diminiſhed? This Toſtatus expoundeth as a complaining, as if they were injured, ſeeing they could not avoid this defilement, or happily they were defiled by doing a dutie of charitie in burying the dead. But there is no neceſſity of expounding it thus, but rather of their pious ſeeking to Moſes for a remedy in this caſe; as if they had ſaid, what ſhall we do now that by reaſon of our uncleanneſſe we cannot keep the Paſſeover, for the keeping of which, by every one the Lord hath made a moſt ſtrict Law, without tranſgreſſing another Law made againſt the approching or eating of the holy things by the unclean? To this effect alſo Lorinus, ſaying, that the word ſignifieth not a defrauding by injury, but ſimply a wanting or being deſtitute of a thing, as Pagninus noteth, as the word fruſtrating is uſed, Gen. 48.5. They came to inquire thus, ſaith Calvin, out of an holy ſollicitude. Verſ. 7. Toſtatus. Lorinus.

And Moſes ſaid, ſtand ſtill, and I will inquire, what, What the Lord will ſay concerning you.] Although Moſes were a great Law-giver, yet his modeſty was ſuch, that having yet no ſpeciall direction from God in this caſe, he would not without him determine any thing, neither was he aſhamed to make known that he muſt inquire, before he could anſwer; wherefore the Judges of the Sanedrim, ſaith Jonathan, ſhould not be aſhamed to aske concerning the judgement, which is too hard for them. Neither ſhould any as aſhamed of their ignorance in any particular determine about it, till they be better informed, but when they know not, confeſſe it, and endea- Verſ. 8. Ionath. Cald. paraph. Note.

vour to learn. For Moses his going to know of the Lord, it was into the most holy place, and there by prayer desiring the Lord to inform him, his face being towards the mercy seat.

Vers. 9. 10. And the Lord spake to Moses saying, speak to the children of Israel, if any of you be unclean by the dead, or be in a long journey, yet he shall keep the Passeover to the Lord, upon the fourteenth day of the second moneth, &c.] Upon occasion

Vers. 11. of this inquiry about these men, a generall Law is here made; but by one kind of uncleannesse here named, all others like unto this are to be understood, as that of a menstruous woman, and of issues, which uncleannesses lasted 7 dayes: for who so was unclean by any of these might not eat the Passeover then, but in the second moneth; but in case of other uncleannesses, which lasted but till the evening, he might then wash and be clean,

Maimony in Corban pesach. c. 6. and eat: So Maimony, and if it were the 7 day of the unclean by the dead, when the Passeover began, although it were the last of their cleansing, yet they were put off to the next moneth, because it is taught by tradition, that these men were now upon their 7 day, and yet were put back, as unclean still. Touching a long journey Maimony also saith, it is 15 miles from Jerusalem, or 15 miles from the camp; so that if any man were 15 miles off the fourteenth day of the first moneth at the sun rising, he might not eat the Passeover that moneth, but the next, if he were lesse then 15 miles off, he might easily come to the city by noone, and so might prepare to eat. The Septuagint for a long iourney, have a countrey farre from you, or in your generations; whereupon some have thought, that such onely are meant, as be out of the land at the time of the first Passeover: but this is Tostatus. justly refuted by Tostatus, because some parts within the land were further from Jerusalem, then some parts without. Wherefore although these words you, and your generations be placed after these, a iourney farre off, yet they are to be expounded with these; If any man, that is, any man of you, or of your generations, as in one new translation. For the next time of keeping the Passeover, the 14 day of the second moneth: Maimony hath di-

Maimony in Biath. Hamikdash. c. 4. vers observations. 1. Men are not put off to this second Passeover for uncleannesse, if at the first time in the first moneth, the greatest part or halfe the Congregation be unclean, or if the Priests be unclean, who should offer the sacrifices; or if the ministring vessels be unclean: for in any of these cases all keep the Passeover together both clean and unclean, because the Passeover putteth away uncleannesse, and by the coming on thereof they are counted all as clean: for we have been taught by word of mouth, that it is the uncleannesse of some particular persons onely, that giveth occasion to them of a delay, and so of a Passeover in the second moneth, and not of the whole Congregation, or the greatest part thereof: and the same Law is for every Oblation that hath the time appointed, it putteth away uncleannesse, as doth the Passeover. But this may well be counted one of their traditions overthrowing the Law of God, because if the Passeover did put away uncleannesse in more, it must needs put it away much more in fewer; and if not, but for these few there must be a second Passeover, to which they must be put off, lest that which is holy be defiled by them; much more must there be a second Passeover for more, and they put off to it.

The second observation of Maimony is, that there is much difference between the first and the second Passeover here appointed. In keeping the first, they must have no leaven in their houses, they might not carry any of it out of the house, they must use the Hymne appointed, bring the feast-offering, Deuteronomy 16. 2. Take the Lambe upon the tenth day, strike the bloud upon the doore-posts of their houses, eate it in haste, and in uncleannesse, if the most part of the Church were uncleane: but in keeping the second, they might have leaven in their houses, they might carry it out, they were not bound to use the Hymne, &c.

Neither

Neither might it be kept in uncleanneſſe, and the reaſon yielded of all this is, becauſe although it be ſaid, verſ. 12. According to all the ordinances of the Paſſeover they ſhall keep it. Yet there being an enumeration of the particulars, to which they were now tied, as being the moſt ſubſtantiall, it is to be underſtood, that thoſe were the all meant, and that they were at liberty for the reſt. But I thinke rather, that ſome being mentioned, and then it being added, according to all the ordinances, all the reſt not mentioned are imployed alſo.

The third obſervation of Maimony is, that Hezekiah kept the Paſſeover, many that were unclean being permitted to keep it, which ſheweth, that it might be kept in uncleanneſſe, when very many were unclean, and not ſome few particulars onely. And whereas this argument is eaſily taken away, for that Hezekiah is ſaid to have prayed for the people that were in uncleanneſſe, and ſo kept not the Paſſeover according to the law: for hereby it appeareth, that to keep it in uncleanneſſe, when very many are unclean, is againſt the Law, and needeth pardon: he ſaith, he made an intercalation of the dayes at ſuch time, as he ought not, viz. In the moneth Adar, or February, and not in Niſan or March, to which the wiſe men would not conſent; and this was the thing, for which he craved pardon as herein ſwerving from the Law. But in the hiſtory there is no mention made of any, but the firſt and ſecond moneth, becauſe the Paſſeover, for uncleanneſſe could not be kept the firſt moneth, it was put off to the ſecond according to this Law, and not for any errour about the moneth, but for the uncleanneſſe of the people, at that time it was that Hezekiah prayed. Moreover, it is ſaid, 2 Chron. 30. 3. They could not keep the Paſſeover at that time, becauſe many of the Prieſts were not ſanctified, which proveth againſt his firſt note, that the uncleanneſſe of the Prieſts hindereth the keeping of the Paſſeover, the firſt moneth. 2 Chron. 30 v. 17.

Laſtly, Maimony noteth, that if the moſt part of the Church have running iſſues, and the leſſer part be unclean by the dead, there is no Paſſeover kept; not the firſt, becauſe the leſſer part cannot keep it without the greater, which is diſabled by their iſſues: nor the ſecond, becauſe there is no ſecond Paſſeover kept, when the firſt hath not been kept by the greater part; but I have dwelt too long upon theſe vaine and unſavoury Traditions of the Rabbins, and therefore ſpare to write more. Verſ. 12.

But the man that is clean, and is not in a iourney, and forbeareth to keepe the Paſſeover, that ſoul ſhall be cut off, &c.] For the age at which the Paſſeover muſt be kept under the pain here ſpoken of, the Rabbins ſay, it was thirteen yeares; and for neglecting the Paſſeover the firſt time, even out of theſe caſes this puniſhment was not inflicted, if they kept it the ſecond time; but then whether it were neglected upon preſumption or ignorance, this penalty held, if it were preſumptuouſly neglected the firſt time, but not if ignorantly; or if a man were neceſſarily hindered from keeping it the ſecond time of cutting off; ſee Levit. 20. 2. &c. And the ſame Law is for the Proſelyte as well as for the Iſraelite. He that is of another Nation, but dwelling amongſt the Iſraelites and imbracing the faith, if it were between the firſt and the ſecond time of the Paſſeover, is bound at the ſecond to keepe it; and ſo is a childe becomming full thirteen yeares old betweene theſe two times, which the Hebrewes call Barmitſuah, a ſonne of the commandement. Comeſtor here moveth a queſtion, what if a man that was unclean, or in a journey the firſt time, bee likewiſe hindered the ſecond time? and anſwereth, he muſt then either keep it in the third moneth, or be excuſed for that yeare, which laſt is moſt probable, although Auguſtine, Rabanus, Toſtatus, &c. make the ſame anſwer with Comeſtor. Verſ. 13. Verſ. 14. Scholaſt. hiſtor.

For ſeeing Moſes durſt not appoint the ſecond moneth without ſpecial direction from God, how ſhall any other man dare to appoint the third.

The Myſtery. Cyril. Alex. 17. de ador. For the myſtery, Cyril Alex. will have uncleanneſſe by their dead to figure out uncleanneſſe by the dead works of ſin, and in ſpecial the foul ſin of the Jews committed in crucifying our Lord Chriſt, for which they could not come to him the true paſſeover at the firſt time, but ſhall the ſecond towards the end of the world, and by thoſe in a far journey other unbelievers in the world, that have not yet imbraced the faith; and hereticks, who alſo ſhall one day partake of the ſame grace of being converted and brought into the true Church. For that of the Jews he bringeth Hoſ. 3. 5. Rom. 11.26. Thus alſo Iſidor, Rabanus, Procopius and Beda. And it is noted, that over the word רחקה, afar, there are divers points implying a myſtery herein.

Verſ. 15. And on the day, that the tabernacle was reared up, the cloud covered it, and at even there was upon it as the appearance of fire. Here is a repetition of that which was ſaid, Exod. 40.34,38. becauſe it was ſo remarkable, that God ſhould thus from time to time ſo long ſhew a viſible ſign of his preſence over the holy place, and but briefly ſpoken of there, the ſame is here again reſumed and inlarged, as worthy moſt ſerious conſideration, and the rather it is repeated here, becauſe the time now drew nigh of putting in practice that which was here related, viz. their removing at the taking up of the cloud, for it was now the ſecond moneth, the 14 day, and upon the 20 day the cloud was taken up, Chap. 10. 11. at what time they removed.

Verſ. 18. At the command of the Lord the children of Iſrael journeyed, &c. Hebr. at the mouth of the Lord: for the cloud was as the mouth of the Lord, he ſpeaking to them, as it were, hereby to journey or to pitch: and therefore we read of the words of his ſigns, Pſal. 105.27. and yet he ſpake not thus only unto them, but ſometimes by word of mouth, as Deut. 1. 6, 7. and Chap. 2. 3, 4.

Verſ. 19. they kept the charge of the Lord] Heb. obſerved the obſervation of the Lord. Either watching and warding about the Tabernacle continually night and day, to ſee when the cloud removed, or tending upon the ſervice of the tabernacle when it reſted.

Verſ. 23. at the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moſes] This is ſo ſpoken, becauſe the Lord took order for all things by the mediation of Moſes, and therefore he is ſaid to have led them by the hand of Moſes, Pſalm 77. 20. Eſay 63. 12. and in ſpeciall Moſes uſed a form of prayer alwayes at the riſing up and pitching of the Ark, Numb. 10. 35, 36. Of the myſtical ſignification of the cloud and fire, ſee Exod. 13.21.

Chap. X.

Verſ. 2. Make thee two Trumpets of ſilver, of a whole piece ſhalt thou make them, that thou mayſt uſe them for the calling of the aſſembly, and for the journeying of the camps.] A Trumpet before, Levit. 23.24. was called שופר, denoting one made of horn, or a cornet; but here they are called חצוצרת, denoting thoſe, that were made of metal. The uſe of thoſe was for feaſts and new moons, of theſe for the aſſembling of the people, and to ſignifie the removing of the camps, to ſound to war, and in feſtival times alſo, as verſ. 9,10. of ſilver theſe trumpets muſt be made, becauſe this was the pureſt metal, and fitteſt for ſound, and for the ſignification, as by and by ſhall be ſhewed.

Queſt. But why doth the Lord command onely two to be made? Anſw. Not becauſe it ſhould be unlawful to make more; for afterwards, 2 Chron. 5. 12. there were 120 Prieſts ſounding with trumpets, whereupon Maimony noteth, noteth, that there might never be at Gods publick worship fewer, then two trumpets, nor more then 120. Two were enough for the uses here spoken of, and at this time there were but two priests to sound with them, for Aaron had now but two sons, who are appointed to blow with them, vers. 8. afterwards, the number of Priests, increasing, the number of trumpets increased also. And the Lord appointed but two, that he might not prevent the liberality of the people, who might at their own good will give more, as the Princes added to the number of the vessels of the Sanctuary, Numb. 7.

Maimony.

For the use of these trumpets, when they blew with both, all the congregation was to assemble; when with one, the Princes: when they blew an alarum, the camps on the east were to set forward; when they blew an alarum the second time, the camps on the south side were to set forward; also when they went to war in their land against their enemies, they were to blow an alarum, and so they should be remembred before the Lord, and be saved; also in all solemn assemblies, dayes of gladnesse and new Moons they were to blow with them over their sacrifices for a memorial; and the sons of Aaron, the Priests were appointed to blow them. Josephus saith, that these trumpets were somewhat thicker then a pipe, of little more, then a cubit long, no broader on the top, then for one to set his mouth to and blow, and at the nether end like a bell. The calling of the assembly by these trumpets was to the worship and service of God, and to hear Sermons, the assembling of the Princes was to consult about domestical affaires. And as here the marching of the camps on the east and south side are expresly spoken of, so he saith, there was likewise a third and a fourth blowing, for the marching on of the camps on the north and west, and that when both the trumpets were blown for removing, the people first assembled, and then after the first blowing the east camps went forward, &c. six tribes going before the ark, and six following, and the Priests and Levites about it. And Tostatus noteth, that in some copies both are joyned together, to assemble and to go forward, which was necessary, that they might be called from other acts, about which they might haply be dispersed, and to be directed in their way. But in the Hebrew it is only to go forward, and the clouds moving before them was direction enough for the way, so that they needed not to be called together first for this, but only make haste to their standards, if they were dispersed, that they might go forward in order at the sign given by the trumpet.

Vers. 3, 4, 5, v. 6,

Vers. 9.

Ver. 10.

Vers. 8.

Joseph. lib. 3. Antiqu. c. 11.

The Sept. expresseth the third and the fourth also.

Tostatus.

For the difference of blowing to assemble the people and to remove, Tostatus saith, that the blowing to assemble the people was in one continued tone, without any variation by rising and falling, and shorter, but to remove longer, the sound sometime rising and sometime falling, wherefore the sounding an alarum is rendred in the vulgar latine a longer and a broken sound, as the word תרועה here used signifieth; see this word used not only for a sound of trumpets, but also of voices by shouting, Numb. 2. 21. Ezra 3. 11, 12. Jer. 20. 16.

Vers. 5.

For the use of the trumpets in sounding to the wars, the Hebrewes say, that by the distresse of wars, all other distresses are meant also, so that if there were famine or pestilence, they were to sound an alarum, that they might be had in remembrance before the Lord, and with the sounding of trumpets they were to joyn crying to the Lord in a penitent manner for mercy, never ceasing till they were delivered. And this is confirmed, Joel 2. 15, 17. where to fasting they are called by the blowing of trumpets, and the Priests are bidden to weep and cry for mercy: but they did not cry in prayer and fasting, and with blowing trumpets day after day, but the second day and the fifth of every week, till mercy was shewed: of blowing the trumpets in war, and crying out, see 2 Chron. 13. 14, 15. The first time that

Vers. 9.

Maimony treatise of fasts, c. 1.

that theſe trumpets were uſed in war, was againſt the Midianites, Numb. 31.6. whenſoever the trumpets were blown, it was for mercy, ſaith R. Menahem, for they being blown to aſſemble the people, that prayer was uſed, Return (O Lord) to the ten thouſands of Iſrael: and to remove or to the war, that prayer, Ariſe (O Lord) and let thine enemies be ſcattered, &c. And the ſame continued ſound without elevation or depreſſion was fitteſt for peace, and the other for war to excite unto it. For in your land, the vulgar Latine hath, when ye ſhall go out of your land to war; and for this ſtandeth Toſtatus, ſaying, that the other is alſo implyed: but the Hebr. is, in your land, it being meant not only of the wars, that they were to make in the land againſt the Canaanites, but alſo when they ſhould be poſſeſſed of it, and juſt occaſion was given by their enemies, they might go out to war, as the ſacred hiſtory ſheweth, that they often did afterwards: whether the Prieſts might do any thing elſe, but blow the trumpets in wars, is not here ſaid; but Deut.20.1. they are appointed alſo to encourage the people to fight, and 1 Sam.4.4. they carry the Ark into the battel, and Judas Machabeus and his brethren being Prieſts, when neceſſity required, took up arms and fought as Captains of armies. And accordingly by the Canons of the Church, Miniſters of the Goſpel have been allowed in time of great neceſſity to fight againſt the enemy in a juſt war, but not otherwiſe. But the common weapons of Miniſters are, as Ambroſe hath it, and after him Gregory, preces & lachrymæ, praying and weeping. What a juſt war is, we may gather partly here, when the enemy oppreſſeth, and from the practice of the ſervants of God in divers other caſes. Numb.21.22. the Iſraelites fought againſt the Amorites, for unjuſtly denying them a paſſage. 2 Sam.2. David warred againſt Iſhboſheth for the Kingdom given him by God. 2 Sam.8.5. He fought againſt and ſlue the Syrians for coming to help Hadadezer, the King of Sobah. 2 Sam. 10. he fought againſt the King of Ammon for abuſing his meſſengers, and Chap. 20. againſt Seba for ſolliciting his ſubjects to revolt unto him. 2 King. 4. 3. Joram fought againſt the King of Moab for denying him tribute, and Jehoſhaphat helped him. Judg.20. the other tribes fought againſt Benjamin to puniſh a moſt ſhameful rape. Gen. 14. Abraham fought to reſcue Lot. Deut. 13. God commandeth, that ſuch as fall to idolatry, ſhould be fought againſt and deſtroyed. Hereupon Lyranns and Toſtatus reckon up 12 cauſes of juſt war, but others reduce them to fewer.

R. Menahem. Numb.10.36.

Toſtatus.

1 Machab.3.4. 57, &c.

Ambroſ. in Epiſt. Gregor.

Lyranus Toſtatus.

Verſ. 10. For their day of gladneſſe and ſolemn dayes, and the new Moons] What the ſolemn feaſt dayes were, is ſhewed Levit.23, and the new moons, Numb. 28.11. At theſe times ſacrifices being ſolemnly offered, they ſtood to blow over them with trumpets and cornets, and made other muſick in praiſing God with Pſalteries, harps, cymbals, flutes, and tymbrels, and ſinging with voyces, Pſal.81.3,4. Pſal. 149. 3. the practice whereof we may ſee 2 Chron.29.25,26, &c. and that although at the firſt the Prieſts only ſounded with trumpets alone, yet afterwards by the Prophet David and other Prophets, according to the wil of the Lord theſe additions were made, and the Levites were ſet to ſing and play with inſtruments, as the Prieſts ſounded; of which inſtitution it is ſpoken largely, 1 Chron.16.5,6,7, &c. and the form of praiſing God is ſet down, which was to be uſed from time to time, the firſt part taken out of Pſalm 105. to verſ. 23. and from thence to verſ.34. out of Pſalm 96. the 34 verſe: out of Pſal. 107. 118.136. the 35 verſe; out of Pſal.118.25. Pſal.106.47,48.

2 Chron. 29. 28.

Ainſworth.

And this ſong they continued ſinging and playing upon inſtruments of muſick, till the ſacrifice ended. Thus they did upon their feſtivals, and thus upon their dayes of gladneſſe, that is, other dayes of rejoycing upon occaſion of ſome great good befalling them, either of bleſſing, or of deliverance from danger; as when the Ark was brought into the temple of Solomon, 2 Chron.5.12. when that temple was dedicated, 2 Chron. 7.6. at the the return out of captivity, Ezra 3. 10, 11. and at the dedication of the wall of Jeruſalem, Neh.12.27. Baal Hatturim by their day of gladneſſe, underſtandeth their Sabbath day.

Baal Hatturim.

For the number of ſingers,&c. Maimony ſaith, that there might not be fewer then 12 Levites ſtanding upon a ſtage to ſing over the ſacrifices daily, and theſe to ſing onely and not to play, of Pſalteries there might not be fewer then two, nor more then 6. of pipes or flutes, not fewer then 12. of Trumpets not fewer then two, nor more then 120. of harps not fewer then 9. and as many more as they would, of Cymbals one onely. And this ſinging and muſick was made over all the burnt-offerings and peace-offerings appointed at ſolemne times, but not at the voluntary ſacrifices of the congregation, and the time of beginning was, when the drink-offering was powred on, thus alſo Cazkuni. But then by the voluntary offerings of the congregation, muſt be underſtood the offerings of particular perſons, or elſe that obſervation of having no muſick then is falſe, as may appear by the inſtances of voluntary offerings formerly brought upon their dayes of gladneſſe.

Maimony. in Clchamiadath, ch.3.

Some by dayes of gladneſſe, underſtand any times of ſolemn feaſting, which becauſe they were not without ſacrifices, the trumpets were then blown. And by this blowing of trumpets they were put in minde, whether in warre, or removings or feaſtings that God was amongſt them, and ſo were filled with more confidence and comfort; and yet for his preſence ſake were reſtrained from exceſſe.

Oleaſter.

For the myſterie of the trumpets, hereby as all agree, the preaching of the word of God was ſet forth; for the Prophet is bidden to lift up his voyce as a trumpet, and propheſying is by Saint Paul compared to the ſounding of a trumpet. Two trumpets ſhewed two parts of the word preached, the Old and New Teſtament: ſo Rabanus, and Berchorius, and the appointing of the Prieſts to blow them, the preaching of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and other Miniſters of the Word: they were made of ſilver to ſhew, that the pure word onely ſhould be preached, and that not in obſcuritie, but plainly to the edification of the hearers; of one whole peice of beaten work, to ſhew that the Preachers of the Word muſt bear the beating of tribulations, as of hammers; and as Ainſworth hath it, labour and ſtudy greatly to preach the Word, and in Prayer. The foure-fold uſes of theſe trumpets. 1 To call an aſſembly. 2 To march on. 3 Over the ſacrifices. 4 To the warres, ſhewed, ſaith Berchorius, the foure ends of preaching. 1 To call men to the faith. 2 To ſhew the way, and to ſtirre up to goe on towards the heavenly Canaan. 3 To bring joy, as it were by feaſting. 4 To excite by a ſpirituall warfare againſt vices. And whereas one called the Princes together, but two all the people: this ſhewed that great perſons ſhould be moſt forward about the ſervice of God, and to all good offices, being herein examples to others; or that the people muſt have much preaching and inculcating of the Word, becauſe they are dull in underſtanding.

The myſt cry.

Eſa. 58.1.
1 Cor.14. 8.

Rabanus.
Berchorius in Moral.

Ainſworth.

Act. 6. 4.

Ferus will have the making of the trumpets of ſilver to ſet forth the puritie of the Preachers life, and their working with the hammer, their patience, the blowing with one to call the Princes their unity, and with two for the people, the divers teaching of them, as their neceſſities require, and their blowing ſometimes with a ſingle ſound, and ſometime with a broken, preaching in doctrine without ſuch elevation of the voice, and in reproving, exhorting, &c. with more earneſtneſſe. And without theſe trumpets of preaching thus, men will not be brought into order. And therefore it is no marvell, ſaith he, that many by preaching do ſo little good, ſeeing they know not how to blow, they being no Prieſts appointed by God, but running before they are ſent,&c.

Rickelius, beſides the two teſtaments ſet forth by the two trumpets, underſtandderſtandeth alſo the ſeverity of God againſt ſinne to terrifie, and his mercy to the repentant to comfort, the milke for babes, and the ſtrong meat for men; the literall and ſpirituall ſence of the word, and the miſeries of this life, and the bleſſedneſs of that which is to come, that muſt be ſet forth in preaching: whereas the Trumpets being blown, God promiſeth to have them in remembrance; this ſhewed the preſence of God by his ſpirit to ſound to the hearers, when the word ſoundeth in the eare: of the Lords blowing the Trumpet, ſee Zachariah, 9. 14.

Rickelius.

Verſ. 11. The twentieth day of the ſecond moneth of the ſecond yeare, the cloud was taken up, &c.] This was the ſecond year of their coming out of Egypt, ſo that they had now ſtayed about mount Sinai a whole year wanting ten dayes; compare Exod. 19.1. and ch. 40. The taking up of the cloud from the Tabernacle was a ſign that they ſhould remove, Numb.9.17. but Deut.1.6. it is ſaid, that God alſo ſpake to them to remove at this time. Rabanus ſaith, that the time of their aboad here, was a yeare and foure dayes, Cornelius à lapide, a yeare wanting thirteen dayes. Oleaſter a yeare, but it is plain that it was a yeare wanting ten dayes, whereas it is alledged to confirm that of a yeare wanting 13 dayes, that the ſame day mentioned, Exod.19. 1. may better be underſtood, the day of the ſame number with the moneth, which was the third, and therefore not the firſt, but the third day of the moneth; this is more forced, and to underſtand the day when the moneth began, that is,the firſt day,more genuine. Their ſtaying ſo long in one place, ſaith Ferus, might ſeem tedious, but it was neceſſary for their inſtruction; ſo we muſt ſtay long about the mountain of God, that we may be well grounded in knowledge and grace. Their journeyes in generall were three. Firſt from Egypt to this mount. Secondly to Jordan. Thirdly to Canaan, ſetting forth our three profections. 1 From corruption to grace, in which there is much trouble. 2 Our perſeverance to death, wherein there is much difficulty alſo. 3 To heaven, whither we ſhall aſſuredly come, if wee prevaile in the two former.

Toſtatus.

Rabanus.

Verſ.12. And the children of Iſrael tooke their iourneyes out of the wilderneſſe of Sinai, and the cloud reſted in the wilderneſſe of Paran, &c.] By the hiſtory here following it appeareth, that Paran was not the firſt place to which they came, when they removed from mount Sinai; but firſt Taberah, ch. 11.3. or Kibrothchattaavah, v.34. Secondly, Hazeroth,v.35. and then Paran, chap. 12. 16. And chap. 33. where Moſes ſummeth up all the journeyes of the children of Iſrael, he maketh no mention of Paran, but ſaith from Hazeroth they went to Rithmah, v. 18. And yet Paran is ſpoken of again as a famous place for Gods glory ſhewed there, Deut. 33. 2. and Deut. 1. 1. For the reconciling of theſe differences, it is to be underſtood, that Paran was a very great wilderneſs, and ſo this was the generall name of the place to which they came, when they removed from Sinai, wherein Kibroth-Hattaavath and Hazeroth were contained, and divers other manſions; a larger tract of ground went under this generall name Paran, and yet more properly that part, to which they came after they paſſed from Kibroth-Hattaavah, and Hazeroth, was called Paran; and herein were all the 18 manſions, ſaith Jerom, commemorated, Numb. 33. till they came at Kadeſh-Barnea, Rithma, Rimmon, Parez, Libnah, Riſſa, &c. v.18,19,20,&c. to v. 36. ſo likewiſe Toſtatus. The next place that they came to reſt at was Paran, as is here ſaid, but within the limits of Paran were theſe two other places, but becauſe little ſtay was made here, they are not ſpoken of as manſions at the firſt, but afterwards they are named, and from the ſecond of them their remove is ſaid to have been to Paran, chap.12. 16. that is, to Paran ſo more properly called. And whereas chap. 33. 18. Rithmah is put for Paran, it is to be underſtood, that it was a particular part of this wil-

Hieron. epiſt. ad Fabiolam.

Toſtatus.

Wilderneſſe, ſo that both are true, from Hazeroth they removed to Paran; and from Hazeroth to Rithmah, for they are both one; Paran the whole, and Rithmah the part. Antonius Guevara ſpeaketh alſo to the ſame effect, that having made ſhort ſtayes in Kibroth Hattaavah and Hazeroth, not ſpoken of therefore at the firſt, they came to Paran, which extended even to Kadeſh, the South limit of the land of Canaan, and hither they came from Sinai in 3. daies, it being from Sinai to Kadeſh 11 dayes journey. Moreover he ſaith, that there was a city in the borders of this Wilderneſſe called Paran, nigh mount Seir; and laſtly, that there was a mountain called ſo, but it was mount Seir, and had this name of Paran, becauſe it joyned unto it: of which read Deut. 33. 15. Habac. 3. 3.

Anton. Guevara in Habac. 3. 3.

Adricomius ſaith, that Paran was a moſt large Wilderneſſe without way and without water, containing a journey of 11 dayes betwixt Sinai and Kadeſh Barnea, being all dry and barren, and not inhabited, ſo that neither houſe nor cottage, nor beaſt nor fowl is to be ſeen there, nor tree nor green thing, but rocks and ſtony mountains moſt high and rough, of a mixt red and black colour, craggy and broken, and burnt with the heat of the ſun, ſo that it ſhining, the ſtones here ſhine, as if they were anointed with oyl, bringing horrour, and repreſenting death in the very beholding. Moreover here are deep ſands, which being he't with the heat of the ſun, make the paſſage intollerably hot, and labourſome. And in this Wilderneſs wandred the people of Iſrael 38 years, none being infirmated or made ſore hereby, neither did their ſhoes or apparel tear, but waxed upon their little ones, as their bodies waxed greater, there being all this time no defect of Manna or water, nor of the cloud or fire to protect and inlighten them. Thus he, who alſo ſaith, that Paran is ſometimes taken for the firſt part of the deſert of Arabia near Mount Sinai, and ſometime for the furtheſt towards the land of promiſe, and that the ſame is ſometimes called Sin, and ſometime Sinai.

Adricomius.

And they firſt took their journey according to the commandement of the Lord by the hand of Moſes.] Beſides the ſign given by the clouds removing, and the trumpets ſounding, they were ſpoken to Moſes, whom the Lord commanded to make this remove, as is ſhewed Deut. 1. 6. and they heard Moſes praying, Ariſe (Lord) and let thine enemies be ſcattered, &c. verſ. 35. ſo we muſt be moved from time to time, ſaith Ferus, by the Word of God, in going towards our Countrey Heaven, even againſt the dictate of natural reaſon, or elſe we ſhall labour in vain.

Verſ. 13.

In the firſt place went the ſtandard of the children of Judah, &c.] With Judah were joyned Iſſachar and Zebulun with their captains, of which ſee before chap. 2. 2, 3, 4, &c. Judah with a Lion in his ſtandard figuring Chriſt goeth firſt, and leadeth all the reſt of the tribes againſt the Canaanites, to ſhew, that all victory cometh to us againſt our ſpirituall enemies under Chriſt. He is our Captain and Leader, and his Apoſtles; Judæi, having their name from Judah; wherefore we muſt take heed, that we follow them. In the order of the proceeding of the children of Iſrael, it is obſervable, that Judah ſignifying praiſe or confeſſion, goeth firſt; then Reuben, the ſeeing of a ſon. 3. Ephraim, fruitfulneſſe. 4. Dan, judgment: For hereby, as Ferus noteth, was ſhewed, that firſt Chriſt is confeſſed, his Goſpel being publiſhed. 2. By faith he is ſeen and believed in. 3. Fruitfulneſſe in good works followeth. 4. Humility in the conſideration of Gods judgments in all that will come to the land of promiſe.

Ver. 14, 15, 16.

Ferus.

They move now in order, but in coming out of Egypt all together; to ſhew, that in turning to God we muſt make all haſte, and not ſtay one for another; but in the Church order muſt be kept, neither muſt one come into the place or office of another: for ſo that we be in the Army, it mattereth not whether we be firſt or laſt, becauſe the poor widow is as well accepted, as the moſt abounding in wealth. 2. The laſt follow the firſt,

Note.

to

to ſhew, that the people ſhonld follow their leaders, the Miniſters of Gods
1 Cor.11.1. Word; for follow me, ſaith S. Paul, as I follow Chriſt. 3. They on the eaſt move firſt, then on the ſouth, &c. as the ſame moveth, to ſhew, that we muſt have reſpect in our motions to the Son of righteouſneſs, to walk as he did. 4. The Ark was carried in the midſt, to ſhew the care, that ought to be in us of religion in the chief place, and that we ſhould not ſeek the world chiefly, and neglect it in compariſon, for this is, as it were, a leaving of it behind, when it ſhould be in the midſt, as moſt regarded.

Verſ. 17. And the tabernacle was taken down, and the ſonnes of Gerſhon and the ſonnes of Merari ſet forward in bearing the Tabernacle.] In what order, and how the tabernacle was taken down and carried by the Levites, ſee before, Chap.4. 5, &c. and chap.7.5,6, &c. This taking of it down and often removing it,

The Myſtery. ſhewed the inſtability and taking away afterwards of the ceremonial law.

Ainſworth. Heb.12.27. the unſetled eſtate of Gods people, whileſt they are in the pilgrimage of this world, and the removing of Gods grace from one people to another, from the Jew to the Gentile, ſpoken of Matth.21.33. ſo Ainſworth.

Qu. But for the hiſtory, here may ſeem to be a difference from chap.2.17. where the Levites are appointed to go in the midſt of the hoaſt, ſix tribes going before, and ſix following after; but now the Gerſhonites and Merarites are ſaid to go next to the three tribes, and after the next three the Cajetan. Kohathites another family of the Levites. This is reconciled well by Cajetan, thus, Moſes in appointing the order of the Levites going on, chap.2. ſpeaketh only in general of them, that they ſhall go after ſix tribes in the midſt of the army, the other ſix following, not meaning, that all of them ſhould go in that order, but the Kohathites bearing the Ark and the moſt holy things, but the Gerſhonites and Merarites before them after the firſt three tribes, that they might ſet up the Tabernacle againſt the coming of the Kohathites to place the moſt holy things in it, as verſ.21. And this was left to this place to be further explained, being before paſſed over,

Toſtatus. and the general only mentioned. Toſtatus, Munſter, Pellican, &c. hold,

Munſterus. that all the Levites went in the midſt after ſix tribes, as was appointed,

Pellicanus. chap.2. and whereas the Gerſhonites and Merarites are ſpoken of, as going next the firſt three tribes, this was by anticipation; but it is plain by verſ.21. that they went before the Kohathites a good diſtance, becauſe they ſet up the tabernacle againſt theſe came. But whereas the Kohathites bearing the Ark are ſaid to have gone in the midſt, how is the Ark

Queſt. Verſ.33. ſaid verſ.33. to have been carried before all the hoaſt theſe three dayes.

R. Solomon. To this R. Solomon anſwereth, that the ark there ſpoken of was another Lyranus. ark, wherein were kept the firſt tables, which were broken. And Lyranus, that now peculiarly, and at other times free from danger the ark uſed to Toſtatus. be carried before the army, but in time of danger in the midſt. But Toſtatus rejecteth both theſe; the firſt, becauſe it is a mere imagination; and the ſecond, becauſe even in dangerous times, as in the wars againſt the Phi-

1 Sam. 4. 3. Joſ. 3. 3. liſtims the ark was carried before the people, and when they paſſed over Jordan. But when it is ſaid to have been carried before them, hereby is

Ainſworth. not alwayes implyed a priority in the locall motion, but as the word לפניהם in their faces ſignifieth, they having ſtill regard unto it, and to the cloud moving above it, or reſting thereon, to be directed in their way and to pitch their tents; and thus it might be ſaid to be in their faces, al-

Hugo. though in the midſt of them, and not before them in place. Hugo reporteth, that the ark went three dayes before them, and that they following after came at length to the place where it was ſome ſooner, and ſome later,

Cajetan. with which being wearied they murmured. But no man, ſaith Cajetan, ſhould be ſo void of reaſon, as to hold thus, but that in all thoſe 3 dayes the ark was carried with them, as they went on. For if it had gone ſo long before, how could they have ſeen it to be directed thereby? to ſay nothing thing of the danger, to which it ſhould have been expoſed by being ſevered ſo far from the army.

To conclude this, although the going of the Ark away from the Army three dayes before, be abſurd to be held, yet the going of it at this time ſingularly before them a certain diſtance for their direction, doth not diſagree with the preſent relation, or that, Chap.2. for it may be underſtood, that ordinarily the Ark was carried in the midſt, but at times extraordinary before them: Or if we hold to the former ſolution, that in their journeying they had the ark in their faces, that is, ſome of them ſtill alwaies obſerved it, when the cloud ſhould deſcend upon it; this may well be juſtified from the words of the text, and ſtandeth with reaſon, becauſe the cloud directing them was ſo large, as that it might be over the Ark in the midſt, and yet extend before the army to ſhew them the way that they ſhould go. And the Ark may be ſaid herein to go before them, and to ſeek them a reſting place, in that the cloud, which uſed to dwell upon the ark, and ſo was, as it were, an appurtenance of it, did this by extending it ſelf towards the place where they ſhould pitch.

Whereas the Kohathites are ſaid to bear the ſanctuary, the Sept. for further explication render it, the holy things, the ark, table, altar, candleſtick, &c. for the next words, and they did ſet up the tabernacle againſt they came, that is, the Gerſhonites and Merarites before ſpoken of, the vulgar Latine hath it, they carried the tabernacle till they came at the place of ſetting it up; but erroneouſly, and againſt the Hebrew verity. Verſ. 21.

And the ſtandard of the children of Dan ſet forward, which was the rereward of all the camps. For rereward in Hebr. is מאסף, ſignifying gathering; from whence it is obſerved, that if any in the way, that went before, fell from their Armies, and were diſordered, this army gathered and took them along with them, that is, the faint and the weary, Deut. 25.18. and the leprous put out of the camp, Numb. 5. of whom they were to have a care. This ſhewed the ſingular providence of God even over the meaneſt, and unto this it is alluded, Eſay 52.12. and David uſeth this word gathering, in ſpeaking of Gods care over him, Pſal.27.10. Verſ. 25. Ainſworth. Note.

Thus were the journeyings of the children of Iſrael] That is, in this order, firſt the trumpets ſounded, and Judah with the 2 tribes adjoyned to him moved, and after them the Gerſhonites, and Merarites. Secondly, the trumpets ſounded again, and then Reuben, &c. moved, the Kohathites following. At the third ſounding Ephraim, &c. and at the fourth Dan, &c. and to this marching of Ephraim next to the Kohathites bearing the Ark, it is alluded, Pſal. 80. 3. Before Ephraim, &c. ſtirre up thy ſtrength, &c. Verſ. 28.

And Moſes ſaid to Hobab the ſon of Raguel, the Midianite, Moſes his father in law, &c.] Exod.2.18. Raguel is ſaid to be the father of Moſes his wife Zipporah; and Exod.18.1. Jethro: but here Hobab the ſon of Raguel is intituled his father in law; who a man ſhould think, was rather his brother in law, and ſo it is more probable that he was, becauſe Raguel, otherwiſe called Jethro, departed from him long before this, Exod.18.27. thus alſo Aben Ezra, and with him Hugo, Paul. Burgenſis, Cajetan, Comeſtor, Rickelius, &c. and the word חתן, ſignifieth indifferently father in law, or brother in law: ſee the Notes Exod.2.18. and Chap.18.27. in the vulgar Latine he is called cognatus Moſis; Sept. γαμβρὸς. This man alſo upon the entreaty of Moſes, it may be gathered verſ. 32. ſtayed, and went not away; for it is not ſaid here, that he departed, but made an offer to go only; and of his family we read again, Judg.1.16, &c. Ferus, who is plain for his ſtay, being overcome by Moſes his importunity, ſaith, that Moſes did not labour ſo much to have him ſtay, becauſe he needed his direction, for he had the cloud going before him, and familiar collocution with God, but partly becauſe he would not neglect the means, and partly Verſ. 29. Aben Ezra. Ferus.

to win Hobab unto God, who by going away might have been in danger of idolatry; ſo that he pretendeth direction, that he might give them, and promiſeth benefit, but aimeth chiefly at his ſalvation: we being in this example taught, wiſely to uſe the moſt perſwaſive motives to bring thoſe home unto God, that are wandring; and to ſtay thoſe, that are falling away. Procopius. Procopius ſaith, that Jethro Hobabs father, the Prieſt of Madian being now dead, he would return thither to injoy his Prieſthood, and he will have Raguel to be the father of Jethro.

Verſ. 33. And they departed from the mount of the Lord three dayes journey, and the ark of the Lord went before them in thoſe three dayes journey to ſearch out a reſting place for them, &c.] How the Arks going before them is to be underſtood, ſee above verſ. 17. Mount Sinai is called the mount of the Lord, becauſe, as the Cald. hath it, his glory was here revealed.

three dayes journey] That is, without pitching any tents, or reſting any more, then neceſſity required, to eat and drink, and ſleep a little. The Myſtery. In the Arks going before them theſe three dayes to ſeek them a reſting place, there was a notable type of Chriſt, by whom we have reſt to our ſoules, he riſing again the third day for our juſtification, as he had before intimated, ſaying, I will caſt out devils to day and to morrow, and the third day I ſhall be perfected, Luk. 13. 32. Rom. 4. 25. Thus Procopius, and Græca Catena, adding moreover, that Chriſt upon the third day did ſo ſubdue death, and him that had the power of death, the Devil, that then what he had before ſaid, began to be verified, be of good comfort, I have overcome the world; and ye ſhall tread upon ſerpents and ſcorpions. And as the Ark went here to ſeek a place of reſt for them, ſo ſaith Oleaſter, Chriſt went before to prepare a place for his. Procopius. Græca Cat. Heb. 2. 14. Joh. 16. 33. Luk. 10. 19. Oleaſter. Joh. 14. 2. Rickelius conſidering their remove now from the mount of the Lord, will have the Church militant ſet forth hereby, from which we remove to that triumphant by three acts of faith, hope and charity, by keeping a threefold law, natural, divine, and poſitive, by the exerciſes of a way purgative, illuminative, and perfective, &c. Rickelius.

Verſ. 34. And the cloud of the Lord was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp. This cloud began firſt to be placed as the ſhield of Gods protection over them at their coming out of Egypt, Exod. 13. 21. and here it is again ſpoken of, as ſtill continuing, of the benefits and myſteries of which, ſee ibid.

Verſ. 35. When the ark ſet forward, Moſes ſaid, Riſe up, Lord, and let thine enemies be ſcattered, &c. This is repeated Pſal. 68. 1, 2, &c. and verſ. 18. Chriſt is plainly ſpoken of as aſcending, leading captivity captive, and giving gifts unto men; whence it may be gathered, that in this prayer of Moſes he was reſpected, as ſet forth by the ark; for when he aroſe and aſcended, the forces of our ſpirituall enemies were ſcattered, but his people were gathered.

Verſ. 36. And when it reſted, he ſaid, return, O Lord, to the many thouſands of Iſrael.] The Septuagint, Return (O Lord) the thouſands, the ten thouſands of Iſrael; and in the Hebrew the words are, Return the many thouſands, not to the thouſands, wherefore the ſence may be; cauſe the people weary of travel to turn to their reſt, their tents being again pitched; or if the word, to be ſupplied, the meaning is, return (O Lord) and abide again upon thy Tabernacle, who haſt hitherto removed thy cloud from of it, that the many thouſands of Iſrael may have joy and comfort of thy being in the midſt of them. And it is not unuſuall to underſtand this word to, as 2 Sam. 4. 2. 2 King. 25, 13. 2 Sam. 6. 11. And if we ſupply it thus, it beſt anſwereth to the prayer at the riſing up of the Arke. Rabanus. Procopius noteth, that the enemies of Gods people are here called gods enemies, and ſuch as hate him for the terrour of all ſuch, what is done to one of them, is done to God. Procopius. Rabanus ſaith, that herein is commended Prayer to the Captains of Gods people at the beginning of every action or warfare. A like ſpeech to this of Gods reſting, is Pſalm. 132. 8. and 2 Chron.6. 41. From the word returning, ſome gather that in travell the Ark went before them; but to return here is nothing elſe but ſetledly to reſt and dwell amongſt them, ceaſing from further motion by travell in carrying the Ark.

ſpeech

Chap. XI.

And when the people complained, it diſpleaſed the Lord, and his anger was kindled, and the fire of the Lord burnt among them, &c.] At what the people murmured it is not here ſaid, but from the hiſtory before going it is gathered, that they complained of the travel, that they were put to three dayes together in a barren wilderneſs, ſo Sol. Jarchi. They complained doubtleſs that they were not dealt withall according to expectation; and therefore that God did not bear them ſo much good will, as he pretended, but brought them out of Egypt indeed: ſeeing they were now thus tired and conſumed with travell: for of their wearineſs and faintneſs through much travel, ſee Deut. 25.18. and that the complaint was amongſt ſuch is intimated, in that the fire is ſaid here to have burned, and to have conſumed them in the utmoſt parts of the Camp, that is, thoſe that through wearineſs were caſt behind; thus alſo Comeſtor. God had ſent a fire out againſt Nadab and Abihu to deſtroy them, Levit. 10. And here again he ſendeth down fire to deſtroy the murmurers for the labour of the travell, and ch. 16. againſt Corah and his company for rebelling; ſo that our God is terrible, as a conſuming fire to ſinners. But it is to be noted, that before the Law given and the Covenant made and confirmed by bloud, Exod.24.8 The people were not puniſhed, but ſpared, notwithſtanding their complainings, as Exod. 14.11. c.15.24.c. 16. 2,3. &c.c. 17.2. 5. but ſince that time they were not ſpared, as Exod.32. Levit. 10. and twice in this chapter, &c. 1 Cor. 10. This ſheweth that the ſtate of thoſe that live in ſinne, being through their calling by grace within the Covenant, as all the baptized are, is farre more dangerous then theirs, that never had the word preached unto them.

Verſ. 1.

Sol. Jarchi.

Scholaſt. Hiſtor.

Heb. 12 29.

Note.

Forus.

Act. 17. 30. Iohn 15. 22.

For the myſtery, Cyril Alexand. ſaith in theſe murmurers are figured out Apoſtates; who for that, which they are to ſuffer, or the pains, that they are to take for Chriſt in following him their Leader fall away from the truth imbraced; to them God will be moſt terrible, deſtroying them in hell fire. Some expound their murmuring, as being for fleſh; of which verſ. 4. but that was plainly a different provocation from this, and Theodoret ſaith, they complained now, becauſe they were grieved at the toyle of this journy. By the ſevere puniſhment inflicted upon theſe murmurers we may ſee what a great ſinne it is: Chryſoſtome ſaith, he that murmureth is ungratefull towards God, and he that is ungratefull is blaſphemous; and Bernard, it cannot be a ſmall ſinne, becauſe it hath been ſo greatly and often puniſhed; yea Moſes ſaith, your murmurings are not againſt me, but againſt God.

Cyril. Alex.

Eugubinus, Theod. qu. 17. in Num. ὅτι ὀδυσποριας ἐδυχέφαναν πονον.

Chryſoſt. Hom 8 in Philem.

Bernard.

Exod.16.8.

When the fire burnt them, they cried to Moſes and he prayed, and the fire went out; and from this burning the place was called Taberah burning; that by the name the judgement might be remembred, and they deterred from murmuring again. The number that periſhed by this burning is not ſet down, whereupon Toſtatus and Cajetan gather, that they were not many, but the fire burning ſome, the next unto them were moved with repentance, and cried to Moſes, &c. Hereupon Lorinus the Jeſuite groundeth praying to the Saints, and that not onely living, but departed; but how rightly, ſeeing Moſes, to whom they now cried, was living, let the Reader judge. They ſaw that Moſes was very gracious with the Lord, and therefore they cry to him in this ſudden danger, as now in the time of ſickneſs the Elders of the Church are to be cried unto, and

Verſ. 2. 3.

Toſtatus.

Cajetan.

Iam.5.16.

Caietan.

called for, that they may pray. The fire was quenched, Hebr. השקע, was swallowed up, happily as some thinke, by the earth opening the mouth to swallow it, that it might descend to hell, where the wrath of the Lord burneth by fire continually: howsoever, it is meant, that it ceased.

Vers. 4.

And the mixt multitude amongst them fell a lusting, and the children of Israel wept again, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat, &c.] Of this mixt multitude, see Exod. 12. 38. they were strangers that came up with them out of Egypt; these lusted for flesh, and by them the Israelites were drawn to the like, although for their murmuring a little before they had been severely punished, and driven to repentance, yet now they wept as discontented.

Scholast. histor. For the mixed multitude hath servants and maides of Ægypt.

This sheweth, that this was a different murmuring from the former, and not all one as some think; the first most probably was upon the way, and so the place named from the burning, Taberah was not the same, with that called the graves of concupiscence, v. 34. For it was no station, but a place in the way, as the way where Uzzah was smitten with death, was thereupon called Perezuzzah; and therefore chap. 33. where all the severall stations of the children of Israel are capitulated; Taberah is not named.

2 Sam. 6.

Who shall give us flesh, &c. By flesh here any other thing to be eaten is meant also, besides Manna, as appeareth, vers. 5. and therefore, Psalm. 78. 19. It is called meat, and there their sinne is set forth to be double. 1 In desiring, and desiring exceedingly, as Psal. 106. 14. 2 In despairing, for they said, can God prepare a table in the wildernesse.

By flesh saith Schol. histor. we understand not only flesh, but the abundance of any other meats.

Vers. 5.

We remember the fish that we did eat in Egypt freely, the cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions and garlick.] Fish did so abound in Egypt by reason of the river Nilus, that it was a Proverb, there is an harvest of fish in Egypt; and Elianus saith, that in the time of the Summer heat, the waters abounding, the Egyptians caught fish, where at other times they reaped corne. They said therefore that they ate fish freely, that is, either catching them, or paying little for them. Or by freely, saith Ainsworth, may be understood in vain, as if they meant, that they commemorated this in vain not being like to have other supply: But I preferre the former exposition. Ferus saith, that they lied in thus saying, for the world will not afford any thing for nought, but because they were so much affected to this food, they counted that which it stood them in as nothing. He also saith, that this desiring of flesh was a great sinne. 1 Because they had their fill of delicate manna. 2 They had cattell to kill in abundance, but through covetousnesse they would spare them, and complain of want. 3 They must not have ordinary, but dainty flesh. Before the flood they lived without flesh almost two thousand yeares, but now men will scarce abstaine from it two dayes together.

Ælian. 10. de animal. c. 43.

Ainsworth.

Ferus.

Cookes despised by the Romans.

The Romanes having conquered Italy, Africa and Greece, were content with so simple a diet, that none were so vilely accounted of amongst them, as Cookes; thus he adding also, because after they had spoken of flesh, they immediately mentioned the fish of Egypt, &c. That they were inconstant, now wishing for flesh, and by and by for fish, and such are all that loath the spirituall food. The cucumbers, melons: It is like that the fat grounds of Egypt did abound with these fruits, and herewith servants, and the common sort of people lived for the most part; and Pliny saith, that Tiberius a Prince was wonderfully delighted with the eating of cucumbers, so that he used all artificiall meanes to have them even at times extraordinary. Leekes, garlick and onions are specially noted to have been highly esteemed of amongst the Egyptians; not for food, but for veneration, as Pliny saith, they numbred them amongst their gods, and sware by them.

Plinius, lib. 19. c. 5.

Plin. lib. 19. c. 6.

Vers. 6.

But now our soul is dried away, there is nothing but this manna before our eyes.] By soul is understood the whole man, or the body, as in divers other places, or or the life depending upon the ſoul, they complained, as if they were waſted with eating manna, which was indeed rare food, and ſo they ſhew their loathing of it, through their being continually uſed to it.

The myſtery.

For the myſtery of all this, (ſeeing the things here ſpoken of, as longed after, by ſome of the Jewes own confeſſion, were but groſſe and unwholſome meats, for great fiſhes, ſaith Maimony, being ſalted, and old are ſo evill meat, that it is not fit that a man ſhould ever eat of them; and howſoever great fiſhes, cheeſe, onions, leeks, and garlicke are ſo evill, that a man ſhould eat but ſeldome of them and very little, and in Summer not at all) the myſtery, I ſay, is to ſet forth carnall minded men, and how they loath the ſpirituall food of the ſoul, preferring the baſe things or hurtfull of this life before it.

Maimony in Miſueh.

The people of Iſrael in their travelling on after the Law received, ſaith Ferus, figured out the carnall Chriſtian having received the Goſpell: for as they firſt murmured for the tedioufneſſe of the journey, and then out the loathing of manna, becauſe they had none other food; ſo the carnall Chriſtian is firſt tempted by the difficulty of the taske impoſed upon him, to heare, pray, underſtand, read and exerciſe in the Word, and to live accordingly; for finding it moſt hard to ſubdue the fleſh unto the ſpirit, he diſtaſteth the injunction, and as over-wearied letteth all ſtriving any more alone.

Ferus.

Secondly, by being continually uſed to heavenly Doctrine, he in the next place groweth to a loathing of that, having in it now little or no reckoning, and preferring the baſe things of this world before it. The firſt, to be weary of ſtriving to doe good is dangerous, for God was wroth at that complaining, and his fire deſtroyed ſome; but the ſecond much more dangerous, for many more now periſhed. He that groweth weary of doing well may yet happily recover by the Word, but if the love of this heavenly food bee turned into a loathing, and a being weary of it, there is no further hope, they are now neare to the gates of death.

Pſ. 107. 18.

Rabanus by manna underſtanding alſo ſpirituall food, and by fiſh, &c. worldly things, ſaith, that the carnally minded had rather ſeek after worldly things through much aſperity, then imbrace heavenly, being offered to them in the ſweetneſs of reſt, even as the Iſraelites weary of manna, longed after other meat, the fleſh-pots of Egypt ſetting forth the tribulation of labour, wherein the worldly are boyled, as meat in a pot, melons ſetting forth pleaſures, and onions, &c. Which make water come out of the eyes, ſetting forth ſorrowes, in the middeſt of which the worldly are continually.

Rabanus.

Rickelius by the mixt multitude, which began this murmuring underſtandeth the common ſort, and by the Iſraelites following them, Prieſts and religious perſons following in their wayes of delight in theſe worldly vanities, and ſinning hereby.

Rickelius.

And the manna was as Coriander ſeed, and the colour of it, as Bdellium, &c.] Here and v. 8. 9. the manna which they loathed, is deſcribed to ſhew that they had no reaſon ſo to complain; for it was no diſtaſtfull, but moſt ſweet and pleaſant meat; ſee before Exod. 16. 14.

Verſ. 7.

Then Moſes heard the people weep throughout their families, &c. Here is ſhewed both how generall the diſcontent now was, and how openly they ſhewed it, for they wept in their tent doores, at which God and Moſes alſo were greatly offended, in ſomuch that Moſes maketh a grievous complaint, as being overburthened to have the charge of ſo mutinous a people committed unto him; preferring therefore to die, rather then to liue, for they asked fleſh of him ſaith Comeſtor in Scholaſt. Hiſtor. In that he ſpeaketh here of the people, as a burthen too heavie for him, ſee what a burthen lieth upon the ſhoulders of governours, and in that he ſaith, that God appointed him to carry them, as in his boſome as a nurſe;

Verſ. 10.

Verſ. 11. 12.

Ferus.

V. 13, 14.

Verſ. 15.

Note.

what the meekneſſe of Governours ſhould be towards the people: here-Maimony. upon Maimony ſaith, it is unlawful for a man to govern with ſtatelineſſe and haughtineſſe of ſpirit, but with meekneſſe and fear; but he muſt bear the toyl of them, as Moſes our maſter, as a nurſing father the ſucking child. There muſt be no contemptuous carriage in the greateſt Governour towards the baſeſt people, for they are the ſons of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, &c. Moreover in that he ſaith, Why haſt thou afflicted thy ſervant? Note that good rulers take to heart that which is done againſt
Note. God, as if it were done againſt themſelves: it is Moſes his affliction, that the people murmur againſt God, over whom he was ſet: whereas Moſes ſpeaketh of his being bidden to carry them, as in his boſom, the like is ſaid afterwards of God, that he did it. Deut. 1. 31. Chap. 32. 10, 11. whereas he wiſheth death rather, then to ſuffer this miſery ſtill, although it may ſeem to come from impatience, and ſo to have been an infirmity in Mo-
Ferus. ſes: yet it is excuſed by Ferus and ſome others, ſaying, that Moſes in this ſpeech ſhewed his faith, hope and charity; faith, becauſe he ſpake ſo confidently with God; hope, becauſe he laid open his grievance, which he would not have done, unleſſe he had hope of help from him; and charity, becauſe he talked familiarly with God, as one friend with another; and in ſaying, I cannot bear the burthen of all this people alone: he ſpeaketh not, as impatient, but as acknowledging his weakneſſe and inſufficiency, deſiring a ſupply of ſome help. And in wiſhing death he only ſhewed, that it was ſo grievoas to him to ſee theſe rebellions in the people, as that he had rather dye, then by living to be inforced to ſee this ſtill: moreover he prayeth for death, if I have found favour in thy ſight; he would not dye, but in Gods favour. A man may not ſimply deſire death, to avoid miſery, or to enjoy Chriſt; but if it be the good will and pleaſure of God;
Calvin. and hereby Moſes was guided. Calvin yet ſaith, that Moſes herein ſinned grievouſly by impatience, although a moſt holy ſervant of God; by which we may ſee, whither fleſh and bloud will carry us, if we be not continually ſupported by Gods grace. And Ferus ſaith, it may be, that he was carried by ſome paſſion: but his words being more clearly conſidered, it will appear, that he did nothing elſe, but pour out the miſeries, which he had long born in his boſome, before the Lord, and ſhew his faith, &c. I think, that Moſes did not herein ſin, both becauſe he referred himſelf to the good pleaſure of God, and becauſe he is no where taxed, as ſinning in this, but when he ſinned about the waters of Meribah, he is. He was bold thus to utter his mind before the Lord for that familiar collocution with him, to which he was admitted. But it is noted from the word אתּ, thou, if thou dealeſt thus, being put for אתּה, that he was in ſome paſſion, ſo that he could not ſpeak his word out, ſee the like, Deut. 5. 27. where the people being terrified ſay to Moſes, ſpeak thou, the ſame word אתּ being
Sol. Jarchi. alſo uſed. Hereupon Sol. Jarchi ſaith, the ſtrength of Moſes became feeble, as a woman, when the holy bleſſed God ſhewed him the puniſhments that he would bring upon them. For, kill me, Hebr. is, killing kill me, that is, kill me out of hand.

Ferus. Videntur Moſis verba nonnihil impatientiæ præ ſe ferre, & fieri poteſt ut humanum aliquid paſſus ſit, &c.

Verſ. 16. And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, gather unto me ſeventy men of the elders of Iſrael, &c.] Becauſe Moſes had complained, that he could not bear the people alone, God ſatisfieth his deſire herein by appointing others, as aſſiſtants unto him. He had aſſiſtants before of the chief of them, Exod. 18. but they aſſiſted him only in temporal things, ſaith Ferus, and he wanted ſtill ſome to aſſiſt him in ſpirituals, that is, in matters pertaining to God and to his worſhip, in all caſes happening wherein the elders before appointed had no power, but thoſe harder things were ſtill referred to Ferus. Moſes alone: therefore God ſaith now, that he would take of the ſpirit of Moſes, and put it upon ſome others, that they might joyn with him herein. And he biddeth Moſes to gather them, and will have them ſuch, as he knew to be elders, to shew, that none are to enter upon a spirituall calling, but through some Moses, that is, one set over before in spirituals; so that he is truly called, that is appointed by such to minister, otherwise not, although he pleadeth, that he was called of God. And they must be elders that must minister, that is, elders in understanding; for although a man wanteth years, if he hath wisdome, this maketh him an Elder indeed: if elders in years had been meant, every man by seeing could have known them, and he should not have needed to say, such as thou knowest to be elders; as both Gregory, Rabanus, and Tostatus reason: and Moses must know them to be elders, he must discharge a good conscience in gathering them, not taking any for affection, or indifferently, but such as were approved unto him, as the Bishop is also charged to do. The number to be taken were 70. as is most probable, from amongst the rulers before constituted, Exod. 18. and this number is agreeable to that, Exod. 24. 1. Moses is bidden to come with 70 of the elders to the mount, of each tribe six, for although 12 times six is 72, yet for the rotundity of the number they are commonly called seventy. In this number the memory of the 70 soules, that came into Egypt is maintained, and semblably after 12 Apostles representing the 12 tribes, 70 are sent forth more to preach the Gospel.

Note.

1 Tim. 5. 21, 22.

Luc. 10. 1.

Such as thou knowest to be elders of the people, and officers over them.] By officers, the Targum Jonathan understandeth those that were over them in Egypt, so likewise Sol. Jarchi; the Sept. render it Scribes. Touching the 70 now appointed, Maimony noteth, that of these 70 consisted the great Synedrion, continuing still from age to age afterwards, and keeping their court in the sanctuary. Amongst which, after the death of Moses, he that was the wisest was made the head, and he sate in the seat of Moses, and was called Nasi, the whole number then being 71, as here besides the 70 there was Moses, and on his right hand sate the next in wisdome, being called Ab-beth-din, father of the judgment Hall, and all the rest sate on both sides about him, he being still placed neerest to him, that was most excellent. And the Judges sate in the form of an half moon, so that the Nasi and the Ab-beth-din, might see them all. Besides, these there were two courts more, consisting each of them of 23 Judges, 1. at the door of the court of the sanctuary, and the second at the door of the mountain of the temple, and in every city, wherein there were 120 men, there was a court of 23, but if there were not 120, then it consisted but of three, but if there were not two wise men in any city, one skilfull to teach the whole law, and the other to demand questions, and make answers, they placed no Synedrion there. For the supplying of the great Synedrion with able men from time to time, they of that court sent to appoint Judges in cities from time to time of such as were wise, meek and afraid to sinne, and of these Judges were taken into the court at the door of the mountain of the temple, and from thence to that at the door of the court of the Sanctuary, and from thence to the great Synedrion, thus he, who also saith, they must all be priests, Israelites and Levites, whose genealogies were known. But it is generally held, as is said before, that they were 72. there being 70 with Moses, and two, viz. Eldad and Medad in the hoast; and the Interpreters of the Bible were 72, and according to this number were the languages, Gen. 11. as the authour of that work de mirabilibus Scripturæ inserted in S. Augustines works sheweth. Tostatus thinketh, that these were all of the Priests kindred, others of the tribe of Judah, but, as Maimony hath it, they were rather chosen out of all the tribes, Levites and others. A Senate like to this was constituted at Athens, saith Eusebius, the fift year, after the children of Israels coming out of Egypt, called Areopagites. Plutarch saith, that Lycurgus would not have any made a Judge under 60 years, and that by the Law of the Calcidens none could be a Magistrate, or Embassadour, till 50. In Alexanders army, there

Exod. 5. 14.

Maimony in Sanedrin. c. 1.

August. de mirabil. Script.

Euseb. in Chron.

there was no leader under 60. And nature it ſelf being miſtreſſe, rulers ought to be Elders, and the younger to be ruled, ſaith Plato and Ariſtotle. But yet ſuch as are elders in wiſdom and virtue are to be counted in this number, although under theſe years.

Plato 3. de repub. Ariſt. polit. 1. c. 14. πρεσβυτέρους τοὺς ἀρχικοὺς δεῖ εἶναι νεωτέρους τῶν ἀρχομένων.

Verſ. 17.

And I will come down and talk with thee, and take of the ſpirit which is upon thee. and put it upon them,&c.] It may ſeem, that for ſo much as God would put his Spirit upon them, there ſhould not have needed ſo great choyce of able men to be made; but it is to be underſtood, that the gift of propheſying is not habitual and permanent, neither could they hereby judge as often as they would: for even from Moſes, who was fulleſt of the Spirit, divers things were ſometimes hidden, till he had conſulted with the Lord: and if they could by the Spirit know, how to judge at any time, yet a good choyce was needful to be made of men every way venerable to move the people the more willingly to be ruled by them. At the door of the tabernacle theſe Elders are appointed to ſtand with Moſes; for they might not go in, ſeeing they were not of the tribe of Levi, and at the door was the moſt publick place, and ſo the fitteſt for them to be inaugurated to this office, that they might be in the more authority.

Rickelius.

And I will come down] How the Lord came down to talk with Moſes at the door of the tabernacle, ſee Chap.12.5. he came in a pillar of a cloud; and ſo it is moſt likely that he did now; yea he is ſaid to have come in a a cloud, verſ. 25. that is, in a ſign; the Cald. I will reveal my ſelf.

and take of the Spirit which is upon thee, and put it upon them] The Lord meant not hereby, that the Spirit ſhould be diminiſhed in Moſes, but that he would give them ſuch gifts of the Spirit, as Moſes had, fitting them to govern in matters concerning God and his religion together with him: not every ſpirit, ſaith Ferus, but ſuch a Spirit as Moſes had was needfull for them, that is, ſuch knowledge, faith, fervency, and diligence. As the Spirit of Elijah is ſaid to have reſted upon Eliſha, when he had the like gifts of the Spirit. Moſes, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, was like the lamp upon the candleſtick, at which all the other lamps were lighted, and yet the light thereof not diminiſhed: ſo likewiſe Philo, who ſaith, we muſt not by any means think, that there was now a diviſion made of the Spirit, but as fire is taken from fire, 100 lamps being made to burn by it, and yet it is no whit diminiſhed; ſo was the Spirit taken from Moſes and put upon theſe Elders; ſo Rupertus alſo, and Ambroſe, Toſtatus,&c. inſtancing in John the Baptiſt, who came in the Spirit of Eliſha, that is, having the like gifts. But if it were Gods Spirit which is here meant, it may be demanded, why the Lord ſaith, I will take of thy Spirit, and notrather, of my Spirit. Auguſtine anſwereth, the Spirit of God in us is our Spirit, when we have once received him, although he be Gods Spirit alſo. And therefore the Spirit on Moſes might well be called his Spirit, and being taken and put upon the 70, be never the leſſe in Moſes, becauſe God by his grace and Spirit can be as great in every one, as it pleaſeth him. Moreover in ſaying, I will take of thy Spirit, it was intimated, that they ſhould not have ſo great a meaſure of the Spirit as Moſes; but that he ſhould be as their head, and they his parts, as it were, to which his Spirit ſhould be diffuſed. From hence we may gather, that none ought to be made Governours over the people in ſpiritual things, but ſuch as have gifts and graces of the Spirit anſwerable to their calling. Petrus Damianus noteth further, that no man can give the Spirit, but God only, becauſe he ſaith, I will take of thy Spirit; and that amongſt Governours there ſhould be all good concord and unity, ſeeing they all have of one and the ſame Spirit their divers gifts. But whereas Lorinus the Jeſuite inferreth, that as Moſes was then, ſo the Pope is now in reſpect of Governours in the Church, all their power is derived from him, as the Spirit upon theſe elders from Moſes, let him ſhew the like calling of the Pope to be head and fulleſt of the Spirit, and I will believe him.

Ainſworth. Cajetan.

2 Kings 2.15. Sol. Jarchi.

Philo lib. de Gigant.

Rupertus. Ambroſius. Queſt. Auguſt. qu. 18. in Num.

Note.

Petrus Damian.

Lorinus.

and

and they ſhall bear the burthen of the people with thee] This ſheweth, that Governours are not therefore ſet up, that they might have honour, but labour and care for the good of the people, honos is onus: Oleaſter ſaith out of the Hebrews, that the true underſtanding of the Law was given by Joſhua from Moſes to theſe Elders, when as he had received it from the Lord in Sinai, and that they delivered it to the Prophets, and the Prophets taught it to the men of the great Synagogue, ſuch as Eſdras was, and others his fellowes, who reſtored the law being almoſt obliterated to his firſt ſplendour, and therefore ſince where any Synagogue was inſtituted in Iſrael, 70 Elders were ſet over every Synagogue: yea Hilary ſaith, that Moſes inſtituted 70 in every Synagogue, and acquainted them privately with the myſticall underſtanding of the things of the Law, that they might teach others; and to this our Saviour Chriſt alludeth, when he ſaith, the Scribes and Phariſees ſit in Moſes his chair. This learning of the myſteries of the law, they called Cabaliſtical, and it remained amongſt the Doctours of the Synagogues. But that there were ſo many elders to every Synagogue is moſt improbable, ſeeing in ſome cities there were ſo few, wherein yet there was a Synagogue, that if ſeventy were ſet apart to rule, there would not remain ſeventy more to be ruled, that is, if there were in a City, as Maimony had it before, but 120 men, or fewer, moreover where ſo few were, he ſaith, that there were 23, or three Judges only, and not 70 in any court, but one.

Oleaſter.

Hilar. in Pſ. 2.

And ſay to the people, ſanctifie your ſelves againſt to morrow, and ye ſhall eat fleſh. &c.] When they murmured before, complaining of their want, Exod. 16. and had manna and quailes the firſt time ſent them, they are not bidden to ſanctifie themſelves, but here ſingularly they are, wherefore it is inquired, what is meant hereby? Some anſwer, that nothing elſe is meant, but that they ſhould prepare themſelves, and ſo the Cald. rendreth it, prepare your ſelves againſt to morrow: and this muſt be, ſaith Oleaſter, by waſhing their cloathes, being ſeparate from their wives, and from all unclean things, as at the giving of the law: by repentance of their ſin committed in murmuring, ſaith Cajetan, and Fonſeca by faſting, abſtaining from their wives, and from all worldly delights. But by this it remaineth yet unreſolved, why they muſt ſanctifie themſelves thus more now, then when the like occaſion was before, Exod. 16. Lorinus the Jeſuite ſaith, that this is required now, becauſe they were ungrateful before for the great benefit beſtowed upon them, leſt being ſo the ſecond time they ſhould be ſeverely puniſhed. But that this could not be the reaſon, the ſequel ſheweth, ſeeing that ſo ſoon as God had ſent them fleſh, he ſent his judgments upon them, verſ. 33. Sol. Jarchi ſaith, that by theſe words, ſanctifie your ſelves, is meant, prepare your ſelves for vengeance, as Jerem. 12. 3. the phraſe is uſed, prepare them for the day of ſlaughter. And Toſtatus ſaith, that the words may indifferently thus be underſtood, prepare your ſelves for death; although he preferreth the former. But to me this ſeemeth the beſt, becauſe all the ſpeech here joyned with the promiſe of giving them fleſh, implyeth an angry God, becauſe ye have wept in the ears of the Lord, &c. and again verſ. 20. becauſe ye have deſpiſed the Lord, who is amongſt you, &c. ye ſhall eat, till it come out at your noſtrils, and be loathſome to you. For in ſaying thus, he could not mean, that they ſhould diſpoſe themſelves to an holy and thankfull uſe of this benefit, thus averting judgment, but that they ſhould repent, and be humbled, that although they were ſmitten with the bodily death for their murmuring, yet their ſoules might be ſaved. When the Lord ſent Manna and quailes, Exod. 16. he did not command them thus to be ſanctified, becauſe he meant not then to judge, but to ſpare them; but now intending to ſtrike many of them with death, they muſt be prepared for it. It is ſtrange, that God ſhould be moved by this peoples murmurings to promiſe to give them the thing which they deſired: but

Verſ. 18.

Queſt.

Oleaſter. Exod. 19.

Cajetan, Fonſeca.

Lorinus.

Sol Jarchi.

Toſtatus.

Ferus

Ferus.

2 Tim. 2. 13.

Matth. 5.

Ferus inquiring into this rendereth divers reaſons of it. 1 He did this for his goodneſſe ſake, which the malice of men cannot annihilate; whereupon Paul, if We be incredulous, he is faithfull, and cannot deny himſelfe, for by this goodneſs he doth good, and maketh his ſunne to ſhine upon the juſt and unjuſt. 2. To move the wicked to repentance, and if not, to condemne him the more juſtly. 3. That in giving them good things here, he may deall with them, as with men of this world, giving them nothing of the heavenly kingdome to come.

Verſ. 19.

Aug. in Iohan. Tract 73. Malè uſurus eo, quod vult accipere Deo potius non ſerente, non accipit.

Ye ſhall eat not one day or two dayes, &c. but a Whole moneth, till it come out at your noſtrils, &c. Hereby it appeareth, that God would give them fleſh in his wrath, and not in mercy; and ſo to wicked men the good things of this world are often given at their deſire to their hurt; whereupon Auguſtine noteth, that he who would uſe the things which he would receive ill, doth not receive them, God having mercy upon him herein, and if he ſhould have given them, it might have been feared, that whereas he would not give them in favor, he would have given them in wrath. This phraſe, till it come out at your noſtrils intimateth, that they ſhould ſo greedily and to ſuch fulneſſe eate of it, that they ſhould ſpue it up again, becauſe that which offendeth the ſtomach being caſt up with violence, cometh out not onely by the mouth, but by the noſe alſo: thus the benefits of God, ſaith Ferus, in the wicked have a curſe going with them, and they are hurt hereby, their very delicates are irkſome to them, when courſe fare is pleaſant to the godly poore.

Ferus. Note.

Ver. 21. Verſ. 22. Queſt. Theod. Procopius. Cyril. Alexan. John 6.5.6. Lyranus Luc. 1.

And Moſes ſaid the people are 600000 footmen, and thou haſt ſaid, I will give them fleſh, that they may eat a whole moneth: ſhall the flocks and the herds, &c.] A great queſtion is moved here, whether Moſes ſpake thus out of infidelity and ſinned in thus ſaying? Some hold that he did, as Theodoret and Procopius, ſaying, that he was not onely a Prophet, but a man; ſo likewiſe Cyrill, ſaying, that there was a weakneſſe of faith in him, as in Philip afterwards asking Chriſt, where ſhould he have bread enough to feed ſo great a multitude. But Lyranus contrariwiſe, that Moſes ſpake not thus out of infidelity, but as inquiring the way or means, how they ſhould be fed; as the virgin Mary afterwards ſaid, how ſhall this be, ſeeing I know no man? And this he ſaith is the common opinion of the Doctours: So likewiſe Toſtatus: Saint Auguſtine ſaith, we may underſtand the words of Moſes here, as of one inquiring rather how it could be, then diſtruſting that it could be; ſeeing the ſentence of the Lord to him again was not ſuch, as to revenge, but to teach. He alſo compareth this with the queſtioning of the bleſſed virgin Mary: Zachary queſtioned likewiſe, and he was puniſhed, but Mary ſatisfied, for God looketh not to the words, but to the heart? And this is followed by Rabanus, and Ferus, &c. and is certainly the moſt charitable conſtruction hereof, although meerly from the Lords not puniſhing or taxing of him now, as after at the waters of Meribah; it cannot be concluded that he ſinned not, ſeeing the children of Iſrael were not puniſhed for ſome of their murmurings, which notwithſtanding were great ſinnes. That at thoſe waters was more publick, and therefore for examples ſake to be puniſhed; this more ſecret between the Lord and Moſes alone, and therefore paſſed over. The main thing, that may perſwade, that Moſes ſinned not now, was, as Auguſt. hath it, the Lords telling him, how he would do it, and not checking him for his demand: but what are the Lords words here following, v.23. Is the Lords hand Waxed ſhort? thou ſhalt ſee now Whether my word ſhall ſtand or not, but a rebuke of Moſes, as if he doubted whether the Lord could do this great thing or no. There is no errour then in holding that Moſes ſinned now by diſtruſt as afterwards; and yet Joſeph. in writing this ſtory, is ſo wary of ſetting down any thing to the impeachment of Moſes. Whereas he ſaith not onely, they not believing, and one demanding, how ſo many thouſands could be fed, God ſaid, &c.

Toſtatus. Auguſt. in Num. qu. 19. verba Moſis de promiſſis carnibus intelligere debemus, quæ entis potius quomodo fieret, quam diffidentis fuiſſe, quando ſententia Domini non ſecuta eſt, quæ vindicaret, ſed potius quæ docet Ioſeph. Antiq. l. 3. c. 12.

As

as in the text, but Moſes himſelf ſaith, that this demandant was Moſes: Whereas he ſaith not onely, ſhall the flocks and herds be killed to ſuffice them; but alſo ſhall all the fiſhes of the Sea be gathered together: when as the Lord had ſpoken onely of fleſh, wherewith they ſhould be filled: It is to be underſtood, that there is a fleſh of fiſhes, as well as of beaſts, and of theſe in particular, and not of kinds Moſes ſpeaketh, becauſe they had ſaid, verſ. 5. we remember the fiſh in Egypt, &c. Verſ. 22. 1 Cor.15.39.

And the Lord ſaid, is the Lords hand now waxed ſhort, &c.] Hereby is meant nothing elſe, but is the Lords power diminiſhed, or is he unable to do any thing, ſo Eſa. 49. 1. the ſame phraſe is uſed, and Eſa.50.2. Is my hand ſhortned, that it cannot redeem, or have I no power to deliver? where the laſt words ſerve to explain the firſt. ſee Joſ.4. 24. Verſ. 23.

And Moſes went out and told the people the words of the Lord, and gathered the 70. &c. This ſhewes, that if Moſes doubted before, hee now believed, and did not as the Prince, 2 King. 7. reply, as if it had beene impoſſible. Becauſe the Lord had talked with him in the Tabernacle, he is ſaid now to have gone out into the Tents, to chooſe out theſe Elders. Verſ. 24.

This being done and they placed about the Tabernacle, the Lord deſcended and tooke of the ſpirit of Moſes, and put it upon them, and they propheſied, and ceaſed not. Here that was accompliſhed, which was before promiſed; and this is a thing, that commonly followeth upon the receiving of the ſpirit; as Joel 2.29. Act. 2. 18. Act. 19, 2. 6. 1 Sam. 10. 6. 10. To propheſie is not onely to foretell things to come, but ſometimes to expound the holy Scriptures, and to ſet forth the Word of God, and ſometimes to prayſe God, as Zacharie propheſied. Verſ. 25. 1 Cor.14. Luc. 1.

And of this laſt their propheſying, here is moſt probably underſtood. For the laſt words, and ceaſed not: ſo rendred alſo by the Caldeans in Hebrew is לא יספו, they added not, which are expounded by ſome, they propheſied that day, to ſhew their calling to be of God; but the thing, about which they were to be imployed, being the government of the people and not propheſying, they added not, they proceeded not to propheſie any more after this day, but intended government, which is alſo a gift of the Spirit. Theod qu.20. in Numer. 1 Cor.12.28.

Pagninus, and Cajetan alſo following this Expoſition, ſay, that they propheſied this day with a certain geſture of the body, per modum Enthuſiaſmi, as men wrapt by the ſpirit. And for this Expoſition maketh the Septuagint, rendring it, they added not: But the word לא-יספו ſeemeth not to come of אסף, to adde, but of סוף ſignifying finire, deficere, congregare, &c. and yet אסף is alſo noted by Pagninus to ſignifie the ſame. And if ſo, then according to the proper meaning of the word, it may bee rendered, They ceaſed not; that is, according to Lyranus, and Toſtatus, they ſpake by the Spirit extraordinarily at that time, and afterwards the ſpirit failed not in them, but hereby they were continually inabled to judge in the hard matters brought unto them; ſo that Moſes needed not alone from hence forward to be cumbred with them all. And to to this do I ſubſcribe. Calvin. Pagninus. Cajetan. Toſtatus. Lyranus. Munſterus. Vatablus.

And there remained two of the men in the Camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the other Medad, &c. and they propheſied in the Camp. Upon what occaſion theſe two came not up to the doore of the Tabernacle is uncertain; Petrus Comeſtor, whom many follow herein, ſaith, it was out of their modeſty, they thinking themſelves unworthy of this office; and therefore keeping cloſe, as afterwards Saul, when he was choſe King, hid himſelf amongſt the ſtuffe. Others thinke, that the names of them all being written down in papers, and committed to Officers to warne them to appeare, through the negligence of the Officers ſent out to call them, theſe two were forgotten, or happily they made not ſo much haſt Verſ.26. Schol. hiſt. Lorinus.

haſte to come, when they were called, and ſo were prevented by the Spirit coming upon them. I cannot ſubſcribe to either of theſe, becauſe if they had refrained purpoſely as unworthy, it would have been mentioned; and it is not to be thought, that either the officers or they would have been ſo negligent, as not to warn, or not to come being warned with the reſt, the buſineſſe being of ſo great moment. It is therefore doubtleſſe to be imputed to a ſingular providence of God laying ſome infirmity upon theſe two at this time, to ſtay them from coming, for a myſtery herein intended, viz. that by the Spirit coming upon them, might be figured out the Spirit given to ſome of the Gentiles, viz. the Doctors of the Church, being, as it were, without in the army, and not in the Tabernacle of the Jewiſh Church: or rather the Spirit ſometimes given to ſome of the Laity to propheſie, as well as to thoſe of the Clergy, when God pleaſeth; for the firſt of theſe is Procopius, for the other Turrianus. For the manner of Moſes his chooſing theſe Elders, Sol. Jarchi ſaith, that he wrot in 70 ſcroules; an Elder, upon each of them; and upon two, theſe words, a part; then putting them together, he cauſed ſix men, whom he choſe of each tribe being together 72 to draw every one a ſcroul, and he that drew a ſcroul with this inſcription, an elder, was ſanctified to this office; but he that took out a paper with this inſcription apart was not choſen, but Moſes ſaid unto him, the Lord will not have thee. This indeed is a pretty fable, but of whom did the Rabbin learn it? For we ſee here, that they were not choſen by lot, but Moſes ſingled them out, whom he knew fitteſt. And no leſſe fabulous is that of Jerome, followed by Comeſtor and ſome others, that theſe two, Eldad and Medad were the brethren of Moſes by the father, but not by the mother; for Amram his father after aftet the Law given againſt inceſtuous marriages by the perſwaſion of Moſes, his ſon, put away his wife Jochebed, being his aunt, and married another, by whom he had both theſe; and whereas the time diſagreeth, for this law was but lately given, and if hereupon he had put her away and married again, the child begotten in this ſecond marriage could not have been above a year old; Comeſtor to help this feineth, that Moſes had the Law revealed unto him 40 years before this, and then it was, that he drew Amram to this divorce. But all this is rightly ſleighted and confuted by Toſtatus. And of the ſame ſort is that of Rabbi Solomon touching the thing that they propheſied of, viz. that Moſes ſhould dye in the Wilderneſſe, and Joſhua ſhould bring the people into the land of Canaan: of their propheſying one made a book, ſaith Sixtus Sennenſis, out of which Hermas, the diſciple of Paul alledged this ſaying, the Lord is nigh to thoſe, that turn to him, as it is written in Eldad and Medad; but I paſſe over theſe things, as uncertain traditions, as alſo that of the Hebrews, that theſe men were the brethren of Moſes by the mother, but not by the father; who they were, and what they propheſied is not expreſſed in the ſacred hiſtory, and therefore we muſt be content to be ignorant of it. Onely as was ſaid before of the other 70, it is likely, that by their geſture and utterance in ſetting forth Gods praiſes, it was apparent to all men, that the Spirit was upon them. For the ſignification of theſe names Jerom noteth, that Eldad ſignifieth ſolitary, and Medad meaſuring.

Procopius.

Turrianus.

Sol. Jarchi.

Hieron. qu. in Paral.

Scholaſt. hiſt.

Toſtatus.

R. Solomon.

Sixt. Sennenſ.

Hieron.

Verſ. 27, 28. And there ran a young man and told Moſes, ſaying, Eldad and Medad propheſy in the camp. And Joſhua ſaid, My lord Moſes forbid them.] It is a tradition of the Hebrews, that this young man was Gerſhon the ſonne of Moſes, as Lyranus hath it; but that is uncertain. It is moſt probable, that it was one, who belonged to Moſes, and now ſeeing ſo ſtrange a thing to happen in the hoaſt, he thought it neceſſary with ſpeed to acquaint his maſter with it; for rulers muſt have ſervants and officers abroad, ready upon all occaſions to certifie them of all occurrences, as Mecœnas ſometime counſelled Auguſtus, that he ſhould have, that he might know the affaires faires of his empire, and reform and do, as was needful for the preservation of the state, but all things, said he, related by them are not to be believed, but diligently to be considered, for many of them either through hatred of some, or in favour of some, or because money being asked by them hath been denyed them, will load them with some false crime of sedition in deed or word, and for thee to give credit slowly may be to thy no great damage, but by hastening it may come to passe, that thou maist commit some irreparable sin. In this young man, that brought this news to Moses, there was nothing reproveable, but Joshuah faulted by envying their endowments with the Spirit for his Masters sake. For Ioshua, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, some render, Ioshua the servant of Moses from his youth; but the word translated, of his young men, is of the plural number, and therefore agreeth best with that reading. It is likely, that as the Apostles afterwards, seeing some to cast out devils, that followed not Christ, forbad them, for which he reproved them, as thinking it an indignity to their Master; so Joshua here seeing that these men came not up after Moses to the tabernacle, thinking it an indignity to his master Moses, as if they would affront him, and take upon them, as his equals, seeing they spake by the Spirit as well as he, sollicited him to forbid them. The nature of man is impatient of equality to themselves or others, whom they follow, they that are lifted up envy that others inferiour to them should rise to their height, as also the disciples of John envied Jesus in respect of John, complaining to him, that he had more followers. It is barely related here, that a young man told Moses, that these two propheſyed, but what they spake of, is not said; yet the Targum Hierosolymitanum saith, Eldad propheſied thus; Moses, a Prophet, a Scribe of the Israelites is gathered out of the midst of the world, and Joshua the son of Nun, his disciple shall administer the matters of the army after him. But Medad propheſied saying, Behold, quails come from the Sea, and are an offence to Israel; Both together propheſied, saying, In the last end of dayes Gog and Magog and their armies shall ascend to Jerusalem, and shall fall by the hands of Christ himself the King, and with so great a slaughter, that for seven years together the children of Israel shall burn their armes of War, not going out to plow or to prune trees, which how credible it is, let the Reader judge. For Joshua his desiring of Moses to forbid them, the Targum Jonathan saith, Joshua said, My lord Moses, request mercy from before the Lord, and forbid them the Spirit of propheſie. For the envy of Joshua shewed herein, and taxed by Moses in the next words, there are some, that say, he spake not thus out of envy, but out of a fear of sedition, such as was afterwards in Dathan and his fellowes, if these were suffered. But others better hold, that Joshua spake out of envy; some extenuating the fault, as Tostatus, because he sought not his own, but the glory of Moses the chief Prince, lest his glory and authority should by any means be diminished, and because that being reproved by Moses he presently held his peace. And some calling it a preposterous and foolish zeal, but flowing from a good fountain, as Calvin: for Joshua, saith he, feared, lest if any thing were detracted from the excellency of Moses, the grace of God would be dissipated and come to ruine, and therefore in standing for the right of Moses, he would provide, as much as in him lay, for the safety of them all, but out of his immoderate love of Moses sprung something turbulent.

Lyranus.

Joh. Cotkerius thesauro aphorismorum.

Luc. 9. 49.

Note.

Joh. 3.

Targum Hierosolymitan.

Targum Jonathan.

Procopius Theodoret. qu. 21. Cyril. 12. in Joh. c. 5.

Tostatus. Calvin.

Dubium non est, quin stulta hæc & præposterа zelotypia ex bono fonte manavit. Timuit, ne quid discerct ex ejus præstantia. &c.

And Moses said unto him, Envieſt thou for my sake, I would that all the Lords people were Prophets, &c.] By this reproof of Moses it appeareth, that the zeal of Joshua was preposterous and evil; it was zeal, as Ferus saith, saith, but not according to knowledge, it was a carnal zeal, for we should not envy the grace of God to any man, or that any man should do good, but we should rejoyce in it. Moses therefore and not Joshua must be our pattern herein, who shewed, that he was zealous for Gods glory and not

Verſ. 29.

Ferus.

Note.

for his own; faithful to the people, and not for himſelf. He cared not, how his worth was extenuated, ſo that all the people by more excellent holineſſe might pleaſe the Lord; for this was a thing, that he would count a benefit and no hurt unto him. For theſe words, I would. Hebr.is, Who will give, that all the Lords people were Prophets? An expreſſion of his moſt earneſt deſire. Both the Cyrils, Procopius, and Theodoret expound this as prophetical of the Spirit given in Pentecoſt, Act.2. and afterwards in baptiſme.

Cyril. Alex. et Hieroſol. Procopius, Theod.

Verſ.30. And Moſes gat him into the camp, he and the elders.] The Elders being thus initiated into their office at the Tabernacle, return to their tents in the camp, as Moſes alſo did, and from hence forward they were called the great Synedrion or ſenate of 70, to whom all hard cauſes were brought, as formerly to Moſes, as the revolt of any city to idolatry, the riſing up of any falſe prophet, the high Prieſt queſtioned upon matter of life and death, an elder queſtioned for rebellion, the ſuſpected wife, who was to drink the bitter water, Numb. 5. &c. But every leaſt court might judge of money matters. Moreover to this Court belonged the ſetting up of a King, and the making of a leſſer Synedrion for any tribe or city, and to judge of the inlarging of any city or the court-yard, and the ſending forth to warre.

Talmud Babyl. in Sanedrin. c. c. Maimony San. c. 5.

Note. Ferus. Their returning to the camp, ſaith Ferus, ought to teach us, when we have received gifts, to come forth amongſt the people to do good amongſt them herewith.

Verſ.31. And there went forth a wind from the Lord and brought quailes from the ſea, and let them fall by the camp, &c.] Toſtatus ſaith, that this great miracle was wrought by the miniſtry of the Angels, of whom very many were imployed to bring them in. But Ferus better, Gods Almighty power herein appeared, that without ſending forth his Angels or any army, but onely a wind, he brought in ſo many millions of quailes inſtantly. What this wind was, is ſhewed Pſal.78.26. God ſent an eaſt wind and brought in a ſouth wind by his ſtrength, which may be noted, to be contrary to the nature of quailes, becauſe, as Pliny hath it, they are not wont to fly with a ſouth wind, as being more heavy, but alwaies with a north wind. The place, from whence the quailes were brought, was the ſea, that is, as is moſt probable, from the Arabick boſom, where there uſe to be abundance of them beyond the Red Sea, ſouthward and ſomewhat weſt. Hugo ſaith, that the quailes now brought, were not little, ſuch as we now have, but greater, being called Kings birds, or curleii, or currelii, from running. Sapient. c. 16. they are called ortygometræ. Haply theſe were greater then ordinary, but they were quailes, not other fowls; & yet if they were as ſmall, as ordinary, the miracle was the greater, that ſo many thouſands hungry of fleſh alſo ſhould be ſatisfied, and overfilled with them. Myſtically Rabanus noteth, that God fed them not with beaſts or fiſhes, but fowles, to teach them by theſe carnal things granted them at their deſire, which although they had their original from the waters, yet fly in the ayr, to be heavenly minded, and to have their minds lifted up to things above, as it is commanded, Col.3.1.

Toſtatus.

Ferus.

Plin. lib. 10. c. 13.

Hugo.

Rabanus. The Myſtery.

For, let them fall, Hebr. is שׁטשׁ, he ſpread them, or ſent them down, and they were round about the camp, as it were a dayes journey on every ſide, and two cubits high from the earth. This was breaſt height, ſaith Solom. Jarchi, ſo that they needed not to ſtoop down to take them up, or reach up their hands to catch them, which was a ſingular providence of God towards them, though moſt unworthy for their murmuring, in that they could ſo eaſily gather their food.

Sol. Jarchi.

Verſ. 32. And the people ſtood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and gathered quailes, he that gathered leaſt gathered ten homers full, &c.] What the Homer is, ſee before Levit.27.16. about 10 buſhels, ſo that each one had about 30 buſhels, which being laid together made an heap, and therefore the Cald. rendreth it heaps, and ſo the word is uſed, Exod. 8. 4. The quailes being gathered in this great abundance, they are ſaid to have ſpread round round about the camp; the Sept. have it, they dryed them for themſelves: but Munſter and Vatablus, that they put them round about in nets, or other devices, which they had to keep them alive, till they had ſpent moſt of them. But how they ſhould keep them alive ſo long, I cannot ſee; it is more probable, that they killed them, as they took them, and having taken out their garbage, they ſalted them and laid them abroad to be dryed, that they might keep: Whereas Philo ſaith, there came new quailes every evening all that moneth, it is contrary to the ſacred hiſtory; for they came but at this time only, and ſuch a quantity as was now gathered, might well ſuffice them for a moneth. And it is not unlikely, but that they grew at the laſt ſtale and unſavoury, inſomuch, as that being eaten, they made the ſtomack ſick, and were caſt up again, as was threatened, that they ſhould come out at their noſtrils.

Munſter. Vatablus.

Cajetan.

And whileſt the fleſh was yet between their teeth before it was chewed, the wrath of the Lord was kindled, &c.] The vulgar Latine for theſe words, before it was chewed, hath it, and this kind of meat failed not: ſo likewiſe the Sept. πεὶν ἐκλεῖπειν, Hebr. before it was cut off; and it may be expounded either before it was cut off from their mouthes, that is, failed, or before it was cut by chewing, that it might go down and be digeſted: but this latter is rather to be preferred, becauſe it is ſaid yet to have been between their teeth; and Pſal. 78.30. it is ſaid, the meat was yet in their mouthes. God ſent not this plague, ſaith Cazkuni, till that he had fully fed them all, that none might ſay, he cut them off, becauſe he could not feed them. The plague, wherewith in his anger he ſmote them, Aben Ezra will have to be that of the peſtilence; but Toſtatus, Iſidor, Beda, Hugo, &c. the plague of fire burning them, and ſome of that fire ſpoken of before, verſ. 1. by way of anticipation, but that hath been already confuted; and becauſe it is ſaid to have been a very great plague, it is moſt probable, that it was not fire, but the peſtilence haply bred of the ſtink of theſe fowles growing ſtale, and of corrupt humours ingendred by over-much fulneſſe; and of this laſt Fonſeca ſpeaketh. The time when was not, till about the end of this moneth, and yet within that time, not after it, becauſe the fleſh was ſtill in their mouths, when they were ſmitten, Pſal. 78.31. the fat of them are ſaid to have been ſmitten, that is, the chief and moſt greedy and gluttonous. For thoſe that are gluttonous then, and ſo addicted to the belly, there is a puniſhment coming from the fierce anger of God, and for them to have plenty, wherewithal to gormandize is not to injoy a bleſſing from God, but to be the nearer to a curſe and a plague.

Verſ. 33.

Cazkuni.

Aben Ezra. Toſtatus. Iſidor. Beda. Corn. à Lapide.

Note.

And he called the name of that place Kibroth-hattaavah, becauſe there they buried the people that luſted.] Kibroth hattaavah ſignifieth graves of luſt, and therefore was an apt name for theſe graves where theſe luſters after fleſh were buried. He called; that is, Moſes called, that by the name this plague might be remembred, and the like ſin afterwards dreaded.

Verſ. 34.

In that they, which had eaten Manna and luſted after this, for fleſh, were thus deſtroyed by the plague of God; Ferus myſtically noteth, that they, who after grace received turn carnally minded again, ſhall be deſtroyed of the Lord. He that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh back, is not fit for the Kingdom of God.

The Myſtery.

From Kibroth hattaavah they go on to Hazeroth and abide there, this was eight miles. Hazeroth, ſignifieth courts, or entries; H. Bunting ſaith, caves, having long graſſe at their mouth. Ambroſe ſpeaketh of this name, as ſignifying bleſſedneſſes, teaching hence myſtically, that we ſhall riſe out of our graves to eternal bliſſe. But not Hazeroth, but Aſhrai ſignifieth bleſſedneſſes; yet the allegory may hold, we ſhall go from our graves to the entry or court of heaven at the laſt day, and ſtay there, have our abode there for ever.

Verſ. 35.

H. Bunt. Patriarks travels. Ambroſ. de manſion. in 14

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. AND Miriam and Aaron ſpake againſt Moſes, becauſe of the Ethiopian woman, whom he had married. In ſpeaking of Zipporah, whom Moſes married, Exod. 2.21. I have brought many authours affirming her to be the Ethiopian here meant, the Caldeans for Ethiopian hath, a fair woman,

Cald. whom he married, and rejected, or companied not withall; becauſe as the Rabbins have it, he often came to the moſt holy place to ſpeak with God,

Sol. Jarchi. and when the people were to come to hear God ſpeak, they were forbidden to come at their wives, Exod. 19. 15. ſo that according to them the quarrell about this Ethiopian, or contrariwiſe fair woman, whom Moſes had married, was for that he did not live and bed, as an husband with her, by reaſon of his often going to ſpeake with God: of this ſhe complaining to Miriam and Aaron, they tooke her part ſaying, that they were Prophets as well as he, and that the Lord ſpake to them, and yet did not refraine

R. Abraham. from conjugall ſociety. But Rab. Abraham, that ſhe was black, and when ſhe complained of her husband Moſes, as was aforeſaid, they told her that ſhe was black and ill favoured; and for that cauſe it was, and not for his going to ſpeak with God, that her husband refrained from her, thus they.

Lorinus. But others better, that after the ſpirit given to the ſeventy, and the quailes brought, and the judgement ſhewed upon thoſe that had murmured againſt Moſes, the wife of Moſes, as is moſt probable, coming to have ſome ſpeech with Miriam, who happily might ſay, now there were many equall unto Moſes, becauſe they had the ſpirit as well as he; ſhe contrariwiſe extolled her husband, as being ſuperiour to them all ſtill, and to her and Aaron alſo; to the hearing whereof Aaron coming, he tooke in with Miriam, and Moſes with his wife, and ſo there was an hot contention amongſt them.

Calvin. But of all others Calvin ſpeaketh the moſt probably of this conttoverſie, that it was about the principalitie, they envied that Moſes was ſtill the chief and head of all; and againſt this they objected his marrying with an heathen woman, an Ethiopian, and not of the holy ſeed of Abraham, for which it was vnfit, that he ſhould be their Prince and ruler; Aaron being rather to be preferred, who was both for his own perſon and his wives every way without exception, and for this expoſition make the words of v. 2. here following. God ſpake by Aaron as well as by Moſes, but Moſes in one part of him, that is, in his wife was vile and baſe, for ſhe was an Ethiopian, why then ſhould he be thus ſet up above all, and not rather Aaron.

Ferus. Thus alſo Ferus, who ſaith, when they ſaw Moſes yet more graced, 70. Elders being enlightned by his ſpirit, they envied him, and ſought occaſion to ſpeak againſt him by his Ethiopian wife. Yet indeed there was no reaſon, for he married her in the time of his exilement, as Joſeph had done in Egypt before, and before the Law given, and ſhe had now imbraced the true faith: Before were the murmurings of the common ſort ſet forth, now the muttering of the chief againſt Moſes. It is a marvell that Miriam the ſiſter, and Aaron the brother, both extraordinarily graced and advanced for the ſake of Moſes ſhould do thus; for Aaron was high Prieſt, and God ſpake often to him, as to Moſes, and Miriam was a propheteſſe, Exod. 15. 20. wherefore they two are ſpoken of together with Moſes, as leaders of the people, Mich. 6.4.

Note. But as the meaner ſort is prone to fleſhly luſts, and worldly deſires, ſo the greater are moſt prone to ambition. Miriam it ſeemeth began to expoſtulate, becauſe ſhe is firſt named, it appearing hereby ſtill, that the devil prevaileth moſt with the weaker ſex, and that they are moſt ambitious and contentious.

And they ſaid, hath the Lord ſpoken onely by Moſes, hath he not alſo ſpoken by us, and the Lord heard it.] R. Solomon addeth for explanation, according to his opinion, as before, That Moſes ſhould abſtain from his wives company, becauſe the Lord ſpake by him, any more then we? But they aimed at ſuperiority in ſaying thus, and being proud of their own gifts ſought to extenuate his, by whom they came to that they were; as ſtill to this day they that have been inſtructed come at the laſt through pride to contemn their teachers, thinking themſelves as good or better then they, to the breeding of no ſmall trouble in the Church of God: and the Lord heard it, that is, although Moſes out of his meekneſſe regarded not their ſpeeches againſt him, but paſſed them over; yet God, who taketh that which is done againſt his faithfull ſervants, as done againſt himſelf, obſerved it, and was wroth therefore. It is to be noted alſo, that he heareth all that is ſaid, although but in ſecret: what or when the Lord ſpake to Miriam is not ſhewed in the ſacred Hiſtory, but onely that ſhe was a Propheteſſe: but the Hebrewes aſcribe a Chimicall book unto her, wherein her revelations were ſet down; but this hath long agoe been rejected, as a fiction, neither did ſhe utter any thing that we know of by the ſpirit, but the ſong, Exodus 15.

Verſ. 2.
R. Solomon.
Note.
Ferus.
Note.

Origen ſupplying their ſpeech here thus, this oughteſt thou not to have done, (O Moſes) to take a wife of the ſeed of Cham, but of the holy ſeed, of the ſeed of Levi, will have the myſtery of it to be to ſet forth the envy of Jewiſh Synagogue, when the Lord took the Gentiles like an Ethiopian in blackneſſe of ſinne and ſuperſtition to be his Church and Spouſe, becauſe they obſerve not the legall rites, and he ſaith, that Moſes was never ſo much commended, as now after his marrying of this Blackamoore commemorated.

Origen. hom. 6.
The Myſtery.

Rabanus maketh the like myſtical application; the Law ſet forth by Moſes is married, as it were to the Gentiles, the Church amongſt them; the Jewiſh Synagogue ſet forth by Miriam and Aaron hath indignation at it, pleading that God hath ſpoken by them, and finding fault that we have no circumciſion of the fleſh, but of the heart, no ſacrifices but of praiſe, nor feaſt dayes, but of the unleavened bread of ſincerity: but God permitteth Moſes ſtill to keep with the Ethiopian, his words with the Gentiles, and Miriam is ſmitten with leproſie, the Synagogue is in a fowle and filthy caſe through infidelity and many abſurd opinions, that they are falne into, but as ſhe was ſeparated for this but 7 dayes, and then returned into the Camp, ſo the Jews ſhall not alwayes continue in this foule caſe, but at the end of the world be converted and ſaved. To that of Origen, agreeth Procopius, and Ambroſe ſaying, that it was plainly a myſtery of their derogating from the people their brethren in the latter times.

Rabanus.

Procopius, Ambroſ.

Now the man Moſes was very meeke above all the men upon the face of the earth.] This is added here both to ſhew, that he had no way provoked them to this contumely, but by his meekneſſe and humilitie had given them cauſe to love and to praiſe him: and alſo that he ſought not to revenge himſelf, but did patiently ſuffer them. That we might from him learn meekneſſe, which is ſingularly commended, Matth. 11. 28. and not to ſeek to be avenged for injuries, ſeeing God taketh his part, that avengeth not himſelf. Hereby ſaith Chryſoſtome, a man may be moſt certainly known to be indued with reaſon, if he be meek and gentle, and modeſt and quiet. Greg. Nyſſenus praiſing Baſil for his meekneſſe compareth him with Moſes, calling him κοινον πασι τοις προς αρετην ὁρωσιν ὑποδειγμα, a common example to all that look at virtue. Claudian ſpeaketh of meekneſſe, as being a likeneſſe to God. VVhen we are overcome of every gift, onely meekneſſe maketh the gods like unto us. This praiſe of his own Moſes was inforced to write for our learning, as Samuel afterwards juſtified himſelf, and Paul to the Corinthians praiſed himſelf, yet at ſundry times he was very angry, Exod. 11. 8. 16. 20.

Verſ. 3.
Note.
Rom. 12. 19.
Chryſ. Hom. 34. in Gen.
Nyſſen. orat. de laud. Baſilii.
Claud. cum vincamur ab omni Munere ſola deos æquat clementia nobis.
1 Sam. 12.
2 Cor. 11. 5.

6.20. 32.19. Levit.10.16. Numb.16.15. 31.14.&c. for if there be no anger through zeal, and courage for God and againſt ſinne, this is not meekneſſe but puſillanimity and baſeneſſe. And as Moſes relateth his own virtues, ſo likewiſe his unadviſed anger and unbelief, Numb. 20. 10.Pſal.106. 32.33.

Verſ. 4. And the Lord ſpake ſuddenly to Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam, come out yee three,&c.] This ſudden ſpeaking was to ſhew the greatneſſe of his anger; as when a man calleth his ſervant haſtily, whom he meaneth ſharply to rebuke, Pſ. 64.7. Mal.3.5. Pſ.50.19,20. He called them ſuddenly to the Tabernacle, ſaith R. Solomon, that being taken in their legall pollution, Aaron by companying with his wife, and Miriam with her husband, as Moſes did not, they might be confounded by that very thing, for which they ſpake againſt Moſes. But this is fabulous, ſaith Toſtatus, the true reaſon hath been already yielded. And to the Tabernacle he called them out of the camp to reprove Aaron and Miriam there apart from the people, having regard unto their dignitie for their high place, in which they were that they might not be expoſed to contempt; ſo Ferus, and Lyranus who inferreth hereupon, that Prieſts ought not to be made to do penance publickely.

R. Solomon. Toſtatus. Ferus. Lyranus

Auguſt. ne dum nimium ſervatur humilitas regendi frangatur authoritas.

It is a rule alſo of Saint Auguſtine, that a Prelate having offended in government ſhould not be to ask forgiveneſſe of thoſe that be under him, leſt whileſt humilitie is too much intended, the authoritie of ruling be broken. The reproving of them publickly alſo might have been prejudiciall to Moſes, if it had been opened before the people, how his own brother and ſiſter had ſpoken againſt him, they being apt to be moved by examples, and ſpecially of thoſe, that were in ſo high place, and ſo near to him, to inveigh againſt him alſo.

The myſtery. Their being called to the Tabernale, and Moſes with them, that there they might be reproved before him, may myſtically ſerve to ſet forth our being called before our own conſcience for our ſinnes, the law ſet forth by Moſes, being here urged againſt us, that we may ſee into our ſinnes and repent of them.

Verſ. 5. And the Lord came down in a pillar of a cloud, and ſtood in the doore of the Tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam, &c.] Of Gods deſcending in a cloud, ſee in divers places before; but it is to be noted, that they three being come to the Tabernacle, the Lord bade Aaron and Miriam onely to ſtand forth, becauſe he was to ſpeak of the prayſes of Moſes, he would doe it therefore, as it were behind his back; becauſe as Gregory hath it, when a wiſe man is prayſed to his face, he is laſhed in his mind.

Greg. ſapiens cum in facie laudatur, in mente flagellatur.

Verſ. 6, 7. If there be a Prophet, I the Lord will ſpeak to him in a viſion,&c. but my ſervant Moſes is not ſo, who is faithful in all my houſe,&c. Here the Lord ſheweth three wayes of his ſpeaking to Prophets, 1. by viſion, as to Abraham, Gen.20.7. chap.15.1. and to Jacob, Gen.46.2. and to Ezekiel, chap. 1.1. and the reſt of the Prophets. 2. By dreams, thus he ſpake to Jacob, Gen. 28. chap.31.11. to Joſeph the ſon of Jacob, and to Joſeph the husband of Mary, &c. 3. Mouth to mouth, or face to face, as to Moſes; of which, ſee before, Exod.33.11. and letting him behold the ſimilitude of the Lord, that is, his back parts, as it were, ſome more glorious appearance of his, then hath been granted to others to ſee, Exod.33.23. Betwixt Moſes and other Prophets, the Rabbins obſerve, that there were theſe differences; 1. Moſes heard God ſpeaking to him without terrour ſurpriſing him, as one friend may hear another; but other Prophets not without great terrour troubling and almoſt exanimating them, as an horrour is ſaid to have come upon Abraham. Daniel fell down, as a dead man, ſee the like touching Zachary and John afterwards. 2. God ſpake to other Prophets by his Angels, but to Moſes not ſo, but mouth to mouth. 3. Moſes had all things revealed plainly to him, other Prophets darkly, ſo that after they

Gen. 15. Dan.10.8.

they had ſeen or heard the thing, they needed the Spirit to expound it. 4. Others waited and prepared themſelves, till the Spirit ſhould come upon them, being joyful, and uſing pſalteries and harps, as Eliſha, when he deſired to propheſie, called for a minſtrel, and then ſometimes the Spirit came upon them, and ſometimes not: but Moſes could go to the Lord and ſo propheſie, whenſoever occaſion required, as Numb. 9.8. He was as the miniſtring angels; other Prophets when the Spirit had done ſpeaking by them at any particular time, went to their tents and to their wives; but Moſes, becauſe he alwaies propheſied, and was ſanctified, as the Angels, and had his heart alwaies faſt bound to God, and the skin of his face ſhone, returned not to his firſt tent, but was ſeparated from his wife for ever; ſo Maimony, who alſo ſaith, that propheſie reſteth not, but on a wiſe man, great in wiſdome, and mighty in his virtuous qualities, that his corruptions prevail not over him in any thing, but he prevaileth by his knowledge over them continually, and when the Spirit cometh upon ſuch, his ſoul is aſſociated to the Angels, and he is turned into another man, knowing alſo, that it is ſo with him. But in theſe things, howſoever ſome be moſt true, yet that he lived alwaies ſeparate from his wife after this, they may believe that will, for no ſuch thing is revealed; and that God ſpake not to him by Angels, is confuted by the Apoſtle ſaying of the Law, it was ordained by angels in the hand of a Mediatour. Eugubinus, beſides the three kinds of revelations to Prophets here ſpoken of, ſaith, that there are two more; one by viſion, when a thing is ſeen, not as it is, but darkly in ſome other thing, after the manner of a riddle, as Ezech. 2.8. he is bidden to eat a book; ſo likewiſe John, Revel. 10.20. another by certain images or repreſentations, touching which Maimony ſaith, that when the Prophets had ſeen them, by and by the interpretation was written in their hearts, as the ladder, which Jacob ſaw, and the living creatures, which Ezechiel ſaw, the ſeething pot and almond rod, which Jeremiah ſaw, and the flying book and Ephah, which Zachary ſaw, &c. Andreas Maſius rendreth a reaſon, why Moſes was thus ſingularly honoured above all other Prophets, viz. becauſe he was Gods interpreter, and by him the law was given, that it only might be counted moſt holy of all men, till the coming of Chriſt, and no Prophet afterwards might inſtitute any other, but all place their labour in explaining it only. But that Jeſus was above Moſes, the Apoſtle teacheth, Heb. 3. 2, 3, &c. and ſo all after his coming were to have reſpect unto him, as pointed at in Moſes and his lawes. For if Moſes had plain revelations, Jeſus much more, becauſe he was in the boſom of the Father, and learned not by viſions, or by ſpeech of mouth, but knew all things clearly together with the father, having the Spirit without meaſure, and the fulneſſe of the Godhead dwelling bodily in him. In that this was the iſſue of Miriams and Aarons calumnies againſt Moſes, ſee, ſaith Rabanus, what detractours get by their detractions, what puniſhment to themſelves and praiſe to him, from whom they unjuſtly detract, filthineſſe to themſelves, glory to him; reproach to themſelves, to him magnificence.

Moreover in that Gods revealing of his will to Moſes plainly is here ſpoken of after the mention of the Ethiopian woman, whom he had married, he myſtically noteth, that when Moſes came to us Gentiles, as an Ethiopian, things were not held in darkneſſe, or as it were, in riddles any longer, but all the myſteries of the Kingdome of heaven plainly opened, that is, when we imbraced the faith, and were made the Church of God, and had his Word committed to us. For now Manna is ſhewed plainly to figure out Chriſt, who is meat indeed, and likewiſe the rock yeelding water in the wilderneſſe. And herein Rabanus followeth Origen, who uſeth the ſame words.

Wherefore then were ye not afraid to ſpeak againſt my ſervant Moſes? Heb. againſt Verſ. 8.

2 King. 3.

Maimony in Yeſude hatto-rah, c. 7.

Gal. 3. 19. Eugubinus.

Gen. 28. 12. Ezech. 1. Jer. 1. Zachar. 5. And. Maſius in Joſ. 12.

Joh. 1. 18.

Joh. 3. 34.

Col. 1. 19.

Rabanus. Sibi turpitudinem, illi ſplendorem, ſibi Lepram illi gloriam, ſibi opprobrium illi magnificentiam quæſierunt.

Joh. 6. 1 Cor. 10.

Sol. Jarch. againſt my ſervant, againſt Moſes, that is, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, againſt my ſervant, though he were not Moſes; or againſt Moſes, though he were not my ſervant, ye ſhould have been afraid to ſpeak againſt him. There are two things from hence to be noted, that one ſhould fear to ſpeak againſt any of Gods ſervants, and eſpecially againſt any ſet in authority. 2 Pet. 2. 10. ſo Ferus.

Ferus. Note.

Verſ. 9. And the anger of the Lord was kindled againſt them, and he departed] That is, he turned from them, as being exceedingly incenſed, ſo that he reſolved to ſmite, and not to hear any interceding to ſpare. Ferus noteth, that God is ſaid twice to have been angry with them, (and ſo it is in the vulgar latine, here, and verſ. 2.) firſt becauſe they ſinned; ſecondly, becauſe they perſiſted in this ſin and repented not, and now he ſhewed more anger then before; perſiſting in ſin then provoketh God more, then ſinning.

Note.

Verſ. 10. And behold Miriam became leprous as white as ſnow, &c.] This was the worſt kind of leproſie and moſt incurable, as we may gather, Exod. 4. 6. 2 King. 5. 27. of this it is ſpoken again, Deut. 24. 9. as a judgment to be remembred. Why Miriam was ſmitten and not Aaron, Theodoret rendreth theſe reaſons; becauſe her fault was greater, forſomuch as a woman ought to be ſubject, and Aaron was high Prieſt, and therefore not to be made unclean by the leproſie, of which the Prieſt was to judge; and becauſe to ſee another puniſhed was terrour enough to him: and laſtly, becauſe he interceded for his ſiſter, it appearing hereby, that he was penitent for this offence. But the chief reaſon was indeed, becauſe Miriam had offended moſt, and began in this contention, as is intimated by her being firſt named, ver. 1. that women, who are moſt apt to vex men with their tongues, might learn by this example, to take heed of railing, as Ferus hath it; who alſo noteth, that it was a puniſhment anſwerable to her ſin. For a detractour is truly leprous, he hath a corrupt heart, and ſendeth forth a ſtinking ſent from his mouth, infecteth others, and ſhall be caſt out of the new Jeruſalem.

Theod. qu. 3. in Num.

Ferus.

Note.

For the myſtery, it hath been touched before, that the Jewiſh Synagogue being offended, and ſpeaking againſt the Church of the Gentiles is judged of God, and ſhut out, as labouring with a ſpiritual leproſie, &c. Now if God did ſo ſeverely puniſh ſpeaking againſt Moſes, what ſhall become of thoſe that deſpiſe Chriſt, who was far greater? Hebrewes 12. 25.

Verſ. 11. And Aaron ſaid unto Moſes, alas (my lord) I beſeech thee, lay not this ſinne upon us, wherein We have done fooliſhly, &c.] Aaron was ſoon moved with repentance, as we read not, that Miriam was; and he fleeth to the mediation of Moſes, as for whoſe ſake this leproſie was ſent, as thinking himſelf unworthy now to come before the Lord in prayer. And it is to be noted, that his brother, younger then he, whom he had before contemned, now he calleth his lord; ſo do the judgments of God work to humble the godly, whereas the wicked waxe worſe and worſe.

Note.

Verſ. 12. Let her not be as one dead, of whom the fleſh is half conſumed, When he cometh out of his mothers Womb. The Cald. Let her not now be ſeparated from amongſt us, for ſhe is our ſiſter, pray now for this dead fleſh, that is in her, that it may be healed, Calvin, Let her not be as an abortive, Which when it cometh out of the mothers womb is conſumed in the half of the fleſh thereof. The vulg. Latine, Let her not be as one dead, and as an abortive caſt out of the womb, behold half her fleſh is already conſumed of the leproſie. The Hebr. word for word is, Let her not be as one dead, which in the going out of the mothers womb, and half the fleſh thereof is conſumed. It is a compariſon taken from a child dead and conſumed in the mothers womb in a great part, before the birth: for even ſo the leproſie did conſume and eat into the fleſh, till the party infected dyed miſerably, and the leprous were whileſt they lived, as then dead, both in their being ſeparated from others living out of the camp, camp, and becauſe they defiled ſuch as touched them, as the dead.

Cald. Par. Calvin.

And Moſes cryed unto the Lord ſaying, Heal her now, O Lord, I beſeech thee. See here the meekneſſe and goodneſſe of Moſes, he did not only forgive the injury offered him, but prayed for her, that offered it, as is commanded, bleſſe them that curſe you, and pray for them that deſpitefully uſe you. The Targum Jonathan paraphraſeth thus upon it, And Moſes prayed and beſought mercy before the Lord, ſaying I beſeech mercy of the merciful God, I beſeech God that hath power of the ſpirits of all fleſh, heal her, I beſeech thee. For in that he is ſaid to have cryed out, it appeareth, that he prayed moſt earneſtly and as grieved for her, and in ſaying, O God, for ſo it is in Hebr. אל, God of power and mercy, his invoking of Gods power and mercy is ſhewed, and therefore Exod. 34.6. theſe two words אל־רחום, God of mercy are joyned together. Verſ. 13. Matth. 5.44. Targum Jonathan.

And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, if her father had but ſpit in her face, ſhould ſhe not be aſhamed ſeven dayes, &c.] The Lord being intreated remitteth the ſin, but will have Miriam indure the puniſhment ſeven dayes for her greater humiliation, and the terrour of others. Spitting in the face is a ſign of contempt, Job 30.10. Eſay 50.6. Luk. 18.32. and if her natural father in anger had ſpit on her face and put her to this ſhame, ſhe could not for ſhame but have hid her ſelf at the leaſt ſeven dayes from the ſight of men, much more her heavenly Father having ſpit in her face, as it were, by the leproſie, which appeared in her face not all over, but in certain places like ſpittle, diſperſed. And the time of ſeven dayes is ſet, according to the law of ſeparating all leprous perſons. For, but ſpit in her face, Hebr. it is, by ſpitting ſpit, that is, data opera in anger. Verſ. 14. Levit. 13.

And Miriam was ſhut out of the camp ſeven dayes, and the people journeyed not, till ſhe was brought in again.] She having ſinned was not ſpared, notwithſtanding her great dignity, to ſhew, that none ſinning of what high degree ſoever, ſhall be ſpared. But yet this honour was done to her, that all the people ſtayed for her, ſo as they uſed not to do for other lepers; even under the puniſhing hand of God a Prophet is to be reverenced for his holy calling, and all ſhould mourn together for him; as before, when Nadab and Abihu periſhed, Levit. 10.6. The Targum Jonathan ſaith, that the Lord promiſed, ver. 14. when he bad, that ſhe ſhould be ſhut out, I will cauſe to ſtay for thy ſake, the cloud of my glory, the Tabernacle, Ark, and all Iſrael, untill the time, that ſhe is healed; but this is only a paraphraſe upon the event, as if he had ſo ſaid. That of Sol. Jarchi hereupon is overcurious, the Lord imparted this honour to her, becauſe ſhe once ſtayed for Moſes, when he was caſt into the river, Exod. 2.4. Verſ. 15. Targum Jonathan. Sol. Jarchi.

For the myſtery of alll this, Ferus ſetteth it down briefly thus; Moſes taking an Ethiopian to wife, was a figure of Chriſt marrying with the Church of the Gentiles: Aaron and Miriam murmuring at it, of the Jews envying the ſalvation coming to the Gentiles, and preferring Moſes and the Prophets before him, ſaying, We are Moſes his diſciples, ye are his; we know that God ſpake by Moſes, &c. For this as God was angry with Miriam and ſmote her, ſo that ſhe was caſt out of the camp; ſo he is angry with the Jews, and hath caſt them out of his Church; and although the whole company of the Doctours have prayed for them, yet they are kept out, till the fulneſſe of the Gentiles be come in. But till then the whole Church waiteth, and cannot enter into the heavenly Canaan; as theſe could not go forward, till Miriam was healed and reſtored. The myſtery. Ferus. John. 9.

And afterward the people removed from Hazeroth, and pitched in the wilderneſſe of Paran.] Of this Wilderneſſe of Paran, and how they were ſaid before to have come to it, and now again, ſee Chap. 10.12. Verſ. 16.

CHAP.

Chap. XIII.

Verſ. 1. 2. And the Lord ſpake to Moſes ſaying, ſend men that they may ſearch the land of Canaan, &c. of every tribe ſend a man, every one a Ruler among them, &c.] This of the ſending out of theſe ſearchers is more fully ſet down, Deut. 1. 19. And when wee departed from Horeb, we went through all that great and terrible wilderneſſe, &c. and we came to Kadeſh Barnea. And I ſaid unto you, yee are come to the mountaine of the Amorites, which the Lord giveth unto us. Behold the Lord hath ſet the land before thee, goe up and poſſeſſe it, &c. And ye came near unto me and ſaid, We will ſend men before us, and they ſhall ſearch the land, &c.] So that the Lords ſpeaking here unto Moſes to ſend, is to be underſtood, after that they had made this motion, and Moſes, as it is likely had conſulted with the Lord hereabout. And here divers removings of the children of Iſrael, before they came to Kadeſh Barnea, where this was ſpoken, are omitted; as Junius noteth, and is to be ſeen, Numb. 33. from verſ. 18. to verſ. 36. and chap. 32. 8. or rather being ſent back from Kadeſh, to which they came at their remove from Hazeroth; thoſe removes were made, and ſo they came again thither, ſee ch. 20. 1. The laſt verſ. of the 12. chapter is by the vulgar Latine made the firſt of this chapter; They pitched in the wilderneſſe of Paran, and there the Lord ſpake to Moſes, &c. But in the Hebrew it is not ſaid there, and it was in Kadeſh that the Lord ſpake thus, but this Kadeſh was in Paran, and all the manſions named, Numb. 33. from Hazeroth to Kadeſh were in the wilderneſſe of Paran, as hath been touched before, Numb. 10. 12. and verſ. 3. it is expreſly ſaid, that they went from Paran, ſee v. 26. For ſend men, Hebr. is, ſend thee men; that is, as Sol. Jarchi expoundeth it, this motion cometh not from me, but ſeeing the people deſire it, if thou pleaſeſt, ſend men, &c. They ought indeed, when the Lord bade them by Moſes, to have gone up without ſending ſearchers firſt, which argued a diſtruſt and faint-heartedneſſe in them; yet in yielding to their weakneſſe, the Lord permitteth them to take their own courſe, although by the ſequell it appeared to be for the worſe unto them.

Iunius.

Sol. Jarchi.

Note.

Ferus.

Note then that it is dangerous to preferre our own counſels and wayes before the Word of God: for hence came their murmuring to the deſtruction of almoſt 600000 in the wilderneſſe, who were wearied and waſted out there, ſo as that they could never enter into the land of promiſe. For notwithſtanding Gods gracious promiſes of ſending his angel before them, and his continuall preſence by the cloud ſet to guide and to protect them, they believed not, that he was able, or would bring them to the poſſeſſion of the land. Wherefore let us flee this carnall wiſdome, and be alwayes intent to that, which the Lord ſaith, being aſſured, as the children of Iſrael when they did thus never failed, but alwayes proſpered, ſo ſhall we, and finally, come to the heavenly inheritance promiſed us; let us with David ſay, lead me Lord in the path of thy Commandments. For one man, verſ. 2. Hebr. is one man, one man that is one of one tribe, and one of another; for the twelve tribes, but of Levi none, becauſe the Levites were to have none inheritance there.

Pſal. 119. 33.

Ver. 2.

Deut. 18. 1.

Verſ. 3. At the command of the Lord he ſent them.] That is, as was before noted at his permiſſion: But forſomuch that God ſaw it would be for their hurt, why did not he forbid it? The Hebrewes anſwer, to accompliſh their deſire, and to render them their recompence, and to give Joſuah and Caleb a good reward. Wherefore he ſent out theſe ſearchers, as he had before ſent them quailes in anger, that the carnall and worldly minded might not joy ſo much in having their worldly deſires fulfilled, and Gods children may bear it the more patiently to be in adverſitie and to want theſe things.

In Pheſiktah.

Theſe

Theſe heads of the people, or rulers ſent out were not of the ſeventy ſet up to rule, Numb, 11. nor of the Captains, Numb. 1. for their names doe all differ, but of the captains over thouſands mentioned. Exod. 18. So Cazkuni. The other were to remain ſtill in the camp to govern and lead the people. Cazkuni.

And theſe were their names, of the tribe of Reuben, Shammuah, the ſonne of Zaccur, &c.] Moſes ſetteth down their names for the more certainty of the Hiſtory, and for the perpetuall ignominy of the wicked, and the praiſe of the juſt, ſuch as two of them onely were, Caleb and Joſuah. Touching theſe names I will note nothing, but onely whereas verſ. 8. Hoſheah, the ſonne of Nun is ſpoken of as a Prince of the tribe of Ephraim, when the Prince of the tribe of Manaſſeh cometh to be ſpoken of, v. 11. It is ſaid ſingularly, of the tribe of Ioſeph, namely of the tribe of Manaſſeh Gaddi, the ſonne of Suſi. Ephraim and Manaſſeh were both the ſonnes of Joſeph, yet Manaſſeth his tribe is ſpoken of, as Joſephs, and Ephraims not. The reaſon may be, becauſe Manaſſeh was his firſt-born, Joſ. 17. 1. although Ephraim be firſt named, as by the ſpirit of Propheſie Jacob of old had preferred him: but Ezech. 37. 16. Ephraim is called by the houſe of Joſeph. Cazkuni ſaith, Manaſſeh is here ſet forth by Joſeph, but Ephraim not, becauſe as Joſeph had brought up an ill report of his brethren, Gen. 37. ſo Gaddi of Manaſſeh did of the land, but Hoſheah of Ephraim did not. Ferus. Verſ. 4. Verſ. 8. 11. Gen. 48. 19. Cazkuni.

And Moſes called Oſhea the ſonne of Nun Iehoſhuah.] The name Joſhuah was before, Exod. 17. 19. and therefore it was not now firſt changed, but when he went to fight againſt the Amalekites, although the change be not mentioned till now; thus Origen, Theodoret, Tertullian, Lactantius, &c. And it agreeth with reaſon, that it ſhould be ſo, becauſe he is there firſt called Joſhuah, and alwayes from thence forward, as Abram after his name changed is alwayes called Abraham. Yet ſome are for the change of his name at this time, as Anaſtaſius, Auguſtinus, Juſtinus, Toſtatus, &c. and that he was before called ſo by anticipation. Cazkuni noteth, that he was called Joſhuah, when he firſt became Moſes his miniſter, and ſerved him, but Deut. 32. 44. he is called Hoſheah again, becauſe it is the manner of kings to give new names to their ſervants, as Gen. 41. 45. Dan. 1. 7. but when he was now to be, as it were king after Moſes, he was called by his firſt name again. But it is not to be doubted, but that Moſes called him thus by the ſpirit, in the name Joſhuah ſignifying ſalvation, intimating how he ſhould ſave the people from the Amorites their enemies, and deſtroy them, and ſo be a true type of Jeſus ſaving us from our ſinnes. Tertullian calleth him by the ſame name Jeſus, and Prudentius, and by the Greeks he is ſo commonly called. There is another Joſhuah mentioned, 1 Sam. 6. 14. into whoſe field the Arke came and ſtood ſtill, as drawn by virtue of that name, as Juſtin hath it: ſee alſo Zechar. 3. 1. Verſ. 16. Orig. Hom. 11. in Exod. Theodoret. qu. 34 in Exod. Cazkuni. Iuſt. Martyr. contra Typhon.

And Moſes ſent them into the land of Canaan to eſpy out the land, ſaying, goe this way ſouthward, and go up into the mountain, and ſee what the land is.] By ſouthward, he meaneth the ſouth part of the land, which was neareſt to them, and this was moſt dry and barren, a great part of it being wilderneſſe, for thus the word negeb here uſed ſignifieth drie, and therefore Calebs daughter having land given her in the ſouth, asketh of her father ſprings of water: of a wilderneſſe lying here ſee Joſ. 15. 1. and the Septuagint render it, goe up by the wilderneſſe. They are directed then to goe this way to ſearch, that they might ſee the worſt of the land firſt, the beſt being reſerved to be ſhewed afterwards as merchants ſhew the worſt of their wares firſt, and afterwards the beſt, Sol. Jarchi, goe up into the mountain, that is, where the Amalekites and Canaanites dwelt; as appeareth, ch. 14. 40. being the ſtrongeſt part of the countrey, becauſe if that were once ſubdued, it would be eaſie to ſubdue the reſt. The things that he directeth them to ſearch into was; whether the land were fat, or lean, the people few Verſ. 17. Judg. 1. 15. Sol. Jarchi. Verſ. 18. 19. 20.

or

or many, and their dwellings ſtrong or weak, &c. In ſpeaking of their ſearching the land, he mentioned it three times: 1. By the land meaning the nation or people dwelling in it. 2. The buildings and fortifications thereof, and the aire, 3. The ſoyle, whether there be wood or not; this the Targum Jonathan expoundeth trees of food, be of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. This is put in, ſaith Cazkuni, becauſe vineyards had keepers there, which watched them.

Targum Ionath.

Cazkuni.

Verſ. 21. So they went up and ſearched the land from the wilderneſſe of Zin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath: Of the wilderneſſe of Sin it was ſpoken before, Exod. 16. 1. But that was a wilderneſſe betwixt the Red ſea, and mount Sinai nearer Egypt, having the name from thornes, or buſhes which grew abundantly there, or happily it had the name from Sin, a ſtrong city in Egypt, of which ſee Ezech. 39. 15. But this was Zin written with ץ, as Jerom noteth, the firſt with ס ſignifying a buſh, this in mandatum. But עֲצִים ſignifieth thorns, and even this wilderneſſe is deſcribed as very large 184 miles long, and lying between Ezion-gaber and Kadeſh. The difference was, the other called Sin lay nearer Egypt, this near the land of Canaan, being the border thereof on the ſouth, Numb. 34. 3. Rehob was a city on the Weſt near Zidon, which fell to the tribe of Aſher, Joſh. 19. 28. Hamath, was a great city on the north part of Canaan, and the Eaſt, Numb. 34. 8. Joſ. 13. 5. It is called Amos. 6. 2. Hamath the great, it was ſcituated under mount Lebanon by the river Jabbok, and fell afterwards to Nephtalim; it is thought firſt to have been built by Amatheus, the 11 ſonne of Canaan. The Greeks called it afterwards Epiphania, from Antiochus Epiphanes. By their going by theſe places it appeareth, that they went almoſt round about the countrey from the South to the Weſt, from thence to the North and Eaſt.

Hieron Epiſt. 127.

H. Bunting, Patriark travailes.

Adricomius.

Verſ. 22. And they aſcended by the South, and came to Hebron, &c.] Rab. Solom. and Lyranus ſay, that onely Caleb went thither and prayed over the Sepulchers of the Patriarkes: but it is plainly they came in the Hebrew, and yet it is moſt probable, according to the Rabbins, that they went not altogether for fear of ſuſpition, but two and two, as alſo Ferus noteth; but he ſaith the godly in coming hither, and ſeeing the place of the Sepulchers of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, were comforted, when they did their devotions to God there; but the wicked by the ſight of the giants terrified; ſo the ſame things that bring comfort to them that fear God, bring terrour to the wicked. They had gone out by the South, and now they return back again by the ſouth, or the deſert of Zin; and they are ſaid to aſcend, becauſe that place was mountainous. Of Hebron I have ſpoken before, Gen. 23. 2. and how that it was the ſame with Kiriath-arbah. Now Hebron was built ſeven yeares before Zoan in Egypt. The Greek and Caldee call Zoan Tanes, and from hence ſome derive Titanes, the giants ſo called from this place where they dwelt, that lived in Egypt. Now of Zoan or Tanes mention is made here, Hebron being preferred for antiquity before it, becauſe the Hebrews had dwelt lately in Egypt, and ſo knew that city very well. Hebron is ſaid to have bin builded by Cham for his younger ſonne Canaan, 90 yeares after the flood, as he after built Zoan in Egypt for Mizraim his eldeſt. And Sol. Jarchi in comparing theſe two together ſaith, that Egypt was a moſt pleaſant and fruitfull land, and Zoan the beſt of Egypt, as being the ſeat of their Kings, but Hebron was 7 times better then it. Here were Ahiman, Sheſhai and Talmai the ſonnes of Anak. This Anak was a mighty giant, being the ſonne of Arbah. From whom that that city had the name before Kiriath-arbah, and Ahiman his ſonne was ſo called, as if he ſhould have ſaid, who is his brother, becauſe none was like unto him in ſtrength again in all the world. For theſe giants eſpecially was mention made here of Hebron, becauſe this was the city of greateſt ſtrength by reaſon of them: but there were more giants called Anakims

R. Solomon.

Ferus.

Gen 49. 31.

Note.

Sol. Iarchi.

Ioſ. 15. 13.

kims in divers parts, whom Joſhuah deſtroyed, and theſe three were driven out by Caleb, and afterwards ſlain, Judg.1.10. Joſh. 11.21.& 15. 14.

And they came to the brook of Eſhcol, and cut down there a branch with one cluſter of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a ſtaffe, &c.] The word נחל, ſignifieth either a brook or a valley; and now firſt it had the name of Eſhcol, a cluſter, as is ſhewed verſ.24. This was nigh to Hebron, when they were now returning to the camp again. For from Paran from whence they went, ſaith one, to Rehob was 140 miles, from thence to Hamath 188 miles, that Rehob being in Galilee, Hamath in Syria, from Hamath they returned again to Hebron 304 miles, where upon the ſide of the river Eſhcol they cut down a branch with a bunch of grapes, from thence to Kadeſh, where the camp was, 20 miles. Their whole journey ſaid to be in fourty dayes, verſ. 25. according to this account, was 652 miles, and this cluſter was carried by them 20 miles. By this and other fruits, which they brought, as pomgranates and figs, that doubtleſſe were anſwerable in fairneſſe, the admirable fruitfulneſſe of the land appeared. For the time of their begining their journey more particularly, Cazkuni ſaith, they began it in Sinan, or May 29. and ended in Ab, or July 8. Verſ. 23. H. Punting Patriarks travailes.

If it be queſtioned, how they could juſtifie the taking of theſe fruits being other mens goods? it is eaſily anſwered, that either they agreed for them, or elſe having a commandement from Moſes, who was Gods Vicegerent to them, they were herein juſtified, eſpecially ſeeing the whole land by Gods appointment was theirs, and they wanted nothing now, but to go and take poſſeſſion of it. Queſt.

And they came Moſes and to Auron, and to all the congregation in the wilderneſſe of Paran to Kadeſh, &c. Here it appeareth, that Kadeſh was in Paran, and ſo there is no difference in ſaying, that they were ſent from Paran, v.3. and from Kadeſh Barnea, Deut.1.19. and Cazkuni ſaith, that the wilderneſſe of Paran, Hazeroth, Rithmah, and Zin and Kadeſh were all near one to another. This Kadeſh was a Wilderneſſe ſo called from a city of the Edomites of this name, Numb.20.16. Pſal.29.8. It ſignifieth holy, as Jerom noteth, becauſe the Lord was ſanctified there in bringing water out of a rock, and puniſhing Moſes for his unbelief; ſo likewiſe Toſtatus, who alſo ſaith for the ſame reaſon, it was called the fountain of Judgment. Verſ. 26. Cazkuni. Hieron. Toſtatus.

And they told him, ſaying; We come to the land whither thou ſenteſt us, and ſurely it floweth with milk and honey, &c. Of this phraſe of flowing with milk and honey, enough before, Exod.3.8. thus far they acknowledge it to be true which the Lord had before ſpoken, in commending this land; but ten of them diſcourage the people, by telling of the ſtrong walls, and the ſtrength of the Inhabitants, and particularly of the ſons of Anak and of the Amalekites: for of the ſons of Anak there was a proverb, who can ſtand before the ſons of Anak? Deut.9.2. and becauſe Anak and his ſons the Anakims, who reigned over others, were ſo celebrated for might, the Greeks from hence took their name ἄναξες, for Kings: of the Amalekites they alſo ſpeak firſt of other peoples, becauſe they had already fought againſt them, terrified them, aud cut off many of them upon the way. The Amalekites dwelt on the ſouth, and ſo neareſt to them, for which they are called the firſt of the Nations, Num.24.20.& Chap.4.45 they firſt fought with them. Amalek was not an Inhabitant of the land of Canaan, as not coming of Cham, but of Eliphaz, the ſon of Eſau by his concubine Timnah; yet becauſe this people dwelt in the entrance of that land to hinder the Iſraelites from entring, they are here reckoned, as enemies to be encountred with. The Hittites, Jebuſites and Amorites next mentioned, and the Canaanites came of Canaan the younger ſon of Cham, of whom alſo came the Girgaſhites, Hivites, and Arkites, &c. but theſe onely are named, as the moſt mighty. Verſ.27. Verſ.28,29. Deut.25.17. Gen. 36. 12. Gen.10. 15.

And Caleb ſtilled the people and ſaid, we will go up at once and poſſeſſe it, for Verſ. 30.

We are well able to overcome it. Chap. 14. 6. Not only Caleb, but alſo Joſhua ſtilled them, although it is likely, that Joſhua let Caleb ſpeak firſt, The Cald. ſaith, he ſtilled the people and made them attend to Moſes, who ſpake words unto them to incourage them. It is not ſaid here, what the people ſpake upon the relation of theſe Searchers, that any man had need to quiet them, and to make them hold their peace; but Deut. 1. 25, 26, &c. both their words are ſet down, and alſo the ſpeech of Moſes made unto them: whereas Caleb ſaith, we are well able, this came from his faith, whereby he truſted in the power and promiſe of God, as it was in his heart, Joſ. 14. 7. according to his name. Toſtatus and ſome others, becauſe Joſhua is not here ſpoken of with Caleb, and chap. 14. 24. Caleb alone is commended by the Lord for withſtanding theſe murmurers, hold, that Joſhua was ſilent at the firſt, as being moved by the murmurers, but ſoon after he withſtood them: but it is better held by others, that Caleb ſpake here both for himſelf and Joſhua, forſomuch, as two could not ſpeak together without confuſion, and what praiſe is given to Caleb, is alſo to be underſtood of Joſhua, as may be gathered chap. 14. 6. & 30. 38. for Moſes, that wrot it, had Joſhua for his miniſter, and therefore he was the more ſparing in ſpeaking of his praiſes.

Cald. Par.

Toſtatus.

Calvin.

Verſ. 31. But the men that went with him ſaid, We are not able to go up, &c.] That is, all but Joſhua; amongſt other arguments of diſcouragement they ſay, it eateth up the Inhabitants; which by ſome is underſtood of civil wars, their deſtroying them; or of the unhealthfulneſſe of the ayr: by ſome, of the peſtilence now raging there; ſo that as they paſſed along, they ſaw many buried. Comeſtor hath three expoſitions, either it is a land of infirmities, and none live long there, or it is a land coveted by many peoples for the goodneſſe of it, ſo as that none can dwell long there, but be cut off by enemies invading them; or for the goodneſſe of it they that once come to inhabit therein will never go out again, but continue and dye in it. But this laſt is moſt frigid of all others, ſeeing the goodneſſe of the land attracting men to it, were rather an argument to perſwade to it, then to diſſwade from it. And for infirmity ſhortening life, this is ſo contrary to the praiſe of it given before, as that it cannot be the meaning; unleſſe with Calvin we ſhould hold, that theſe wicked Searchers do moſt impudently contradict themſelves in ſeeking to oppoſe Caleb; before having ſaid, it was a good land, but now, the ayr was unhealthful, and moſt hard labour was required in tilling the ground, to the wearing out of the body betimes, and yet not ſo could the Inhabitants get maintenance enough, but many periſhed for want: for thus Calvin expoundeth it, but moſt improbably, ſeeing, although they ſpeak wickedly, yet in any other of their ſpeeches they ſay nothing untruly, & if they ſhould in this, they might eaſily have been trapt in their own ſayings. That of enemies being ſtill alwaies ready to invade the land, and to deſtroy the inhabitants, that they might enjoy it, is beſt: for if either there had been civil wars at this time waſting the people, or a peſtilence amongſt them, the power to reſiſt would have been the leſſe feared. That the greedy deſire of others to come and kill them up, when they ſhould inhabit the land, that they might injoy it, is meant, appeareth, becauſe former experience had taught it, ſeeing the Amorites came in to dwell there by deſtroying the Moabites, and the Caphtorims or Philiſtims, by deſtroying the Anims. And when for their ſins afterwards God had given the people of Iſrael into the hands of their enemies, but of his mercy promiſed to do ſo no more, it is expreſſed by this phraſe, becauſe they ſay, thou land devoureſt men, and haſt bereaved thy nations, therefore thou ſhalt devour men no more. It is a land, that devoureth the Inhabitants, then is as if they had ſaid, none can dwell there long in quiet, but as former experience hath ſhewed, be in danger continually of the invaſions of other nations to root them out again. Here Calvin noteth, how wickedneſſe increaſed in theſe Verſ. 32. Ainſworth. Marciana. Re Solomon Scholaſt. Hiſtor.

Calvin.

Numb. 21. 26. Deut. 2. 23.

Ezech. 36. 13.

these evil instruments, at the first they spake not plainly against the possibility of taking this land, but made a bare relation only, but now they argue with might and main hereabout, and disswade from going against the Nations therein: so sin beginning to get an head in any will increase more and more, wherefore resist it in the beginning. Note.

all the men, that We saw, are of great stature] Heb. men of measures, that is, exceeding tall, high as cedars, strong as oaks, saith the Prophet Amos. Amos 2. 9.

There We saw the giants, the sons of Anak, and we were in our sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight. Cazkuni in explaining it saith, men heard them say, as we passed by, there are pismires in the vineyards like unto men; of the word rendred giants, see before Gen. 6. Vers. 33. Cazkuni.

For the mysterie of all this, the searchers sent out, saith Ferus, set forth preachers of the Word, who are to search the Scriptures, that they may know all things therein very well, and declare them to others, but amongst them two sorts only be faithful and good, the Prophets and Apostles and their followers, all others are Hereticks, which cause a great deal of trouble to them and to the Church of God, diverting them from the heavenly Canaan, and being an occasion of the destruction of very many. But these two speak cordially to the people, and bring them good fruits of that countrey, when by their preaching, faith, righteousnesse, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, are wrought in them; and above all, they bring the bunch of grapes, Christ Jesus, who was trodden in the wine-presse of Gods wrath for our sins, the Prophets going before and setting him forth, as to come, and the Apostles following after, and setting him forth as already come, and so carrying, as it were, the hinder part of the staffe, as they the forepart. Rupertus, by the searchers sent out, understandeth all, that are stirred up to search the Scriptures; by the bunch of grapes cut down, Christ cut from the land of the living, by the two carrying it, two sorts of people, or people of two kinds worshipping Christ, and believing in his passion, some before his incarnation, who saw him not in the flesh, and some after, having him before their eyes; by the pomgranates, the martyrdomes of the Saints of God; and by the 40 dayes spent in searching the 40 daies of Christs abiding here after his resurrection; but these things arride not me so much, as the former. Touching the enemies spoken of, to deter them from going to take the land of Canaan, the Amalekites, and Amorites of so great stature; these, saith Rabanus, set forth the mighty spirits in heavenly places, against whom we are to fight, and to drive them out, that we may possesse the Kingdome of heaven; and therefore it is said, since the dayes of John, the violent take the Kingdom of heaven. And in comparison of these powers we are but as grashoppers; yet being armed with the faith of Jesus Christ they are nothing to us; they are as pismires, saith Gregory, towards those that resist them, but as lions to the negligent. And of Amalek in particular, signifying one licking up the people. Origen saith, that they set forth the Devil licking up and consuming the people of God. Amalek cometh of Eliphaz, signifying, God hath dispersed me; and Timnah, that is, a moved defection; for the Devil being moved by pride against God fell, and so was dispersed by him. Gregory and the ordinary glosse by Amalek understand the flesh, that must be cut down by the sword of Joshua. And because these were at the entrance of the Land only to hinder from it, not Inhabitants there, I think, that the flesh may best be understood by them; and by the Hittites, Amorites and Canaanites of so great stature, spiritual powers, that we are to fight against.

The Mystery. Ferus.

Rupertus.

Rabanus. Ephes. 6, 12.

Gregor. Contra resistentes formica fit, leo contra negligentes.

Origen. Hom. 19. in Numer.

CHAP. XIV.

Verſ. 1. AND all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried, &c.] Before the murmuring of the people was not expreſſed, in ſhewing what they ſaid; but here it is, they wiſh that they had died in Egypt, or in the wilderneſſe, they challenge God for bringing them out to be a prey to their enemies, and conſult about making them a Captain to lead them backe again into Egypt, and ſomething more is commemorated, Deutero. 1. 27. which is here omitted. The Rabbins expound this of making a captain or head, of a King, cenſuring it as idolatry, and as the ſinne of thoſe that built the tower of Babel, Nehem. 9. 16, 17. this is ſpoken of, as done by them, becauſe they intended it. As the ſearchers cauſed this deſpair of entering into the land of Canaan to poſſeſſe it, ſo ſome Preachers, ſaith Ferus, teach ſo, that they drive their hearers to deſpair, but as we muſt not make the way to heaven too large and facile, ſo we muſt not make it too ſtreight and hard, we muſt ſo deterre from ſinne, as withall to publiſh grace. The ſinne of the children of Iſrael was manifold in their thus murmuring: 1. Their forgetfullneſſe of all that they had ſeen and heard tending to confidence and aſſurance of the divine aid againſt all d angers: for theycontrariwiſe gave no credit to the promiſes of God, but rather believed lies. 2. The univerſality of their murmuring, the whole multitude lift up their voice. 3. Their repenting of all the good that God had done for them, and deſiring that he would lead them no more. 4. Their deſperate conſulting to return again to the Egyptians, whom they knew to be moſt infeſt againſt them 5. Their going about to ſtone thoſe that adviſed them well. And theſe be ſtill the ſins of the wicked; 1. they rather believe the lies of ſeducers, then the word of God, and 2. all eſtates and degrees doe wickedly, there is no diligence amongſt ſuperiours, no obedience amongſt inferiours, no religion amongſt Prieſts, no fear of God amongſt the people, no love betwixt the married, no fidelity amongſt neighbours, no maturity amongſt the old, nor diſcipline amongſt the yong. 3. They are weary of repentance, and had rather live ſtill in their ſinnes, then force themſelves to amendment, and thus: 4. after ſome eſcape made they return to the Egypt of ſinne again. 5. Seducers are loved, but ſuch as ſpeak the truth hated and perſecuted, ſo Ferus.

Exod. 16. 3.

Ferus.

Verſ. 5. Then Moſes and Aaron fell on their faces before all the aſſembly, &c. It is ſaid, Deut. 1. 29. that Moſes ſpake unto them to encourage them, which happily was done at the firſt when Caleb ſpake unto them, chap. 13. But now ſeeing them obſtinately to perſiſt in their wickedneſſe, and to blaſpheme God, that had done ſo much for them, he and Aaron fall down upon their faces before them to move them the more to remorſe and repentance for theſe their wicked ſpeeches; thus expreſſing their ſorrow, as Joſhuah and Caleb are ſaid by and by to have done by rending their garments. Their falling down was then by way of mourning at the indignity of the thing, and by this lowly geſture before their ſubjects to incline their minds that were ſo vilely bent to better motions. Ferus and Toſtatus yield three reaſons oftheir falling down; either they fell down, as being amazed, or to pray unto God, or the more to move the people to remorſe. Of theſe Calvin preferreth the ſecond, but then it would not have bin ſaid, they fell down before the aſſembly; but before the Lord, as it is ſaid, Numb. 16. 28. Joſh. 7. 6. neither can it bee conceived, that they fell down, as being aſtoniſhed, and ſo not able to ſtand, for they were not of ſo little courage.

Ferus. Toſtatus. Calvin.

Verſ. 6. And Ioſhuah the ſonne of Nun, and Caleb the ſonne of Iephunneh rent their cloaths, &c.] Of rending cloaths in ſorrow, ſee before Levit. 10. 6. as good preachers preachers they grieve for the ſinnes of the people, and exhort them to a better confidence, ſaith Ferus. This rending of their clothes was in deteſtation and ſorrow for the peoples blaſphemy, as the high Prieſt, before whom our Saviour Chriſt ſtood, when he heard him as he thought ſpeak blaſphemy, rent his clothes, although the high prieſt ought not ſo to have done, Levit.21. 10. and chap. 10. 6. and this may be a reaſon why Moſes and Aaron before ſpoken of rent not their clothes, becauſe the anointing oyle was upon Aaron, ſo that he might not, and Moſes was of as high dignity in the Church, being indeed as it were, an high prieſt above him. Matth.26.65.

Verſ. 7. And they ſpake unto all the company of the children of Iſrael, ſaying, the land which we paſſed through is an exceeding good land, &c.] Caleb was the mouth of them both before, but now Joſhua ſeemeth to be the chief ſpeaker, and Caleb did ſecond him to move them the more. They ſeek three wayes here to move them. 1. By the excellency of the land, and giving them hope to injoy it through Gods donation. 2. By the nature of their ſinne, Rebell ye not againſt the Lord, it was rebellion to ſpeak as they did. 3. By the nakedneſſe, and indefenſible ſtate of the people; Their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us, they ſhall be bread for us: whereas they ſay, verſ.8. If the Lord delight in us, he will give us this land: this is to be underſtood not as a ſpeach of doubting, as Toſtatus noteth, but as if they had ſaid, if the Lord delighteth in us, as he certainly doth, witneſſe the great and wonderfull things that he hath done for us; for otherwiſe they had herein miniſtred matter to the peoples incredulity. For Rebell not againſt the Lord; the Septuagint have it, do not apoſtatize from the Lord. From the word מרד here uſed cometh of Nimrod, who in confidence of his own ſtrength was a ſtubborn rebell againſt God, ſaith Joſephus. They ſhall be bread for us, this is oppoſed to the ſpeach of the wicked ſearchers before going, It is a land that devoureth the inhabitants thereof, this ſhall not be found to be ſo, ſaith Joſhua; but contrariwiſe we ſhall eat them up as bread, we ſhall as eaſily conſume and devour them, and have pleaſure in ſo doing, as men have when they eat their meat, we ſhall deſtroy them without reſiſtance: ſo Auguſtine, Toſtatus, Lyranus, &c. Their defence is departed, Hebr. their ſhaddow; for Gods protection is ſaid to be his ſhaddow, Eſa. 51.16. Eſa. 49. 2. Pſalm. 91.1. The meaning then is, that God did not protect them, and his protection is ſet forth ſaith Toſtatus, by this word ſhaddow, becauſe as the ſhaddow defendeth from the ſcorching heat of the Sunne, ſo Gods providence defendeth from deſtruction. But it is not plainly ſaid, Gods protection is departed from them, ſaith Auguſtine, becauſe they were wicked, and ſo had not a time to flouriſh and reigne, but by a ſecret diſpenſation of the divine providence, but contrariwiſe of themſelves he ſaith, the Lord is with us.

Ioſeph. lib.1. Antiq. c.5.

Numb. 24.8.

Auguſt. qu. 23. in Num.

Toſtatus.

Auguſt.

Verſ. 10. But all the congregation bade ſtone them with ſtones, and the glory of the Lord appeared in the Tabernacle of the Congregation.] As this rebellious people were once about to doe to Moſes, Exod.17.4. ſo now they are to Joſhua and Caleb: but God by giving a ſigne of his preſence reſtraineth their fury, and dampeth them in their attempts, ſo Numb. 10. 42. and before Exod. 16. 10. 24.16. Levit. 9. 6. 23. Joſephus ſaith, that they would have ſtoned Moſes and Aaron alſo, and then have made them a Captain to return into Egypt, which is not improbable. But Gods glory appeareth; that is, he ſhewed ſome terrible ſight, whereby they were affrighted, and ſo his faithfull ſervants preſerved.

Ioſeph. Antiq. lib.3.c.1.

Verſ. 11. And the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, how long will this people provoke me, and how long will it be, yer they believe me for al the ſigns that I have ſhewed amongſt them.] The Lord vouchſafeth not to ſpeak to the people as unworthy, but turning from them as it were, he ſpeaketh to Moſes. The word rendred, provoke is uſed, Eſa.52.5. and there it is rendred blaſpheme, ſo likewiſe by the Apoſtle alledging that place Rom.2.24 their provoking then here ſpoken of was by blaſpheming, and by contemning, Prov. 1.30.c. 15.5. Eſa. 5.24. For this Verſ. 12. contempt and not believing the Lord ſaith, he will ſmite them with the peſtilence, and diſinherit them, and make of Moſes a great Nation; thus alſo he had ſpoken before, Exod. 32. 10. For ſmite them, Hebr. is ſmite him, his meaning being that he would ſmite them, as one man, as is expreſſed. v.15. He ſaith, that he would diſinherit them, becauſe by his promiſe to their fathers, Canaan was their inheritance: for theſe words, make of thee a great Nation: the Septuagint have, make of thee and of thy fathers houſe; and for ſmite them with the peſtilence; the Cald. and Septuagint have ſmite them with death. Becauſe the Lord ſaith here, that he will doe what he did Cyril. Alex. 5. contr. Iulian. not, Julian objected, that he was inconſtant and variable; but Cyril of Alexandria anſwered, the thing indeed is changed, but God is not changed, onely in not doing as he ſaith when he is provoked, he ſheweth how much he doth eſteem of the prayers of his ſervants, in that for theſe he reverſeth the ſentence, and of how great clemency he is, ſo that he deſireth that his Orig. Hom. 8. in Numer. wrath ſhould be hindred, and that ſinners ſhould turn to him by repentance. God ſaid not thus, as Origen hath it, as being ſubject to anger, and as one ſpeaking in his paſſion, but that both the charity of Moſes towards the people, and the goodneſſe of God which is above all underſtanding Comminatio hæc non eſt iracundiæ, ſed prophetiæ. might appear; for this ſheweth it to be ſo great, that by the prayers of his ſervants, his decrees of puniſhment made upon provocation by horrible ſinning, are reverſed. This ſpeech alſo containing a myſtery, the threatning here made was not anger, but a propheſie, that the Jewes ſhould be rejected and another Nation raiſed up out of the Gentiles, greater then they not to be called by Moſes his name intimated in his refuſing of this Rabanus. Theod qu. 67. in Exod. offer, but by Chriſts name Chriſtians; thus alſo Rabanus, Theodoret, Hieronimus, Gregory, Cyrill, Alexander, &c. He threatned thus to Ferus. provoke Moſes to pray for them ſaith Ferus, and this effect ſhould his threats have in us.

V.13,14,15 V.16.27. V.18.19. And Moſes ſaid unto the Lord, then the Egyptians ſhall heare it, &c. From hence to verſ.20. is ſhewed, how Moſes entreated for the people, reaſoning from the great grace, which the Egyptians had heard and in part knew, that he did them, in dwelling amongſt them with his cloud; ſo that if hee ſhould now deſtroy them, they would tell the Canaanites, that he did this becauſe he was not able to bring them into that land, Exod. 32. 11.12.&c. he reaſoned from this, that they would object, that he brought them out for miſchief, Deut.9.28. both theſe are joyned together, when Moſes commemorateth his prayer made. And he pleadeth from that which the Lord Ferus. had proclaimed of himſelf, long ſuffering, of great mercy, forgiving iniquities, &c. verſ.18. all which is had before, Exod. 34. 6,7. The ſervants of God ſaith Ferus, in the time of danger make prayer their refuge, as Moſes here doth.

Note. Again, they are moſt ſollicitous for Gods glory, that it may no way be diſparaged, and they rely not upon their own merits, but Gods mercies: And laſtly, they pray in faith of his gracious promiſes, whereas no mention is made here of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, as there is, Exod. 32. 12.13. It is to be conceived, that now he held them unworthy to be ſtiled by them any longer, to whom they were ſo unlike: for they believed without ſigns, but theſe not, when they had many.

Verſ.20. 21. 22, 23, 24. And the Lord ſaid, I have pardoned according to thy VVord. But as truely, as I live, all the earth ſhall be filled with the glory of the Lord, &c. From hence to verſe 25. The Lord ſetteth down his purpoſe touching the people, at the requeſt of Moſes he yieldeth not to deſtroy them all ſuddenly; but becauſe they had provoked him now ten times, he threatneth that they ſhall die in the wilderneſſe from 20 yeares old and upward, except Caleb, who ſhould have a poſſeſſion in the land of Canaan, he and his poſterity Cazkuni. after him. By theſe words, I have pardoned; Cazkuni underſtandeth, heretofore when they sinned about the golden calfe, but now I will not pardon, but punish. But the Septuagint better, I doe pardon; for at Moses his request God pardoned now again, yet according to his word, as it is said here, I have pardoned according to thy word: that is, not to destroy them altogether as one man, as was said, v.15. For Moses was guided by the Spirit of God not to ask, that they should be spared any otherwise, but as heretofore when he interceeded for them; and thus his petition was now granted, they were pardoned in generall, the utter destruction threatned, but not all punishment due for their rebellion. Ferus hath two wayes more of expounding it: I have remitted the eternall punishment in hell, but not the temporall. 2 I have remitted the guilt, but not the punishment, and hereupon he inferreth, that they who are forgiven of God, and in the Church absolved from their sinnes must yet do penance as they are injoyned, But no such conclusion can be made from hence, but onely that they whom God hath pardoned their foule offences, must not yet look to be free from temporall punishments, wherewith God is wont to judge his, that they may not perish with the wicked world, they shall have much sorrow and smart here, that sin, although they be pardoned, and shal not perish everlastingly, as hath been noted before, upon Exod. 32. 34. But for delinquents punishing of themselves any otherwise then by contrition, and fasting, and putting on sackcloth and ashes, was it never heard, till superstition invented unnaturall whipping and wounding of the own body.

Ferus.

1 Cor. 11. 32.

* Note.

But as truely as I live, all the earth shall be filled, &c.] Hebr. I live, and the earth shall be filled, it is a form of swearing often used by the Lord, Ezech. 18.3. c, 29.33. c.5. 11. Jer. 4. 2. in the last of which places it is a form prescribed to us, Thou shalt swear the Lord liveth, Rom. 14. 11. The gesture used by the Lord in swearing was the lifting up of his hand, Deut. 32. 46. The Lord sweareth here saith Ferus, to confirm Moses touching the pardon pronounced, and to make the people the more patiently to bear their temporall punishments, seeing the eternall were remitted: And withall because he saith not ye shall see my glory, but the whole earth shall be filled with it, here is a prediction of a more generall grace to all people to come by Jesus Christ; as if he had said, I will not onely shew my grace towards this people in pardoning them, and so make my name glorious, but also towards all mankind, because thou dost so much stand for the glory of my name. For I will one day lay aside mine anger, give my sonne, send the Holy Ghost, and cause the Gospell to be preached in all the world, and so proclaim a generall Jubilee to all people; thus also Origen and Procopius, Chrysostome and Theodoret.

Verſ. 21.

Ferus.

But Calvin understandeth this oath of the Lord, as taken to be revenged upon the rebellious people, and yet to provide for his own glory, about which he saw Moses to be so sollicitous, and the punishment which he sweareth to lay upon them, is that they shall not enter in to possesse this good land, of which they had made themselves so unworthy by their unbelief and rebellion. And by thus doing, as Lorinus herein saith well, my fame and glory shall not be indangered amongst those infidels, but I will be glorified in all the earth, because it shall be known every where, both that I have justly punished so many thousand rebells, and have brought in their children 20 yeares old and under, whem I would, that is after forty yeares into the promised land, preserving them miraculously in the wilderness all this time. My mercy mingled with justice shall purchase me fame amongst all men, especially, when they shall know hereby, that I could have destroyed them all at once, but would not. And that the oath of the Lord tendeth to this, as much, if not more, then to the confirming of the mercy promised appeareth, Psalm. 95. 11. where after this provocation mentioned, it is added, to whom I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest. And that this is his meaning, is further explained v. 28.

Calvin.

Lorinus

and yet I deny not, but that this mercy of not being ſuddenly conſumed, and ſo having their ſinne pardoned is alſo implied, and a more generall mercy in Chriſt, ſee Eſa. 6. 3. Pſa. 72. 19.

Verſ. 22. Becauſe all thoſe men which have ſeen my glory and my miracles, which I did in Egypt, and in the wilderneſſe, and have tempted me now theſe ten times, &c.] Here the Lord maketh a further expreſſion of his meaning in the former verſe, he would be glorified in all the world, by his powerfull and yet mercifull adminiſtration of Juſtice. By ten times ſome underſtand many times, a certain number being put for an uncertain. But there needeth no ſuch refuge, for they had by this time provoked him ten times, as Ainſworth hath well noted. 1 At the Red ſea, Exod. 14. 11. 2 In Marah, Exod. 15. 23. 3 In the wilderneſſe of Sin, Exod. 16. 2. 4 About the manna, Exod. 16. 20. and 5 Again about the ſame, verſ. 27. 28. 6 At Rephidim, Exod. 17. 2. 7 By the calf at Horeb. 8 At Taberah, Numb. 11. 1. 9 At Kibroth hattaavah, Numb. 11. 4. 10 In this place Ferus numbreth that Exod. 5. for one, and ſo nameth but one about the manna.

Ainſworth.

Note. Thus we may ſee, how God keepeth a catalogue of the ſinnes of the wicked, even from the firſt to the laſt, when they may think he hath forgotten them. Surely they ſhall not ſee the land which I ſware, &c. Hebr. if they ſhall ſee; but the Septuagint render it, ſurely they ſhall not ſee, and there is good ground for this reading, becauſe this being ſpoken of Pſalm. 95. 11. where theſe words are uſed, Wherefore I ſware in my wrath, that they ſhall not enter into my reſt, and mentioned, Heb. 3. 18. they are thus rendred, that they ſhould not enter: but by entring is meant entring to poſſeſſe it. And hereby was myſtically ſhewed, that none which go on impenitently in ſinne, ſhall ever enter into heaven figured out by this land. God beareth with men in their ſinnes, till they come to a certain meaſure, but then there is no eſcaping of puniſhment, although Moſes prayeth for them, or Noah, Job or Daniel, Jer. 15. Ezech. 14. And the more any have ſeen or know touching God, the more he is near to this dangerous caſe.

Note.

Verſ. 24. But my ſervant Caleb, becauſe he had another ſpirit in him, I will bring into that land, &c.] Numb. 32. 12. Moſes in commemorating this Hiſtory, joyneth Joſhua to Caleb, and therefore he alſo is to be underſtood here, ſee verſ. 30. although Deut. 1. 36. Caleb onely is again mentioned. But when Caleb alone, is ſpoken of and no mention made of Joſhuah, it is, ſaith Procopius, becauſe he ſhould bring them into the land as their Prince and Governour, ſo that when the Lord ſweareth that none of them ſhould ſee this good land, except Caleb, it is to be underſtood, none of the ſubjects, he that was to be as King over them being paſſed over in ſilence, that he might be more fully ſpoken of afterwards in his particular Hiſtory. The word עקב here rendred, becauſe, ſignifieth alſo a reward, whereupon Oleaſter noteth, that theſe words may be rendred, but to my ſervant Caleb there ſhall be a reward, becauſe he had another ſpirit in him; but here is no word ſignifying becauſe, if this be rendred a reward; and therefore the firſt reading is beſt. Becauſe he had another ſpirit or mind to oppoſe the wicked ſearchers and the people, through the grace of the ſpirit that was in him, to believe and to reſt upon my promiſes and power, he and his poſterity ſhall poſſeſſe. Thus we ſee, if there be but one amongſt very many indued with grace, he is not forgotten before the Lord, but remembred, highly praiſed and rewarded.

Procopius.

Oleaſter.

Verſ. 25. Now the Amalakites and Canaanites dwelt in the valley, to morrow turn you, and get you into the wilderneſſe by the way of the Red ſea. The Lord having threatned them and made promiſes to Caleb, now beginneth to put in execution, what he had ſaid, he biddeth them not to go any more forward, but to turn backward, fearing them with the Amalekites and Canaanites, that were not far from them, and would be ready to deſtroy them, if they ſtayed ſtill there, or went forward, becauſe they were now deſtitute of

Gods

Gods gracious protection. And of the Amalekites he ſpecially ſpeaketh, as by whom the Searchers had feared them before, chap. 13. 29. amongſt whom ſome of the Canaanites, it ſeemeth, dwelt alſo, although the greateſt number of them dwelt by the ſea, and by the coaſt of Jordan, who are therefore ſo diſtinguiſhed, chap. 13. 29. And this threatening proved not vain, for when they, notwithſtanding this charge, preſumed to go forward, theſe peoples came againſt them and deſtroyed them, verſ. 45.

But how are they ſaid, verſ. 45. to dwell in that hill, whereas here it is, in the valley, Cazkuni expounding the word יֹשֵׁב, ſate in the valley, ſaith that the greateſt part of them ſate there, and ſome of them upon the hill; or elſe hearing of their coming, they went up to the hill, and lay in wait for them there, and if ſo, it might well be ſaid, the Amalekites and Canaanites, which ſate on the hill; ſeeing this word ſitting is uſed alſo for lying in wait, Pſal. 10. 8. & Joſh. 8. 9. Qu. Cazkuni.

To morrow turn ye] They were now in Cadeſh, for to that place the Searchers returned them, and here they are ſaid to have continued many dayes, Deut. 1. 46. and then to have turned by the way of the Red Sea, as the Lord commanded, Deut. 2. 1. The Lord commanded, ſaying, to morrow turn, &c. how then did they according to his word, and yet turned not, till after many dayes? Cazkuni ſaith, to morrow, meaneth after this time, as Exod. 12. 34. to morrow when thy ſon ſhall ask thee, that is, at any time hereafter: but although they removed the morrow after that this was ſpoken, they abode yet in Cadeſh many dayes; for they were there all the time that the ſearchers went about the Land, which was 40 dayes. Queſt.

For get you, Hebr. is, journey for you, that is, for your good. By the way of the Red ſea, that is the way, which they had formerly paſſed, where that great miracle had been done of leading them through upon dry ground. They were now in the Wilderneſſe, but near towns and cities; in bidding them to return then to the wilderneſſe, he meaneth, that they ſhould get them further off from that land, and from the habitations of men; for they were now within 40 miles of Jeruſalem; ſo H. Bunting Patriarks travailes. The Red Sea, ſaith Ainſworth, is that wherein the Apoſtle ſaith, that paſſing through they were baptized, and baptiſme is to repentance, wherefore in bidding them to go by the way of the Red Sea, myſtically is taught a long repentance, wherewith they ſhould repent, that have horribly ſinned. Procopius noteth, that it was a fit puniſhment for their ſin, they would return to Egypt, therefore God cauſeth them to go back that way to periſh. R. Solomon. Exod. 14. Ainſworth. 1 Cor. 10.

And the Lord ſaid, how long ſhall I bear with this evil congregation, that murmure againſt me, &c.] Here the Lord in more words, and more fully ſetteth down their puniſhment, that they ſhould all fall in the Wilderneſſe, from twenty yeares old and upward, and none of them enter the land, except Caleb and Joſhua, but their children ſhould after fourty yeares wandering in the Wilderneſſe, according to the number of dayes of ſearching the Land. For, how long ſhall I bear, Hebr. is, how long; the reſt being cut off, it is an eccliptick ſpeech, ſuch as men uſe to utter in paſſion of mind, as Exod. 32. 32. Pſalm 90. 13. Pſal. 6. 4. Verſ. 30. for theſe words, which I ſware, Hebr. is, I lifted up my hand; for this was a geſture uſed in ſwearing, as was ſhewed verſ. 21. Verſ. 33. for theſe words, your children ſhall wander, Hebr. is, your children ſhall be feeding; wandering being ſet forth hereby, becauſe ſheep do uſe to wander in feeding about, till many of them are deſtroyed, ſo Cazkuni: ſhall wander 40 years, that is, being counted from their coming out of Egypt, of which time more then a year was now expired: and bear your whoredomes, the Cald. your ſins, that is, the puniſhment of them, whereof their ſpiritual whoredomes by idolatry was the chief. Verſ. 34. a day for a year; as here, ſo myſtically afterwards a day was put for a year, Ezech. 4. 6. Dan. 9. 24. Rev. 11. 3. and ye ſhall know my breach of promiſe, Hebr. my breach, that is, what it Ver. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35. Cazkuni.

is to cause me by your wickednesses to break off, or to fall out with you. Solom. Jarchi saith, my breach, in that ye have broken your heart from after me. The Sept. ye shall know the wrath of mine anger; the Cald. ye shall know that ye have murmured against me.

Vers. 35. I will surely do it. Hebr. if I do it not: it is another oath added to the former: upon occasion of this judging them to death within the compasse of these years Moses made, Psal.90. taking occasion to set forth the shortnesse and instability of mans life in general; Junius. In that it is said, vers. 27. How long shall I bear, &c. Ferus noteth well, that it is not merely sinning, but persisting in sin and impenitency, that God will not bear withal, or be stayed from bringing terrible judgments upon. And again, the Lord saith thus, and speaketh of a breach, to shew, that he brake not the Covenant with their fathers, but they brake it, so that he was not bound now unto them hereby: Moreover, he destroyeth them not suddenly, but in fourty years; partly, that they might have time to repent; partly, that their children, whereof many were yet little ones, might not be destitute of all solace; and partly, that these children might see in their parents the Justice of God, and so grow up the rather in his fear: and lastly, that their continuance under the punishment might make them to repent the more; and that by their childrens being kept out of Canaan so long a time, we might all learn, that heaven is not soon or easily obtained, but with much travail and labour, and many sufferings: for the number of fourty, setteth forth repentance, as we may see in the Ninevites, and the fast of Moses fourty dayes, and of Elias, and Christ. Whereas they are punished a year for a day, this also served mystically to shew, that the wicked, for the day of this life, wherein they sinned, shall have a year of sorrow in the life to come never to be ended: thus Ferus.

Junius.
Ferus.
Note.

Ver.36,37, 38. Thus it was decreed touching the whole multitude, that they should be fourty years in consuming; but the ten wicked Searchers, who were the cause of this murmuring were destroyed by the plague forthwith, before they went from before the Tabernacle, as is intimated in that saying, they dyed by the plague before the Lord; for thus Uzzah, who dyed before the Ark, or by the Ark, 1 Sam.6.7. is said to have dyed before God, 1 Chron.13.10. Sol. Jarchi, and the Targum Jonathan say, they dyed by an inflammation of their tongues, worms issuing out of them.

Sol. Jarchi.
Targum Jonathan.

Thus they, that were on occasion to others of falling, were first and most terribly destroyed, to teach, that he who layeth a scandal before others, sinneth in a more high degree, and shall bear his punishment accordingly. As for Joshua and Caleb, he saith, they lived still, the other ten dyed presently, and all the rest in 40 years, who were stirred up by them to murmuring, so that of 600000 two only survived to enter into the Land of Canaan. And in like manner, say the Rabbins, it shall be in the dayes of Christ, according to that, Jer.3.14. I will take you, one of a city, and two of a family, a very right application, as the event since hath proved it.

Note.

Talmud Babyl. in Sanedrim.

Vers. 39. And Moses told all these words unto the children of Israel, and they mourned greatly] Hearing the severe sentence of God, they grieved, but it was for the punishment, not for the sin, and it was grief, that came too late.

Vers. 40. And they rose early in the morning, and gate them up to the top of the mountain, &c. That is, as is explained, Deut.1.41. they girded on their weapons and offered to go up, their attempting them and resolving upon the thing is called the doing of it. Before they sinned by despair, now by presumption: for that this attempt of theirs was not out of penitency, appeareth, because still they were refractory, and would not be ruled by Moses.

They

They would go up now, but could not; before they might, but would not: time is to be taken for grace, whileſt it is offered. And as they, ſo many will aſcend to the Tabernacle of God; but are beaten back again and periſh, viz. all ſuch, as go upon preſumption inſtead of a right grounded faith. Note.

And Moſes ſaid. Wherefore now do ye tranſgreſſe the Commandement of the Lord? &c. God had commanded, that they ſhould turn back by the way of the Red Sea; when they prepared themſelves then to go forward, they tranſgreſſed and ſo added ſin to ſin. They truſted not unto God; and therefore he threatneth not to go with them, and therefore that they ſhould periſh if they went up by the hands of their enemies. Note, that whatſoever is againſt the Word of God is a ſinne, and maketh liable to judgement, how good ſoever the intent of the doers be, ſo likewiſe 1 Sam. 15. Ver. 41, 42, 43. Note. Eſay 30. 1, 2, &c.

But they preſumed to go up to the top of the hill, but the Ark of the covenant and Moſes departed not out of the camp. The word rendred, they preſumed, is יעפלו, they proudly preſumed, or being lifted up in their heart through an aſſurance, that they conceived of the victory, for עפל, ſignifieth to lift up, Hab. 2. 4. when Moſes repeateth this again, Deut. 1. 43. he uſeth a word coming from זוד, to be proud, ye were proud to go up. The Targum Jonathan hath it, they went forward in the dark; which reading is followed by the vulgar Latine, contenebrati aſcendebant; for there is another Hebrew word near to this, viz. אפל, ſignifying a dark place, and if this be followed, then it is to be underſtood, that they were darkened through unbelief, as the word may be expounded, Hab. 2. 4. and is expounded, Heb. 1. 38. withdrawing himſelf through unbelief. But the Targum Jonathan ſaith, not onely they went forward in the dark, but addeth before the dawning of the day. It is more probable, that it was darkneſſe of mind, and not of the night, which is here meant. Verſ. 44. Targum Jonathan.

For this preſumption they were here paid, the Amalekites and Canaanites came againſt them and deſtroyed them to Hormah. This was threatened by Moſes, and now it is verified. Deut. 1. 44. it is ſaid, the Amorites came out and chaſed you like bees in Seir even to Hormah: for this is the generall name of the Inhabitants of that countrey, Gen. 15. Seir was a Province amongſt the Mountains belonging to Eſau, near to Kiriath-jearim in the borders of Azotus and Aſcalon. Hormah was a place within the countrey of the Canaanites, being afterwards thus called from Herem, a curſe, becauſe the Iſraelites promiſed, if God would give this place into their hands, they would utterly deſtroy it and all things therein, as accurſed, which being done, it was called Hormah. Whereas the enemies are ſaid to come down, and yet they went up to the top of the Mountain, it may be conceived, that the enemy was upon an higher mountain. Verſ. 45. Numb. 21. 3.

Thus they, that having ſalvation offered them, and entrance into the heavenly Canaan by Chriſt, but refuſe, yet they preſſe on truſting to their own righteouſneſſe, as the Jews do, ſhall periſh. Note.

CHAP.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1,2. AND the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, When ye are come into the land of your habitation, &c.] The Lord having preſcribed the rights of burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, and meat-offerings before, Levit. 1. 2, 3. but not appointed a meat-offering to a burnt-offering or peace-offering, now ſupplyeth that defect, commanding both, that to every burnt-offering and free-will offering, and offering upon a vow, and at their ſolemn feaſts a meat-offering be added, and ſetting down the quantity when a lamb was brought, or a ram, or a bullock; and beſides the meat-offering he injoyneth a drink-offering. For the meaſures here ſet down, a tenth part of an Ephah, and the third part of an Hin, ſee before Levit. 23. 13. Becauſe meat-offerings are appointed here only with burnt-offerings, &c. Maimony gathereth, that they were not brought with ſin or treſpaſſe-offerings, except the ſin-offering of the Leper, to which one is expreſly appointed, Levit. 14. 10. and the reaſon is, becauſe theſe ſacrifices are not voluntary, but neceſſary, he alſo excepteth the ſacrifices of fowles, meat-offerings were not required to them, but to beaſts only, as is here expreſſed. Since their deſtruction in Hormah, no mention is made yet of their removing; but Comeſtor addeth to the end of chap. 14. and they returned into the wilderneſſe. And it is certain, that they were now in the wilderneſſe, to which God had commanded them to turn: for thither they went from Kadeſh-Barnea, Deut. 2. 1. And in this chap. v. 32. it is ſaid, whileſt they were in the wilderneſſe they found a man gathering ſticks upon the Sabbath day, intimating, that when the things here ſet down were in doing, they were in the wilderneſſe.

Maimony.

It is to be conceived then, that their return back into the Wilderneſſe by the way of the Red ſea being left to be underſtood, or to be ſet down, Numb. 33. where many journeyes are recorded to Ezion-gaber, being caſt up by H. Bunting 148 miles, and 174 from Jeruſalem, and many yeares travail paſſed over in ſilence; now the end of the time approaching, in which they were adjudged to wander in the Wilderneſſe, the generation being grown up, to whom the Lord had promiſed the poſſeſſion of the Land, he cauſed them to be inſtructed before their entring in the rights of his ſervice. And this ſhewed his favour and reconciliation to them after that great provocation of their fathers, in that he was pleaſed to ſpeak by way of inſtruction unto them touching things to be done, when they ſhould come to poſſeſſe the land of Canaan: for in ſaying thus he gave them comfort and confidence to attain the poſſeſſion of it. Thus after the threatening of the Law, ſaith Ainſworth, follow the comforts of the Goſpel: ſo after 24000 ſlain for following Baal-Peor, chap. 25. the people are muſtered to have the land divided amongſt them, chap. 26. and then the Law of ſacrifices at their ſolemn feaſts is again repeated, chap 28. 29. After judgment for humiliation followeth grace and mercy for ſalvation, if humility and penitency be wrought hereby.

Ainſworth.

Note.

The myſtery, Rabanus.

For the myſtery, Rabanus ſaith, in mentioning every kind of beaſt to be offered in ſacrifice, when they ſhould be in the land of Canaan, it was ſhewed, that we, who live in the Church, ſhould in all kinds of good works uſe ſpiritual wiſdome, having the faith of the Trinity typified in the Ephah, which contained three meaſures, and keeping the decalogue, ſet forth in the tenth part, the oyl ſignifieth mercy and charity, and wine ſpiritual grace and communion with the paſſion of Chriſt. He alſo applyeth the ſeveral meaſures diverſly, which I paſſe over, as too curious. The truth is, ſacrifices were Gods food, as they are often called, and therefore as with our meat we uſe bread, and ſome condiment of oyl and ſalt, and wine, and are delighted with ſweet ſmells, ſo upon Gods altar, which was as his table, table, all theſe muſt be put to make a perfect repaſt. Cyrill Alexandrinus by the fine flower underſtandeth life, becauſe bread is the ſtaffe of life; by oyle, a cheerfull countenance; and by wine, gladneſſe of heart; becauſe oyle maketh the face to ſhine, and wine gladdeth the heart; and therefore will have the glorious life to come ſet forth hereby; and by the divers meaſures, one to a lamb, and two to a ramme, &c. The divers degrees of glory, to the divers ſorts of the elect. But becauſe in ſacrificing men gave unto God, not he unto them, it is more apt to apply it to ſuch virtues, as we that believe and ſo offer our ſacrifice Chriſt, muſt be indued withall, viz. Sincerity ſet forth by fine flowre coming out of the heart of the wheat, mercy and charity by the oyle, and inward joy of the holy Ghoſt by wine; to which effect Rickelius. And the divers meaſures according to the ſmalneſſe or greatneſſe of the beaſts offered, the divers abilities of ſeverall offerers, it being required of every one to offer as he is able; the poorer leſſe, the richer more.

Cyril. Alex. 5. 16. de adorat.

Rickelius.

One ordinance ſhall be for you of the congregation, and for the ſtranger that ſojourneth with you. Of the ſtranger ſojourning amongſt them bound by the ſame law; ſee before Levit. 16. 29. There are not divers wayes then, but one and the ſame way for Jewes and Gentiles unto ſalvation, all are freely juſtified by the grace of God, and none by their own works. Verſ. 15.

When ye eat of the bread of the land ye ſhall offer up an heave offering to the Lord, &c.] It was before appointed, Levit. 23. 10. that an heave-offering of a ſheaf of their firſt fruits ſhould be brought before that they ate any of the corn of that yeare: Now it is further provided, that they ſhould offer an heave-offering of the firſt of their dough alſo, a cake thereof to be heaved as the heave-offering of the threſhing floore. In making this ordinance the Lord ſpeaketh diverſly from that Levit 23. 10. and all other like paſſages before going, for he ſaith, verſ. 18. when ye come into the land, but in other places, when thou art come or ſhalt come, intimating an having of the land in poſſeſſion, ſaith Solomon Jarchi, but in thus ſaying, their entring, before the poſſeſſion ſo ſoon as they got any of the bread of the land to eate, which they did at their firſt coming, Joſ. 5. 11. 12. This cake was not to be offered on the altar, but to go to the Prieſts maintenance, as all other heave-offerings, ch. 18. 19. The bringing of it to the Lord was in acknowledgement, that they had all their food from him, and for the ſanctifying of the reſt. Of what quantity this cake muſt be it is not ſaid, but the Rabbins have limited it to be the 24 part of the dough, and if it were the dough of a common baker, the 48 part, becauſe his lump is much more then of a private perſon. Yet R. Solomon expounding theſe words; as ye doe the heave-offering of the threſhing floore, ye ſhall heave it, ſaith it is meant what quantitie every one will voluntarily bring, no certainty being ſet. But the ſimilitude rather ſtandeth in the bringing of this as duly, as the firſt fruits of their corne, called the offering of the threſhing floore. Maimony ſaith, the poore, that paid no firſt fruits of their gleanings, yet were to pay a cake of the firſt dough made of their gleanings. By that which hath been ſaid it appeareth, that this cake was to be brought by every one, and not one by the whole congregation, as one ſheaf was appointed to be brought at Pentecoſt, Levit. 23. 10. Again, whereas that was paid once in the yeare; this every time that they baked, ſaith Lorinus, which might be once or twice a week. And therefore the Jewiſh women have a cuſtome to this day, when they bake, to ſeparate a cake which they call Callah, and becauſe they have no Prieſts to give it to, they caſt it into the oven and burn it, ſaying, bleſſed be thou (O Lord our God) King of the world, who haſt ſanctified us by thy precepts, and haſt commanded us to ſeparate a cake of our dough to thee. And he ſaith, it is a godly exhortation of Oleaſter made to women, as often as they go to baking, to ſeparate the firſt to God and to his Prieſts: but it might as well be commended to offer the ſheafe

Ver. 19.

Verſ. 20.

Sol. Jarch.

Ezech. 44. 30.

Maimony in Biccurim. c. 5. R. Solom.

Maimony in Biccurim.

Lorinus.

ſheafe at Pentecoſt, and firſt fruits ſtill, whereas ſuch old things are now done away in Chriſt, the antitype of all thoſe offerings. Rabanus by the cake of the firſt dough offering underſtandeth the dedicating of the beginning of every good deſire and work unto God, acknowledging it to come from his grace and not from any ability in himſelf, as the firſt fruits of the threſhing of the floore ſerved to ſet forth the preachers conſecrating of his firſt endeavours unto God. R. Menahem underſtandeth by all theſe firſt fruits, Iſrael, the firſt fruits of all the world. And Jer. 2. 3. Iſrael is called the firſt fruits of his increaſe. It ſerved then to put them in mind to dedicate themſelves unto God, as moſt holy. And not onely them, but us Chriſtians, who are the firſt fruits, Jam. 1. 18. And the offering of this cake God commandeth to be made throughout their generations, to ſhew, that they muſt alwayes obſerve this right, as is alſo ſhewed, that they did ſtill after the captivity, Nehem. 10. 37. And for this cauſe Maimony ſaith, they were charged to keep their veſſels clean, and in cleanneſſe to make their dough, that they might ſeparate a pure cake without all uncleanneſſe to the Lord. And the charge of offering this cake is iterated again and again to ſhew the weightineſſe of it.

Rabanus. R. Menahem Rom. 11,16. Verſ. 21. Maimony in Biccurim c. 8.

Verſ. 22. And if ye have erred and not obſerved all theſe commandments, &c. Here it is provided, if the congregation or any particular perſon ſinned ignorantly againſt any of Gods commandments by Moſes, for the expiation thereof by ſacrifice. There was a like law to this made, Levit. 4. but as there is a difference in the termes, ſo there is in the ſacrifice. There it is ſaid, if they had committed any thing againſt any of the lawes of God, here if they have not obſerved all the commandments given by Moſes; and whereas a bullock onely is there appointed for a ſinne-offering, here a bullock is appointed for a burnt-offering, and a kid for a ſinne-offering. The caſes then are not the ſame, but divers, here being ſomething decreed that was not hitherto. And that is, either the ſacrifices before appointed were for ſins of commiſſion, theſe for ſinnes of omiſſion, for which an order had not yet been taken, which is one of the ſolutions mentioned by Ainſworth. Or there it was provided for the expiation of ſinnes againſt the morall law, here of ſinnes againſt the ceremoniall, becauſe it is ſaid, The commandments given by Moſes, from the day that the Lord commanded Moſes, &c. ſo Cajetan. The Hebrewes ſay that this is made againſt idolatry ſingularly, but this is againſt the words, have erred and not obſerved; ſome that the firſt was for all in generall, this for particular cities and townes, and ſome, that this was an increaſe of the ſacrifice before preſcribed onely in a myſtery, to ſhew that under the new Teſtament the ſacrifices of Chriſtian people ſpiritually offered ſhould be of greater quantity, then thoſe under the Law. Calvin ſaith, that two bullocks were appointed before to be brought, one for a burnt-offering, and another for a ſinne-offering, and that the ſcope of this law here is onely to give liberty to change the ſinne-offering bullock into a goat, if they had not two bullocks: but this doth leaſt ſatisfie of any, both becauſe not two, but one bullock onely is appointed for the congregation: and becauſe this ordinance is abſolute. The firſt pleaſeth me beſt, neither is there any ſuch reaſon for that of Cajetan, ſeeing all Lawes were given by Moſes, and for particular cities there is no colour of reaſon: but of the increaſe of ſacrifices under the Goſpell, ſee Ezech. 46. 5. 11. and compare it with this, ch, 15. v. 4. 5, 6.

Verſ. 24. Ainſworth. Cajetan. Calvin.

Verſ. 27. And if any ſoul ſinne through ignorance, he ſhall bring a ſhe-goat, Levit. 4 27. it is a kid of the goats, a female, or v. 31. a ſhe-lamb: this alſo is by the Hebrewes reſtrained to the ſinne of idolatry. But taking it, as before, for a ſinne of omiſſion it will agree very well: for the ſinne of commiſſion a kid or a lamb muſt be taken for the privat perſon, for an omiſſion a goat for any man, there being no difference put here between high prieſt, ruler and common people; for here are two caſes put, but in the law, Levit. 4. there are foure, and 4 diſtinct ſacrifices, whereby we may perceive a reaſon of this law repeated here.

But the ſoul, that doth ought preſumptuouſly ſhall be cut off, &c.] For preſumptuouſly, Hebr. is with an high hand, the Septuagint with an hand of pride Onkelos Cald. with an uncovered head, that is, impudently and not being aſhamed of it. The phraſe is ſometime uſed in a good ſenſe, as Exod. 14.8. God brought them out with an high hand, and Numb. 33. 3. who ſinneth thus; ſee before Levit. 4. 1, 2. in the expoſition of being cut off, ſee Levit. 17. 10. and chap. 20. 18. 7. 20. Verſ. 30.

Becauſe he hath deſpiſed the word of the Lord, &c.] This ſheweth the ſinne committed with an high hand to be done in contempt. From hence it is ſaid, he that deſpiſeth the VVord, ſhall be deſtroyed, that ſoul ſhall be utterly cut off, his iniquitie ſhall be upon him, Cald. Paraphraſ. Jonathan, that is, he ſhall be cut off in the world to come, and ſhall giue account of his iniquitie at the day of judgement. R. Menahem, the iniquitie ſhall cleave unto it, after it is cut off, to be puniſhed for ever, as Eſa. 66.24. their Worm never dieth, that is, ſaith Jonathan, their ſoul ſhall never die. Verſ. 31. Prov. 13.13. R. Menahem

And whileſt the children of Iſrael were in the wilderneſſe, they found a man, that gathered ſticks upon the Sabbath day, &c. It was ſaid before, chap. 14.25. that they ſhould turn to the wilderneſſe, now whileſt they were there, what particular time is uncertain, this happened. Philo ſaith, when ſome were gone forth to a quiet place, that they might there be free to prayer, they found a man binding up wood, at whom they had ſo great indignation, that they would forthwith have killed him, but that they thought it did not belong to private perſons, and that none ought to die, but his cauſe being firſt opened and he condemned, wherefore they brought him to the Prince, &c. The lord being conſulted with about him, appointed him to be ſtoned to death, becauſe his heart was hardned as a ſtone. Some thinke that this man did work upon the Sabbath day in contempt, and ſo is ſet forth as an example of tranſgreſſing with an high hand adjudged to cutting off, v. 30 31. Verſ. 32. Philo. Rupertus.

The Lawgiver therefore, ſaith he, conſidered not ſo much, what was done, as with what minde it was done. Procopius ſaith, that he did it, as not thinking the keeping of the Sabbath ſo neceſſary. Toſtatus, that it is uncertain with what mind he did it, as at what time, and in what place, and yet he alledgeth the Hebrewes affirming, that being admoniſhed of it, he was ſtubborne, and perſiſted in his ſinne impenitently, and that the place was Sinai, and the mans name Salphaad. I hold, that he did it with an high hand, as Calvin ſaith, in contempt of Gods ordinance, and of all Divine Lawes, or elſe God would not have made him ſuch an example. But now by puniſhing him ſo ſeverely he provided for the reverencing of the Law, touching the Sabbath amongſt all the people. Procopius. Toſtatus. Calvin.

And ſheweth it to be the duty of Magiſtrates to puniſh the breach of it, as well as of that againſt murther and theft, &c. There was the ſame proceeding about this malefactour, that was about the blaſphemer, Leviticus 24. 14, and therefore the ſame Expoſition will ſerve to cleare all things here. Although the Lord had already adjudged the contemptuous ſinner to death, yet becauſe ſinning about the Sabbath might not ſeeme to bee of ſo great moment, that a man ſhould bee cut for that: Moſes would for the peoples ſake have a particular direction in this caſe, as being likely to ſtrike more terrour into all men for time to come. Note.

For the Myſterie, Cyrill Alexandrinus, ſaith, that wood being the fuell of the fire, did ſet forth ſinne the fuell of hell fire; the Sabbath a time of reſt, the reſt of the ſoule after Baptiſme into Chriſt, Wherefore as this man gathering wood upon the Sabbath, was puniſhed to the Cyril. Alexandr. c. 30. de ador.

uttermoſt, ſo hereby was ſhewed, that he who burdeneth his ſoule with ſinne again after grace received, ſhall be moſt extreamly puniſhed in hell.

Rabanus. Rabanus underſtandeth ſuch, as after the grace of Chriſt received, turn to the doing of carnall works again, to gather wood, hay or ſtubble; which ſhall burn in hell fire for ever.

Verſ. 38. Speake to the children of Iſrael, that they make them fringes on the borders of their Garments, and that they put upon the fringe a ribband of blew, &c.] Becauſe the Sabbath had been broken againſt the commandement of God, he now giveth a ſigne, whereby they might be put in minde alwayes to keepe his Commandements, Deuteronomy 22. 12. this Law is thus ſet downe, Thou ſhalt make thee fringes upon the foure quarters of thy veſture. And beſides this means of remembering the Commandement, Deuteronomy 6. 8. It is ſaid, Thou ſhalt binde them for a ſigne upon thine hand, and they ſhall be as frontlets between thine eyes; whereupon the Jewes tooke up the uſe of Phylacteries alſo; that is, little pieces of Parchment, wherein the Commandements were written, binding them as coronets upon their foreheads, but through a miſ-underſtanding, ſaith Jerome; but Calvin, according to the meaning of the charge given: the ſame is alſo commanded, Exodus, 13. 16, yet both it and the fringe preſcribed here was turned by them into ſuperſtition; ſee the notes on Exodus 16. 9. And Rab. Menahem ſaith, who ſo diligently keepeth this commandement of fringes, is made worthy, and ſhall ſee the face of the Majeſty of God: and Baalhatturim, when a man is cloathed with the fringe and goeth out therewith, he is ſafe, and God rejoyceth, and the deſtroying angell departeth, and he ſhall bee delivered from all hurt, and from all deſtruction. Compare herewith the ſuperſtition of the Papiſts, in wearing crucifixes and croſſing themſelves thus thinking that they are bleſſed from all evill, as likewiſe by their holy water. But the Jewes in doting ſo upon the virtue in their fringes were ſecure in reſpect of keeping the Commandements, to remember which, that they might doe them, they were inſtituted; and thus Gods Ordinances were perverted by their owne inventions.

Hieron. in Matth. 23.

R. Menahem

Baalhatturim.

Note.

The word צִיצִת a fringe here put in the ſingular number: but Deuteronomy 22. 12. in the plurall, is put for a locke of haire of the head, Ezekiel 8. 3. and from hence it is applyed to a fringe, becauſe the threeds thereof hang down, as haires; for the colour none is ſpoken of, and therefore they were commonly white, but if the garment were greene or red, or any other colour, except blew, the fringe might be of the ſame colour with the garment or of any other; except blacke. How many fringes they ſhould uſe, it is not ſaid; but becauſe Deuteronomy 22. 12. it is upon the foure quarters of the veſture; it is gathered, that there muſt be foure and no more, although the garment had ſix skirts or corners. And becauſe it is ſaid, Speake to the children of Iſrael, that they make them, it is gathered, that others living amongſt them were not bound by this Law, neither might a ſtranger make them for their vſe, but they themſelves muſt make them.

Moreover, they held, that women and ſervants and little children, were not bound by this Law; becauſe it is, the ſonnes of Iſrael, but ſo ſoon as a childe is able to cloath himſelfe he is bound by it, that he may be trained up to the Commandements, and if women and ſervants will weare the fringe, they may. For the blew ribband, the word ſignifieth alſo a threed, Judg. 16. 9. or a lace, Exodus, 39. 31. it hath the name from weaving or twiſting; the colour muſt be blew like the skie, died with the bloud of a blew fiſh called Calazon, that it may alwayes hold the colour, and never change; the matter, of which it was made, was wooll thus died, and with ſome Vermillion mixed together. For the length of the fringe, they would have it foure inches at the leaſt beneath the thrums of the garment, that were of three inches. And when they put on their garments with these fringes, they blessed God the Lord, the King of the World, that sanctified them by his Commandements, and commanded them to aray themselves with fringes.

thrums

Thus Maimony, who also saith, that at this day, they had white fringes onely, but wanted the blue, because they knew not how to make the blue, called תכלת and it was now impossible to make it. From hence, as much may bee gathered for the understandiug of this Law; so the curiositie and superstition of the Jewes, in the use of the fringe appeareth: for the lengthening of which they are taxed, Matthew 23. Some will have the fringes to bee blue, and the ribband of silke. Maimony in Tsizith.

For the mystery, it served, saith Rabanus, to teach us to keepe the least of Gods Commandements in an heavenly respect, set forth by the Skie coloured ribband: for none of them are so small, but it is of great availe to keep them; and hee that despiseth the least, shall perish; so likewise others: But Ainsworth most fully, the fringe being made of many threeds set forth the Commandements of God, that were many, which must continually be thought upon, and worne as a garment to cloath them: and the blue Skie coloured ribband, served to put them in minde to bee heavenly minded, as Philippians, 3. 20. Coloss. 3. 1. The mystery.

And that yee seeke not after your own heart and eyes, after which yee use to goe a whoring: Hebr. after which yee goe a Whoring, or are a whoring. Here is noted the evill, from which wee shall be kept, by thinking continually upon Gods Commandements, wee shall not seeke after our own heart or eyes: for these saith Solom. Jarchi, are the spies of the body, and broakers to bring it into transgression, the eye seeth, and then the heart lusteth, and the body acteth the sinne. If any man bee drawn after his own heart, saith Maimony, hee will bee found a waster of the world, for the slenderneese or shortneese of his understanding, for sometime he will goe after idolatry; sometime he will question, whether there bee any Creatour or no; sometime the truth of Propheses, and the Law, whether it bee of God or no, &c. Therefore, in saying, That yee seeke not after your own heart: It is, as if he had said, let none of you bee drawn after his owne slender understanding, so as to imagine that his cogitation can attaine to the truth, seeke not after your owne heart, that is, heresie; nor after your owne eyes, that is, whordome, so he. Vers. 39. Sol. Jarchi. Maimony of idolatry, c. 2.

But the heart and eyes draw not onely to heresie, but to all manner of sinne, as is noted, 1 John 2. 15. 16. and yet these bee the most noble parts, the one inward, the other outward: Wherefore wee may see how corrupt wee are by nature, that wee may aspire after regeneration by the Spirit: after which yee goe a Whoring; that is, not onely being led to fornication, but to all other sinnes, which are as spirituall whordoms against God. Ioh. 3 5.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ. 1. NOw Korah the ſon of Izhar, the ſon of Kohath, the ſon of Levi, and Dathan and Abiram the ſons of Eliab, and On the ſon Peleth, the ſons of Reuben took men, &c. Some think, that theſe things did not fall out juſt in this order, becauſe the example of Miriam ſtricken with leproſie, chap. 12. and of other rebels ſo lately puniſhed, chap. 14. and chap. 15. could not but have deterred them, as Auguſtine, who ſaith, that things are not ſet down in that order wherein they fell out, but according to the diſtribution of books by recapitulation. Hugo Cardinalis and Toſtatus hold, that this was done before they went from Mount Sinai, when the Levites were taken for the firſt born, and Aaron was conſtituted high Prieſt: for Korah being the eldeſt ſon of Izhar, the ſecond ſon of Kohath, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, and after him Lyranus, took it heinouſly, that Elizaphan the ſon of Uzziel Kohaths fourth ſon ſhould be preferred before him, and ſet over the Kohathites as the chief. Becauſe the chief dignity was before in the firſt born, and the Levites were now taken in their ſtead, amongſt whom he was a firſt born, his ambitious mind could not endure thus to be neglected, and therefore he made this ſtirre then, ſo likewiſe Aben Ezra. And Rupertus yieldeth a probable reaſon of tranſpoſing this hiſtory to this place, viz. further to confirm the Law againſt preſumptuous ſinning made, chap. 15. for one example being there brought of him, that gathered ſticks upon the Sabbath day, here is added another of a manifeſt rebellion. But all theſe reaſons notwithſtanding, I think rather, that this hiſtory is placed in due order: for no former examples of judgments would work ſo upon the hard-hearted Jews, as to make them take heed of provoking the Lord again, and that which followeth, chap. 17. and chap. 18. doth ſo agree with this, that it muſt needs follow next after, and therefore if this hiſtory, then all related there muſt be granted to have been ſet out of order alſo; yet I deny not, but the preferring of Elizaphan might be the occaſion, that broiling in Korahs breaſt, till now, and now at length breaking out. Comeſtor is wide here, who ſaith, that Korah aſpired to the high Prieſthood, as being the eldeſt ſon of Izhar, who was brother to Amram, and his elder, the firſt born of Kohath, for the contrary appeareth, Exod. 6. 18, 21. as hath been already noted. With Korah are joyned Dathan and Abiram, and On, ſons of Reuben. It is moſt likely, that Korah the chief conſpiratour ſtirred theſe up, as coming of Reuben, the eldeſt ſon of Jacob, and therefore ſuch, as to whom the right of principality belonged, and not to Moſes that came of Levi: yet Reuben indeed had loſt his birth-right, 1 Chron. 5. 1. But Korah would help them to the principality in civil matters, and they muſt help him to the high Prieſthood, as may be gathered verſ. 10. whereas theſe words, took men, are put laſt, Hebr. it is firſt ויקח, and he took; but the word, men, is not added: wherefore Cazkuni rendreth it, and Corah took Dathan and Abiram, &c. the word and, before Dathan, is redundant: or it may be read, both Dathan; the Cald. Korah ſeparated himſelf. It was Korah then, that took theſe to him in conſpiring and many more, as the head of this rebellion, wherefore they are called Korah his company, Numb. 27. 3. and Jud. Epiſt. verſ. 11. the gainſaying of Korah is ſpoken of. The Reubenites camped next unto the Kohathites on the South ſide of the Tabernacle, ſo that being neareſt neighbours, they might eaſily conſult and combine together in this matter.

Auguſtinus. Hugo Card. Toſtatus. Exod. 6. 18, 21. Sol. Jarchi. Lyranus. Numb. 3. 30. Aben Ezra. Rupertus. Scholaſt. hiſt. Cazkuni.

Verſ. 2. And they roſe up before Moſes with certain of the children of Iſrael two hundred and fifty Princes, &c. This ſheweth how great and dangerous the conſpiracy was, it is added, famous in the congregation, Hebr. called to the congregation, that is, who as Senatours uſed to be called to counſel about State-

State-matters, ſuch was their wiſdome and greatneſſe; the vulgar Latine, therefore hath it, which in time of councel were called by name. Theſe men thus in a mutiny came againſt Moſes and Aaron, challenging them for taking too much upon them, and lifting up themſelves againſt the congregation, which was all holy; whereby they meant, that any of them might as well come near and offer their own ſacrifices, as may be gathered from Moſes his ſpeech, verſ. 5. Verſ. 3.

And when Moſes heard it, he fell upon his face] See the like, chap. 14. 5. and 20. 6. But by the words following, verſ. 5. it ſeemeth that this caſting down of himſelf was in prayer to God, that by him he might be directed in this ſo dangerous a tumult: wherefore Cazkuni thus paraphraſeth upon it, he was abaſhed, and caſt down his face to the ground in prayer, and there it was ſaid unto him what he ſhould anſwer. He feared, ſaith Ferus, for the heinouſneſſe of this rebellion, the people being drawn to it, (as by their pleaſing words they were in danger to be: for they flattered with them, ſaying, all the congregation is holy, that the Lord would now deſtroy them all both great and ſmall, and therefore out of his great charity he thus humbled himſelf, to avert the judgment: but for this he and Aaron humbled themſelves, verſ. 22. Verſ. 4. Cazkuni. Ferus.

And he ſpake to Korah and to all his company, ſaying. Even to morrow the Lord will ſhew who are his, and who is holy, and will cauſe him to come near unto him. Hebr. the morning, and the Lord will ſhew, that is, the morning ſhall come, and then he will ſhew by his Judgments; and thus the Cald. in the morning the Lord will make known: but the Sept. according to the ſignification of the word בקר here uſed, he hath inquired, or looked out, the Lord hath looked out and known thoſe that are his; from which the Apoſtle ſeemeth to have taken that ſaying, the Lord knoweth them that are his. But here is doubtleſſe a time appointed, viz. the next morning, when they ſhould find by woful experience, what it was thus to rebel againſt thoſe, whom God had ſet over them. So Sodom was deſtroyed in the morning, Gen. 19. 23. Zeph. 3. 5. Verſ. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 10.

In ſaying, he will make known, who is holy, he meaneth, whom he hath ſanctified to theſe high offices: whereas in the end of the verſe the ſame is repeated again, even thoſe, whom he hath choſen, will he bring near to himſelf; the Sept. hath it, thoſe, whom he hath not choſen to himſelf, he hath not brought near to himſelf. In deferring their puniſhment, till the morning following, the great patience and love of Moſes appeareth, for he thought haply by that time that they might repent and be of another mind, when they had further conſidered their great errour. And herein, as Ferus hath it, was notably figured out, the manifeſting of all at the morning of the reſurrection, who is holy, and who not; when as many, who with Corah think themſelves now to be holy, ſhall appear to be wicked, and periſh everlaſtingly, although they have their cenſers, fire and incenſe in their hands, that is, make a profeſſion of the true religion. Ferus. Note.

This do, take you cenſers, Korah and all his company, and put fire therein, and incenſe, and the man, whom the Lord doth chooſe, ſhall be holy, &c. They had boaſted, that they were all holy, as if any of them might indifferently miniſter before God in the Prieſts office, as well as Aaron and his ſons, wherefore Moſes here propoundeth a means to try this. It was the Prieſts office to offer incenſe, for tryal then, he would have them offer it firſt, and after that, Aaron ſhould take his cenſer and offer, as he did, verſ. 47. and before that, verſ. 18. when the glory of God appearing, and threatening Korah and his men, ſhewed, how far the Lord was from chooſing them; but by calling Moſes and Aaron away, whileſt they were deſtroyed, that he had choſen them. Verſ. 6, 7. Levit. 16. 12, 13.

God had made Nadab and Abihu examples before of offering incenſe otherwiſe, then as he had commanded; and if they being Prieſts were deſtroyed Levit. 10.

ſtroyed for miſ-offering it, then much more might Korah and his men expect the like, being no Prieſts.

Note. Revel. 1. 6. And herein our prerogative appeareth, that are truly faithful, we are by Chriſt made Kings and Prieſts unto God, and ſo may pleaſingly offer the incenſe of our prayers and praiſes, but the wicked and unbelievers have Prov. 15. 8. no right thus to do, and therefore their ſacrifices are ſaid to be abomination to the Lord, as Korahs was, and ſuch ſhall be their end, viz. deſtruction: When this means of tryal was by Moſes propounded, Joſephus ſaith, that the people ceaſed to tumultuate, approving well this courſe. But for the number of cenſers, how they ſhould upon the ſudden get ſo many, if this be doubted, it may eaſily be reſolved, that moſt probably they had before prepared them, that they might be ready furniſht to enter upon the Prieſts office, to which they all aſpired.

Ioſeph. Antiq. c. 1, 3.

Verſ. 8,9. And Moſes ſaid to Korah, hear, I pray you, ye ſons of Levi, Seemeth it to be a ſmall thing unto you, that God hath ſeparated you, &c. Moſes upbraideth Korah and his company here by their ingratitude for the dignity already conferred upon them, in that for being well ſatisfied in their being ſeparated, and peculiarly taken nearer to the Lord in the place of the firſt born, they as ſleighting all this, behaved themſelves as if they had received no favour, unleſſe they might have the Prieſthood alſo. And thus he ſaith, to move them, if it might be, to repentance, ſeeing they of all other tribes were moſt bound to God, ſeeing they were preferred in the office, to which they were taken, before them all. Pride and ambition ſo wrought with them, as is noted, verſ. 7. ye take too much upon you, ye ſons of Levi, that nothing which they had would ſatisfie them, but they muſt yet be greater: Whereby we may ſee, how incident pride is even to the godly, as to the Levites, who had done well before in the matter of the golden calf; and to the Apoſtles, who ſtrove which of them ſhould be greateſt.

Note.

Ver. 12,13. And Moſes ſent to call Dathan and Abiram, who ſaid, We will not come up, is it a ſmall thing, that thou haſt brought us, &c. The place, to which Moſes ſent for theſe to come up, was the publick place of judgment, for to this men are ſaid to go up, Deut. 25. 7. Ruth 4. 1. Ezra 10. 7, 8. But they moſt contemptuouſly refuſe to come, charging Moſes, that he had brought them from a land flowing with milk and honey, that is, Egypt, under a pretence of giving them poſſeſſions, which he had not performed; and therefore whatſoever his pretence was, his intent was only to make himſelf Prince over them, and he did but blind-fold all their eyes, or went about to put out their eyes, which he ſhould not be able to do, for they ſaw into his fraud well enough. They ſay twice, we will not come up, whereupon Sol. Jarchi, and Ferus note, that they read their own deſtiny, for they came not up, this was not appointed for them, but to go down alive into the pit.

Verſ. 14.

Verſ. 15. And Moſes was very wroth, and ſaid unto the Lord, Reſpect not thou their offering, I have not taken one aſſe from them, &c.] Moſes that was ſo meek, yet when God in him was blaſphemed, could not but break out into fury, for he had done nothing but by Gods direction; and therefore this wrath was not ſinful, but holy, very zeal for God.

Reſpect not their offering] The word offering, Hebr. is mincah, properly a meat-offering, ſee Levit. 2. but the intended offering of incenſe the next day might be meant, if haply then they ſhould come to offer, as the reſt; thus alſo Sol. Jarchi, or if they ſhould ſeek by any other ſacrifice to expiate this their offence. Toſtatus mentioneth an expoſition of Aben Ezra, that he would not reſpect their offerings which they had in times paſt made, wherein they the Reubenites being rich in cattel, had exceeded, but he rejecteth it, becauſe ſacrifices paſt avail only for ſins paſt, and not for ſins to come. It was an high degree of ſinning, that theſe men were come to that ſo great a Prophet of God curſed their very offerings from finding acceptance before God; thus making their caſe moſt deſperate, and their ſin unpardonable. But the ſcandal was great, and therefore they muſt be puniſhed for example: or his ſpeech may be taken as a propheſie, foretelling their diſtaſte and ruine.

Sol. Jarchi. Toſtatus.

acceptance

I have not taken one aſſe] That is, any the vileſt thing of them; which he ſpeaketh, to ſhew, that there was no cauſe in him through any tyranny exerciſed over them, preſſing them with burthens, or otherwiſe, why they ſhould grow to this rebellion, ſee the like, 1 Sam. 12. 3. For aſſe, the Sept. have the deſire of any of them, as if it were חמוד, which ſignifieth deſire, when as it is indeed חמור, an aſſe; but this is thought to have been changed purpoſely, the words being ſo near, leſt Ptolome, for whom they tranſlated, ſhould have ſaid, although he took not an aſſe, yet he might have taken ſomething elſe, and for the like reaſon they changed alſo in 12 places more.

And Moſes ſaid to Korah, Be thou and all thy company before the Lord to morrow, thou and they and Aaron] When Dathan and Abiram refuſed to come up to be ſpoken to, Moſes turneth his ſpeech again to Korah and his company; the place to which he willeth them to come, is to the Tabernacle, there to take fire from the altar, and ſo to proceed to the altar of incenſe to offer it, if God would; and he ſaith, that Aaron ſhould do the like, with whom they contended about the high Prieſthood. It is, ſaith Ferus, as if he had ſaid, ſeeing I cannot diſſwade you from your enterprize, attempt to do the Prieſts office, if ye will, and then ye ſhall ſee how it ſhall ſucceed unto you, and whether God liketh this your ambitious ſeeking of the Prieſthood or no. Neither did Moſes herein tempt God by putting it upon a ſign, to be miraculouſly ſhewed, for he was doubtleſſe put on by the motion of Gods Spirit to propound this mean of tryal.

Verſ. 16.

Ferus.

Calvin.

Korah and his company, as was propounded, were ready in the morning, and offered their incenſe, as well as Aaron, and when they had done, ſtood with Moſes and Aaron in the door of the Tabernable to expect the event. But Joſephus ſaith, that Korah and his company having taken fire, as Aaron did, went and burnt incenſe in their own tabernacles, but Aaron in the ſanctuary, which done, a fire came from the Lord and conſumed Korah and his men, ſo that nothing of their carcaſſes remained, but Aaron olone remained unhurt of the fire. But here it ſeemeth, that they offered all in one place, and that ſome ſpace of time was after, before their deſtruction. The vulgar Latine hath nothing elſe, verſ. 18. but which when they had done, ſtantibus Moſe & Aarone, Moſes and Aaron ſtanding ſtill, whereupon it might be thought, that Aaron offered not then, but they only, and he afterwards, when he ran and ſtood with his cenſer between the living and the dead, whereby the plague was ſtaid, verſ. 47, 48. as Toſtatus ſaith, that ſome have gathered, but rejecteth it. Korah and his men headily, according to the offer take their cenſers, having againſt the time ſtirred up the whole congregation to be preſent on their ſide againſt Moſes and Aaron, nothing doubting, but that they ſhould be as well accepted of in their offering incenſe, as Aaron, for they ſaw nothing, ſeeing they were able to offer incenſe as well as he, to deter them from it, but the difference was in the calling, which Aaron had, whereas they had none.

Verſ. 18.

Joſeph. lib. 4. antiqu. c. 3.

And in like manner, although a lay man may think, that he can do miniſterial offices, as well as the Miniſter, yet he muſt not preſume, ſith he hath no calling, being warned by the example of theſe men, and of Uzziah, and of Heliodorus, Jaſon and Menelaus, &c.

Note.

2 Chron. 26.
2 Machab. 3.

And Korah gathered all the congregation againſt them to the doore of the Tabernacle, and the glory of the Lord appeared to all the congregation.] The moveable people were eaſily drawn to take part with him againſt Moſes, and that not ſome few, but all the congregation, being ready through his inſtigation ſtigation to kill Moſes and Aaron, which moſt probably was ſoon after the incenſe offered, but no ſigne ſhewed. Then God opportunely ſhewed his terrifying preſence, as he had done, chap. 14. 10. and thus repreſſed the tumult.

Verſ. 19.

Verſ.20.21. And the Lord ſaid to Moſes and Aaron, ſeparate your ſelves from this congregation, that I may conſume them in a moment.] Much after this manner it is ſpoken chap.14. 11. and Exod. 33. 5. but as Lot muſt firſt be ſeparated from the Sodomites, ſo here Moſes and Aaron, that they might not periſh with the congregation of rebells; God will not deſtroy the juſt with the unjuſt, but knoweth how to preſerve them. 2 Pet.2. 9. then vengeance cometh upon the other. And here again the charitie of Moſes together with Aaron appeared, they fall upon their faces and pray for them, O God, the

Verſ. 22. God of the ſpirits of all fleſh, that is, who haſt power at thy pleaſure to take the ſpirit and life from man, who haſt the power of life and death,

Ferus. ſaith Ferus, for all our ſpirits are in thy hands. Targ. Jonathan, which Targ. Ion. putteſt the ſpirit of the ſoul into the bodies of all the ſonnes of men. Targ.

Hieroſol. which ruleſt over the ſouls of all fleſh: Cazkuni, which knoweſt

Cazkuni. the ſpirit of every one. But it is an humble acknowledgement, that he had all power, neither could any ſtay him, if he would be extreme. But how is it that he pleadeth, one man had ſinned; ſeeing with him were 250. and all the congregation drawn by them? He meaneth, that he was the chief, and and firſt began this mutiny and ſo was in moſt fault, he ſtirred up the other

Lorinus. Princes and the people did but follow them, as their lords. Lorinus ſaith, one man is ſpoken of, becauſe theſe 250. were but one in compariſon of Calvin. all the congregation being 600000. And Calvin upon the former words, they call God, the God of the ſpirits of all fleſh, that ſith he put their ſpirits into them all and formed them, he would have more pitty upon the workmanſhip of his own hands, alledging the like, Eſa. 64.8.

Verſ.23.24. And the Lord ſpake to Moſes ſaying, ſpeake to the congregation, ſaying, get get ye up from about the Tabernacle of Korah, &c. The Lord is entreated by the prayer of his ſervants, and ſpareth the multitude, and appointeth them therefore to goe from about the tents of theſe that were deſtined to de-

Verſ. 27. ſtruction, as is ſhewed that he meant by Tabernacle, v.26. For Moſes went to Dathan and Abiram, that would not come out to their tents, v. 25. and there gave the people warning that were about them; which being done, came and ſtood in the doores of their tents, as it were deriding Moſes, and Verſ. 29.30 his threatnings. But Moſes being much moved at this their contempt

31 threatneth deſtruction to them opening her mouth and ſwallowing them up alive, whereby it might appear both that God had ſent Moſes, and that they had provoked the Lord, by their oppoſing of his and his brothers dignity. When Dathan and Abiram ſo obſtinately refuſed to come up, Moſes like a good Prince yieldath to goe to them, and after him the Elders of Iſrael, verſ. 25. that is, thoſe 70 upon whom God put his Spirit to govern together with Moſes, chap. 11. 16. the Septuagint have it, all the Elders; Joſephus calleth them inſigniores primates in populo, becauſe

Ioſephus. they that rebelled, were ſaid before to be Princes. But theſe, it ſeemeth either were never drawn by them, or elſe ſoon repented and joyned with Moſes again, ſeeking with him by this their going to reduce theſe rebels to better obedience, or becauſe they ſaw them ſet deſperately upon ſinning, to daunt them the more with their preſence, that when by the admonition of ſo many grave Senatours coming together they ſhould not be moned, their obſtinacy might be made the more manifeſt to all men, and conſequently the juſtice of the proceeding againſt them, verſ. 26. Go from the Tents of theſe wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, leſt yee be conſumed. Although Dathan and Abiram onely be named, yet On alſo is without doubt to be underſtood, and Korah, touching whoſe tent together with theirs expreſſe mention was made, v.24.

But

But here Moſes together with the elders being come down from the tabernacle to the Tents of theſe Reubenites, they only are mentioned, becauſe enough had been ſpoken to Korah before, who it is likely continued with his 250 men about the Tabernacle offering incenſe. But Toſtatus thinketh, that Korah this day came not up from his tent, but contained himſelf there, whileſt the 250 offered, and were conſumed with fire, becauſe verſ. 32. all the men that pertained to Korah, and all that belonged to them were ſwallowed up of the earth, and the 250 that offered incenſe were conſumed with the fire, verſ. 35. But it is expreſly ſaid, verſ. 18. that every one of them, that is, Korah and his 250 men, and Korah by name, ver. 17. as well as Aaron took his cenſer, and ſtood with him in the door of the Tabernacle of the congregation: wherefore without doubt he periſhed by fire, as well as the 250, and becauſe he was the head conſpiratour, a further judgment was ſhewed upon his tent, and all that belonged to him: as for the 250 drawn by him, the Lord puniſhed them, becauſe their ſin was leſſer, no further but in their own perſons: whereas it may ſeem, that theſe 250 only periſhed by fire, becauſe ſo many onely are ſpoken of, verſ. 35. it may well be thought, that Korah was included within that number, he and the men with him were 250. and if there were 250 beſides him; yet for the rotundity of the number they might as well altogether be called 250, as the 72 elders, chap. 11. are called 70. Touch nothing of theirs; Not only their tents, but all things belonging to them were to be deſtroyed, as poluted by their foul rebellion, therefore not to be touched for fear of being involved in the ſame judgment, if any preſumed ſo to do. And to this the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude, when he ſaith, ſeparate your ſelves, and touch no unclean thing. Dathan and Abiram, when others fled from them for fear, were ſo far from being afraid, that by coming out and ſtanding at their tent doores with their wives and children they preſſed Moſes on, if he could, to do ſomething againſt them, verſ. 27. thus Joſephus. And although nothing be here commemorated, that they ſaid now again, yet it is not to be doubted, as Joſephus alſo hath it, but that they upbraided Moſes again by his ambition, and abuſing of the people; whereupon he ſaith, hereby ye ſhall know, that the Lord hath ſent me, &c. ver. 28, 29, 30. To this of their going down alive into the pit, it is alluded Pſal. 55. 16. If God create a new thing; thus alſo the evil of judgment is ſpoken of, Eſay 45. 7. Eſay 48. 6, 7. Hebr. it is here, if God create a creation, this judgment is ſo ſpoken of for the miraculouſneſſe of it, the like never being ſeen before, and the cleaving of the earth being as a thing created, made of nothing by Gods almighty power.

Toſtatus.

2 Cor. 6. 17.

And the earth opened her mouth and ſwallowed them up, &c.] Chap. 26. 10. it is ſaid, the earth opened her mouth and ſwallowed them up together with Korah, which may ſeem to be againſt that, which hath been already ſaid of Korah his periſhing by fire, and divers from the words here uſed, and all the men that pertained to Korah, but it is not ſaid, and Korah himſelf alſo. To this it may be anſwered, that by Korah in that place is not meant his perſon, but his tent haply called by his name, as many great mens houſes are: for he was with his cenſer offering incenſe & ſo periſht by fire as hath bin ſhewed; and for it, Comeſtor is plain, who ſaith alſo, that Moſes having threatned deſtruction to Dathan, &c. prayed, and then the earth trembled and gaped. Whereas it is ſaid, all the men that pertained to Korah, his ſons are to be excepted, for they are ſaid not to have dyed then, chap. 26. 11. How they were preſerved, is not ſhewed; but ſome ſay, that they being in the ſame tents were miraculouſly taken up and held in the ayr, till the earth cloſed again, and that in the ſight of all the people, becauſe they conſented not to their father; and in the remembrance hereof they made Pſal. 46. or if they conſented at the firſt, as ſome think, they ſoon repented: and as for their not ſeparating from the tent, they had no warning.

Verſ. 32.

Scholaſt. hiſt.

Lyranus.

But

But it is more probable rather, that being Levites they were not in Korah his private tent or houſe, but about the tabernacle attending upon their office at this time. Calvin. And theſe, ſaith Calvin, though ſonnes of a wicked father, were afterwards famous amongſt the people of Iſrael, ſome, that came of them, being inſpired to indite ſome of the Pſalms, as their Titles do imply, which was by the Spirit of propheſie, with which ſcarce any of the Prieſts have been at any time endued: of Korah his ſons, ſee more Numb. 26. 11.

Now as Dathan and Abiram and their families were ſwallowed up, ſo that there was nothing of them ſeen any more; in like manner Korah with his 250 were quite conſumed by fire, nothing of them remaining. And herein the marvailous power of God appeared, in that Aaron ſtanding with them to offer incenſe, remained unhurt in the midſt of thoſe devouring flames, that ate them up.

The myſtery. Rabanus. Myſtically by theſe Rebels Rabanus underſtandeth Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, that will not be ſubject to the authority ſet up by the Lord, but erect formes of government and of worſhipping God of their own, perſwading the people, that in their ſo doing God is well pleaſed. But as Korah and his company, they ſhall all periſh horribly. Some underſtand the Scribes and Phariſees, that ſought to draw the people to be againſt Chriſt, and vilified and traduced him all that they could, proudly ſeeking their own dignity, for they eſcaped the damnation to the pit of hell.

Ver. 36, 37. And the Lord ſpake to Moſes, ſaying, ſpeak to Eleazar, the ſonne of Aaron, that he take the Cenſers out of the fire, for they are hallowed.

Qu. Cazkuni. Why muſt Eleazar, the ſonne of Aaron, do this, and not Aaron? Cazkuni anſwereth, leſt Aaron ſhould be defiled by the dead, amongſt whom theſe cenſers lay. But there was nothing of the dead carkaſſes left of thoſe, that were deſtroyed by fire, but all conſumed, as ſaith Joſephus.

Ioſeph. Antiq. lib. 4. c. 3. Auguſt. qu. 30. in Num. That of Auguſtine then is better, Aaron was now high Prieſt, and Eleazar to ſucceed him, wherefore God would hereby commend the order of generation, that ought to be in the high Prieſts ſucceſſion. He muſt take the Cenſers out of the burning; the Septuagint, from amongſt thoſe that were burnt: or it might be ſaid from the burning, becauſe the Cenſers had ſtill burning coales in them, which he is bidden to ſcatter yonder. Vatablus. For, ſcatter thou the fire yonder, Vatablus readeth it, let him ſcatter the fire yonder, as the word will alſo bear, and as it muſt needs be meant, becauſe not Moſes, but Eleazar was to ſhake out the fire. In ſaying, ſcatter it yonder, he meaneth far from the Altar out of the Sanctuary; hereby being ſhewed the rejection of their ſervice, as prophane, as Ainſworth. Ainſworth ſaith, is done, Revelations 8. 5. fire is taken from the Altar and caſt to the earth, to ſhew, that the antichriſtian ſervice was rejected.

for they are hallowed] The reaſon why they were ſaid to be hallowed, is, verſ. 38. becauſe they offered them before the Lord] As hallowed therefore they muſt be made into plates to cover the Altar. They were made, ſaith Solom. Jarchi, for veſſels of miniſtry, and therefore might not be put to common uſe, but an holy. In ſpeaking of thoſe, that were deſtroyed, he calleth them thoſe ſinners againſt their own ſoules, becauſe they had ſinned to their own deſtruction. For the Altar to which it is commanded, that theſe plates ſhould be fixed, and the perſon that ſhould do it; It was not the golden altar of incenſe, but the brazen, from whence the fire was taken to burn incenſe by theſe rebels, the ſigne of their rebellion and deſtruction muſt be ſet up in the place where they ſinned, and where the people might ſee it, as they could not do the golden altar of incenſe.

Verſ. 38. Sol. Jarchi.

The

The perſon, that ſhould beat them out into plates, was Eleazar, and he, ſaith Toſtatus, and none other muſt do it, becauſe others might not touch things already hallowed. Toſtatus.

But I rather ſubſcribe to Vatablus and others, holding, that Eleazar had the care of doing this committed to him, but he imployed workmen that had skill about it, as at any other time when any inſtruments about the Tabernacle were decayed: for Prieſts had no skill to do ſuch things. And therefore in Hebr. it is plurally ועשו, and they ſhall make, verſ. 39. But upon what part of the Altar they were fixed, is a queſtion, becauſe that Altar was all covered with braſſe already. Joſephus ſpeaketh not of their being made into broad plates, but ſaith they were placed upon this Altar for a ſign to the children of Iſrael. But they muſt not onely appear here, but be made into broad plates, and faſtened to the Altar, Calvin ſaith, as a covering to the Altar; and this is moſt probable, becauſe being two hundred and fifty, and beaten out broad, they could not do leſſe then cover the whole Altar that was covered with braſſe before; and the ſame is expreſly taught, verſ. 39. In appointing them to be thus uſed, the Lord took order, that the deſtruction of theſe men ſhould be remembred in all generations to come, that none might ever preſume to do the like again. Vatablus. Joſephus. Calvin.

For the myſtery; by Korah and his company, Hereticks being ſet forth, as hath been already ſaid, by their cenſers appointed to be fixed to the Altar, their writings, ſaith Rabanus, muſt needs be ſet forth, wherein they wrote truly, and according to the Word of God: for as the fire put preſumptuouſly by them in the Cenſers was firſt ſhaken out, and then they were put to uſe about the Altar; ſo thoſe things that they have written corruptly being rejected, the other may be made uſe of for the edification of the Church. Or by the fixing of them to the Altar, was ſet forth the bringing of corrupt doctrine to the fountain of truth, hereby making it the more to appear, as when the braſſe of eloquution only ſet forth by the brazen cenſers, is brought to the gold or ſilver of true doctrine. The Myſtery. Rabanus.

Some by theſe cenſers of the wicked underſtand more rightly the flattering ſpeeches and bribes, and feined works of unworthy Miniſters, whereby they ſeek dignities in the Church; the beating of them out broad, the manifeſting of their unworthineſſe to all men; and the fixing of them to the Altar, the ſetting forth of their examples in divine writings for the terrour of others, that they be not likewiſe ambitious.

But on the morrow all the children of Iſrael murmured againſt Moſes and Aaron, ſaying, ye have killed the people of the Lord.] An imputation laid moſt maliciouſly upon them, when as they had prayed for the people, and the judgment was apparently from God. This ſheweth the great corruption of mans heart not to be ſubdued by any means, till utter deſtruction cometh, and the continual troubles of righteous rulers, one ſtill coming after another. Verſ. 41. Note.

To appeaſe this dangerous mutiny, the glory of the Lord appeareth again, and Moſes and Aaron are bidden to come from amongſt them, that they might all be ſuddenly conſumed, but they fall upon their faces again in prayer. Oh their great piety, that were ſo ready to forget injuries, worthy the imitation of all other Princes. Ver. 42, 43, 44, 45.

When God made no anſwer upon their praying as at other times, ſaith Ferus, Moſes conceived that wrath was gone out, and therefore he biddeth Aaron ſpeedily to take a cenſer and fire from the Altar, and incenſe, and to go into the camp to make an atonement for the people, which being done, and Aaron ſtanding with his cenſer between the living and the dead, the plague was ſtayed. Ferus. Verſ. 46, 47, 48.

Cazkuni. Taking cenſers by Korah and his company brought death, ſaith Cazkuni, but Aarons taking of a cenſer, who was called to be high Prieſt, they were delivered from death.

Origen. The plague, ſaith Origen, began in one part of the camp, deſtroying ſtill forth on, wherefore Aaron went to that place, which was between thoſe, that were already ſmitten with death, and the living, to keep the deſtroying angel from coming any further. And there extraordinarily he offered incenſe, which ordinarily ought not to be done, but in the Tabernacle, that the deſtroying angel ſeeing it might be abaſhed, and ceaſe from ſtriking thoſe, for whom an atonement was now made; and thus the plague was ſtayed.

The Myſtery. And by his ſtanding between the living and the dead, the ſtanding of our high Prieſt, Chriſt, at the laſt day, between the goates as dead, and the ſheep as living, who ſhall then be ſeparated the one from the other, was figured out. For wicked men are called dead, Let the dead bury their dead. Now as Aaron coming hither, and ſtanding between theſe and them with his cenſer, the deſtroying angel could not proceed to ſmite any further: ſo Chriſt interpoſing the cenſer and incenſe of his body pierced for our ſins, the devil hath no further power to ſtrike one of his living, but he that had the power of death is overcome for ever. Heb. 2. 15. Wherefore Chriſt is ſet forth by an Angel with a cenſer offering ſweet odours with the prayers of the Saints, alluding to his type Aaron, that had done thus. Revel. 8. 3.

Here God began to put in execution, what he had threatened before; and now again, ſhewing himſelf after ſo many provocations even inexorable: for by his through deſtroying of all where he began, it ſeemeth, that had not Aaron come and ſtood in the way, they ſhould ſuddenly have all periſhed. And here it is to be noted, that the atonement made by Aaron was for the living, not for the dead, as for whom the time of making atonement was paſt. For hereupon Maimony ſaith, there is no atonement for the dead. And the Cald. Paraphraſt, he that keepeth not the commandement here hath no means after his death to be reckoned with the juſt in the garden of Eden. And therefore there was no ſacrifice for the dead, but only for the living; by which it appeareth to be an errour of ſuperſtition to pray and offer for the dead, as if they were in purgatory fire, from which by ſuch means they may be the ſooner delivered.

Maimony in peſu'ei hamukedaſhim. Cald. Par. in Eccl. 1. 15. Note.

Verſ. 49. The number periſhing now in this ſhort time was 14700. whereby the greatneſſe and ſwiftneſſe of the Judgment appeared; and ſo many would God have to fall, before Aarons coming, that the power of his interceſſion might be the more eminent, and ſo of Chriſts for us, that we might believe, that there is nothing, which may not be by his mediation obtained of the Father.

Chap. XVII.

And the Lord ſpake to Moſes, ſaying, ſpeak to the children of Iſrael, and take of every one of them a rod, according to the houſe of their fathers, of all their Princes 12. rods, &c.] In Hebr. this chapter beginneth not here, but at verſ. 36. of the former chapter, and this is the 16 of chapter 17. But this partition of ours ſeemeth better, becauſe the argument hitherto handled pertained all to one thing. The Lord, ſeeing how prone the people were to rebell, being offended at Aarons high dignity, to prevent all murmuring hereat for time to come, commandeth now rods or ſtaves to be taken, for the Princes ſtaves are ſpoken of, Numb. 21. 18. and it is likely, that they were ſtaves, which they carried in their hands, as ſignes of their authority. Theſe ſtaves muſt be taken, and the name of each Prince written upon his ſtaffe, and ſo they muſt be laid before the Lord in the Tabernacle before the Teſtimony, where he ſaith he will meet with them, and a rod for Levi amongſt the reſt with Aarons name upon it. And the Lord ſaith, he will cauſe the rod of him whom he chooſeth, to bloſſome, &c. of the place where theſe rods were to be laid, deſcribed by Gods meeting them there, ſee before Exod. 25. 22. and 30. 36. Accordingly the rods were written upon and laid, and the next morning Aarons rod was not onely budded and bloſſomed, but alſo had almonds upon it, more was performed, then was promiſed.

Verſ. 1.
V. 2.
Verſ. 4.
Verſ. 5
Verſ. 6.7,8

The rods uſed here, ſaith Cyrill Alexand. were of an almond tree, for of ſuch or of the walnut tree the Hebrewes uſed to make them ſtaves, and therefore the fruit brought forth was proper. And the rod of an almond tree, which in Hebrew ſignifieth to make haſt, was ſhewed to Jeremiah, when the Lord gave a ſigne of haſtening his word to perform it.

Cyril. Alexandr c. 10. de ador.
Jer. 1, 11. 12.

But why did the Lord rather by this ſigne, then any other confirme Aarons high dignitie.

Queſt.

He had hitherto ſhewed ſignes with terrour to the deſtruction of the rebellious, now that he might with juſtice mixe mercy, he was pleaſed to ſhew a ſigne without terrour; and becauſe he would not onely ſet forth Aaron and his ſonnes hereby, as by his appointment thus dignified; but Chriſt our high Prieſt to come, he choſe a ſign fit myſtically to expreſſe this alſo. Firſt then it was hereby ſhewed, that Aaron and his buds and bloſſoms coming from him, that is, his ſonnes ſhould hold, and grow up from time to time to the high Prieſts office, and none of any other tribe. Secondly, the rod that ſhould come afterwards out of the ſtemme of Jeſſe, as Chriſt is called, Eſa. 11. 1. was thus figured out. For as this rod was dry, and could not without miracle bud and bloſſome, ſo was the ſtemme of Jeſſe when Chriſt came, the royall Kings that had ſprung there-from, were all dead and gone, and the name onely of the houſe of David remained amongſt a poore of-ſpring, but in him it flouriſhed admirably, as Aarons rod here. And the rod of the ſtemme of Jeſſe, Eſa. 11. 1. is oppoſed to the rod of Aſſyria, an enemy, Eſa. 10. 24. of which they ſhould be afraid no more, as all fear of oppoſition amongſt rebels, was by the flouriſhing of this rod of Aaron beaten down. As Gods power appeared here by a dry ſticks budding and fructifying, ſo Ezech. 17. 24. A like compariſon is uſed to ſhew the ſame, and by this phraſe Iſraels increaſing is ſet forth, Eſa. 27. 6. Of Chriſt typified by this rod ſpeaketh Rupertus, who ſaith, that he is oppoſed to the Devill ſet forth under the Aſſyrian, Eſa. 10. 24. and breaketh his power. And Origen, who ſaith, that as this rod, ſo Chriſt yieldeth fruit to feed all true believers; fruit indeed, to which it is not come without going through bitterneſſe of affliction, as he kernel of the almond is not had without firſt piercing the coat, that is bitter, and then breaking the hard ſhell. And Rabanus, who ſaith, all others after Anſw.

Rupertus.
Origen. hom. 9.
Rabanus.

death lie ſtill in the grave, but Chriſt alone ſprung up the third day again as this rod did upon the third day, the other rods remaining all ſtill without any appearance of life. And Auguſt. who more curiouſly will have by the almonds bitter coat, the humane nature of Chriſt underſtood, which indured the bitterneſſe of many paſſions; by the kernell, his divine, and by the ſhell of wood the croſſe; by the bloudſhed, whereupon things in heaven and in earth were united.

Auguſt. ſer. 3. de temp.

Coloſ. 1.20.

But as Rabanus, Rupertus, and Auguſtine, and Ferus apply theſe things unto Chriſt, ſo ſome of them again make not him the rod, but the fruit; and his mother the Virgin the rod typified by this rod, becauſe ſhe being a Virgin, and one for whom it was in the courſe of nature impoſſible, being ſuch alwayes to have a ſonne: as a dry and dead rod cannot poſſibly in nature bud and bear fruit, yet by the power of the moſt high overſhadowing her, ſhe brought forth a Sonne, the Lord Jeſus. And to make the figure the more remarkably to belong to this bleſſed Virgin, there is a tradition, which Lorinus the Ieſuite recordeth here, that when Mary amongſt other Virgins was required to be married, ſhe alledged, that ſhe had made a vow to live alwayes a Virgin, but there was anſwer from the Oracle, that one of the houſe of David, whoſe rod being laid upon the Altar ſhould bud, ſhould have her to wife, and ſo Joſephs rod being laid with the rods of 12 more of the kindred budded, and he eſpouſed her. But who perceiveth not this to be a deviſed fable, like other legends? Chriſt doubtleſſe was the rod here pointed at, as Eſa. 11.1. the bloſſoms and fruit ſpringing from him were the faithfull, who as ſpirituall fruit came of him in abundance contrary to all expectation to thoſe that looked upon him, being ſo dry and deſpiſed with the eye of humane reaſon. And as the rebells here were confounded by this miracle, ſo were the wicked Jewes by Chriſt ſo flouriſhing, their City and Temple being ſo demoliſhed, that they could never there oppoſe his high dignity any more. Divers make divers other alluſions alſo here, as to the Prieſt of God under the New Teſtament: he muſt not be preferred to this dignitie, that is as a dry ſtick, but bud by faith, hope and charity, bloſſome by a good name and ſound doctrine, and bear fruit by righteouſneſſe, &c. So Ferus, who alſo ſaith, it may be drawn to the Word of God which alone hath life in it, but all divers teaching death: here are the buds of comfortable words, the flowers of famous examples, aud the fruit of everlaſting life, to which it bringeth in the end. He maketh it alſo a type of regeneration, when as before we were dead, now we bud by confeſſion, bloſſome by the ſweetneſſe of manners, and fructifie by doing good unto others in juſtice and charity. All theſe allegories are good, and may have uſe as compariſons to illuſtrate: but I hold that Chriſt was the onely one here pointed at, who being the rod of the ſtemme of Jeſſe budded in the wonders about him in his infancy and childhood, bloſſomed by the fame, which he got afterwards by his miracles and preaching, and fructified by the converting of many to his faith, eſpecially after his death and paſſion.

Lorinus.

Ferus.

Verſ. 10. And the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, bring Aarons rod again before the teſtimony to be kept for a token againſt the rebels, and thou ſhalt quite take away their murmurings from me that they die not.] The rod muſt be kept before the ark of the teſtimony, not in it: for in it was nothing, but the two Tables, 1 King. 8.9. and the golden pot with manna, and Aarons budded rod, ſaith Maimony were before it in the moſt holy place: Yet Heb. 9.3.4. it is ſpoken, as if the pot and the rod were in it alſo; ſee my Expoſitions. As by the pot of manna Chriſt was ſet forth, as our food, ſo hereby as our high Prieſt. For theſe words, againſt the rebells, Hebr. is againſt the ſons of rebellion, whereby is noted, that they were ſo addicted to rebellion, as if rebellion had bin their mother; the like phraſe is common, the ſons of wickedneſs, Pſ. 8.23. ſons of Belial, Deut. 13.13. children of diſobedience, Eph. 2.2.

Maimony in Bethhabechitah c. 4,

Verſ. 12.

And the children of Iſrael ſpake to Moſes, ſaying, behold We die, we periſh, we all periſh, &c.] The people being terrified by Gods former judgements, and now ſeeing a new miracle to confirm the Prieſthood, and the ſervice of the Tabernacle to Aaron and the Tribe of Levi being threatned with death, if they preſumed to doe or mutter againſt Gods Ordinance any more, cry out unto Moſes here, as men aſtoniſhed, as if their caſe for this were deſperate, mixing together lamentation and complaint, as if God were too ſevere towards them. For their firſt words ſhew lamentation as before, chap. 14. 39. It is ſaid, when the ſearchers were ſmitten with death, and they threatned with periſhing in the wilderneſſe, that they mourned greatly. Thus Calvin, who ſaith, in the end of the verſe they murmure, as if no further hope remained unto them. The Targum Jonathan paraphraſeth upon it, as if it were all a complaint of moſt hard dealing with them. Behold ſome of us are conſumed with flaming fire, and ſome ſwallowed up of the earth, and we thinke that as they, ſo we all ſhall periſh. But Ferus and others expound all as a lamentation, and agnition of their miſerable condition, to move the Lord to compaſſion to them, who meant no more to rebell, but to apply their minds to keep his Lawes better from hence forward, and then the laſt words, ſhall we be conſumed with dying? are expounded as a deprecation, as if they had ſaid, ſhall be conſumed; God forbid, although our ſinnes deſerve it: So Ainſworth applying many like places here for the illuſtrating of this, as that Pſ.89. 6. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? and Lament.5. 22. wilt thou utterly reiect us? and Eſa.64. 22.&c. And this expoſition of their lying down before God, as it were, in lamentation and mourning, ſeeking to move him to pittie, by complaining of their miſery, ſeemeth to be favoured by the ordinances following, chap. 18. wherein a courſe is taken to keep them from coming nigh to their deſtruction.

Calvin.

Targum Ionathan.

Ferus.

Ainſworth.

Chap. XVIII.

Verſ.1.

And the Lord ſaid unto Aaron, thou and thy ſonnes, and thy fathers houſe ſhal bear the iniquitie of the ſanctuary, &c.] This is ſpoken immediately upon the peoples expreſſing of their great fear of death for approching to the ſanctuary, as if the Lord had ſaid, I will free you from this fear for time to come, for Aaron, and the tribe of Levi, if any come too near hereafter through their negligence ſhall ſmart for it. The Greek Catena bringeth in Theodoret, as making this coherence, when God by miracle had ſhewed that he had choſen Aaron to the Prieſts office, the people as being convinced ſay, what ſhould we doe contending any more about the Prieſthood, and coming to offer in the ſanctuary, we ſee that we ſhall all periſh, if we do ſo, we do therefore yield herein, let Aaron and his ſonnes have it, this difference is now at an end. Now when things were come to this paſſe, Aaron and his ſonnes, and the Levites are thus ſpoken unto touching the executing of their office, and the danger for failing herein Exod. 28. 38. It is ſaid, that Aaron ſhould bear the iniquitie of the holy things, which the children of Iſrael ſhould hallow: but that was in making an atonement for the ſinnes and imperfections occurring in their bringing of them. This is a divers conſtitution from that, for here it is ſaid, that if any ſinne were committed about the ſanctuary or the Prieſts office through their negligence, it ſhould be imputed to them.

Graca Catena

Thus Sol. Jarchi expoundeth it, upon you I will bring the puniſhments of the ſtrangers, that ſhall ſinne concerning the ſanctified things, that are delivered unto you. And unto the Prieſts the Levites were joyned to keep the charge of the tabernacle, of which ſee before, Numb. 3. 7. but they muſt not come nigh the altar or holy veſſels upon pain of death; that is, not doe any office of the Prieſt, by offering upon the altar, or touching the holy veſſels before they were covered, chap. 4. 15. The charge of the tabernacle, which the Levites ſhould keep, was to watch about it day and night, and to keep ſtrangers from coming nigh, verſ. 4. that is, any that were not of the tribe of Levi. They muſt ſaith Maimony, watch about the ſanctuary at all times for the honour of it, the Levites without, and the and the Prieſts within; the Levites without in 21 companies at ſo many ſeverall places, and the Prieſts within in 3 companies, and over them all there was one provoſt, who went about with a burning torch carried before him all night from ward to ward; and he was called the man of the mountain of the houſe of God, and when he came, they ſaluted him by this name; Thou man of the mountain of the houſe, peace be unto thee, and if any ſaid not ſo, it was preſumed that he was aſleep, and then the Provoſt beat him with his ſtaffe, and might burn his garment with his torch, &c. The Prieſts, that watched out of their Prieſtly garments, and laid them at their heads, and wore their own garments, but they lay not upon beds that night, but upon the ground. Now the Levites were to watch at the Prieſts appointment, to whom the Lord ſaith he hath given them, v. 6. ſee Numb. 3. 12.

Sol. Jarchi.

Verſ. 3.

Verſ. 4. Maimony.

Verſ. 6.

Verſ. 8. And the Lord ſaid unto Aaron, unto thee have I given the charge of the heave-offerings of all the hallowed things, &c. Becauſe the office of Aaron and his ſons was ſpoken of before, and pains in waiting upon it were preſcribed, now the Lord ſheweth, how they ſhould be maintained in this office. All the heave-offerings are given unto them, and it is called the charge of the heave-offerings, becauſe they muſt keep them clean, and eat them in cleanneſſe, and not ſuffer any unclean perſons to eat thereof. Theſe offerings are ſaid to be given unto them by reaſon of the anointing, that is, the anointing of the Prieſtly office upon him. More particularly every meat-offering reſerved from the fire, and ſinne-offerings, and treſpaſſe-offering were the Prieſts; but the males onely being clean muſt eat theſe, of which ſee before, Levit. 6. 36. 17. &c. and Levit. 7. 6. 14. Onley here it is ſaid, In the moſt holy place thou ſhalt eat it; but Levit. 16. 16. in the Court of the tabernacle, but the ſame is meant here for in the moſt holy place; if there be underſtood the innermoſt part of the ſanctuary, there was no eating or coming for any but the high Prieſt, Levit. 16. the court then is here called the moſt holy in reſpect of the camp. And theſe offerings are called moſt holy, others light holy, as hath been ſhewed upon Levit. 1. But becauſe the meat-offering is not numbred amongſt the moſt holy; Cazkuni inquireth here, what meat-offering is meant in the particular enumeration here, and anſwereth the peace-offering of the congregation of the two loaves and lambs, the remainder whereof was for the Prieſts onely, Levit. 23. 20. as alſo the ſhew-bread, Levit. 24. 9.

Ver. 9.

Ver. 11, 13, 14, 15, 16. The heave-offerings, and wave-offerings were given unto them alſo, of which their whole family might eate, and the beſt of the wine and oyle, and wheate, and the firſt ripe of every thing, every thing devoted alſo was given to them, and all the firſt borne. In naming of the heave-offering, he calleth it the heave-offering of the gift; and this ſaith Sol. Jarchi, was the heave-offering of the ſacrifice of confeſſion, and of the peace-offerings, and of the Nazarites ramme: of the wave-offering it is ſpoken again, v. 18. The firſt ripe and the beſt of every thing were their firſt fruits, of which ſee before, Exod. 22. 29. and of the firſt-born, Exod. 13. and of things devoted, Levit. 27. 28. of clean beaſts the firſt born muſt be offered in the bloud and fat, but the fleſh is the Prieſts, as the wave breaſt and ſhoulder, Levit. 7. 34. Maimony ſpeaking of the firſt fruits, and the heave-offering ſaith, that this was another part of their increaſe ſeparated after the firſt fruits paid, and called the great heave-offering.

Levit. 23. 17, 18, 19. &c.

Cazkuni.

Sol. Jarchi.

Verſ. 13. 17. The firſt fruits were brought to the ſanctuary, but this was not brought, but but only ſeparated, and the Prieſts were to look to the bringing of it in, but if they did not, the owner muſt not ſuffer it to be ſtroyed, but cauſe it to be brought to the city, and the Prieſts were to pay for the bringing, if he did not thus, but left it to the beaſts, he prophaned the name of God. To me it ſeemeth, that there were none other heave-offerings of firſt fruits but one, for both this is called an heave-offering and the tythes alſo, verſ. 24. Indeed, part of the firſt fruits were brought to the ſanctuary moſt probably at one time in a basket, Deut. 26. and the reſt at another. The covenant, whereby God giveth theſe things to Aaron, he calleth a covenant of ſalt, verſ. 19. that is, which ſhould never decay, as that preſerveth the meat ſeaſoned therewith from corruption.

Maimony in Frumoth.

And the Lord ſpake unto Aaron, ſaying, thou ſhalt have no inheritance in their land, &c. Behold I have given the tenth of Iſrael to the children of Levi for an Inheritance, &c. This conſtitution touching tythes was made before, Lev. 27. 30. as alſo touching all other things before ſpoken of, that went to the Prieſts. But the ſame is here again repeated, becauſe howſoever ſome of them were, yet many of them were not before aſſigned to the Prieſts, but only ſaid to be the Lords, and that they ſhould give them to the Lord. Moreover God had reſpect herein to the people, if any of them ſhould ſuſpect, that Aaron and his houſe being ſo highly honoured would alſo get the beſt poſſeſſions in Canaan; for hereby they might be ſatisfied for that, neither Aaron, nor his tribe of Levi muſt have any inheritance or part in that land: only, as is afterwards appointed, they muſt have ſome cities out of each tribe to dwell, and to keep their cattel in. But for having any inheritance, when it was divided by lot, they were quite ſhut out, and becauſe it is ſaid, they ſhould neither have inheritance nor part, Maimony noteth, that they were to have no part of the ſpoyles of the enemy in Canaan, but if any other lands were by their Kings afterwards ſubduded, they might have either inheritance or ſpoyles, as other Iſraelites had, ſo Num. 31. there was an heave-offering given to Eleazar the Prieſt out of the ſpoyles of the Midianites. I am thy part and thine Inheritance, that is, my inheritance, the part which I have reſerved to my ſelf is thine, I have appointed thee to take and enjoy it, and to live upon it, thee and the whole tribe of Levi, as is expreſſed verſ. 24. & Deut. 18. 1, 2. Thus God exempted the Prieſts and Levites from worldly cares and wayes after the manner of other men, that they might care only for God and his ſervice. So he, whoſe portion God is, ſaith Ambroſe, ought not to care for any thing but God, leſt he be hindered by the office of ſome other neceſſity, becauſe what goeth to other offices, is taken from the ſervice of religion, and from this our duty. The Levites, ſaith Maimony, are ſeparated from the waies of the world, they wage not war like other Iſraelites, and why are they thus ſeparated? to ſerve the Lord, and to miniſter to him, and to teach his right wayes and his juſt judgments unto many, Deut. 33. 10. and the bleſſed God himſelf is their reward. Thus other holy ſervants of God have alſo comforted themſelves, as David, Pſal. 73. 26. thou art my part for ever. Pſal. 142. 6. thou art my part in the land of the living: whereupon Ambroſe; I ſeek no tythes, fruits or gifts, God is a gift unto me, he is a tribute, he abundantly ſufficeth me for all theſe things; the heavenly poſſeſſion, which ſuch ſhall have, that take God for their part, is more then all earthly poſſeſſions, for it is to be more rich by faith and devotion, then they, that do moſt inlarge their worldly poſſeſſions. And here is an encouragement to them that make God their part, as Levi, they ſhall be largely provided for, and not be left deſtitute of neceſſaries here.

Verſ. 20, 21.

Numb. 35.

Maimony treatiſe of releaſe, c. 13.

Ambroſ. de fuga ſæculi. Cui deus portio eſt, non debet quicquam curare, niſi dum, ne alterius impediatur neceſſitatis munere, quia quod ad alia officia confertur, hoc religionis cultui, & huic noſtro officio decerpitur.

Neither muſt the children of Iſrael come nigh the tabernacle any more, leſt they bear ſin and dye.] I paſſe over the law of tythes paying here, becauſe it hath been ſet forth before, Levit. 27. 30. But whereas it is plain by this law, that the Levites were to take the tythes of the people, and the Prieſts

Verſ. 22.

Prieſts the tenth of their tithe, which the Levites were to bring to them, as an heave-offering, verſ. 26. and moſt Expoſitors determine ſo of it, Lorinus. Lorinus the Jeſuite following Hugo, contendeth, that by the Levites were meant both Levites and inferiour prieſts, who together received all the tythes, and paid the tenth of them to the high prieſt, citing for this, Heb. 7.5. where the ſons of Levi, that were in the Prieſthood are ſaid to have been commanded to take tythes of their brethren, the people. But this is a weak ground againſt ſo pregnant a commandement: for although the Prieſts took not the tythes immediately of the people, yet mediately they did, when the Levites paid the tenth to them. For although Aaron be nominated, verſ. 26. yet it is not probable, that God would not have him ſo to ſuperabound, as to receive all the tenth of the tythes to himſelf, but to divide it amongſt his brethren the inferior prieſts. Now for the charge given that the people ſhould not come nigh the tabernacle, it was not meant any otherwiſe, but that they ſhould not come nigh to miniſter, as Korah had preſumed to do: for they were to come nigh even to the door of the tabernacle to bring their offerings, Levit. 1.3.

Verſ. 23. But the Levites ſhall do the ſervice of the tabernacle, and they ſhall bear their iniquity, &c.] Before it was ſaid, that the people ſhould not come nigh, leſt they bear ſin; but here the Levites come nigh and bear their ſin, that is, as Sol. Jarchi hath it, if through their negligence a ſtranger appeareth, the Levites ſhall be puniſhed for it.

Verſ. 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32. And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, &c. From hence to the end of the Chapter a tenth is appointed to be given out of all the tythes received by the Levites to Aaron, and this muſt be the beſt of them, and it is called an heave-offering, and this, he ſaith, ſhould be reckoned to them, as it were the corn of the threſhing floor and the fulneſſe of the winepreſſe, and this being ſeparated, they might eat the tythes remaining in any place, as the increaſe of the threſhing floor and of the winepreſſe, and be out of danger of polluting the holy things of the Lord, and ſo of dying therefore. Hitherto in this Chapter the Lord hath ſpoken to Aaron, but now a tenth peculiarly belonging to him from the Levites being to be ſpoken of, this is given in charge to Moſes to declare. The tythe, out of which the heave-offering is to be given to the high Prieſt, hath been ſet forth before, Lev. 27. 30. to be the firſt tythe, in which the Hebrews held there was no holineſſe at all, and therefore might be eaten of the clean and unclean in any place, which was intimated in ſaying, that it ſhould be reckoned as the corn of the threſhing floor, &c. that is, as corn and wine is common to be uſed by any in any place, ſo is this tythe. By fulneſſe, ſaith Jarchi, are meant the ripe fruits, which are full. To Aaron, that is, to him and his ſons ſucceeding him; of this, ſee Nehem. 10. 38. which being compared with Hebr.7.5. before ſpoken of, maketh the ſenſe plain.

out of all your gifts ye ſhall offer every heave-offering. In that not only the tenth of the tythe is preſcribed to be given for an heave-offering, but alſo an heave-offering of all their gifts, Cazkuni ſaith, that hereby was meant even out of the fruit of their ground, which was the ſuburbs of the Levites cities, they ſhould give unto the Prieſts an heave-offering. Cazkuni. And Maimony ſaith, not only the Levites, but even the Prieſts alſo were to ſeparate a firſt tythe, that they might not eat any thing untithed. Others, by all their gifts, underſtand all other things brought unto them in regard of their miniſtry, wherein they ſerved, the tenth whereof was to be given to the Prieſts. But what other gifts the Levites had I know not, beſides tythes, and therefore it muſt be meant either of them, as before, the word being varied, or of the increaſe of the lands given them, as Cazkuni hath it. But it is to be noted, that the tenth is expreſly commanded to be of the beſt; in Hebr. the fat, whereby the beſt is meant. Maimony. Oleaſter. Note.

neither

Neither shall ye pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, &c.] This is a generall charge both to Levites and Priests, and not onely were they polluted, if the tithes were eaten by the Levites, before the separating of the heave-offering, or they paid it not of the best, but also either if the holy things were eaten out of the time appointed, Levit. 19. 7, 8. or if they that ate them were unclean, Levit. 22. 2. 9. or if any ate of them that ought not, Levit. 22. 10. 15, 16. all polluting of the holy things of the Lord, either in Priests or Levites, or others must be taken heed of upon pain of death.

Chap. XIX.

Speake to the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which never came yoake.] Vers. 2. As in the former chapter, a charge was given to the Priests and Levites about keeping others from coming nigh the tabernacle, either to sacrifice, or in their uncleanesse, or by coming further then was allowed them, so in this a means of purifying from uncleanesse is ordained, an holy water is appointed to be made by the Priest, wherewith the unclean were to be sprinkled, that they might come nigh, when they brought any offering without polluting the sanctuary, and thus incurring the danger of Gods judgements. Some as Tostatus saith, allow of no such coherence betwixt these chapters, but will have this ordinance to have been made before their coming to mount Sinai, but he worthily rejecteth this, because all ceremonials were instituted after morals; Josephus saith it was immediately after Miriams death and a moneths mourning for her, but this followed after. It is best therefore to follow the order here set down, and so it doth very well agree, as hath been shewed: as for the bullock to be taken, the Rabbins say, it must be three or foure yeares old at the least, and perfectly red without any black or white haires, in any part of the body; for if it had but two hairs of another colour, it was unlawfull, and if a yoake had ever been but put upon it, although it had never wrought, this made it unlawfull also. For the time of taking this heifer, Rupertus and Hugo think that it was done the 10. day of the seventh moneth, and so was all one with the bullock spoken of Levit. 16. but the differences are so great, that this cannot possibly be so, the time then was no set time, but it is likely when the ashes hereof were once spent, another was taken, and then they proceeded likewise. This heifer must be brought by the children of Israel, that is, for the whole congregation, because they had all alike interest in her. The red cow brought by the congregation must be delivered to Eleazar the Priest, and he must bring her out of the camp, and there one must slay her before his face. Vers. 3. The Septuagint, for that he may bring her forth, render it, that they may bring her, that is, some by his appointment, respecting rather sense, then the very word; for this being done by his appointment, he may be said to have done it, neither indeed could Eleazar the Priest alone well do it, and it would have been indecent for him to be so toyled: for a bullock of that age is strong and not to be haled any whither without much labour, and that of more men then one. As another then must kill her before his face and not he, so it is most probable, that others appointed by him, he being with them to see it done, must bring her out. The place, to which afterwards the red cow was brought to be slain when they dwelt in the land of Canaan, was out of the gates of Jerusalem, and more particularly mount Olivet, where she was also burnt. And for the conveying of her thither a causey was made, saith Maimony, from the mountain of the Lords house to mount Olivet; and when the Priest with his assistants brought the heifer forth by this way, the Elders went before them unto mount Olivet, and then they followed with her.

Tostatus.

Joseph. antiqu. c. 4. lib. 4.

Maimony in Pharah.

Rupertus. Hugo.

Maimony in Pharah ch. 3.

But

Queſt. But why is this office aſſigned to Eleazar Aarons ſonne, and not to Aaron?

Anſw. Some ſay, that Aaron being the high Prieſt might not be polluted; ſome becauſe offices of more excellency onely were aſſigned to him, but becauſe Eleazar the eldeſt ſonne of Aaron muſt doe it and not any other, it may be thought, as of the cenſers of the rebels before, chap. 16. being appointed to be taken by Eleazar, and made into plates, that this was done to confirm his ſucceſſion in the high Prieſts office, Aaron being now aged and not having long to live. The beaſt being ſlain, Eleazer muſt take of the bloud

Verſ. 4. thereof with his finger, and ſprinkle it towards the Tabernacle ſeven times. Maimony ſaith, that a pile of wood of Cedar, Oake, Firre and Figtree, was firſt made, and the bullock being laid thereon, Eleazar killed her with his right hand, and with his left having received the bloud, receiving it therefore as it ran out in his hands and not in any veſſell, he ſprinkled it with a finger of his right hand, and betwixt ſprinkling and ſprinkling, he every time wiped his finger, and ſo tooke bloud upon it again, and finally wiped upon the body of the bullock, and then having put fire under, he ſtood over againſt it expecting till it burnt; and when the bullocks belly began to burſt, and he haſtned and caſt cedar and hyſſop bound up in ſcarlet into her belly, as it followeth, verſ. 6. The ſprinkling of the bloud was towards the doore of the tabernacle, right over againſt which the heifer was burned and killed; of the 7 times doing this, ſee Levit. 4.6. But for Eleazars killing and burning of her, it ſeemeth rather to have been done by another, becauſe it is ſaid to have been before his face; yea it is plain v. 8. that another burnt her; and thus Targum Jonathan, another Prieſt ſhall burn. Touching the Prieſt, Targum Jonathan. who had the ſuperintendency in this buſineſſe, he muſt waſh his cloaths, and bath himſelf in water after that he hath done, and be unclean until the even. Seven dayes before that this was done, that he might come moſt perfectly clean to the doing of his office about it, they ſeparated him, ſaith Maimo-

Verſ. 7. ny into a chamber of the Temple called the ſtone chamber, becauſe all the veſſels therein were of ſtone, and in a ſtone veſſell he miniſtred all thoſe dayes, becauſe that it is not capable of any uncleanneſſe, neither might any other Prieſt in this time touch him for fear of defiling him, and at his houſe, and to his wife he might not come for the like reaſon. And every of theſe 7 dayes one ſprinkled him with the water of purification which had bin made before, leſt unwittingly he ſhould have bin defiled. Notwithſtanding all which care of cleanneſſe, when he had done his office about the heifer, both his cloathes were unclean, and every cloath or veſſell which he touched, was unclean. And every ſinne-offering, that was burned without the camp polluted thoſe that were buſied about it likewiſe, till it was Verſ. 8. turned into aſhes. Moreover as the Prieſt, that killed the heifer, ſo he that burnt her muſt waſh his cloaths and fleſh, and be unclean till the Even. There were foure wayes of purifying from legall uncleanneſs. 1. By waſhing both cloaths and fleſh. 2. The cloths onely, as is appointed to him, that carried out any dead thing, Levit. 11. 40. 3. The fleſh onely, as was appointed to the high Prieſt, Levit. 16.4, 4. By ſprinkling onely with this water of purification, for a tent or for veſſels defiled by the dead, as followeth here verſ. 17. but for any perſon thus defiled, he muſt be twice ſprinkled upon the third and the ſeventh day, and then waſh his cloaths and fleſh, verſ. 10. Touching this ordinance of waſhing cloathes and the fleſh, and yet being unclean to the Even, ſee before Levit. 15. 10. and in di-

Verſ. 9. vers other places before.

And a man that is clean ſhall gather the aſhes and lay them up in a clean place without the camp, and it ſhall be kept for the congregation of the children of Iſrael for a water of ſeparation, it is a purification for ſin.] They, ſaith Maimony, did firſt beat all with ſtaves, and if any bones remained, pownd them ſmall, and ſifted them with ſieves, and the aſhes being thus gotten out were divided

divided into three parts, one part whereof was laid up in the Cheil, that is, the fort or frontier, the other in mount Olivet, and the third was divided amongſt all the Wards of the Levites, and with this the Prieſts ſanctified, with that in mount olivet the Iſraelites and that in the Cheil was kept as a reſervation: of that which was for the Iſraelites any of the common people had ſome, that came with a clean veſſel for it to ſprinkle and to ſanctifie withal. And he ſaith, Nine heifers have been burned according to this ordinance untill the deſolation of the ſecond temple, the firſt by Moſes, the ſecond by Ezra, and ſeven more ſince that time, and the tenth ſhall be done by the King Chriſt, who ſhall be revealed with ſpeed. Amen, ſo be the good will of God. Whereby we may ſee, that the Jewes had ſome underſtanding, that Chriſt was by this heifer figured out, and ſhould put an end to this and to all other legal ceremonies; but yet the vale is before their eyes, that they cannot ſee him to be the Chriſt, in whom this was fulfilled. Comeſtor and ſome others think, that a bullock was uſed thus once every year, becauſe otherwiſe the aſhes could not ſuffice for ſo great a multitude, but the more common and probable opinion is, that another was not taken, till the former was ſpent, and becauſe a little aſhes would ſerve to mingle with much water, the aſhes of one burning, although for the uſe of very many might ſerve a long time. For the diviſion of theſe aſhes, and reſerving ſome only for a monument, there is no ground of it here, but it was an invention of their own. for a Water of ſeparation] That is, a water to ſprinkle upon ſuch as were ſeparated for uncleanneſſe, that they might be clean and come again to the ſanctuary; which water was made of theſe aſhes, and running water put together, verſ. 17. The Sept. and Cald. render it, a Water of ſprinkling, and to what end this water was ſprinkled the next words expreſſe, a purification for ſin; they were ſprinkled, that they might be cleanſed from the uncleanneſſe of ſin, and unto ſeparation and ſin here ſpoken of it is alluded, Zach. 13. 1. a fountain ſhall be opened to the houſe of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem for ſeparation and for ſin.

Maimony in pharah, ch. 3.

As he that killed and that burned the heifer, ſo he that gathered the aſhes was unclean and muſt waſh, but his clothes only, not clothes and fleſh, as the other two, whereby is intimated, that he contracted leſſe uncleanneſſe then they. But it may ſeem ſtrange, that every one, that did any thing about this heifer, although clean before, ſhould by the touching hereof be made unclean, when as the aſhes of it purified and cleanſed thoſe that were ſprinkled therewith. Auguſtine making a quære hereabout anſwereth, that this ſerved only myſtically to ſet forth, that they who ſeemed clean to themſelves, when they have received the Chriſtian faith, acknowledge, that they are ſinners, and need the glory of God, ſubmitting therefore to waſh by baptiſme. Lyranus ſaith, that this was to teach, that they which touched theſe things appointed to cleanſe from ſin, were unworthy, and therefore contracted ſome ſpot hereby. Toſtatus having refuted others ſaith, that there was in a bullock thus killed and burnt ſome uncleanneſſe in it ſelf, as in other dead things, and therefore they that touched it, muſt repute themſelves unclean, and only by vertue of Gods ordinance it ſerved to cleanſe the unclean; this ſhewed alſo, ſaith he, that legal ſacrifices did not perfectly cleanſe. Aquinas will have a deteſtation of the idolatry about the golden calf intimated hereby, and that any appurtenance of idolatry, or coming near it in any thing defileth: as alſo, that the Jews ſhould be defiled by the death of Chriſt, and ſo continue till the very evening of the world. And to this laſt do I ſpecially aſſent, thus Chriſt was ſet for the fall and riſing again of many in Iſrael: he by whom alone there is cleanſing from ſin, became ſin and a defiling to all, that were agents about his paſſion, and from this uncleanneſſe they are not yet free, but ſhall be towards the end of the day of this world, when they ſhall be converted:

Verſ. 10.

Auguſt. qu. 33.

Lyranus.

Toſtatus.

Aquin. Diſ. 2. qu. 102.

Luc. 2. 34.

verted: andto this we may adde another,the imperfection of legal ſacrifices was ſhewed hereby, in that they, which prepared the thing wherewithal to cleanſe, were made unclean hereby, and had need of ſomething elſe to cleanſe them.

The myſtery. Aug. qu. 33.

Touching the myſtery of this whole ordinance, Auguſtine, and Theodoret, Jerome, Procopius, &c. underſtand Chriſt, the colour figured out his paſſion, the ſexe, the infirmity of his fleſh, the being without ſpot or blemiſh, his holineſſe and freedom from ſin, the being never yoked, the Prince of this world, that is the devil, never having any thing in Chriſt, although his yoke was upon the neck of every one elſe. And,as Ainſworth, hath it, her being never under the yoake figured out his free doing and ſuffering of that, which he did for our redemption. This heifer is brought to Eleazar the Prieſt, who muſt order all to make a purification water, to ſhew, that Chriſt, as he is the Sacrifice,ſo he is the Prieſt for us. She muſt be carried out of the camp, to ſhew Chriſts ſuffering out of the gates of the city; and the killing and burning of her upon mount Olivet, did excellently agree with Chriſts place, in which he was, when he was taken to be crucified. The ſprinkling of her bloud towards the door of the tabernacle, figured out the opening of a way into heaven for us by his bloud. The cedar, hyſſop and ſcarlet are the ſame,that were uſed before, Levit.14. 4. to cleanſe the leper, having all reference to Chriſt, ſee the expoſition there: of the uncleanneſſe contracted by thoſe, that were about the heifer imployed, it hath been ſpoken already. The aſhes, to which the heifer was brought, ſhewed the uttermoſt of Chriſts afflictions, and his greateſt afflictions, and his greateſt abaſing, Ezech.28.18. and the laying of them up to make therewith a water to purifie, in a clean place, and by a clean perſon without the camp, the pretiouſneſſe of his death to be laid up in a clean heart, to which Chriſt hanging upon the croſſe, and ſo debaſed to the uttermoſt ſeemeth more glorious, and his croſſe the monument of his debaſement, then the chariot of a triumpher, and the trophees of his victory carried before him: and laſtly, that whoſo will be purified by him, muſt go out of the camp to the place, where malefactours uſed to ſuffer, that is, bear his reproach and be content with ignominious uſage for his ſake and with him.

Ainſworth.

Heb.13.11,12. Luc.22.39.

Heb.10.19. c. 12. 24.

Heb.13.13.

Verſ. 11.

He that toucheth the dead body of a man ſhall be unclean ſeven dayes. He ſhall purifie himſelf with it on the third day, and on the ſeventh day he ſhall be clean.] The making of holy aſhes of the red heifer being thus preſcribed, now followeth the making of an holy water herewith, and the uſe of it. Here purifying with it is commanded, but it is not ſhewed, how to make it fit for this purpoſe; this therefore is done, verſ. 17. ſome of theſe aſhes muſt be put to running water in a clean veſſel. And the water being thus made,the uſe of it was to ſprinkle men and other things defiled by a dead man. For if any had dyed in a tent, both the tent and all the veſſels therein were defiled, and muſt be ſprinkled by a clean perſon, and ſo muſt all the perſons at that time in the tent, and he that touched the dead or a bone or the grave, muſt be ſprinkled twice, once on the third day, and again on the ſeventh; and then waſhing himſelf and his cloathes, he was clean at even: of uncleanneſſe by the dead it was ſpoken before, Num.6.6. Levit.21.1. it being called there a defiling, if any did but mourn for them. And of uncleanneſſe contracted by any other dead thing, and how it was to be purged, Levit.11.39. But here the law of uncleanneſſe by being in the room with the dead, or touching him,is fully ſet down, and how they muſt proceed to purifie in this caſe. For this the holy water is to be uſed, and not for uncleanneſſe by a dead beaſt, for that is not here ſpoken of, nor any other uncleanneſſe, and yet ſome will have both it and others underſtood under this one named, as if there were no purifying from any uncleanneſſe by other waſhings, but this holy water muſt have a part in all. But forſo-

Lorinus.

much much as this is only the caſe expreſſed, I hold rather with thoſe, that ſay other caſes of uncleanneſſe by a dead beaſt, &c. are excluded, as Sol. Jarchi. But becauſe in reaſon a proportion muſt be held between the meanes of contracting pollution by a dead man, and by a dead beaſt; and he that beareth a dead beaſt, is polluted, although he toucheth it not: the Rabbins have well gathered, that the bearing of a dead man alſo polluteth, although this be not here expreſſed. He that was defiled by a dead beaſt, did only waſh his clothes, and was unclean but to the even; but he that was defiled by a dead man, was unclean ſeven dayes, and muſt waſh both his cloathes and himſelf, and be ſprinkled with this holy water the third day and the ſeventh, or elſe he could not be clean. So that a far greater pollution was contracted by a dead man, then by a dead beaſt, and the natural reaſon hereof, according to Toſtatus is, becauſe as man living is the moſt excellent of all earthly creatures, ſo when he is dead, he is the moſt ſtinking; and this by Ariſtotle is aſcribed to the variety of his meat, when as the food of other creatures is more ſimple. But to apply it ſpiritually, hereby the moſt filthy and ſtinking caſe of a man dead in ſinne was ſet forth; his ſtate is worſe and more foul, then that of the ſwine, toad or ſerpent, for none of them defiled ſo much as he.

Sol. Jarchi.

Levit. 11. 40.

Maimony.

Toſtatus.

Ariſtot. de gener. animal. c. 20.

The reaſon why God would have the coming nigh the dead a defiling, when as to bury the dead was counted a moſt charitable thing, was, as Fonſeca hath it, for inſtruction to us, that hereby the people of God might learn to hold faſt the doctrine of the reſurrection, wherein the only comfort lyeth touching the dead, in whom otherwiſe there is nothing but horrour and abomination. By holding them from flocking about the dead in mourning for them, after the manner of the heathen, the exceſſe of ſorrow was cut off, which is in thoſe, whoſe hope is only in this life. And this ordinance was alſo made to deter from murther. As a dead man, ſay the Rabbins, ſo a limb of a man living being cut off, defileth as amply perſons and veſſels and tents. But this uncleanneſſe extendeth not to an heathen, no more then to a beaſt. The open veſſel is defiled, becauſe the ayr of the dead corps goeth into it, but not a covered veſſel, for it is not capable of uncleanneſſe without, but within.

Fonſeca.

Matth. 15.

Whereas verſ. 16. it is ſaid, he that toucheth one ſlain with the ſword, Targum Jonathan hath it, both the ſlain man and the ſword alſo being touched defile, and not only one ſlain with a ſword defileth his toucher, but being ſlain by any other means. Touching the making and ſprinkling with this water, the Hebrews have many rules: 1. The water muſt be taken immediately out of the ſpring or river, and not being carried to another place there put in, neither muſt it be taken of the ſea. 2. Any clean perſon may take this water and mixe and ſprinkle with it, ſaving the deaf, the child, and the fool. 3. They put the water in the veſſel firſt, and then the aſhes upon the water, not the water upon the aſhes; but this is contrary to the text; running water ſhall be put thereto in a clean veſſel. 4. He that taketh up the water muſt do it with an intention to make a water for purification. 5. The water may be taken and mixed by night, but no ſprinkling, except by day. 6. If it be delivered to an unclean perſon, it becometh unlawful. 7. If a man be hired to ſprinkle, he is unlawful; for to fill and carry the water, a man may take wages, but not to ſprinkle it.

Verſ. 16.

Targum Jonathan.

Maimony in pharah Actumah, ch. 6.

For the ſprinkling, a clean perſon muſt take hyſop and dip it in this water, that is, ſaith Maimony, three ſtalks bound together, dipping the tops into the water, and for ſprinkling he needeth not to dip every time, but when the water upon the hyſop is ſpent. And the ſprinkling may be upon an hundred perſons at once; and if but a drop of the water toucheth any part of a mans fleſh, or any part of a veſſel, it is all clean. And in ſprinkling there was no difference put, but if any, that had other uncleanneſſes neſſes upon them, were in the tent, they were ſprinkled alſo, and were cleanſed, as touching pollution contracted from the dead, although their former uncleanneſſe remained ſtill. The vertue of this water by Gods ordinance was wonderful, having more force to purge then the fire, as we may ſee, Numb.31.23. where it is appointed, that every thing to be purged, that would endure the fire, ſhould go through the fire, but after this they muſt be ſprinkled with this water to be cleanſed. For the times of ſprinkling, viz. upon the third day and the ſeventh. The third day is remarkable for the reſurrection of Chriſt, when he had perfected the work of our redemption; and the ſeventh day, for Gods reſting from all the works of creation being finiſhed; ſo that ſprinkling was appointed upon theſe dayes, to intimate perfect cleanſing: and if any man neglected this ſprinkling upon the third day, although he ſprinkled upon the ſeventh day, he was not clean, verſ. 12. to intimate the faith in Chriſts reſurrection purifying the heart, but without this, that there is no cleanneſſe, although a man according to his power keepeth the moral Law, whereby the ſeventh day was ſanctified.

Verſ. 18.

Verſ. 19.

Touching cleanſing by this water, R. Menahem ſaith, when living water is mixed with the aſhes, it purifieth the unclean, whereas before that, whiles the aſhes were alone, they defiled all that were imployed about them. Behold the living water ſignified the water, that is on high, which taketh away uncleanneſſe from the aſhes, and when it is ſprinkled on the unclean, the uncleanneſſe fleeth from him, and a clean ſpirit reſteth upon him, and purifieth him. Herein the Rabbine ſaith ſomewhat rightly, that the ſpirit, which as water from on high cleanſeth, was ſet forth by this water: but whereas he ſaith, before the coming of the water to the aſhes, they defiled all imployed about them, it is to be underſtood, that not only before, but after, when the water was made, he that ſprinkled it and he that touched it, was defiled, and he that touched one made unclean thus, was unclean, as he was, unto the even, verſ.21,22.

R. Menahem in Numb.19.

Verſ. 20.

But the man that ſhall be unclean and not purifie himſelf, ſhall be cut off, &c.] The ſame was ſaid alſo verſ. 13. But this is expounded, if he cometh preſumptuouſly to the Tabernacle; for if ignorantly, he muſt bring an offering, as Levit.5.2,6.

The myſtery, Rupertus.

For the myſtery of theſe things, Rupertus applyeth the aſhes of this ſprinkling unto Chriſt, and thus doth the Apoſtle, Heb.9.13,14. the touching of a dead body to the dead works of ſin, from which the ſprinkling of Chriſts blood alone purgeth; and whoſo is not purged herewith, is unclean. The ſprinkling was upon the third day, to ſet forth the faith in the Trinity, which if a man hath not, he ſhall not be clean upon the ſeventh, that is, ſhall not attain the Spirit with the ſeven-fold gifts thereof, &c.

Rabanus.

Rabanus ſaith, that the aſhes laid up without the camp in a clean place did prefigure, that not the Jews ſet forth by the camp, but the Gentiles ſhould have the keeping of Chriſts paſſions having virtue to purge from ſinne, as they have, becauſe they believe in him, but the Jewes not. And by hyſop is ſet forth faith, wherewith the bloud of Chriſt muſt be ſprinkled upon the ſoul to cleanſe it, &c. The ordinary gloſſe by the aſhes mixed with water underſtandeth the paſſions of Chriſt effectuall to purge from ſinne by the water of Baptiſme, or rather we may ſay, by the ſpirit which as water applying them to the ſoul cleanſeth. And of this it was propheſied, Ezech. 36.25. I will ſprinkle you with clean water, whereas the ordinary gloſſe proceedeth, the heifer burnt with hyſop, cedar and skarlet did ſet forth three ſuffering with Chriſt, the virgin Mary, as hyſop for humilitie, John as the Cedar for heavenlineſſe, and the thief upon the croſſe, as the skarlet for his double ſuffering with him, theſe things are witty, but without ſolidity. One by the water mixed with the aſhes underſtandeth

Gloſ. ordin.

Bercorius.

derſtandeth the tears of repentance in ſuch as believe. And for the Myſtery of polluting all imployed about it, hereby, he ſaith, was ſet forth, that in doing the great works of Preaching and Baptizing, and praying to cleanſe others from ſinne, there is infirmitie, poluting even in the beſt, for which there is need of humiliation and ſeeking to be cleanſed by grace in Chriſt. The Church of Rome in an apiſh imitation of this, hath inſtituted holy water to be made of water and ſalt, with certain prayers and benedictions, appointing all, when they come to the Temple, to be ſprinkled herewith, for the purging of them from the uncleanneſſe of ſin. This ordinance Stenchus fetcheth from the Apoſtles times, according to Clement, and from Pope Alexander the fifth, from Peter, who appointed bleſſing and ſanctifying hereby. But who knoweth not, that many writings pretended to be moſt antient are ſpurious, and therefore theſe allegations art little to be regarded, and their holy water to be ſleighted by all thoſe, that would not catch at a' ſhadow, and loſe the ſubſtance, the bloud of Chriſt.

Stenchus.

CHAP. XX.

THen came the children of Iſrael, even the whole congregation into the deſert of Zin in the firſt moneth, and they abode in Kadeſh, and there Miriam died and was buried.] Of Kadeſh Barnea it was ſpoken before, chap.13.3. for although Kadeſh onely be named there, yet chap. 32. 8. it is Kadeſh Barnea. That Kadeſh was ſaid to be in Paran, this in Zin, whereupon ſome thinke that they were two divers places, one upon the border of Edom, verſ. 16. and the other upon the border of the land of Canaan, chap. 34. 4. So Lorinus affirming this to be the more common opinion, But Toſtatus and Maſius contrariwiſe hold them to be both one, and Junius on the part of the wilderneſſe near to the city of Kadeſh and the other, in which they now were, the citie, as it is called, v. 16. And the deſcription of that Kadeſh, chap. 34.4. by Edom maketh it plain, that it was the ſame. If it be ſaid there were many removes between that Kadeſh, chap.13. and this, it is eaſily anſwered, they were cauſed in judgement for their murmuring to turn back; and when they had gone all theſe journeyes, they were brought to Kadeſh near the land of Canaan again. As for the two ſeverall wilderneſſes ſpoken of Paran, wherein the former Kadeſh was, and Zin, wherein this, it is to be underſtood, that Paran was a moſt vaſt wilderneſſe of 11. dayes journey, extending to Zin and Kadeſh, according to Adricomius and others; and therefore that part of Zim, wherein Kadeſh ſtood, might for the vicinitie of ſo well known a wilderneſſe happily be called Paran ſometimes, and ſometimes by the proper name Zim: Yet Cazkuni upon the former reaſon ſaith, that this was another Kadeſh; and H.Bunting in his travels of the Patriarkes, ſaith that Kadeſh Barnea was but 40. miles from Jeruſalem, but Zin Kadeſh 120. miles off. To this place they came in the firſt moneth, but of what year of their coming out of Egypt, it is not ſaid. But becauſe chap.33. 38. Aaron is ſaid to have died in mount Hor, to which they went at the next remove, and the time of his death was the firſt of the fifth moneth of the fourtieth year, all Expoſitours agree, that this was the firſt moneth of the fourtieth yeare, and ſo all their wanderings from their firſt coming to Kadeſh, till their coming thither now again in 37. years are paſſed over in ſilence, but onely that they are ſet down, Numb.33. by way of capitulation, that we may underſtand how they were carried about and puniſhed for their ſins. From Eziongaber they came to this place, c.33.36. and this Ezion is noted to have bin a Port on the ſhoare of the Red-ſea, 1 King.9. 26. ſo that all though their return by the way of the Red-ſea was not hitherto ſpoken of, yet hereby it appeareth, that they had returned thither, as was commanded, Numbers, 14. 25. and now they come from hence again towards the land of Note. Canaan the time ſet for their wandering being almoſt expired. Note, becauſe the travels of thoſe three yeares onely are exactly commemorated, wherein they came out of Egypt, received the Lawes of God, built the Tabernacle, and fought againſt their enemies, and entred into the land of Canaan, but thoſe of the other 37. wherein, nothing of worth was done, are paſſed over, that all time which is not ſpent to the avoyding of the Egypt of ſinne, in the practice of the Law, &c. is but as time loſt, and this time onely is had in reckoning with God, and ſhall be remembred.

Verſ. 1.

Lorinus. Toſtatus. Maſius in loſ.15 3. Junius.

Ioſephus. Now Miriam dieth, but Joſephus inverting the Order, telleth firſt of their ſending for paſſage through the countrey of Edom which followed hereafter, and then of her death. But ſhe dieth now, and if we compare this time with her ſpoken of, Exodus 2. 4. ſhe being of ſome growth then, when Moſes was born, it will appear, that ſhe was very aged at her death, viz. neare one hundered and thirtie yeares, if not more, becauſe Moſes was now 120.

But how old ſhe was, is not ſaid, as of Aaron, verſ. 30. and Moſes afterwards when he died, neither is the age of any woman ſet down in all the Scripture, but of Sarah onely, the mother of the faithfull. Of mourning for her nothing is ſpoken, but Joſephus ſaith, that they kept a mourning thirtie dayes alſo for her, as afterwards for Aaron and Moſes, which is not improbable becauſe of her dignitie being a Propheteſſe, and ſiſter to the Prince, and one of their three leaders as ſhe is called, Mich. 6. 4. whether ſhe were taken away now before their enterance into Canaan, for murmuring as others did or no, is queſtioned by ſome; but I ſee no reaſon to lay the ſuſpition of ſuch a fault upon ſo holy a woman, ſeeing the Scripture ſpeaketh nothing of it. They that thinke her to have been in fault for this, extenuate it ſaying, they that ſinned moſt, were cut off firſt, and they that ſinned leaſt lived longeſt, and moſt of thoſe 40 yeares, amongſt whom Miriam was one, and becauſe Aaron ſinned leſſe then ſhe, he lived longer by foure moneths; and Moſes, becauſe he ſinned leaſt of all three lived tenne moneths longer, Deuteronomy 34. 5. but can admit of no ſuch frivolous reaſons; for neither did Moſes or Aaron ſinne at all by murmuring, but about the waters bringing out of the rocke, and Miriams age was ſo great by the courſe of nature, that it is moſt probable ſhee died now, her Naturall ſtrength failing her.

Joſeph. antiqu. lib. 4. c. 4.

Verſ. 2. And there was no water for the Congregation, and they gathered themſelves together againſt Moſes and Aaron. As their Fathers when they came out
Exod. 17. of Egypt in the firſt yeare wanted water, and being thus tried murmured, ſo the children in the laſt of the fourtie yeares, being likewiſe tried murmured, as their fathers had done, and they contended with Moſes and Aaron, and they fell down, and Moſes is commanded to take his rod, and the glory of God appeared, and the place for this was called Meribah, as there. But there was this difference, there Moſes was bidden to ſmite the rocke, here onely to ſpeake to the rocke, and there God ſtood and appeared at the rocke, here in the Tabernacle, before they went to the rocke.

Note. So that it was like fathers, like children, they were no whit bettered for their fathers puniſhments, and therefore had it not been for Gods infinite mercy for his covenant ſake with their fathers, Abraham, Iſaac, and Ja-Oleaſter. cob, they could never have entred into Canaan. Oleaſter laboureth to prove that hiſtory, Exod. 17. and this one and the ſame, and not two divers, becauſe they ſay, verſ. 5. why have ye made us to come out of Egypt? But it is certain, that they were divers, one almoſt 40 years after another,

one

one in Horeb in Sinai, the other in Zin Kadeſh, beſides that there is difference in circumſtances. Now to ſhew ſome probable reaſon of the failing of waters at this time, the Hebrews fein, that Miriam hitherto had carried a flint of the rock, out of which they had waters in all places where they came, but ſhe being now dead, that means failed. But this is a fable, neither did the rock ſo follow them, 1 Cor. 10. but becauſe they were now again in the want of water ſupplyed out of a rock: which was as it were, the rocks following them. As for theſe peoples being brought out of Egypt objected, this is eaſily anſwered, they were brought thence ſome of them little ones, and ſome in their fathers loines. For the want of water here, this other generation, when the former were almoſt all worn out, chode with Moſes in more words then their fathers had done, Exod. 17. wiſhing that they had dyed, when their brethren dyed before the Lord, and challenging him for bringing them into that wilderneſſe to dye there, ſeeing there was neither vine nor fig, nor ſeed, nor pomgranat, nor water, and for bringing them out of Egypt. In ſaying, would God we had dyed, they uſe this phraſe, would God we had given up the ghoſt, as noting an eaſier death, if by the plague they had been ſmitten at once, then to pine away with thirſt, as Lament. 4.9. they that periſh with the ſword, are ſaid to be better, then they that dye by famine. By their brethren that dyed before the Lord, they meant thoſe 14000. Chap. 16.49. that were ſuddenly taken away by the plague, according to Lyranus, or Korah and his company, according to the Chaldee, becauſe it is ſaid of them that they dyed before the Lord, or both them and thoſe that periſhed by burning in Taberah, Chap. 11. as Toſtatus. The words ſeem more properly to reſpect Korah and his 250 men, and that was the lateſt judgment, together with the deſtruction of the 14000. and moſt freſh in memory.

R. Solomon ſaith, that for Miriams ſake they had alwayes a ſpring of water with them, which when ſhe dyed, failed; and for Aarons ſake, a piller to guide them, which failed when he dyed; and for the ſake of Moſes, manna, which failed at his death. But how true this is, may be judged, becauſe the manna ceaſed not till they came in Canaan, Joſ. 5.12.

Verſ. 3, 4, 5.

Lyranus. Cald. Par. Toſtatus.

Ah deſperate people, that were ſo far from taking warning by judgements executed upon others, that, in their paſſion they put themſelves as it were, upon the like, ſo mad doth the devil make men, when he poſſeſſeth their hearts, that they caſt themſelves headlong upon deſtruction. Not one of them had yet dyed through thirſt, and although the wilderneſſe, wherein they were, was barren, and yielded no corn nor fruit, yet they were daily ſuſtained with manna, ſo that there was ſmall cauſe of complaining; but this is the nature of unthankful man, if he wanteth any thing, that he deſireth, he is ready to aggravate his want, as if it were much more then it is; ſo Ferus, the benefits that he hath are nothing, but to his want only are his eyes intent.

Note.

Ferus.

And Moſes and Aaron went from the aſſembly to the door of the Tabernacle, and they fell upon their faces, &c.] Of their fleeing to the Tabernacle, and their falling upon their faces on like occaſions, ſee Chap. 16.4. and of the appearing of the glory of God, verſ. 19.

Verſ. 6.

And the Lord ſpake to Moſes, ſaying, Take the rod and gather the aſſembly together, thou and Aaron, and ſpeak to the rock before their eyes, &c.] The rod appointed here to be taken, is held by ſome to be the rod of Aaron and not of Moſes, becauſe verſ. 9. Moſes is ſaid to have taken the rod from before the Lord; and Aarons rod, which budded, was laid up before the Lord, chap. 17. 10. and it was a ſign of their rebellion, according to which Moſes ſpeaketh, when he had it in his hand, hear now ye rebels; thus Cazkuni, and Lyranus, Hugo and Rickelius, and Junius. But Cajetan will have the rod of Moſes meant, ſo likewiſe Oleaſter, and Calvin intimateth the ſame, when he ſaith, he bad him take the rod, wherewith he had done ſo many miracles, that ſeeing it, and having it with him, he might be the more confident to do the like again. And to ſhew, that it was the rod of Moſes,

Verſ. 8.

Verſ. 9.

Cazkuni. Lyranus, &c. Cajetan. Calvin. &c.

ſes, verſ. 11. it is ſaid, he ſmote the rock with his rod. I follow neither of theſe opinions, but rather approve the judgment of Lorinus the Jeſuite herein, that Moſes and Aaron had not two, but one rod, firſt and more properly called Moſes his rod, then Aarons, becauſe by the appointment of Moſes he uſed it to do miracles in Egypt, and becauſe God wrought miraculouſly hereby; it was alſo called the rod of God. And this moſt probably was taken for the tribe of Levi, and for Aaron the high prieſt, Chap.17. and now appointed to be taken from before the Lord again to do another miracle. They then that are for Aarons rod, and they that are for the rod of Moſes, are all for one and the ſame rod, called ſometimes his, ſometimes Aarons. In that he biddeth him take the rod and ſpeak, ſome think, that ſmiting therewith is alſo implyed, ſo that Moſes offended not in ſmiting. But forſomuch as when the Lord meant that he ſhould ſmite, he bade him expreſly to do it, as Exod.17. I cannot but think him blame-worthy for this. God bade him in the preſence of the rod, which was a ſign of his preſence, to ſpeak to the rock, and water ſhould come out, only ſhewing that now, wherewith he had ſmitten before, that water being brought forth by leſſe means, even through ſpeaking, God, by whoſe power it was done, might be the more magnified. But he contrariwiſe ſpeaketh not to the rock, but ſmiteth it, and ſpeaketh to the people, which he was not commanded, whereas the rod having leaves and fruit upon it, was not fit to be uſed for ſmiting with any more.

Lorinus.

Exod. 7. 9.

Exod. 4. 20.

Toſtatus. What words Moſes ſhould ſpeak to the rock, is not ſet down; but Toſtatus conjectureth, that they were theſe; rock, it is ſaid to thee in the name of our living God, that thou give us waters and be divided. The purpoſe of the Lord in bidding him ſpeak to the rock, doing as he commanded, was doubtleſſe to convince the people of greater hardneſſe, then that of a ſtone, ſeeing they had been often ſpoken to in vain; but this once ſpoken to, contrary to the nature thereof being moſt dry, yielded water.

Verſ. 10. Hear now ye rebels, &c.] That Moſes was in a great paſſion, appeareth by his words. Pſal.106.33. ſo that he ſpake unadviſedly with his lips. The thing, which moved him ſo much, was, becauſe this other generation, which had been hitherto preſerved ſo many years, and ſeen ſo great examples of Gods judgments, were yet as bad as they for murmuring againſt God, ſo that he and Aaron believed not, that God would any more do ſuch miracles for them. Their ſin, which by and by is called unbelief, and a not ſanctifying of the Lord in the eyes of the people, was both, that they did not, as God commanded in ſpeaking to the rock, but ſmiting, of which way of bringing out water, they had experience before, and now they believed not, that by ſpeaking only without ſmiting, water would come out; and this their going from the thing commanded was publick, to the diſhonour of God before all the congregation, which made it more heinous, then when before Moſes ſhewed ſome doubting, ſaying, ſhall all the herds and the flocks be killed, &c. So that it is a greater ſin to offend publickly then private, for upon this ſome great judgment awaiteth, as alſo in the Sodomites, Eſay 3.9.

Verſ. 11.

Numb. 11. 22. Note.

Sol. Jarchi. and he ſmote the rock twice, becauſe, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, he went not according to Gods commandement in ſpeaking only, the water came out at the firſt ſmiting but by drops, wherefore he ſmote again, and then it flowed abundantly. God wrought for the juſtifying of his Word of bringing out waters, although Moſes and Aaron proceeded not altogether according to his direction; ſo although all men be lyers, God will be juſt of his Word, and their unbelief cannot make the Word of God of none effect: of the abundant flowing of theſe waters cauſed now by the Lord it is ſpoken Pſal. 78.15. and Eſay 48.21. But between the waters, that now flowed out, and thoſe Exod. 17. there is this difference, that in Rephidim the water ſtill continued, after it was brought out, here not, but only a ſhort time, time, for Chap. 21. 5. they murmure again for want of water: Wherefore it ſeemeth that the rock Horeb, out of which that water flowed, was ſpecially meant by the Apoſtle ſaying, They dranke of the ſpirituall rock that followed them, after the ſtriking of it, it became a continuall ſpring, from which waters flowed all the time of the Iſraelites travelling in the wilderneſſe, till now Miriam being dead. For although they removed to divers ſtations after, yet we reade not of any want of water that they had, ſo that it is likely that this water ran as a river in low places not far from them whereſoever they became, yea when they were before in this Kadeſh, we do not find that they had any want of water. Of the waters that came forth now both they dranke and their cattell, and the wild beaſts alſo had benefit hereby, as is ſhewed, Eſa. 43. 20. 1 Cor. 10.

Rom. 3. 3.

And the Lord ſpake to Moſes and Aaron, becauſe ye believe me not to ſanctifie me in the eyes of the children of Iſrael, &c.] If it be demanded here, wherein Moſes ſhewed his unbelief? It hath been anſwered already, in ſtriking, when God bade him onely to ſpeak to the rock: thus alſo Cajetan, and his twice ſtriking ſhewed that he thought by the force of blowes, and not by the power of Gods Word onely to bring waters out: ſo Procopius, and he ſhewed unbeliefe, ſaith Lyranus, by delaying to doe as God commanded him; ſpending time firſt in ſpeaking to the people to exaſperate them, that they did not ſo thankfully receive this bleſſing to praiſe God therefore. Verſ. 12. Cajetan. Procopius. Lyranus.

And Oleaſter thinketh, that there was in them ſome vain glory, in that they ſpake, as attributing power to themſelves, muſt we bring you water out of this rock. Hereat God was ſo offended, that he threatned, that they ſhould not come into the land of Canaan, ſo hard a matter is it even for the godly to be ſaved, and ſo hainous are the ſinnes of thoſe that are ſet in high place, and moſt dignified: For Moſes ſaith, that although he beſought the Lord, he would not reverſe this ſentence againſt him, ſo much offended was he with him for his unbelief and paſſion, unto which he was ſtirred up by them. Touching the greatneſſe of the ſinne of unbelief, ſee 1 John 5. 10. He that believeth not God, maketh him a lier, Numb. 27. 14. It is rebellion, Deutero. 32. 51. a tranſgreſſion ſo called by a word implying falſhood, as R. Menahem noteth of the death of Aaron before entring, ſee verſ. 24. in mount Hor, and of Moſes in Mount Nebo, Deut. 34. Thus Moſes, Aaron and Miriam all die, who were their leaders under the Law, and cannot bring them into Canaan; but Joſhua did this, to ſhew that juſtification and ſalvation is not by the Law, but onely by faith in Jeſus Chriſt. And for this myſterie ſaith Ferus, and not ſo much becauſe he was angry with them, he would not have them to bring the people into Canaan, for neither the Law ſet forth by Moſes, nor the ſacrifices by Aaron could ſave, but Jeſus onely. Oleaſter. Note. Deut. 3. 23, 24, 25. &c. R. Menahem Mich. 6. 4.

For the myſterie of water coming out of the rock, ſee before, Exod. 17. Onely whereas Moſes believed not here when he ſmote the rock, yet waters flowed out to ſave the people from periſhing with thirſt; ſo the Jewes that ſmote Chriſt by crucifying him, believed not, yet to all that truely believe ſalvation floweth from him thus ſmitten, and the rock was twice ſmitten, ſo was Chriſt, firſt being pierced with nailes, and then with a ſpear. In Miriam dying before this, the ceſſation of Propheſie ſeemeth to be ſet forth ſometime before Chriſts paſſion, whereupon it is ſaid, The Law and the Prophets unſill Iohn. The myſtery. Rabanus. Iſidorus.

This is the water of Meribah, becauſe the children of Iſrael ſtrove with the Lord here, and he was ſanctified in them. Meribah ſignifieth contention, and theſe waters were ſo called, as alſo thoſe, Exod. 17. for a remembrance of the ſtrife amongſt the murmuring people for want of water, but for diſtinction this is called Meribah of Kadeſh in the wilderneſſe of Zin, Deut. 32. 52. And they are ſaid to ſtrive with the Lord, when they ſtrove with Moſes Verſ. 13.

Moses and Aaron his Ministers; He was sanctified in them, that is, saith Sol. Jarchi, in Moses and Aaron, that died because of them; for when the holy blessed God doth judgement, he sanctifieth himself before the creatures; wherefore it is said, Fearfull art thou, O God, out of thy Sanctuarie, Psalm. 68. 36. so also Targum Jonathan, and for the like see Ezech. 38. 16. 22. and before Levit. 10. 3. Moses and Aaron had not sanctified him: as was said, vers. 12. by doing directly as he commanded them, that the people might hereby have been brought to admire and praise his power and goodnesse, but yet he provided for the sanctifying and glorifying of himself by them, when having the comfort of these waters, they prayed and magnified him therefore, and hearing of the judgement upon Moses and Aaron for their offending hereabout, a great fear and dread was stricken into them of this great and mighty God, making them to stand the more in awe of him: thus Lorinus, and to this effect almost Calvin, he sanctified himself, that is, by this miracle he vindicated his holy name from contempt amongst the people, making this water thus also given upon their murmuring, when it might have been to their destruction, a spirituall drink to salvation as it is called, 1 Cor. 10. And this exposition expounding, in them of the people, is rather to be preferred, then the former referring it to Moses and Aaron, because not Moses and Aaron, but the children of Israel are spoken of in this verse, who strove with them, and so with God; or else these words in them may have reference to the waters, in bringing forth which so miraculously God was sanctified and glorified.

Sol. Jarch.

Lorinus. Calvin.

Vers. 14. And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh to the King of Edom, saying, thus saith thy brother Israel, thou knowest all our travell, &c.] Deut. 2. 1. 2. &c. Moses telleth how the Lord charged them not to take any thing of the Edomites, but for their money, and not to take any part of their land, for he had given it to them for a possession, viz. to the sonnes of Esau; whereupon it is likely, that he directed this peaceable message unto their King, and a passage being denied goeth another way. And he stileth Israel Edoms brother, because he was Esau, and mentioneth their afflictions in Egypt, and Gods sending of his Angell to deliver them, to move him the more to give them leave to passe through his Countrey, as being the neareſt way into Canaan, and freest from the impediment of warre by the way. Touching the angell here spoken of, R. Solomon thinketh Moses to be meant hereby, bnt I rather assent to them, that hold it was the Angell, that smote the first-born of the Egyptians, and so inforced their King to let them goe, and which went before them in the pillar, as is expresly said, Exod. 14. 19. For that Moses, who put these words into the messengers mouths, should call himself Gods Angell is most improbable, Moreover to move him to let them passe that way, they promise neither to go through field nor vineyard, but by the Kings high-way, and not to drink of their water without paying for it. But the King of Edom refused to let them passe, and came out with an Army against them, whereupon they turned to goe another way; that is, as is expressed, Deut. 2. 8. by the way of the wilderneſse of Moab. Here, and in chap. 21. and 22. the impediments that the children of Israel had in their passage from Kadesh to the land of Canaan, are set forth, first by the Edomites in this chapter: then by the Canaanite King, that dwelt in the south, and by the Amorites, &c. chap. 21. Lastly, by the Moabites, ch. 22.

R. Solom.

Vers. 16. 17. 19.

Ver. 20, 21.

The Mystery. The Edomites, saith Ferus, do mystically set forth the Jews denying the Apostles of Christ a passage to preach the Gospel amongst them, yea when they besought them for it, they opposed them with violence, persecuting and slaying such, as they could hands upon, although they offered to go directly in the high-way, that is, to teach nothing but the ancient verity, and to pay for the water which they should drink, that is, for temporall things to give spirituall: wherefore they likewise leaving the Jews turned another another way, viz. to the Gentiles. And morally, when we meet with enemies, that deal hardly with us, we muſt learn from this example not to requite like for like, but to give way, and to go any way about rather then break out of the bounds of patience. For there will alwayes be ſuch wicked Edomites in this world, that are without all love of their godly brethren, and harſhly entreat them; but we muſt not render evil for evil, but rather give way, thus alſo Rupertus, whom Ferus very much followeth. Or by Edom, ſaith Berchorius, may be underſtood the body, unto which the ſoul is as a brother, but hindered by the body in the paſſage to heaven, and therefore it muſt leave the fleſh, that is, the evil motions thereof, and go another way, as the Spirit leadeth, unto bleſſedneſſe. Touching Edom it is to be noted, as proud as he now was, he was afterwards brought under by David, 2 Sam.8.14. and ſo ſhall all the wicked, that perſecute the godly be finally ſubjected unto them.

Note.

Berchor. in moralitat.

Note.

And the children of Iſrael journeyed from Kadeſh, and came to mount Hor.] This journey is counted by H. Bunting 48 miles; and Hor he ſaith, was on the edge of the countrey of Edom, of which ſee verſ. 23. whence the Horims inhabiting there before, but deſtroyed by the Edomites, ſeemed to have their name. Hor, from whence this mountain had the name, ſignifieth a mountain, and therefore by Sol. Jarchi it is ſaid to be a mountain upon a mountain. Jerom ſometime deriveth it from Hor, and ſometime from Or, light, as in his book de nomin. Hebr. Toſtatus inquiring, why the Lord directed them before to Kadeſh, when as he knew, that the King of Edom would not ſuffer them to paſſe through his countrey, which was the way from thence to Canaan, anſwereth, that this was done to delay their coming into Canaan, till fourty years were expired, which was the time of the wandering about before ſet by him for their murmuring, chap.14.

Verſ. 22.

Patriarks travailes.

Deut. 2. 12.

Sol. Jarchi.

Hieron. Epiſt. 127. de manſ. 34.

Toſtatus.

In this place upon the top of the mountain God appointed Aaron to dye for the cauſe before commemorated, Chap.20.12. his garments being firſt taken off there and put on Eleazar his ſon, that he might be high Prieſt in his ſtead, all which was done accordingly, and then Moſes and Eleazar came down, and the people mourned for Aaron 30 dayes: whereas it is ſaid, that Aaron ſhould dye now before he entred into the land of Canaan, becauſe, ſaith the Lord, ye rebelled againſt me at the waters of Meribah. Toſtatus inquireth, whether their ſin were mortal or venial; and anſwereth, although it were thus ſeverely puniſhed; it was venial, becauſe they did nothing directly to offend God, neither did they purpoſe to offend, but being tranſported by zeal they reproved the rebellious, but their offending was by accident, in that when they reproved, they moved them not to praiſe God; yet to ſhew, that in the perfect venial ſins ſhall be ſeverely puniſhed, and that Gods juſtice is ſuch, that he will ſpare no man offending, he dealt thus with them, ſeeing for ſuch offences they muſt either ſuffer here or in purgatory; thus he. But becauſe their ſin is called rebellion, it ſeemeth to be very great; and, as was before ſaid, it was aggravated by this, that it was committed publickly before all the people, which kind of ſinning God is wont to puniſh more ſeverely, and yet in them not ſo much becauſe God was angry with them, but for a myſtery; of which before, verſ.12. For the diſtinction of mortal and venial, and ſuffering in purgatory, we acknowledge no ſuch, although the Papiſts ſtand for them tooth and nail.

Verſ. 23, 24, 25,26, 27,28, 29.

Toſtatus.

If it be ſaid Aaron and Moſes muſt have dyed now, although they had not rebelled, becauſe this was the ſentence againſt all before, Chap. 14. except Caleb and Joſhua; it is anſwered, that Moſes and Aaron muſt needs be excepted, becauſe they withſtood the rebellious then to their own great hazzard, and generally the tribe of Levi came not into that number, ſeeing the adjudged to dye were numbred from twenty years old and upward, whereas the Levites were not ſo numbred but from a moneth old and Object.

Toſtatus.

Exod. 6.25.

and upward, and it is certain, that Eleazar was then above 20, becauſe he had his ſon Phineas before their coming out of Egypt, and yet he ſurvived, thus Toſtatus. The phraſe whereby Aarons death is ſet forth, is this, he ſhall be gathered to his people, that is, ſaith Ferus, to his godly forefathers, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and be taken from amongſt a wicked people, ſo he is comforted, that he ſhould not in dying periſh, but come to a better eſtate. See the like phraſe, Gen.25.8. If it be demanded, how Aaron could be ſaid in his death to be gathered to his people, ſeeing he was not buried, where they were? Cajetan anſwereth, that it is meant of his Spirit, which was gathered to their ſpirits, Heb.12.23. and hence the living of the ſpirit after the death of the body is manifeſt: wherefore Pſal. 104.20. it is ſaid, thou gathereſt their ſpirits, and they return to their duſt. Whereas it may ſeem to be a diſcomfort to Aaron, that he was ſtripped of his Prieſtly robes, and they were put upon another before his death; it is anſwered, they were put upon his ſon, whom the father joyeth to ſee honoured, and then dyeth the more chearfully. Moreover, it could not but be a comfort to him to ſee, that the high Prieſthood ſhould not fail in him, but continue from generation to generation, till the coming of the great high Prieſt Jeſus Chriſt to make perfect attonement for the ſins of us all.

Ferus.

Cajetan.

The taking of Shebnahs robe from him, and cloathing Eliakim therewith is ſpoken of as a putting him from his treaſureſhip, and bringing Eliakim in, Eſay 22.15,19,20. From this it is likely, that the Prophets amongſt the Gentiles learned that right of putting off their garments, which were ornaments or enſigns of their dignity before their death, and ſolemnly reſigning them up to their gods, as holding it unmeet for them to dye in them, thus Eſchilus writeth of Caſſandra, and Statius Papinius of Amphiaraus the Prophet, &c. For the peoples knowing that Aaron was dead, all was done upon the top of the mountain, ſo that they might eaſily ſee, for it is ſaid to have been in the ſight of all the congregation, verſ. 27. wherefore the tale of R. Solomon, ſaying, when the people ſaw Moſes come down with Eleazar alone inveſted with the high Prieſts robes, they thinking that Aaron had been murthered by them for his dignity, were ready to ſtone them, but by and by the top of the mountain being inclined, and Aarons dead body being ſeen honourably buried, they were pacified; this tale, I ſay, is worthily rejected by Toſtatus, as a rabbinical fable. For the cuſtome of mourning 30 daies, ſee Gen. 50.10. thus Aaron, againſt whom they often rebelled in his life, was much honoured by them in his death, as is the lot of other good ſervants of God oftentimes. At what time, and age he dyed, ſee Chap.33.38. and of his burial, Deut.10.6. although here paſſed over in ſilence.

Ainſworth.

R. Solomon.

Toſtatus.

The Myſtery.

For the myſtery of all this, Aarons going up to the top of Mount Hor, or Mount Or, and there dying, did figure out the ceſſation of the Aaronicall Prieſthood at the coming on of the light of the Goſpel, becauſe Or ſignifieth light. Again, his dying for his ſin ſhewed, that the high Prieſts under the Law dyed in ſin, notwithſtanding all the expiations made by all their ſacrifices, for they were not ſufficient to purge away ſin. Moreover his dying when he was not ſick, but well, ſhewed the confidence that the Jews had of being juſtified by the law, not thinking otherwiſe of themſelves, but that they were well, when as they were at the point of death. Moreover his being ſtript of his Prieſtly garments ſhewed the deſtruction of the temple, and of all the ſumptuous buildings about it within 40 years after Chriſts paſſion, as this was done 40 years after their coming out of Egypt. Laſtly, their mourning for him being dead, ſhewed, how the Jews ſhould ſorrow at the Temples deſtruction; although we Chriſtians rejoyce for our Chriſt made now an high Prieſt for ever.

Chap. XXI.

And when King Arad the Canaanite heard, that Israel came by the way of the spies, he fought against Israel, and tooke some of them prisoners.] This Arad seemeth to have had his name from the place that he reigned over, for of the King of Arad subdued by them it is spoken, Jos. 12. 14. or else the King and the Citie were called both by one name after the name of one of Canaans sonnes, of whom the Arvadites, or as some have it, the Aradites came, Gen. 10. 18. and therefore he is also called a Canaanite. This people then were of the posterity of cursed Canaan inhabiting about that countrey in the south thereof. Touching the occasion of this assault, R. Solomon saith, he heard, that the piller ceased to direct them any more, and that the water failed them; whereupon he gathered that God had forsaken them, which put him in hope to prevaile against them: but he was deceived, for the piller went still before them, till they came to enter into the land of Canaan, as Tostatus saith, in confuting the Rabbin. The Canaanite heard doubtlesse, that they were coming 38 yeares before this, but for the great displeasure taken by God against them, they had been kept hitherto, and wasted in the wilderneſse, and this was the ground of his bold coming to fight with them. But why should I say, he heard, when as the Amalekites and Canaanites had fought with them before, and prevailed about this place, Numb. 14. 45. and hereby they were hardned to come on again at this time. For the way of the spies, thus the Caldee rendereth it, but the Septuagint by the way of Atharim, retaining the Hebrew word. It is most probable, that the way which the searchers had gone, Numb. 13. is hereby meant: And at the first this Canaanite prevaileth against them, Hebr. He tooke captive of them a captivitie, the vulgar latine, Being victor, he carried away a prey from them. Thus God taught them at the first not to trust to their own strength, but afterwards they should prevaile to ascribe all to God. Ferus observeth, that the Aradeans, though they came of Canaan, were none of those that were appointed to destruction, Gen. 15. but they brought destruction now upon themselves; as also Saul and Josias afterwards. But God in his providence disposed thus of it, that they coming out against his people should at last be overthrown, for a preludium of their future successe in destroying all the rest. Whereas R. Solomon saith that the prey now taken by the Aradites was but one maide, and she an Egyptian; it is ridiculous, seeing upon this overthrow given to Israel, to shew that it was not so small, they vowed, if God would grant them to prevaile as followeth.

Vers. 1.

Numb. 33. 40 R. Solomon.

Tostatus.

Note.

Ferus.

R. Solomon.

Then Israel vowed a vow to the Lord, saying, if thou wilt deliver this people into my hands, I will utterly destroy their cities. The Hebrew word rendred utterly destroy, is החרמתי from whence cometh Cherem, accursed, and Hormah, v. 3. the Septuagint render it ἀναθεματῶ, which is to accurse or to destroy, as accursed. This may seem a foolish vow, saith Ferus, for what pleasure could the Lord take take in their destroying of all things, so that no benefit should redound to any hereby? and answereth, that it was highly pleasing to God, seeing hereby they bound themselves from fighting for their own gain, and to fight onely for God, and for his glory. But herein he doth not sufficiently expresse the matter; it is therefore further to be understood, that their cities and all therein, should be to God and nothing to themselves, because they should be slain and burnt with fire, as an holocaust unto the honour of God the giver of the victorie. Some thinke that they meant it should be none otherwise an Anathema, then as Jericho, Jos. 6. 17. the metalls whereof were brought into the Lords treasury, and the living things onely were destroyed with the Citie. But others better observe, that there were three kinds of anathema. 1. When all was

Vers. 2.

Ferus.

Ainsworth.

was destroyed as here. 2. When the metals onely were reserved for the use of the Sanctuary, as in Jerico. 3. When the cattell and the spoil were given as a prey to the people, as in Ai, Josh. 8. 2. The word anathematize in greek is derived ἀπο τὸ ἀνατίθεσθαι, from putting above, or laying up in the Temple of God to his honour, saith Saint Augustine, and to anathematize is to curse, because who so taketh any such thing to himself, as is devoted to God is accursed.

Calvin. Calvin inquiring, why they made this vow to destroy all, answereth, that they did it not doubtless without the advice of Moses, and the dictate of the Spirit, that when they should have overcome, they might not be tempted to stay in these Cities, but go on in their journeyes towards the conquering of more, and yet he saith, that the destruction said to be made according to their vow, was not till afterwards, when they came at their Cities, from which the Aradites had come out to fight against them, for they made many journeyes after this, before they came into Canaan, as we may see, Numb. 33. His meaning therefore is that when they should come into their cities, which were in the entrance or edge of the land, they might not be stayed from going on further, they devoted them thus to utter de-destruction; but the execution of this vow was made in Joshuas time, Josh. 12. 14. For the name Hormah given hereupon to this place, see before Numb. 14.45. whereas it is said, He called the name of the place Hormah, it is to be understood of Israel, spoken of, as one for their agreeing in one hereabout. Hormah, that is, destruction, because by Gods speciall help this place was destroyed; Israel would have it bear the name here for a continuall remembrance of Gods mercy, and to put them in mind of their vow mystically. The coming of the Canaanite against them, &c. set forth the devills opposing of the Apostles amongst the Gentiles, when they were turned from the Jewes, as Idumeans, and their prevailing by persecutions against them bodily, but yer long the Gentiles were subdued, and then all their idolls went to destruction, as devoted hereunto; so Ferus.

Vers. 4. And they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red-sea to compasse the land of Edom, and the soul of the people was much discouraged, because of the way, &c.] When they were denied a passage through the land of Edom, they were forced to return back a long way about, by the Red-sea, as before from Kadesh, Numb. 14. Now because in that their former return they had bin held 38. yeares, they began to fear that they should at this time be long delayed again, till they were wasted in the wilderness as their fathers had bin, and therefore they murmured against God, and against Moses, as if they did nothing but delude them, never meaning to bring them into the land of

Sol. Jarchi. Canaan, so Solomon Jarchi. For these words, the soul of the people was discouraged, Hebr. it is, the soul of the people was shortned or streightned, but the meaning is the same, it was grieved or vexed, so the word is used, Judg. 16.16. and Judg. 10.16. Exod. 6. 6. Job 21. 4. It signifieth also grieving with a kind of loathing, as Zach. 11.8. For these words, because of the way, Hebr. is, in the way, but in, here noteth the cause. And in this was

The mystery. Ferus. Israel a type of the godly again, this is another impediment to them in the way to heaven, by reason of the unkindness of the Edomites their brebrethren, that is, of the wicked, who use them harshly and churlishly; for hereby they are much discouraged, as we may see in Job, whose life was tedious to him for his unkind friends, and in Elijah and Jeremiah, &c. this shewed also the weakness of many, who in time of of persecution fall away, Matth. 13. 21.

Vers. 5. Wherefore have ye brought us out of Egypt to die in the wilderness, we have no bread, nor water, and our soul loatheth this light bread.] Their speaking against God here, is said, 1 Cor. 10. 9. to be a speaking against Christ, or a tempting of Christ, such murmurings and words were frequent with them, Numb. 20. 3. 4. chap. 16. 14. chap. 11. 1. &c. and they shewed their vile esteem eſteem of manna likewiſe, Numb. 11. 5, 6. ſee there the myſterie of all. From the Apoſtles applying this their murmuring againſt Chriſt, it is rightly gathered, that Chriſt is God, neither can the force of this argument be eluded, as it is by ſome, ſaying, that it is ſo ſpoken by the Apoſtle, becauſe Chriſt was now figured out, according to that ſaying of his, 1 Cor. 10.11. all theſe things happened to them in a figure, for the meaning is nothing elſe, but in them periſhing for their ſins, the rebellious under the Goſpel were figured out, who ſhall alſo periſh for their ſins and rebellions againſt Chriſt. This was their fourth murmuring for water: 1 Exod.15. 2. Exod.17. 3. Num.20. and 4. now again ſo ſoon after; from whence we may gather, that the waters given Numb.20. flowed not ſo continually, as thoſe Exod.17. but only for a time, whileſt they and their cattel were ſatisfied, then failing again.

And the Lord ſent fiery ſerpents and they bit the people, and much people of Iſrael dyed.] In what particular place this was done, it is not here expreſſed, but Chap.33.42, they went from Mount Hor to Zalmona, which was 28 miles, and from thence to Phunon, 20 miles, and here it was, that the fiery ſerpents were ſent, and the brazen ſerpent was ſet up, ſo H. Bunting: but Comeſtor ſaith, it was in Zalmona; the firſt is more probable, compare verſ.10. and Chap.33. Theſe ſerpents are called fiery, not becauſe they ſpitted fire upon them, or were like ſparkles of fire flying ſwiftly upon them and burning them, as Comeſtor ſaith in his firſt way of expounding them; but, as in his ſecond, becauſe when they bit them, the venome coming from them wrought like fire in their bodies making them exceeding hot and dry, till that as by fire they were conſumed to death with great torment. They might alſo be in colour red like fire, as Nicander writeth, that ſome ſerpents are, and therefore ſome call them red dart ſerpents, becauſe their property was to come ſuddenly as a dart upon the face or breaſt and ſo to ſting deadly. And that this was their colour is moſt probable, for the artificial ſerpent of braſſe, which is reddiſh, ſet up for a cure. Sol. Jarchi ſaith, that they are called burners, becauſe they burned men with the venome of their teeth: for the Hebrew word Seraphim here uſed, ſignifieth burners, and therefore the Caldee hath it burning ſerpents; but the Sept. deadly: that theſe ſerpents had wings to fly withal, is intimated Eſay 14.29. where fiery flying ſerpents are ſpoken of. And it is not likely that theſe ſerpents were now firſt brought amongſt them into the Wilderneſſe for a puniſhment, but that they were naturally there, as is intimated Deut. 8. 14, 15. but hitherto God had preſerved them from this danger. For deſert places do yeeld many ſuch like ſerpents at this day, which are called dypſas, from thirſt, or cauſon from heat, becauſe whoſo is ſtung by any of them, hath ſuch an inward burning, that he thirſteth extremely; and although he drinketh abundantly, he is by and by athirſt again, till he dyeth, and this is left by the phyſitians, as incurable, ſo Dioſcorides. And theſe kind of ſerpents, ſaith Iſidor, come ſuddenly leaping or flying in the deſerts of Arabia, where the Iſraelites now were in great abundance. Solinus alſo writeth of them being in Lybia or Africa, ſpeaking of their annoying of Cato's army there.

Verſ. 6.

H. Bunting Patriarks travailes.

Scholaſt. hiſt.

Nicander in theriacis.

Sol. Jarchi.

Dioſcorid. lib.6. c.38.

Iſidor. Etymol. 12. c.4.

Solinus de Africa.

Therefore the people came to Moſes and ſaid, We have ſinned, &c. pray to the Lord, that he take away the ſerpents from us, &c.] Affliction maketh the rebellious people to humble themſelves, Pſal. 78. 34. Exod. 9. 27. for the plural, ſerpents, Hebr. is ſerpent; ſo Exod. 8. 6. the frog, for, the frogs; Exod.8.17. the locuſt, for, the locuſts, the whole multitude of them being meant. They ſpake rightly of the cauſe of this miſery, we have ſinned: and as they, ſo whoſoever would have judgments taken off, muſt confeſſe and be humbled for their ſins, the cauſe thereof. The people, that came, were ſuch, as were bitten, but not yet deſtroyed, and all the reſt that ſtood in continual fear of the like evil, Moſes being entreated, out of his meekneſſe

Verſ. 7.

Note. Prov.28.13.

to all prayeth for them, notwithſtanding all the indignities offered to him.

Verſ. 8. And the Lord bade him make a fiery ſerpent and ſet it upon a pole, &c. That is an artificial ſerpent, like one of thoſe that bit them, and of that fiery

V. 9. colour, as appeareth verſ. 9. for he made it of braſſe. It muſt be ſet upon a pole, that when any man was ſtung, he might look up to it and live: the Sept. and Cald. for, a pole, have, a ſign; but the Hebrew word nes, ſignifieth an enſign, or banner, upon this it muſt be put, that it might be ſeen all about, and that not fixed in one place, but being carried with them upon it even till they came in Canaan.

R. Hakkados. Rab. Hakkados ſaith, that this pole was the rod of Aaron that budded, and ſhould bud again and bring forth fruit in the time of the Meſſiah, &c. This man, howſoever accounted moſt holy amongſt the Jews, having therefore the name of Hakkados ſignifying holy given unto him by them, was moſt vain in thus ſaying, both becauſe Aarons rod was too little for this uſe, and was kept in the ſanctuary by expreſſe command; and in ſaying thus he laid a ſtone of ſtumbling to all that believed him, becauſe they never ſaw this rod fructifying any Targum Jonathan. more: whereas it is ſaid, when he looketh upon it, he ſhall live; the Targum Jonathan explaineth it thus, and his heart ſhall be attent to the name of the Word of God, when he looketh upon it, which words, though he were ignorant of it, may well be expounded of Chriſt, the Word of God, who was figured out by this ſerpent, as Chriſt himſelf ſheweth, Joh.3.14. Thus blindfoldedly the Rabbins ſpake ſundry times of Chriſt, as Caiaphas propheſied.

Catharinus de actor. imag. Sander. de imag. lib.2.c.2. Adrianus epiſt. ad Conſtantin. et Irenem. The Popiſh Catharinus and Sanderus fondly hold, that this fiery ſerpent was not only to be looked upon, but alſo to be worſhipped. Pope Adrian the firſt argueth from the looking upon this ſerpent thus, as the people of Iſrael looking upon the brazen ſerpent, the figure of Chriſt, were healed; ſo we by looking upon the images of Chriſt and his Saints and worſhipping them, are ſaved.

2 King. 18.4. But forſomuch as when the people in Hezekiah his time fell to worſhipping of it, that good King brake it in pieces and was commended for it, their great impudency doth herein appear; and the Jeſuite himſelf, as aſhamed of it, ſaith, that Hezekiah brake it, that it might not be honoured with offering to it.

Lorinus

The Myſtery. For the Myſterie, the ſerpent biting the people to their deſtruction, did ſet forth the ſerpent ſeducing our firſt parents; for as he by his temptation poiſoned their ſoules to death, ſo this ſerpent by biting poiſoned the body and deſtroyed it; and thus the old ſerpent the devil, whereſoever he biteth to this day, corrupteth and poiſoneth. 2. As the fiery ſerpent biting in any part deſtroyed the whole body, ſo ſin, which cometh from that ſerpent being admitted in any thing deſtroyeth the whole man, body and ſoul. 3. As that biting was incurable by any art of the Phyſitian, ſo is ſin by any means, that man can uſe, Moſes could not cure the bitten, the law can do nothing, but God only. Yet that the law ſendeth to Chriſt, we may ſee, becauſe Moſes the Law-giver, as he was bidden, directed them

Ferus. Ainſworth.

Revel. 1. 15. to look to the brazen ſerpent. This ſerpent ſet up upon a pole figured out Chriſt hanged upon the croſſe, which is alſo pointed at, Joh.8.28. & Joh. 12.32. For firſt as that was ſet up on high for all to behold, ſo Chriſt is by preaching ſet up moſt publickly for a ſign to all nations. 2. As that

Eſay 17. 7. being looked upon healed, ſo Chriſt being looked upon by faith ſaveth, Joh.3.15. 3. As by a ſerpent came death, and by a ſerpent life; ſo by a a man came death, and by a man life, Rom.5.12. 4. As the brazen ſerpent being a dead thing could not in humane reaſon do any good to the healing of them poiſoned, ſo as that they might have been diſcouraged at 1 Cor.1.23. it, if they had not reſpected Gods ordinance, ſo Chriſt crucified is a ſtumbling block to the Jews, for he could not ſave himſelf, ſaid they, and how then ſhould he ſave us, but it is ſtrange that they conſidered not, how their fathers were healed by a dead thing for a ſign. 5. As the brazen ſerpent was like the other, but without all poiſon, ſo Chriſt is like other men, but without ſin. As the ſerpents were not taken away, but a remedy was provided againſt them, ſo the devil and ſin ceaſeth not, but we are healed ſtill by faith when we cry to God. 7. As healing was now, not to thoſe that looked upon their ſores, or went to the Phyſitian, ſo if any look onely to their ſins, to be humbled, or ſeek remedy by other means, they periſh everlaſtingly, but by looking to Chriſt by the eye of faith we live. Let us not then look barely at the means now appointed to ſave, the holy Sacraments, but to Gods ordinance, believing more, then we ſee; forſomuch as God by means, which ſeem to have no power in them, worketh wonderfully by his grace and Spirit. But whereas the Popiſh hereupon infer, that there is virtue in the ſign of the croſſe made againſt devils and ſerpents and other ſavage beaſts, telling many ſtories to this effect, let them ſhew where this ſign making was ever appointed by God for theſe ends, and we will believe them.

was

Heb. 4. 15. Epheſ. 6 12. 2 Cor. 12 7,8.

And the children of Iſrael ſet forward and pitched in Oboth.] This remove was 24 miles. Oboth ſignifieth a ſerpent called Python, this place was ſo called, becauſe here the Arabians received anſwer from the devill through conjuration. Their biting by ſerpents was before they came hither, and after their remove from mount Hor, in one of the two ſtations, Salmona, or Phunon here not mentioned, but mentioned Chap. 33. 42. Jerom thinketh, that they were bitten in both thoſe places, ſo likewiſe Ambroſe, Iſidor, Beda, &c. and this may be the reaſon happily, why they are not mentioned here, becauſe they ſoon removed hence again being ſo moleſted by want of water and ſerpents. Salmona, ſaith Rabanus, ſignifieth a little image; and Phunon, a little mouth: their coming then from Salmona to Phunon, figured out, that when he who was repreſented by that little brazen image is ſet up in the heart, that is, Chriſt, we cannot but proceed ſtreightway to confeſſe him with the mouth, but then we ſhall ſoon come to ſerpents, that is, to the aſſaults of the devils temptations, figured out in this Oboth, ſignifying ſerpents.

Verſ. 10. H.B. Patriarks travailes. Hieronym. Ambroſ. Rabanus.

The next place of their abode was Jeabbarim in the wilderneſſe before Moab. This H. Bunting calleth Igim upon the hill Abarim, ſaying, that this remove was 16 miles, and that it had the name from Igim a congregation come up to the hill Abarim. This place being in the border of Moab they only paſſed by; for the Lord would not have them to meddle with the Moabites, Deut. 2. 8,9,&c. Ambroſe and Jerome render this name, an heap of ſtones paſſing by: noting hereupon, that the faithful are like ſtones tumbled up and down, &c. but as this was on the Eaſt of Moab towards the ſun-riſing, ſo they look to the Son of righteouſneſſe.

Verſ. 11. H.B. Patriarks travailes. Ambroſ.

From thence they removed and pitched in the valley of Zared.] This place is not named, Chap. 33. but Dibongad, Toſtatus conjectureth Zared to be the general name of that valley, and Dibongad, of the place where they reſted. Jerome, that this and the other places here following were not manſion places, but paſſages, and this is the reaſon of the great difference of names here, and Chap. 33. for here next Zared is Arnon, then Beer, Mattanah, Nahaleel, Bamoth and Piſgah: there next to Dibongad is Almon Diblathaim, the Mountains of Abarim, and the Plains of Moab by Jordan; whereas according to the relation here, they came not to the Plains of Moab immediately from Piſgah, but firſt having fought with Sihon King of Heſhbon, and taken his countrey, and then having gone towards Og, the King of Baſhan, and having ſerved him likewiſe, for after all this ſet forth in this Chapter, they come to the plains of Moab, Chap. 22. 1. I think with Jerom, that Beer and Bamoth were but paſſages, as alſo Mattanah and Nahaleel, and that Dibongad was the ſame with Zared, Almon Diblathaim the place on the other ſide of Arnon, and Piſgah one of the Mountains of Abarim not far from the river Arnon; for when they were paſt Arnon, they fought with Sihon King of the Amorites, whoſe countrey lay all along from thence to Gilead, as is ſhewed, Deut. 2. 24. The reaſon why theſe are to be held to be paſſages, is, becauſe it is not ſaid, they pitched in Beer or Mattanah, &c. but onely they came to Beer, and from the wilderneſſe to Mattanah, &c. and touching Zered, and Arnon, about which places they are ſaid to have pitched; noting ſtations it is not ſaid, they pitched in Zered, or in Arnon, for they were waters, and ſo they could not pitch in them, but in the valley of Zered, and on the other ſide of Arnon; ſo that the particular places where, might well have thoſe other names of Dibongad, and Almondiblathaim. The Cald. paraphraſt ſpeaketh of Beer, Mattanah, &c. according to the ſignification of the words, not as if they were proper names, for he ſaith, when a well was given unto them, for ſo he rendreth Mattanah ſignifying a gift, it deſcended with them to the rivers, for ſo he rendreth Nahaliel, becauſe Nachali ſignifieth rivers, and from the flouds or rivers to the hills, becauſe Bamoth ſignifieth hills or high places, and from the hils to the valley in the fields of Moab and there to the top of the hill, which looks towards Bethjeſhimoth, wherein he ſeemeth to be for that opinion, that the water went after the children of Iſrael miraculouſly, not onely through low, but alſo through high places whitherſoever they journeyed; and ſome Hebrewes adde, that this was done by the leading thereof along by the Princes with their ſtaves digging a way therefore, as is ſaid, v. 18. The Princes digged with their ſtaves. But to return and to ſpeak more particularly of every paſſage: For the valley of Zared the vulgar Latine hath, the river of Zared, and the word Nachal here uſed, ſignifieth both a valley and a river, it is a low place to which it is come by a deſcent, and ſo fit for waters to gather to. And therefore it is likely that moſt common ly there was a ſtream of water running there; yet, Deut. 2. 13. where this paſſage is again commemorated: Moſes ſaith, Get ye over the brook Zered, the ſame tranſlation rendring the ſame word, which is here a valley, a brooke. Comeſtor ſaith, that God wrought ſuch a miracle here again, as before at the Red ſea, dividing the water ſo, that they went over upon dry ground: there is ſome more probability of this touching their paſſage over the next river Arnon, becauſe that which God did there, is joyned with that he did in the Red ſea, verſe 14. But here nothing is ſpoken to intimate it, and it is not likely, that Moſes would have paſſed over ſo great a work of God in ſilence. Dibongad, which was the particular place where they now pitched, was near ſaith H. Bunting, to the floud Zared, bordering upon the Idumeans and Moabites, being 16 miles from Jieabbarim, Zared cometh of Zar, and Jarad, a ſtrange deſcent.

Verſ. 12. Toſtatus. Hieronym.

Cald. Par.

Schol. hiſt.

Patriarks travels.

Verſ. 13. From thence they removed and pitched on the other ſide of Arnon, &c.] This place, as hath been already ſhewed, is called Almon Diblathaim, chap. 33. this remove was 16 miles, Arnon is derived of Arar to curſe and nin to perpetuate. This river Arnon is further ſaid to be in the wilderneſſe, that cometh out of the coaſts of the Amorites, and to divide between Moab and the Amorites. This Arnon, ſaith Joſephus, is a river ſpringing from the mountains of Arabia, and running through the middeſt of the wilderneſſe into the lake Aſphaltites. There was alſo a citie, and a rock ſaith Adricomius, of this name, and through this river Arnon did the children of Iſrael goe upon dry ground, and fought againſt Sihon the King of the Amorites, and overcame him.

Ioſeph. Antiq. c. 2.

Scholaſt. Hiſtor. Hugo, Lyranus.

Comeſtor, Hugo, Lyranus and others relate this ſtory; when the Hebrews were about to enter into the Amorites countrey, the Amorites lay in wait under the rocks for them on both ſides of a narrow way, where they muſt paſſe through the river, ſo that they might overwhelm them with ſtons in their going, or with darts, but by a miracle of God the rocks on both ſides fell and overwhelmed the Amorites, making the river for the time firm firm ground; but when the Hebrews had paſſed over, the rocks on both ſides returned to their old ſtate, and the river ran as before; and for this it is ſaid, v. 14. VVhat he did in the Red ſea, and in the brooks of Arnon: but of thoſe words more by and by. Arnon now divided between Moab and the Amorites; but the land at this time poſſeſſed by the Amorites, is ſaid to have bin taken away by Sihon from the King of Moab, v. 26. So that before this invaſion it was all Moabs countrey.

Verſ. 14.

VVherefore it is ſaid in the booke of the wars of the Lord, what he did in the Red ſea, and in the brooks of Arnon.] Here two great queſtions offer themſelves. 1. What book is meant by the book of the warres of the Lord. 2. Wherein that which he did at the river of Arnon is like that which he did at the Red ſea, becauſe they are compared together? Comeſtor to the firſt ſaith out of Auguſtine, that either the Caldees, from whom Abraham came, happily had a booke amongſt them thus called: or elſe the Egyptians of whom Moſes had learned his wiſedome, wherein it was thus propheſied, and if ſo, Moſes alledged this out of that book of theirs, as Saint Paul afterwards cited a ſaying out of Aratus an Heathen Poet, Acts 17. 28. and out of Epimenides, Tit. 1. 12. But ſome he ſaith by the book of the warres of the Lord underſtand the whole hiſtory of Iſraels proceedings in their warres here written by Moſes: for their warres, ſay the Hebrews, and the warres of the Lord, becauſe he fought for them; and to make this good, they ſay, VVherefore it is ſaid, may be rendred by the future tenſe, it ſhall be ſaid in this hiſtory, and rehearſed in the generations to come, what wonderfull things God did at the river of Arnon. Calvin will not have the word ספר here uſed, rendred a booke, but a narration, as if it had been ſaid, when a relation ſhall be made of the great victory given by the Lord to his people Iſrael. But I ſee no reaſon, why the word book may not be retained; for where is this narration made, but in theſe bookes written by Moſes? yet Eugubinus agreeth herein with Calvin, and Lyranus, and Toſtatus mention this kind of reading, as coming from the Jews.

Queſt. 1.

Schol. hiſt.

Calvin.

But we need not to contend about this. The word יאמר here uſed ſignifieth properly, it ſhall be ſaid, as Cajetan noteth, and if ſo, the ſenſe is plain in the booke, that was now in writing, it ſhall be ſaid, or be ſet forth as a thing moſt memorable, what power God ſhewed here at the entering of the Amorites countrey to be poſſeſſed by the children of Iſrael, as before was ſet forth his power ſhewed at the Red ſea, Fonſeca ſaith, that ſome will have the booke here meant to be the booke of Judges. Toſtatus refelling that before ſpoken of touching this preſent booke of Numbers here meant, ſaith, that the booke of Jaſher, or of the juſt, ſpoken of Joſh. 10. 13. is more probably the booke here meant, wherein he imagineth that Moſes by way of Propheſie, having all things to come touching the people of Iſrael in their proceedings revealed unto him from God, wrote them down in a booke ſo intituled, but this booke, he ſaith, was loſt long agoe, as alſo many more mentioned in divers places of the holy Scriptures, as the Propheſie of Enoch, the booke of Nathan, and Gad, &c. But I leave him to his conjecture, which he had from R. Menahem, who wrote to the ſame effect before, ſaying, that Moſes had a revelation from God, what victory ſhould be obtained here. And conclude with ſome other Hebrewes, and Hugo Victorinus, that none other booke is heare meant, but this written by Moſes himſelfe, herein, ſaith, it ſhall bee ſaid, when it ſhall bee written, becauſe it was not written, till theſe things were done. There is a booke now amongſt the Jewes called the book of the wars of the Lord, but that is ſaid to have been written by R. Ralbag.

Cajetan.

Fonſeca. Toſtatus.

R. Menahem.

For the other queſtion, it is to be underſtood, that all do not render the words alike, the Sept. have it, the warres of the Lord burnt up Zoob: for

Qu. 2.

whereas we commonly render it, Wherefore it is written in the book of the Wars of the Lord, they have it, wherefore it is written in a book, the wars of the Lord burnt up Zoob and the brooks of Arnon. But herein is a plain miſtaking, becauſe the word rendred Zoob is not written with Z, but with vau, והב vaheb. Ainſworth readeth it, Vaheb in a Whirlwind, and the brooks of Arnon. And Junius, againſt Vaheb in the region of Suph, and againſt the rivers of Arnon. And this Vaheb, he ſaith, was King here before, but overcome by Sihon, as is ſaid, verſ. 26. Calvin alſo rendreth it, Vaheb in Suphah; but expoundeth it of that which God did in the red ſea. Some by vaheb underſtand a city, and Luther an high hill by the river Arnon, ſaid to be in Suphah, ſignifying a whirlwind, becauſe the top of it reached to the clouds, where it was continually beaten upon by the winds. The Cald. will have the geſts of the Red Sea, and in Arnon here compared together, ſo likewiſe divers others. I ſee no reaſon to read it, as we commonly do, what he did in the red ſea, &c. becauſe although יהב ſignifieth, he gave, or he did, yet Vaheb will bear no ſuch expoſition, and the particle את eth ſet before it, is never joyned with a verb, but with a noun, ſometimes being without ſignification, and ſerving onely to ſhew the accuſative caſe, and ſometimes ſignifying againſt, as moſt probably it is uſed here before Vaheb; and again before, necalim Arnon, the flouds of Arnon. Moreover, although ים־סוף ſignifieth the Red Sea, סופה Suphah, the word here uſed, is never put for the Red Sea, but properly ſignifieth a whirlwind, as it is uſed Amos 1.14. Eſay 29.6. & 66.15. and the Lords deſtroying by war is in all theſe places ſet forth by the deſtruction coming by fire and by a whirlwind: whereas by thoſe, that ſtand for the Red Sea, as meant here, Deut.1.1. is alledged, wherein the word Suph is found, and in our tranſlation rendred the Red Sea; this will plainly appear to be an errour, if, as Junius, we conſult with verſ.5. deſcribing more fully the place where Moſes then ſpake to the people thoſe words. And whereas Junius maketh it a proper name of a countrey called Suph, it is not ſo probable, becauſe here it is not Suph, but Suphah. I reſolve then in my poor judgment, that Vaheb was ſome King or place ſo called, and Suphah is a whirlwind, and therefore that it is beſt rendred, againſt Vaheb with a whirlwind, and againſt the brooks of Arnon. And the meaning is, that it ſhould be a proverb, and a thing afterwards commonly ſpoken of, as moſt memorable, againſt Vaheb, ſome place of note in the Amorites countrey, with a whirlwind, that is, God brought deſtruction by war ſuddenly as with a whirlwind, and unreſiſtibly, and againſt the brooks of Arnon, that is, bringing the Iſraelites over there; which was the boundary and defence of the Amorites countrey, but had no power to keep them paſſing over to their deſtruction. As for the miraculous relation made of a paſſage given over this river, as over the Red Sea before, ſeeing neither Joſephus nor Philo mention any ſuch thing, and Moſes certainly would not have omitted it, if it had been ſo; I leave it as fabulous to the relators. And if that tranſlation be retained, which ſpeaketh of the Red ſea, it is moſt probable, that nothing elſe is meant, but, as he overthrew Pharaoh in the Red Sea by his Divine power merely, ſo Sihon here nigh the river Arnon.

Ainſworth. Junius. Calvin. Luther.

Verſ. 15. And the ſtream of the brooks that go down to Ar, &c.] This is added, to ſhew how far the Amorites countrey lay, that was now deſtroyed; of Ar the coaſt of Moab, ſee Deut.2.18. it was a city taking the name from Arnon. The vulgar Latine for, the ſtream of the brooks, &c. hath theſe words, ſcopuli torrentium inclinati ſunt, ut requieſcerent in Ar, whereupon many have been carried away fable before recited, as if the rocks had falne upon the Amorites and diverted the courſe of the River another way, to give paſſage to the children of Iſrael; but the former reading is according to the Verſ. 16. Hebrew verity, and therefore rather to be reſted in.

And

And from thence to Beer, that is the Well, whereof the Lord ſpake to Moſes, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.] In the Hebrew there is nothing ſignifying, to; but being rendred word for word, it is, from thence the Well, this is the Well, &c. the Caldee for further explication, when they went from thence, a Well was given them. Now God of his mercy, that they might be ſupplyed with water, cauſeth a ſpring to come forth again miraculouſly in the Wilderneſſe, the people being firſt gathered together to behold the miracle, that they might praiſe him therefore. So that upon their departing from Arnon it muſt be conceived that they began to want water, and therefore without their murmuring God ſupplyeth them, to teach them to depend upon his providence. The vulgar Latine rendreth it thus; from that place, a Well appeared unto them, concerning which God ſpake to Moſes. Junius, forſomuch as Moſes is bidden to gather the people together to this place, ſaith, that this was done, that they might digg here for water.

Junius.

Oleaſter.

Calvin.

Some hold, that this water was none other but that given before, Chap. 20. to which they now came again; and therefore, ſaith Calvin, it is ſpoken of, as a known place, but now was the more attended to, becauſe, as the words imply, aſcend O Well, &c. it miraculouſly accompanied them up hills and Mountains to give them drink. But this of their coming to the ſame place again is contrary to the courſe of their proceedings, they being then upon the coaſt of Edom, now far paſt that, and upon the coaſt of Moab, beſides the name of that place was not Beer, but Meribah. For the conjecture of Junius, it is not ſo probable, becauſe not the peoples, but the Princes digging with their ſtaves is ſpoken of in the ſong.

Queſt.

But how then is God ſaid to have given them a Well here? Anſw. It is moſt probable, that when they ſaw none, he ſhewed a place unto Moſes, where the Princes of the congregation ſhould only ſtrike with their ſtaves, or rods, as Moſes had before done the rock with his, and then the waters flowed forth. For if it had been a Well properly holding water only, although to the brim, ſo great a multitude could not but in a long time have been watered at it. And if by the labour of digging God would have had them to find water there, as men commonly dig to make Wells, there had been need of the labour of many uſed to work, and of ſpades and mattocks, and not of digging by a few Princes only with ſtaves.

Lyranus.

Toſtatus.

Ver. 17.18.

Then Iſrael ſung this ſong, Spring up (O Well) ſing ye unto it: the Princes digged the Well, the nobles of the people digged it by the direction of the Law-giver with their ſtaves, &c.] The Targum Jonathan ſpeaketh of this ſong, as ſung before the coming forth of the waters, ſaying, Aſcend, O Well, aſcend O Well, did they ſing unto it and it aſcended, thus alſo Hugo Victorinus, that they ſang in hope of water. But the more common opinion is, that water being firſt given, they ſang in way of thankfulneſſe. The like was never done by their fathers before for any benefit, of water or manna miraculouſly given them, or for the quailes. The reaſon may be, becauſe thoſe were given them murmuring, and ſo in a courſe of ungodlineſſe; but this without murmuring, they being godly diſpoſed. When the godly receive benefits in their need, they are moſt thankful therefore, but the wicked and rebellious like the ſwine, look not up to the giver to render him praiſe. One ſaith, that they altogether ſang now the ſame words both young and old, the Spirit extraordinarily dictating them unto them, or haply Moſes taught them firſt, and then they ſang thus: aſcend (O well) for ſo it is in Hebrew. This is by ſome underſtood, of flowing over only in great abundance; but by the Cald. as was ſhewed before, of aſcending miraculouſly to higher places, then where the original of it was. Ainſworth expoundeth it thus, aſcend O Well, that is, come up into our hearts never to be forgotten, applying for proof of this phraſe thus uſed, Jer. 3. 16. & Chap. 51. 50. but in both thoſe places the heart is expreſſed, and ſo it

Targum Jonathan.

Hugo.

Note.

Author de mirabil. S.S. lib. 1. c. 21.

Ainſworth.

Exod. 15.21. it is not here; and therefore it is beſt to retain the ſimple meaning, as in our tranſlation is expreſſed, ſpring up, O well.

ſing ye to it] Heb. anſwer to it; That is, let ſome ſing, and others anſwer by turns, as the women anſwered the men by ſinging the like, after the deſtruction of Pharaoh and all his hoaſts in the Red Sea: ſo 1 Sam. 18.7. the women anſwered one another in ſinging. Anſwer to it, is by ſome expounded of the Well, as if it had been ſaid, anſwer in ſinging to the praiſe thereof, or rather of God the giver; or it may be expounded, anſwer to this ditty by repeating it, aſcend, O well. For the manner of the Princes digging this well, enough hath been ſaid already; but it is here further added, by the direction of the Law-giver; Hebr. by the Law-giver. Cajetan. במחוקק, which word Cajetan obſerveth to ſignifie a graver, or carver, and becauſe God graved the Law in tables of ſtone, he is firſt and properly ſignified hereby, and by the uſe of the word Moſes, by whom the law was given, for ſo any lawgiver is called, Deut. 33.21. It is meant then by Moſes, who appointed them to this work, that they digged. That which Cajetan addeth further, that the name of God haply was ingraven upon this place, where they digged, and by virtue thereof theſe waters came out, is but a fond conjecture; and from the wilderneſſe to Mattanah, Hebr. from the wilderneſſe Mattanah; which word Mattanah ſignifieth a gift, and accordingly it is rendred in Targum Jonathan, from the wilderneſſe it was given them for a gift; and by Cazkuni, from the wilderneſſe, a place of drought, water was given them for a gift, ſo likewiſe the Caldee, making this a part of the ſong, for which cauſe it is added to this verſe. Yet Cazkuni elſewhere ſaith, this hath reference to that, verſ.13. as if it had been ſaid, from the wilderneſſe on the other ſide of Arnon, called Almon Diblathaim, Numb.33.46. they came to Mattanah called the mounts of Abarim, verſ. 47. and this is ſaid to be before Nebo, the name of a place on the North ſide of Arnon, which was the beginning of the Kingdome of Sihon the Amorite, and it is called Mattanah, a gift, becauſe there began the gift of the land unto Iſrael, Deut.2.24,31. And this, I take it, is the ſounder expoſition, becauſe in ſpeaking of the next place Nahaliel, and the next, Bamoth, the like phraſe is uſed.

Targum Jonathan. Cazkuni.

Verſ. 19. from Mattanah, Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel Bamoth, &c.] Theſe words, they came to, being left to be underſtood; of the divers names of theſe places, ſee before, verſ.12. Cazkuni will have Nahaliel to be the plaines of Moab, and Bamoth, Bethjeſhimoth mentioned, Num.33.49.

Verſ. 20. And from Bamoth to the valley in the countrey of Moab to the top of Piſgah, which looketh towards Jeſhimon.] For countrey, in Hebr. is, the field of Moab, this valley is called Abel Shittim in the plains of Moab, ſo Cazkuni. For the top of Piſgah, Hebr. is, the head of Piſgah; which may be expounded either the beginning of that hill, or the top of it, but it is moſt commonly taken for the top; but how then can it be joyned by appoſition to the valley, it ſeemeth therefore rather to be the beginning, or the entrance of that hill; for the top was in the Moabites poſſeſſion, and to it Balaam was brought, chap.23.14. Jerom deriveth Piſgah or Phaſgah from exciſus, cut out, or from os multum. It is one of the Mountains of Abarim, as mount Nebo is another.

Numb 33.49.

Hieron. de locis Hebr.

which looketh towards Ieſhimon] The word Jeſhimon ſignifieth a deſert, Deut 32.10. Pſal.68.8. & 78.40. and therefore it is thus rendred by Jerome, which looketh towards the deſert. But there is a place, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, called Jeſhimon, ſo called, becauſe it is deſolate; and Cazkuni ſaith, it is a great wilderneſſe. The Sept. yet make it an appellative, rendring it towards the deſert. Now Moſes is not ſo accurate in ſetting down all theſe removes, and the Well, and the Song hereupon without a myſtery, as many think. Rupertus beginning at the place, where the brazen ſerpent was ſet up, ſaith, after that Chriſt is ſet up for a ſign, and his faith is imbraced, braced, which was typified in the brazen serpent, as the faithfull are first assaulted by the devils temptations typified in Oboth, vers. 11. and then by persecutions, being as stones tumbled about typified in Iieabbarim. of which see before, so in the next place they come to the trouble of heresies, and strange opinions set forth by Zared, v. 12. whereby they are in danger of a curse set forth by Arnon: but after a while sound doctrine appeareth again, being made to overflow by the labour of some prime teachers, whom God stirred up and shewed it unto them, set forth by Beer appearing, God shewing it to Moses, and the Princes digging it with their staves, then all true Israelites sing together, that is, consent in the unitie of the same faith. And this is the gift of God set forth by Mattanah, whereby they that receive it also, ascend by the virtue of an active life set forth by Nahaliel, the ascent of God, and then by the high grace of contemplation set forth by Bamoth, high places: And lastly, resting in the humilitie of high understanding set forth by the valley in the top of Pisgah, their faces are set against the desart of Satan, who maketh desolate by his lies. Not much unlike to this are the allegories of Origen, Rabanus, and others.

Sol. Jarchi.

Rupertus. The myſtery.

And Israel sent messengers to Sihon, King of the Amorites, &c.] Deut.2. 26. Moses is said, to have sent messengers, but this is no difference, they sent them by the direction of Moses; and therefore both he is said to send them, as the director, and they, as in whose behalfe they were sent. Now although Pisgah be the place last spoken of, to which they came; yet it is to be understood that they sent not from thence, for they were not yet come to that place, nor to Bamoth, nor Nahaliel, nor Mattanah, nor Beer, but most probably were towards the passing over the river Arnon onely, when they sent, and therefore all these passages are here set down before by anticipation. For Deut. 2. 24. they are excited to passe over Arnon, and to take possession of the Amorites countrey, and verse 26. Moses saith, then I sent messengers out of the wilderneſse of Kedemoth to Sihon, &c. After which followeth the fight with him and the conquest of all places from Aroer upon the bank of Arnon all along to Galaad, or Gilead, v.36. beyond which lay Bamoth nigh to the river Jordan, as may be seen by comparing, vers. 20. with chap. 22. 1. and Deut. 2. 29. Jordan is spoken of, as the uttermost place, to which they desired to passe through the Amorites countrey. Kedemoth was a citie in Sihons countrey, Jos. 13.18.c. 21. 37. and near this was a wilderness called the wilderness of Kedemoth: Whereas Sihon is called King of the Amorites, it is to be understood, that he was not King of them all, but of part, and Og of another part, dwelling and reigning both on this side Jordan, as the Canaanites did on the other, see Jos. 12.1,2,3,4. but these were also of the Canaanites. The message now sent to Sihon was as before to the King of Edom, chap.20. 14. for leave to go through his countrey without doing any hurt, but as the King of Edom, so he denied their request and came out with his people to fight against them, but they slew him and possessed all his countrey. If it be demanded, why Moses sent thus in a peaceable manner to desire leave to passe, when as before this, as is shewed, Deut. 2. 24. the Lord had promised to give the countrey of Sihon to them for a possession, and therefore there was a full intent to fight against him? Tostatus answereth, that this sending was for a shew, that the destruction ensuing upon so reasonable a request denied, might be the more justifiable both before God and man. Wherefore it is said, God hardned his heart not to let them passe, but to come against them to his own destruction, Deut.2.30. But it may further be demanded, how the examples brought, Deut.2. 19. from the King of Edom, and of Moab suffering them to passe can be justified, seeing the King of Edom denied them passage? To this it is answered, that although at the first he would not suffer them, yet afterwards he did suffer them to passe quietly upon his borders and let them have necessaries for their money:

Vers. 21.

Deut. 3.8.

Vers. 22, 23,24.

Quest.

Tostatus.

Quest.

Exod.15.21. it is not here; and therefore it is beſt to retain the ſimple meaning, as in our tranſlation is expreſſed, ſpring up, O well.

ſing ye to it] Heb. anſwer to it; That is, let ſome ſing, and others anſwer by turns, as the women anſwered the men by ſinging the like, after the deſtruction of Pharaoh and all his hoaſts in the Red Sea: ſo 1 Sam. 18.7. the women anſwered one another in ſinging. Anſwer to it, is by ſome expounded of the Well, as if it had been ſaid, anſwer in ſinging to the praiſe thereof, or rather of God the giver; or it may be expounded, anſwer to this ditty by repeating it, aſcend, O well. For the manner of the Princes digging this well, enough hath been ſaid already; but it is here further added, by the direction of the Law-giver; Hebr. by the Law-giver.

Cajetan. במחוקק, which word Cajetan obſerveth to ſignifie a graver, or carver, and becauſe God graved the Law in tables of ſtone, he is firſt and properly ſignified hereby, and by the uſe of the word Moſes, by whom the law was given, for ſo any lawgiver is called, Deut. 33. 21. It is meant then by Moſes, who appointed them to this work, that they digged. That which Cajetan addeth further, that the name of God haply was ingraven upon this place, where they digged, and by virtue thereof theſe waters came out, is but a fond conjecture; and from the wilderneſſe to Mattanah, Hebr. from the wilderneſſe Mattanah; which word Mattanah ſignifieth a

Targum Jonathan. gift, and accordingly it is rendred in Targum Jonathan, from the wilderneſſe it was given them for a gift; and by Cazkuni, from the wilderneſſe, a place

Cazkuni. of drought, water was given them for a gift, ſo likewiſe the Caldee, making this a part of the ſong, for which cauſe it is added to this verſe. Yet Cazkuni elſewhere ſaith, this hath reference to that, verſ.13. as if it had been ſaid, from the wilderneſſe on the other ſide of Arnon, called Almon Diblathaim, Numb.33.46. they came to Mattanah called the mounts of Abarim, verſ. 47. and this is ſaid to be before Nebo, the name of a place on the North ſide of Arnon, which was the beginning of the Kingdome of Sihon the Amorite, and it is called Mattanah, a gift, becauſe there began the gift of the land unto Iſrael, Deut.2.24,31. And this, I take it, is the ſounder expoſition, becauſe in ſpeaking of the next place Nahaliel, and the next, Bamoth, the like phraſe is uſed.

Verſ. 19. from Mattanah, Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel Bamoth, &c.] Theſe words, they came to, being left to be underſtood; of the divers names of theſe places, ſee before, verſ.12. Cazkuni will have Nahaliel to be the plaines of Moab, and Bamoth, Bethjeſhimoth mentioned, Num.33.49.

Verſ. 20. And from Bamoth to the valley in the countrey of Moab to the top of Piſgah, which looketh towards Jeſhimon.] For countrey, in Hebr. is, the field of Moab,

Numb 33.49. this valley is called Abel Shittim in the plains of Moab, ſo Cazkuni. For the top of Piſgah, Hebr. is, the head of Piſgah; which may be expounded either the beginning of that hill, or the top of it, but it is moſt commonly taken for the top; but how then can it be joyned by appoſition to the valley, it ſeemeth therefore rather to be the beginning, or the entrance of that hill; for the top was in the Moabites poſſeſſion, and to it Balaam which looketh towards Ieſhimon] The word Jeſhimon ſignifieth a deſert, Deut 32.10. Pſal.68.8. & 78.40. and therefore it is thus rendred by Je-

Hieron. de locis Hebr. was brought, chap.23.14. Jerom deriveth Piſgah or Phaſgah from exciſus, cut out, or from os multum. It is one of the Mountains of Abarim, as mount Nebo is another.

Sol. Jarchi. rome, which looketh towards the deſert. But there is a place, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, called Jeſhimon, ſo called, becauſe it is deſolate; and Cazkuni ſaith, it is a great wilderneſſe. The Sept. yet make it an appellative, rendring it towards the deſert. Now Moſes is not ſo accurate in ſetting down all theſe removes, and the Well, and the Song hereupon without a myſtery, as braced, which was typified in the brazen serpent, as the faithfull are first assaulted by the devils temptations typified in Oboth, vers. 11. and then by persecutions, being as stones tumbled about typified in Iieabbarim. of which see before, so in the next place they come to the trouble of heresies, and strange opinions set forth by Zared, v. 12. whereby they are in danger of a curse set forth by Arnon: but after a while sound doctrine appeareth again, being made to overflow by the labour of some prime teachers, whom God stirred up and shewed it unto them, set forth by Beer appearing, God shewing it to Moses, and the Princes digging it with their staves, then all true Israelites sing together, that is, consent in the unitie of the same faith. And this is the gift of God set forth by Mattanah, whereby they that receive it also, ascend by the virtue of an active life set forth by Nahaliel, the ascent of God, and then by the high grace of contemplation set forth by Bamoth, high places: And lastly, resting in the humilitie of high understanding set forth by the valley in the top of Pisgah, their faces are set against the desart of Satan, who maketh desolate by his lies. Not much unlike to this are the allegories of Origen, Rabanus, and others.

Rupertus. many think. Rupertus beginning at the place, where the brazen ſerpent

The myſtery. was ſet up, ſaith, after that Chriſt is ſet up for a ſign, and his faith is imbraced,

And Israel sent messengers to Sihon, King of the Amorites, &c.] Deut. 2. 26. Moses is said, to have sent messengers, but this is no difference, they sent them by the direction of Moses; and therefore both he is said to send them, as the director, and they, as in whose behalfe they were sent. Now although Pisgah be the place last spoken of, to which they came; yet it is to be understood that they sent not from thence, for they were not yet come to that place, nor to Bamoth, nor Nahaliel, nor Mattanah, nor Beer, but most probably were towards the passing over the river Arnon onely, when they sent, and therefore all these passages are here set down before by anticipation. For Deut. 2. 24. they are excited to passe over Arnon, and to take possession of the Amorites countrey, and verse 26. Moses saith, then I sent messengers out of the wildernesse of Kedemoth to Sihon, &c. After which followeth the fight with him and the conquest of all places from Aroer upon the bank of Arnon all along to Galaad, or Gilead, v. 36. beyond which lay Bamoth nigh to the river Jordan, as may be seen by comparing, vers. 20. with chap. 22. 1. and Deut. 2. 29. Jordan is spoken of, as the uttermost place, to which they desired to passe through the Amorites countrey. Kedemoth was a citie in Sihons countrey, Jos. 13. 18. c. 21. 37. and near this was a wilderness called the wilderness of Kedemoth: Whereas Sihon is called King of the Amorites, it is to be understood, that he was not King of them all, but of part, and Og of another part, dwelling and reigning both on this side Jordan, as the Canaanites did on the other, see Jos. 12. 1, 2, 3, 4. but these were also of the Canaanites. The message now sent to Sihon was as before to the King of Edom, chap. 20. 14. for leave to go through his countrey without doing any hurt, but as the King of Edom, so he denied their request and came out with his people to fight against them, but they slew him and possessed all his countrey. If it be demanded, why Moses sent thus in a peaceable manner to desire leave to passe, when as before this, as is shewed, Deut. 2. 24. the Lord had promised to give the countrey of Sihon to them for a possession, and therefore there was a full intent to fight against him? Tostatus answereth, that this sending was for a shew, that the destruction ensuing upon so reasonable a request denied, might be the more justifiable both before God and man. Wherefore it is said, God hardned his heart not to let them passe, but to come against them to his own destruction, Deut. 2. 30. But it may further be demanded, how the examples brought, Deut. 2. 19. from the King of Edom, and of Moab suffering them to passe can be justified, seeing the King of Edom denied them passage? To this it is answered, that although at the first he would not suffer them, yet afterwards he did suffer them to passe quietly upon his borders and let them have necessaries for their money:

Vers. 21.

Deut. 3. 8.

Vers. 22, 23, 24.

Quest.

Tostatus.

Quest.

ney: of the cause of Sihons deniall, see Judg. 11. 20. he feared and mistrusted evill from them. The place, to which Sihon came, Jahaz was a citie of the Amorites, saith Adricomius, having but a few people in it: whereas it is said here they smote him with the edge of the sword, &c. Deut. 2. 33. it is said, God delivered him into their hands, so that their victory was from a divine power, as Judg. 11. 21. and it is therefore accordingly celebrated with praise, Psalm. 135. 10. Psalm. 136. 17. Amos. 2. 9. And they possessed his land from Arnon to Iabbok, even to the children of Ammon, &c. Deut. 2. 36. it is said from Aroer to Gilead, but there also the river Jabbok on the border of the Ammonites is made the bound of their conquest, because as is said, verse 19. they were forbidden to take any thing from the Amorites, as from the Moabites that came of Lot; but here it is said, for the border of the children of Ammon was strong, and this was by reason of the mountains, Deut. 2. 37. But it was not the reason of their taking nothing from the Amonites, but why Sihon had not taken any thing from them beyond Jabbok, for they were very strong, partly by means of that river, and partly of the mountains, upon which their cities were built. But all this tract from Arnon to Jabbok belonging formerly to the Moabites, the brethren of the Ammonites; Sihon had taken from them, as it here followeth, v. 26, 27. but that they tooke nothing from Ammon is here specially commemorated, and Deut. 2. 37. that the Ammonites quarrell which should afterwards be about these lands, might appear to be unjust, Judg. 11. for the King of Ammon challengeth them, as taken from the Ammonites, but Iephtah answereth, that they tooke them from the Amorites, not from the Ammonites, and Moab their brother whom it most concerned, from whom they were first taken, sat still and made no warre to recover them, as indeed there was no reason that he should, seeing they were long since put from this possession by the Amorites, and now the Israelites by Gods speciall aid took them from them again. And thus they medled with nothing of Ammon or Moab, according to the prohibition of the Lord, although they possessed the countrey that had been sometime Moabitish. The Amorites having it so long, say the Rabbins, made it lawfull for the Israelites to take, which otherwise had not beene so.

Adricomius.

Vers. 25. And Israel dwelt in all the cities of Heshbon, and the villages thereof, Hebr. and in all the daughters thereof.] For cities by the Hebrewes were counted as mothers, and villages about them as their daughters. The Cald. according to the meaning hath it, and in all the villages thereof.

Vers. 26. Heshbon was the chief citie of Sihon, which he tooke from the former King of Moab. Lorinus, the Jesuite saith, that Balak was the King, from whom he took it, who now reigned in Moab, and that before him they had no Kings but Dukes, as the Edomites also at the first had; but how then is it said, from the former King: upon this it hath been a little touched before, that happily one Vaheb was King there before. For the allegory found here in Sihon, signifying an high tree, or pride, and Heshbon signifying chief thoughts, according to Rabanus, Origen, Isidor and others following them, who will have the kingdome of the devill, who is the prince of pride set forth hereby, and the thoughts of the heart to be his chief citie, and his overthrow by Israel, and their dwelling in all his cities and villages, and possessing them, the subduing of all countries and nations unto Christ, the devill being put down, and the dwelling of the spirit in the hearts of all the faithfull, the strong man armed being overcome; according to this allegory, I say, all the other kingdomes of the Canaanites subdued also afterwards, and possessed by the Israelites may be spoken of; and such applications may serve excellently to illustrate the prevailings of Christs Gospell, and I doubt not, but they were notable types and figures hereof. And in every heart, Sihon with his Amorites, that is, pride and the amarulencie

Lorinus.

The Mystery.

Origen, Raban, Isidor.

Note.

lency or bitterneſſe of errour, as the Amorite is expounded, muſt be overthrown, humility and truth being imbraced, and all the thoughts of the heart muſt be poſſeſſed by virtue, or elſe the devil reigneth ſtill, and Chriſts Kingdom is not ſet up in us, that we ſhould one day be ſet up with him in his moſt glorious Kingdom of heaven.

VVherefore they that ſpeak in proverbs ſay, Come into Heſhbon, let the city of Sihon be built, for there is a fire gone out of Heſhbon, a flame from Sihon, &c.] The ſpeeches here commemorated were taunting ſpeeches or by-words uſed amongſt the Amorites, after the ſubduing of theſe parts, and taking them from the Moabites, to the diſgrace of them, and the praiſe of Sihon, the Victorer, ſo the word proverb is uſed, Deut.28.37. 2 Chron.7.20. Jer. 24.9. Hab.2.6. Sol Jarchi ſaith, that Balaam was ſent for by Sihon to curſe the Moabites for him, and then he prevailed, which he could not do before, whereupon Balaak, the King of Moab ſaid afterwards unto him, I know, that they are curſed, whom thou curſeſt; and in Tancheuma Hebræ: it is ſaid, that theſe proverbs after this were made by Balaam and Beor his father. But this is uncertain. Come into Heſhbon, &c. that is, come build and dwell here now without fear, which they could not do before in the time whileſt it was under the King of Moab, becauſe he was weak and unable to defend them, but now it was in the hands of Sihon, a mighty King, ſo Cazkuni. A fire is gone out, &c. the Cald. a ſtrong eaſt wind like fire and Warriours like a flame: the Targum Hieroſol. a people ſtrong and burning like fire, and Warriours like a flame. And it is not unuſual to ſet forth Warriours, that deſtroy with fire and ſword by the name of whirlwinds and fire, as was ſhewed before upon verſ. 14. ſee alſo Eſay 47.14. Dan.11.33. Obad.1.18. But whether did the Warriours go from Heſhbon and from Sihon? Anſ. Sihon ſent them out from thence to other towns and villages about, after that he had taken Heſhbon the chief city of the countrey, ſo Hugo, Lyranus, &c. It hath conſumed Ar of Moab: the Cald. it hath eaten up or devoured the people of Lecaiath of Moab: for Ar, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, is in the Syriack tongue called Lecaiath: and this underſtanding by Ar, the people of Ar is moſt probable, becauſe Sihons army deſtroyed not the city of Ar, that was ſtill the Moabites city, Deut.2. 9,18. for the ſcituation of it, Jerom ſaith, that it was the metropolitan city of Moab upon the borders between Moab and the Amorites, calling Ar, Aroer, or Arnon, and afterwards he ſaith, it was called Areopolis.

Verſ. 27, 28.

Sol. Jarchi.

Chap. 22.

Cazkuni. Cald. Par. Targ. Hieroſol.

Hugo Cardin. Lyranus. Cald. Par.

Hieron. in locis Hebr.

and the Lords of the high places of Arnon.] By Lords of the high places, the Caldee underſtandeth the Chemarim, or prieſts, which ſerved in the temples of their gods, called high places; and Targum Jonathan in the ſame ſenſe, they killed their Prieſts, that ſacrificed before their idols in Arnon, and that in Moab their Idols temples were called high places, ſee Jer.48.35. Some yet by Lords underſtand the chief men there; the Sept. render it, the pillars of Arnon.

Cald. Par. Targum Jonathan.

VVoe to thee Moab, thou art undone, the people of Chemoſh, &c.] Chemoſh was the idol of the Moabites, 1 King. 1.33. and of the Ammonites alſo, Judg.11.24. and therefore the Moabites are called the people of Chemoſh; thus alſo Jer.48.46. To this Chemoſh Solomon afterwards built an high place, 1 King.11.7. Chemoſh is derived from כ ſicut, and משש tractare, palpare, from hence is thought to come comeſſatio, becauſe they kept feaſts unto riot in the honour of this idol; and Comedia, from the Playes acted then.

Verſ. 29.

He hath given his ſons, &c. into captivity] Thus the Moabites were derided by their god, that could not ſave them from deſtruction and captivity; he hath given, that is, according to the opinion of idolaters; when as indeed an idol is nothing, and can do no nothing, yet thus Jephtah alſo ſpeaketh to the King of Moab, of what Chemoſh his god had given unto him.

Judg.11.24.

VVe

Verſ. 30. We have ſhot at them, Heſhbon is periſhed,&c.] Hebr. their light is periſhed, Heſhbon even to Dibon, and here light is by the Sept. expounded by ſeed, meaning the ſeed-Royal, ſo that none of the race of the Kings of Moab ſhall reign here any more, ſo Cazkuni expoundeth it: the Cald. the Kingdom is ceaſed from Heſhbon even to Dibon; ſo likewiſe Targum Hieroſol. and in this ſenſe lamp or light is uſed, 1 King. 11.36. and 15.4. Dibon was one of the cities of Moab, Eſay 15.2. Jer.48.18. Jerom ſaith, there were two places of this name, one in the wilderneſſe, and another a great town by the river Arnon, coming afterwards to the poſſeſſion of the Gadites. For our tranſlation, we have ſhot at them; it may alſo be thus rendred; but the former is better: the vulgar Latine hath it, their yoke is periſhed.

Cald. Par.

Hieron.in locis Hebr.

and we have laid them waſte even to Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.] Of Nophah no mention is made again elſewhere, but of Nopheth, Joſ. 17. 11. which fell to the tribe of Manaſſeh. The Sept. render it, and their women kindled a fire upon Moab, taking the word נשים here uſed for women, and נפח, for blowed or kindled, as the word ſignifieth; but neither doth the point in the right horn of ש agree, for it muſt be in the left to ſignifie women, nor the number of נפח, being ſingular, if it be taken for a verb, and of Moab no mention is made hereat all: נשים therefore cometh rather of שמם to make deſolate; and ſo it is beſt rendred, we have laid them waſte. Medeba, ſaith Jerom, was a city in Arabia, and Adricomius ſaith it was ſometime the chief city of the Ammonites, to theſe two places the Amorites chaſed the Moabites, deſtroying all unto them.

Hieron.in locis Hebr.

Verſ. 31. Thus Iſrael dwelt in the Amorites land and Moſes ſent to ſpie out Jaazer,&c.] This Jaazar was a city yet unconquered by Moſes, of the fertility of it, ſee Chap.32.1,2. and how it was built and inhabited by the Gadites, verſ. 35. Jerom ſaith, that this city was 15 miles from Heſhbon by Jordan upon the border of the countrey of Gad, and belonged alſo to the Amorites, being as the reſt taken by them from the Moabites. This was alſo now taken by the Iſraelites, and they dwelt in it, and the villages thereof, or daughters thereof, for ſo villages are called in Hebrew.

Hieron. de locis Hebr.

Verſ. 33. And they turned by the way of Baſhan and Og the King of Baſhan went out againſt them,&c.] This was another King of the Amorite, as is ſhewed Deut. 3.8,21. where the hiſtory is more largely ſet down. How fruitful of paſture this country was, ſee Deut.32.14. Amos 4.1. Mich.7.14. Jer.50.19. For the cauſe of Og his coming out againſt them, Joſephus ſaith, that he came to help his friend and confederate Sihon, but ſeeing all his deſtroyed, he notwithſtanding ſet upon Iſrael and was deſtroyed alſo. That this King Og was a mighty giant, & how great his bed was, ſee Deut.3.11. The place where this battel was fought, was at Edrei, which was one of the cities belonging to Og, Ioſ.12.4. it is ſaid, that Og reigned over Aſhteroth & Ederi, intimating theſe to be his chief cities, for he reigned over 60 with walls, gates and barres. The event of this war was the ſame with that againſt Sihon, the King and all his people were deſtroyed, and all his countrey came into the poſſeſſion of the Iſraelites, which of what extent it was, ſee Deut.3.10,11,&c. This Edrei was 12 miles from Jaazer, and that eight from Heſhbon, and Heſhbon four from Jahaz, and Jahaz 16 miles from the hills of Abarim, ſo H. B. Patriarks travels. Whereas Og is ſaid here to be deſtroyed, and his ſons and his people, it may be doubted how this agreeth with Deut.3.11. onely Og remained of the race of the giants, becauſe if he had ſons that were giants, he remained not alone? But this is eaſily reſolved, either his ſons were not giants, as he was, or elſe by him only remaining is to be underſtood, Og with his ſons haply not yet grown up, and ſo not worth the reckoning amongſt giants. This ſaith Ferus, was a figure of the devil, as alſo Sihon and Pharaoh: for as there were many Joſeph. lib.4. antiq. c.5.

Deut. 3.10.

Deut. 3.4.

Ver.34,35.

Qq. Ferus.

figures

figures of Chriſt, that his divers excellencies might be the better ſet forth in divers worthy men; ſo there were divers figures of the devil to ſet forth the better his divers evil qualities. Pharaoh was the figure of his cruelty, Sihon of his envy, and Og of his great power terrifying the godly. And he noteth, how the people of Iſrael coming now nearer to the land of Canaan met with a more terrible adverſary, then ever before; for this was ſuch a mighty Giant, that they were ſtricken with much fear by him, which is intimated in that God comforteth them, bidding them not to fear him; ſo the nearer the faithful come to death, and ſo to the heavenly Canaan, the greater are their terrours; but herein lyeth their comfort, the devil, who is now ſo terrible to them, ſhall not be able to ſtand before them, but God will tread Satan under their feet. Note. Rom.16.20.

CHAP. XXII.

AND the children of Iſrael ſet forward and pitched in the plains of Moab on this ſide of Iordan by Iericho.] They pitched here from Bethjeſhimoth to Abel Shittim, Deut.33.49. which two places are held by ſome to be 12 miles aſunder, and therefore to be two ſeveral manſions; but the more probable and common received opinion is, that here is ſet forth but one manſion, being the 42 and laſt that they made, before their paſſing over Jordan, and this manſion was between a city in Moab called Bethjeſhimoth, and a Plain called Abel-Shittim, the whole ſpace between being occupied by them, and their appurtenances. And in this place all things were done, that are commemorated from hence forward, till the death of Moſes. And to this place they are ſaid to have come from the mountains of Abarim, chap. 33.49. becauſe when before verſ. 11. they came from Abarim over Arnon, and ſo fought againſt Sihon, &c. they had moſt probably left their wives and children there with many of their company, and now having obtained theſe victories they return to bring forward their whole camp hither, and this is their ſetting forward here ſpoken of. The plains ſaid here to be the plains of Moab were part of the Amorites countrey, which the Iſraelites had now conquered, but they retained ſtill their name from Moab, to whom they had before belonged: by Jericho, that is, over againſt Jericho, which ſtood on the other ſide of the river Jordan, of which, ſee Joſ.6. Verſ. 1.

And Balak the ſon of Zippor ſaw all that Iſrael had done to the Amorites, and Moab was ſore afraid of the people, &c.] God had given them a charge not to meddle with any thing of the Moabites, Deut.2.9. yet they hearing of their victories againſt the Amorites their next neighbours feared greatly; thus verifying that, Exod.15.15. the mighty men of Moab trembling, &c. Verſ. 2.

And Moab ſaid to the Elders of Midian, now ſhall this company lick up all that are round about us as an oxe licketh up the graſſe, &c.] Midian or Madian is thought by ſome to have been on the Eaſt of Moab extending to Euphrates; but by Jerom, a city near unto Arnon, and he ſaith there was another of that name beyond the Mountains of Abarim in the deſert of the Saracens, near the Red ſea. This laſt was 160 miles from Jeruſalem, here Jethro Moſes his father in law dwelt, and the Kings of Edom ſometime kept their court here, 1 King.11.18. the other Midian was but 24 miles from Jeruſalem upon the borders of Moab, ſo that the Midianites had not all one, but two ſeats. And of the Midianites near to Moab it is here ſpoken. They all had their original from Madian, the ſon of Abraham by Keturah, and ſo there was ſome alliance between them and the Moabites, who came of Lot, but they were nearer in bloud to the Iſraelites, yet being now degenerated in religion, as the Moabites alſo were, they held as confederates together againſt Iſrael. The Elders of Midian were their Senatours or Princes. Verſ. 4. Fonſeca. Hieron. de locis Hebr. H. Bunting Patriarks travels. Gen.25. 1 Chron.1.46.

Ioſeph. lib. 4. antiq. c. 6.

Joſephus ſaith, that Balak the King of Moab ſent Embaſſadours to them to conſult what was to be done, and they adviſe to ſend for Balaam, their Embaſſadors being joyned with thoſe of Moab, that he might curſe them; for he ſaw, that they prevailed againſt mighty kingdomes, and therefore he durſt not ſet upon them in battell. Comeſtor ſaith, that he ſent and called for them to come to him, that they might conſult together for their common good, and ſo by their advice he ſent for Balaam. Toſtatus ſaith, that the Midianites dwelt amongſt the Moabites as coming all of one ſtock, but this is not probable, for Midian is fought againſt c. 31. and deſtroyed, but Moab not, and together with the five Princes of Midian fell Balaam, chap 31. 8. whereby it is gathered, that he was one of them, but of this ſee more, v. 5. Origen ſaith, that they conſidered, how Moſes the Captain of the Iſraelites had prevailed by words and prayers againſt Pharaoh and Amalek; and therefore, that it was not fit to go againſt them with armes, but to oppoſe words, and incantations againſt words and prayers, and therefore they conſulted to ſend for Balaam the moſt famous for incantations of all the Eaſt, and he addeth that in the phraſe uſed by Balak, They will now lick up all about as an Ox licketh up hay, there was an alluſion to the mouth, by the words and prayers whereof they cut down as by force of armes, and conſumed all, as an oxe the graſſe with his mouth, and this he ſaith he learned of a convert Hebrew, his maſter: for ſuch maſters the fathers commonly vſed. The Princes of Midian ſaid to be ſlain, chap. 31. 8. are called Dukes of Sihon, Joſ. 13. 21. and this Sihon King of the Amorites, as hath been already ſhewed, was a deadly enemy to the Moabites, and had taken their countrey in a great part from them, ſo that in reaſon they had no cauſe to be troubled at his overthrow, or to ſeek help from ſuch as had ſerved under him, againſt them, but to have rejoyced, ſeeing they were now delivered from this tyrant. But they contrariwiſe fear the Iſraelites and combine with the Midianites againſt them, which turned to the deſtruction of Midian, chap. 31. againſt whom otherwiſe the Iſraelites ſhould have had no quarrell.

Scholi. hiſt.

Toſtatus.

Origen. Hom. 13.

Verſ. 5.

He ſent meſſengers therefore to Balaam the ſon of Beor to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, &c.] The Cald. for further explication ſaith, to Pethor of Aram, which is by Euphrates: Comeſtor ſaith, by the river of the Ammonites, and ſo the vulgar Latine rendreth it, becauſe the Hebrew עמו ſignifying people, is the name of the Ammonites, that came of Lot alſo. But it is plain, that Euphrates in Aram is meant, ſee chap. 23. 7. And Joſephus ſaith, that he dwelt in Pethor, a city beyond Euphrates, which is in Meſopotamia, and this was in the countrey, where ſometime Abraham dwelt, the land of the Caldees; ſo that Balaam was a Caldean, as ſome think, which ſort of men were ſo famous for divinations, whereas he may ſeem to have been a Midianite, becauſe he fell with the Midianites, chap. 31. 8. It is anſwered, that going from Moab he returned to the Midianites, by whoſe advice he was firſt ſent for, they happily deſiring him for their ſafety, and ſo with them he was deſtroyed, before that he could get into his own countrey again. This Balaam, ſaith Philo, dwelling in the Eaſt, was skilfull in all kind of divinations, but ſpecially in thoſe that were called auguria, of which he had given many experiments ſcarcely to be believed, for ſometime he foretold ſhowers to come into the drought of ſummer, ſometimes droughts in winter, ſometime plentie, ſometime ſcarcity, &c. ſo that he was talked of every where for his skill in divination, being the moſt famous of all others of that profeſſion. Ferus ſaith it is vnknown, who this Balaam was, ſome of the Hebrews holding him to bee Elihu ſpoken of in Job, ſome that he was a good Prophet, becauſe he propheſied of Chriſt, and ſome an evil one, which is certain, 2 Pet. 2. 15. he was covetous and for a reward would haue curſed Iſrael, and he ſtudied unlawfull arts of divination, which are condemned, Levit. 19. Deut. 18. with the Cald. Par.

Ioſeph. lib. 4. Antiq. c. 6.

Philo de vita Moſis.

Ferus.

the meſſengers of Balaac ſome were joyned from Midian alſo, verſ.7. Thus we may ſee, how carnall men in their diſtreſſes flee to unlawfull means for help, but yet are without help, whereas ſeeking to God and humbling themſelves, they might certainly prevaill for help. This conſpiracy of Balak with the Midianites againſt Iſrael is ſaid to be a warring againſt them, Joſ.24.9. The Argument whereby he ſeeketh to draw Balaam, hath a ſhew of juſtice, there is a people come out of Egypt, &c. for if they came from Egypt, it might ſeem that they had nothing to doe here, but Balak could not be ignorant, that God brought them out of Egypt to poſſeſſe the Canaanites land, whom being the curſed poſterity of Cham, he would for their wickedneſſes have quite rooted out, but this he concealeth, as making againſt his malicious purpoſe. Note.

Come therefore I pray thee, curſe me this people, &c.] They that are curſed of God, ſaith David, ſhall be cut off, and Deut. 28.25, 33. God having ſhewed who ſhould be curſed, ſaith, that they ſhould then be ſmitten before their enemies, as the bleſſed ſhould prevail againſt them, Deut. 28.7. wherefore in making warre, the people of God had trumpets ſounded by the Prieſts at the beginning of the battell, that they might be had in remembrance, and be bleſſed with victory, and their enemies as curſed might be diſcomfited, Numb.10.9. for as their trumpets ſounded for themſelves, ſo againſt their enemies. 2 Chron. 13. 12. and hereby their warres were ſanctified, as is ſpoken, Jerem. 6.4. After this manner, although by a divers means the heathen ſought to make their enemies accurſed, and themſelves bleſſed, before they entred into the battell. Agamemnon ſacrificed to Jupiter, and prayed to him for victory over the Trojans; Nebuchadnezzar conſulted with Teraphims, and looked into the entrails of beaſts. Before the Romans being heathen beſieged any citie, their prieſts called out the god, under whoſe tuteleſhip that city was, promiſing him more ample honour amongſt them, if forſaking that citie he would be for them. More particularly they beſought that god to leave their citie, houſes, temples and holy things, and to accept of theirs, and to become their Provoſt, which if he would doe, they vowed unto him temples and games in their citie, and withall they ſacrificed and viewed the entrails of the beaſts, and this being done, the Dictatour or Emperour curſed that citie and the army therein, that they might be filled with flight, and terrour, and ſuch of them as bore armes againſt the Roman legions to be deprived of light from above, and to be reputed moſt accurſed. And thus the Popes of Rome have ſince by curſing their enemies with bell, book, and candle, ſought to make feeble, and eaſie to be prevailed againſt. And this courſe Balak taketh againſt Iſrael here. And he ſaith, I know whom thou curſeſt are curſed, and whom thou bleſſeſt, they are bleſſed, to ſhew, what a confidence he had in Balaams curſing, although both Origen and Cyrill deny, that any working by evill ſpirits bleſſe at any time. Lyranus reporteth out of R. Solomon, that Balaam had foretold Balak, that he ſhould be King of Moab, and that Sihon the King of the Amorites ſhould prevail againſt him, which he ſeeing to be verified, and hearing how that by his incantations, immedicable evils had been brought upon huge Cities, he doubted not, but his curſing of Iſrael would now alſo have the like effect. Rab. Solomon hath alſo another fable, that there is one houre every day, wherein God is angry for ſin, which Balaam knowing, in that houre uſed to call for the curſe of God againſt any, and by and by it tooke effect. But this is vain, and all attempts of wizzards to curſe, where God hath not curſed, are vain, as Balaam proved by experience: for the devill, by whom they work, can do nothing without Gods permiſſion. They have indeed, as Procopius ſaith, power over their ſubjects, but to the people of God, they can doe nothing, but as ſometime they have Commiſſions to doe execution for ſinne, of which being to come, they can ſpeake by the wiz-

Verſ. 6. Pſal.37.22.

Homer.Illiad.2.

Ezech. 21.21.

Plin.lib.28.c.2.

Macrob Saturn. l.3.c.9.

Lyranus.

R. Solomon.

Procopius.

zards, their inſtruments having beene thus before revealed unto them.

Verſ. 7. And the elders of Moab and of Midian came to Balaam with the rewards of divination in their hands, &c.] For the rewards of divination, Hebr. is nothing but the divinations in their hands, but it is commonly thus rendred: the Targum Jonathan, the fruits of divination ſealed in their hands: Junius, Cum divinationum honorariis: Pagninus and Calvin, with the price of divination, ſo likewiſe the vulgar Latine. And Philo ſaith, that they carried rewards with them, and promiſed greater from Balak, when he ſhould come to him, that hereby he might be allured. And thus the word Beſorah, good tydings, is put for the reward of good tydings, 2 Sam. 4. 10. and that a reward is here meant, is confirmed, 2 Pet.2.15. where Balaam is ſaid to have loved the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, that is, to have been allured by the reward ſent him to practice according to his wicked art, and to an unrighteous end. Yet Origen underſtandeth by divinations here ſuch inſtruments as diviners uſed, viz. tripodes, cortinæ, and the like, conſecrated for the purpoſe, if haply he had them not of his own in a readineſſe, that he might being thus furniſhed make no delay. And Toſtatus out of Aben Ezra hath the like, and Lyranus both theſe inſtruments, and a reward alſo, ſo likewiſe Pellican and Munſter, and Auguſtine maketh a queſtion, whether ſuch inſtruments be meant or no, for Balaam to divine by, or for thoſe that carried them, and ſo leaveth it. But it is beſt to follow the firſt reading, for it is improbable, that Balaam ſo famous a wizzard wanted inſtruments for his purpoſe, and if they, that went had skill in divining, there was no reaſon, why they ſhould take ſo long a journey to fetch him, to ſay nothing, that this of their divinatory art is merely conjecturall. Wicked Prophets have alwaies uſed to propheſie for reward, but God threateneth this, and therefore the holy Prophets of God have rejected them being offered, as Eliſha, 2 King. 5. Whereas Sauls conſulting about giving Samuel the ſeer a reward to tell him of his aſſes may be objected, Theodoret anſwereth, that he did thus ignorantly, not knowing that the Prophets of God would take no rewards, ſo likewiſe ſaith Joſephus. And of the wife of Jeroboam going with a reward to another Prophet we read, but not that he received it. Euſebius Emiſſenus gathereth from hence, that Balaam is called a diviner, that he uſed not to conſult with the true God, but with the devil, but only at this time in favour of Iſrael the true God appeared unto him, and put words into his mouth.

Targum Jonathan. Junius. Calvin. Pagninus. Philo de vita Moſis. Origen. Auguſt qu 47. *Mich.*3.11,12. Theod. in 1 Sam. *Joſeph. lib.*6. *antiqu. c.*5. 1 King. 14 Euſeb. in Cat. Græc.

Verſ. 8. And Balaam ſaid to them, Lodge with me this night, and I ſhall bring you word what the Lord ſhall ſay to me, &c.] Balaam herein taketh upon him, as if he were a true Prophet of the true God, and therefore he giveth him a title accordingly יהוה, and as God revealed himſelf commonly by dreams and viſions in the night to his Prophets, ſo he would expect a revelation of Gods Will in the night. Origen ſaith, he ſaw the devils, with whom he was wont to conſult, to flee away, and God to be preſent, and therefore he would ask of God. His offer of tarrying all night the Princes of Moab are ſaid to have accepted, whereupon Lyranus inferreth, that thoſe of Midian perceiving by their skill in divining, that this delay preſaged no good unto them, departed immediately and would not ſtay with him. But the Princes of Moab are named only, as the chief, the Midianites, that came with them being left to be underſtood, according to others.

Numb. 12. 6. Origen. Lyranus.

Verſ. 9. And God came to Balaam and ſaid, What men are theſe with thee?] He ſought to the devil ſaith Theodoret, Origen and Auguſt. but God appeared by his angel to drive the evil ſpirit away. Of Gods coming and ſpeaking to other wicked men alſo, ſee Gen.20.3. & 31.24. and of his revealing ſecrets to them, Gen.41.25. Dan.2.45. & 4.21. ſo that by divine revelation to propheſie, is but a gift common to the godly and to the wicked, Matth.7.22. Ferus ſaith, that God appeared to Balaam, when he ſought Theodoret.

to

to the devil, not that he was worthy, but to ſhew him, that he had a care of his people. Balaam telleth the Lord truly, before whom there was no haulting, who they were, and what their errand was, but for the word ארח, to curſe before uſed, he uſeth the word קבה ſignifying a ſtriking through with evil ſpeeches, as Levit.24.11. and therefore it is put for curſing or blaſpheming in that place. The Cald. for theſe words, God came, hath theſe, Word came from before the Lord.

And God ſaid to Balaam, Thou ſhalt not go with them, nor curſe this people, for they are bleſſed.] Verſ. 12. God here anſwereth to both their requeſts, to come and curſe, and yieldeth a reaſon, they are bleſſed, they are a people peculiarly choſen of God, as coming of bleſſed progenitours, and ſuch as for their ſakes ſhould be bleſſed and proſper in their enterpriſes for the getting of Canaan into their poſſeſſion, and the deſtroying of all that ſhould riſe up againſt them. Touching this anſwer of God to Balaam, he ſaith no more Verſ. 13. to the Princes, but God will not ſuffer me to go with you: for if he had told them all and dealt faithfully, they would never have troubled themſelves or others to come again about this matter. He hanked after gain, and therefore was loath to ſhake them quite off, but to have them come again.

And the Princes of Moab roſe up and went to Balak and ſaid, Balaam refuſeth to come.] Verſ. 14. The Princes in returning anſwer to their King deal yet more falſly here, then Balaam had dealt with them; for they omitting all mention of Gods forbidding him, ſay only, Balaam refuſed to come, whereby they gave occaſion to Balak to ſend to him again, as if for more gifts, or upon more entreaty he might be perſwaded to come and curſe them.

And Balak ſent yet again more Princes, and more honourable, &c.] Verſ. 15. Solom. Jarchi ſaith, that Balaam ſhewed himſelf to be of an haughty and proud ſpirit, and therefore it was gathered, that he would not go with the firſt meſſengers, as too mean, but with ſuch as were more honourable, which might make more for his glory. It is certain that the King conceived it to be thus with him, which was the cauſe of his ſending thus again, and proffering him great honours; in Hebr. it is, in honouring I will honour thee very Verſ. 17. much. Joſephus ſaith, the Princes of Midian were ſent again at the great importunity of Balak, and this diſagreeth not, for it is onely ſaid here, more Princes and more honourable; ſo that they might haply be both of Moab and of Midian at the firſt. The temptation by honour wherewith Balaam was now tempted was ſo great, that the devil had hereby prevailed with Eve, and thought to have prevailed with Chriſt himſelf, and therefore much more of force with a wicked Prophet.

Sol. Jarchi.

Joſeph. lib.4. antiq. c.6.

Gen. 3. Matth. 4.

And Balaam ſaid, If Balak would give me his houſe full of ſilver and gold, I cannot go beyond the Word of the Lord my God. Verſ. 18. Thus Balaam ſpake piouſly, but in his heart being allured by the reward, he deſired to go and curſe Iſrael, which is intimated Deut. 23.5. where it is ſaid, God would not hearken to Balaam, implying, that he deſired to curſe them; and for this end, Numb. 23.1. when he came to Balak he offered ſacrifices, thinking haply by this means to prevail for leave to curſe. For word of the Lord, Hebr. is, the Mouth of the Lord, that is, the Word proceeding from his mouth. And becauſe he ſet forth the Lord by the name revealed to Moſes, it ſeemeth, that the heathen in thoſe parts were not without all knowledge of the true God, although they ſerved him moſt corruptly, which alſo may be ſeen in the friends of Job.

Now therefore tarry this night, &c.] Verſ. 19. Hereby ſaith Auguſt. and others, Balaam ſhewed, how his heart was taken with the honours proffered him, he was for the gain ſo urgent, that he in a manner forced the Lord to permit him to go. For had his mind been right, as he pretended, he would ſoon have given them their anſwer, I know, it is againſt Gods Will, that I ſhould go, there needeth no further inquiry, therefore trouble me no further herein.

Auguſt.qu.41.

Verſ. 20. And God came to Balaam at night, and ſaid, if the men come to call thee, riſe and goe with them, &c.] This permiſſion to goe was in judgement, which Balaam brought upon himſelf, becauſe he reſted not in the known will of the Lord, as appeareth, verſ. 33. ſo God permitteth men to be hardned in their own wicked wayes, when knowing his will they apply not themſelves to obey it. Thus Auguſtine, Origen, &c. The Lord gave way to him to goe, but not for any good to himſelf, or Moab or Midian, that ſeeking his own deſtruction he might find it, for the deſtruction of him, and of the Midianites followed hereupon, and the Moabites were excluded from the congregation of Gods people for this to the tenth generation. And by this ſecond ſeeking to God for leave to goe, it is to be noted, that he gat nothing but a more obſcure anſwer, whereas at the firſt it was anſwered plainly, ſo that light being abuſed is turned into darkneſſe, Mich. 3. 6. The ſunne goeth down over the Prophets and the day is darke over them.

Note.

Pſal. 81. 12, 13.

chap. 31.

Deut. 23. 6.

Verſ. 21. And Balaam roſe in the morning and ſadled his aſſe and went with the Princes of Moab. This ſhewed his diligence and forwardneſſe in wickedneſſe, when the morning was come, he made no delay, ſo great was his deſire of the gain propounded. So Philo.

Philo.

Verſ. 22. And Gods anger was kindled becauſe he went, and an angel of the Lord ſtood in in the way, &c. It may ſeem ſtrange, that God having before bidden him goe, ſhould now be angry with him for going: but he ſaw, with what an heart he went, thinking otherwiſe then God meant and had revealed, as afterwards the Aſſyrians being appointed by God to humble this people came againſt them not thinking ſo, but by inlarging their Empire to ſatisfie their own condition. God permitted him to go, ſaith Comeſtor, but not to curſe his people, yea, he had plainly revealed his will in this regard, yet he went with a purpoſe to curſe them, as is intimated, verſ. 32. where the the Lord ſaith, Thy way was perverſe before me. Joſephus, whom divers follow, ſaith, that God hath given him leave to goe onely ironically and he went, as if he had bidden him ſeriouſly. This Angell now appearing was none other then the Lord, the Sonne of God himſelf, as may be gathered, verſ. 35. where he ſpeaketh as God ſpake; whereas his two ſervants onely are ſpoken of, as being with him, it is to be conceived, that Balaam ſent the Princes of Moab ſomewhat before, that he might come more privately, intending his meditations.

Eſa. 10. 6, 7.

Scholaſt. hiſt.

Ioſephus.

Verſ. 23. And the aſſe ſaw the angel of the Lord ſtanding in the way with a ſword drawn in his hand, &c.] This is the caſe, ſaith Ferus, rightly of every one, that is going in an evill way, deſtruction is before him, although his eyes be ſhut, that he ſeeth it not, but it is ſtrange, that Balaam a Prophet uſed to viſions and revelations ſhould not ſee, but his ſilly aſſe ſee, when as other Prophets have ſeen ſometimes that which others with them ſaw not. But this was done to ſhew that Balaams fooliſhneſſe was now greater then that of an aſſe. The aſſe ſaw God offended for his going that way, but Balaam ſaw it not, the aſſe went out of the way, to teach him to deſiſt from his evill intention, but he turned not from this way, the aſſe was beaten with many blowes, but hereby was ſhewed, that Balaam more fooliſh then the aſſe, was rather worthy to be beaten: for thus it is applied, 2 Pet. 2. 16. The dumbe aſſe ſpeaking with mans voyce forbad the madneſſe of the Prophet.

Ferus.

Note.

Verſ. 24. And the angel of the Lord went and ſtood in the way of the Vineyards, a wall being on this hand, and on that.] One danger being paſt, now followeth another, as it ſhall ever happen to the wicked, Jer. 48. 43. till at the laſt they come into dangers inevitable and deadly, as Balaam did. Here the angell appearing before the aſſe again, he went out of the way and cruſhed his maſters foot againſt the wall, for which he beat him the ſecond time to go forward. Which was a marvell, as one noteth, that he being a diviner could not take notice of this as a ſign of ill luck in this his journey, and ſo

Note.

Verſ. 25.

Ainſworth.

turn

turn back again, but drive forward still: but the craft of the most crafty fail them, when it should stand them in most stead, neither have they any power to make use of their own arts at such times. This hurting of his foot, saith Philo, was by pricking it amongst the thorns, that grew by the wall; but Tostatus, by breaking of it against the wall.

And the angel went further, and stood in a narrow place] God would have done thus at the first, but he proceeded rather by these degrees to teach, how he dealeth in opposing the wicked; first he doth but stand, as it were, and shaketh his rod against them. 2. He cometh nearer with his judgements and toucheth them with some lesser hurt; but when all this will not prevail, he maketh them to fall before him at length, as he caused Balaams foot to be dasht against the wall, and then brought him to that streight, that he could no way escape, but he must fall with his asse to the ground; so Ferus and Ainsworth. And Lorinus saith, that this was done divers times to convince the Prophets obstinate and blind pertinacy. Vers. 26. Ferus. Ainsworth. Lorinus.

And when the asse saw the angel of the Lord, she fell down under Balaam, &c.] That is, being taken with wonderful great fear of the danger, and weary and fainting, this falling down of the asse with her master shewing, how he should now at the least have humbled himself, and done reverence: but he contrariwise is more inraged; so the wicked by Gods judgments grow worse and worse. Vers. 27. Note.

And God opened the mouth of the asse, and she said, What have I done to thee, that thou hast beaten me now these three times?] We read before how the serpent spake to seduce, now the asse is made to speak to reprove sinne, whereupon Chrysostom and before him Basil note, that the simplest and meanest having the dispensation committed unto them in declaring the Will of God are not to be contemned; for if God made the dumb asse to speak, he much more speaketh and worketh grace by such weak instruments for his own greater glory. Yea for the good of his people he sometimes hath spoken to the most wicked, as to Cain for Abel, to the devil for Job, and to Balaam for Israel, and to Nebuchadnezzar in dreams for Daniels good. Ainsworth yet more aptly noteth, that the devil worketh by subtile instruments, such as the serpent was, but God by simple Apostles, poor and unlearned fishermen; so S. Paul came not in the enticing words of mans eloquence, but in the plain evidence of the Spirit; and God chooseth the simple and vile to confound the wise, but the devil still worketh by the cunning and crafty, and such indeed have all Ring-leaders to heresie ever been, the children of this world are wiser in their generation, then the children of light. This opening of the asses mouth to speak, was a stupendious thing, and able to amaze any man; yet Balaam hardened by covetousnesse standeth upon his justification. Julian the apostata derided this, as a fable; but Cyril. Alex. approved it, from the relations of the like made by the heathen; as also that of the serpents speaking by the power of the devil, Gen. 3. For indeed Homer bringeth in Xanthu, the horse of Achilles, speaking by the power of Juno; Oppianus also telleth of an horse in fight, that spake with a mans voice: Theocritus telleth the like of a bull, &c. so doth Livy, and Pliny, and others. And indeed to return to this of the Asses speaking, why should it be thought impossible to him, that is able to do all things? Hereby he would both more effectually condemn Balaams stupidity, who was not yet moved, and the cruelty of wicked men towards their beasts, and the oppressions of tyrants towards their subjects. Vers. 28. Chrysost. Basil. 1 Cor. 2. 1 Cor. 1. 17. 2 Cor. 11. 3, 13. Ephes. 4. 14. Luc 16. 8. Cyril. Alex. de prodigiis, c 34. Homer. Iliad. 19. Theocr. lib. 8. c. 45. Livius de Bell. Maced. et Asiat. lib. 5.

And Balaam said, Because thou hast mocked me, I would to God now that there were a sword in my hand, &c.] The foolish Prophet never inquireth into the cause of this unwonted thing, but would presently in his madnesse have killed the asse, but the asse replyeth again, and giveth him an hint of searching into the cause, which was in himself and his own sin. Vers. 29.

Am

Verſ. 30. Am not I thine aſſe, Whereupon thou haſt ridden, &c. Was I ever wont to do ſo, &c. and if not, then thou doſt fooliſhly thus to rage againſt me; for thou mayſt well know, that there is ſome cauſe in thy ſelf, and thy ſinne, whereby I am letted from going forward. So we upon the provocations, which we have by our beaſts, and diſaſters befalling us by them ſhould take occaſion to conſider our ſins and provokings of God, the cauſe hereof. For theſe words, ever ſince I was thine, Hebr. ever ſince thou, theſe words, haddeſt me, being underſtood, the Cald. ever ſince thou haſt been; the Sept. from thy youth.

Note.

Verſ. 31. And the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he ſaw the angel of the Lord ſtanding with a ſword drawn in his hand, &c.] Hitherto Balaams eyes had been held, that he could not ſee the angel appearing in a bodily ſhape aſſumed, as ſometime the eyes of Eliſha's ſervant, and of the Aramites had been held. This his not ſeeing, till God opened his eyes ſheweth, that wicked men in the midſt of greateſt dangers ſee them not; why? becauſe God hath not opened their eyes, but if he once open their eyes, then they ſhall be filled with terrour and caſt down, as Balaam was. No man can ſee his ſins and dangers, ſaith Ferus, till God openeth his eyes.

2 Kings 6.

Note.

Prov. 4. 19.

Ferus.

Verſ. 32. VVhy haſt thou ſmitten thine aſſe theſe three times, behold I went out to withſtand thee, becauſe thy way is perverſe before me.] The angel reproveth Balaam for beating his aſſe wrongfully; and if God hath this care of beaſts abuſed by their cruel maſters, much more will he have care of his ſervants being wronged by the wicked. Thy way is perverſe, ſaith the Cald. becauſe it is manifeſt that thou wouldſt go in a way againſt me, that is, hoping that I will give thee leave to curſe, whereby thou mayſt be promoted. But if he might not beat the aſſe without cauſe, much leſſe might he curſe Iſrael without cauſe, as he went about to do.

Verſ. 33. Surely unleſſe ſhe had turned from me, I had ſlain thee, and ſaved her alive, &c.] The Hebrews gathering from hence, that the aſſe was not alive now, but dead, have a tradition, that ſo ſoon as the aſſe had done ſpeaking ſhe dyed, it being not lawful for her after ſpeaking with a mans voyce, to live; as a beaſt, wherewith a man lyeth, muſt not be ſuffered to live. This is related by Toſtatus, and not held to be improbable, yet he thinketh rather, as he might well, that here is no death of the aſſe implyed, but only as they both now eſcaped with life, ſo if ſhe had not ſtayed without coming further, ſhe ſhould indeed have been ſpared, but Balaam ſmitten with death.

Verſ. 34. And Balaam ſaid, I have ſinned, for I knew not, that thou ſtoodeſt in the way againſt me, now therefore if it diſpleaſeth thee, I will go back again.] This confeſſion was of his ſinning only in ſmiting the Aſſe unjuſtly: as if in going on he would have reſiſted the Angel that ſtood againſt him: but as for the perverſneſſe of his way objected, he ſaith only, if it diſpleaſeth, I will go back; but of his way meant, that is, his deſire through covetouſneſſe to curſe Iſrael, he never had any ſenſe thereof to repent and confeſſe it, till he periſhed.

Verſ. 35. Go with the men, only the word that I ſhall ſay to thee, that ſhalt thou ſpeak, &c. It may ſeem ſtrange, that the Lord coming out to ſtop his way, ſhould now again bid him go with the men; for if he withſtood him not to turn him back, why did he withſtand him? Anſw. He was not unwilling that he ſhould go, but the mind wherewith he went diſpleaſed God, and therefore, as he had at the firſt admoniſhed him to ſpeak nothing, but what he ſhould ſay unto him, ſo he giveth him the ſame warning here the ſecond time, if by any means he would have been reformed, for by his ſtaying of him, and yet permitting him to go on again, he might well have conſidered, that there was ſomething elſe amiſſe in him, at which the Lord was offended. Severus ſaith, that the ſame charge was again inculcated, becauſe God knew him earneſtly deſirous to curſe. Gods bidding of Balaam laam again here to goe with the man, is generally expounded, he permitted him; but Josephus saith, when being terrified, he would have returned, God compelled him to goe forward. But Philo, God seeing how dissemblingly he would have returned, his desire being still to go for the reward, tooke it most hainously, and therefore said thus, Goe with the men, but the word onely that I shall say to thee, shalt thou speak, as if he had said, make hast to the place whither thou art going, but thou shalt have no profit hereby, for thou shalt speak onely, I guiding thy tongue, as my instrument against thy will and desire, I will guide thy tongue, as is fit, as a waggoner his waggon, administring all things thereby, thou not knowing what thou saist. Why God would not permit him to curse, when as his cursing could doe nothing against God. Eusebius yieldeth this reason, lest if he had cursed, the Hebrewes hearing of it should have contemned Gods blessing, and for this impietie he should have suffered the curse to take effect against them. Ambrose followeth Philo. But why should the Hebrews upon his cursing have contemned Gods blessing, as Eusebius saith? Answ. Because he was reputed a great Prophet, it might have given them occasion to sleight all former promises of blessing made hitherto unto them, whereby God must needs haue been greatly provoked against them.

Qu.

Joseph. lib. 4. antiq. c. 6. Philo de vita Mosis.

Eusebius Emis. in Caten. Græc.

And when Balak heard, that Balaam was come, he went out to meet him to a city of Moab, &c.] This city it not named here, but said to be in the border of Arnon, that is, the uttermost coast of his countrey; this going out was in honour to Balaam, and to shew his great respect unto him. Thus the Kings of Sodom went out to meet Abraham, Gen. 14.17,18. and so did Melchisedeck, and Moses went to meet Jethro, Exod. 18. 7. and Joseph to Jacob, Gen.46.29. Josephus and Philo say, that he went out with his guard and much people in great state.

Vers. 36. It was most probably the citie Arnon, of which before.

But most vainly did he feed himself with great hopes of good from the false Prophet, as also all others, that trust in such. The King being come first expostulateth with Balaam for his delay, and not coming at the first; but Balaam giveth him little hope, for he saith, that he could promise nothing, but must speak onely, what God should put in his mouth, yet he shewed his willingnesse, in that he came and said, Can I speak any thing, &c. thus God frustrateth the tokens of liers and maketh diviners mad, &c. as the Prophet speaketh?

Note. Vers.37.38.

Esa.44.25.

And Balaam went with Balak and they came to Kiriath huzoth, that is, a Citie of streets; so Sol. Jarchi saith, a citie full of streets and people; the Cald. the City of his borders, so likewise the vulgar Latine. Vatablus thinketh, that it was a proper name, but Cajetan not. Some think it to be Ar, called the corner of Moab, Jer. 48.45. Nothing can be said certainly of it, but that it was a great and populous citie, Balak bringing Balaam hither, both because from hence he might see the camp of Israel, as vers.41. and be moved the more with compassion, seeing so many people, which he told him that they were ready to destroy, as Solomon Jarchi hath it.

Vers. 39. Sol Jarchi. Cald. Vatablus. Cajetan.

And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam and the Princes with him.] The Hebrew word here used signifieth killing for sacrifice, but the vulgar Latine readeth it onely, he killed oxen, &c. which is by many expounded, to entertain Balaam with feasting for his more welcome. But because the heathen used to sacrifice at such solemn times of entertainment, and to make merry with the remainder of their flesh, it is rather to be held, that Balak here killed cattell for both these ends. For when the Moabites sacrificed afterwards, chap. 25. 2. they are noted to have feasted together, and to have called the Hebrews to their feasts. They began their feastings amongst Idolaters with sacrificing first to their gods, as times of sacrificing amongst the people of God were feasting times. Yet Philo speaketh of nothing, but of a most sumptuous feast now made, and whereas Balak is said to have sent thereof to Balaam, and the Princes with him, it is to be underſtood, that Balak to prepare for this feaſt had awhile left Balaam with the Princes that fetcht him thither to accompany him, and now ſent them in of his good chear, which he had provided. This feaſting and making merry was a notable means to make Balaam to forget the dangers and warnings paſt, and to incline to Balaks requeſt.

Vers. 40.

Philo de vita Mosis.

to

Verſ. 41. On the morrow Balak brought Balaam to the high places of Baal, that from thence he might ſee, &c.] The feaſt being ended, the next day betimes Balaam is carried to do his work, for which he came, the place, whereunto was the high place of Baal, that is, Baal-peor, the idol, whom the Moabites ſerved; the word, Baal, ſignifieth Lord, and in this place of their Baal or Lord, they thought it fitteſt to offer ſacrifice, and ſo that they ſhould prevail the rather. The people ſhewed now unto Balaam were all the children of Iſrael to the uttermoſt of them, ſo Lyranus, Toſtatus, Rickelius, &c. for afterwards, when he was not permitted to curſe them thence, Balak led him, where he might ſee but a part of them only: yet Philo ſaith, that he now ſhewed him but a part of them; I ſubſcribe rather to the firſt.

Numb. 25.

Lyranus. Toſtatus.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

For the myſtery of all this, Rabanus ſaith, that Balaam ſignifieth a vain people, and was a type of the Scribes and Phariſees, Balak excluſion or devouring, and figured out the devil deſirous of the deſtruction of the ſpiritual Iſrael. For as Balak ſought by Balaam to bring a curſe upon Iſrael, and promiſed him great rewards, ſo the devil uſed them, as his inſtruments againſt Chriſt and Chriſtians; and as Balaam pretended God, and to go according to his Word in all things, ſo the high Prieſts and Scribes pretended the law of God, by which he had deſerved to dye. Again, the aſſe figured out the people ſubject to the Scribes and Phariſees: for as they chaſtiſed by excommunications and ſharp reproofes the people going out of their way unto Chriſt, ſo Balaam beat his Aſſe; and as the Aſſe notwithſtanding would not be made to go forward by Balaam, but fell down, as it were, reverencing the angel, ſo this people ſtayed, whereſoever they met Chriſt and admired and honoured him: and laſtly, as the Aſſes mouth was opened to reprove Balaam, ſo the Lord opened the mouthes of theſe to juſtifie Chriſt againſt the Phariſees; as the blind man cured, Joh. 9. as the Aſſes eyes, ſo his were opened to ſee, that which they ſaw not, and ſo were the eyes of many more; wherefore the Lord ſaith, I thank thee, O Father, that thou haſt revealed theſe things to babes, and hid them from the wiſe, 1 Cor. 1.17,18. they be the fooliſh that God hath choſen to confound the wiſe, the fooliſh like the aſſe.

Chap. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. And Balaam ſaid to Balak, Build me here ſeven altars, and prepare me ſeven bullocks and ſeven rams, &c.] Sacrifices were ordained of God, as a means for men to obtain his favour, Gen.46.1,2. 1 Sam.13.9,22. and that of the herd and of the flock, Lev. 1. and the heathen had learned of Gods people to follow this way. Wherefore Balaam to obtain leave in favour to the King of Moab to curſe Iſrael, will have theſe now prepared, thus abuſing religious arts to horrible impiety contrary to the known Will of God. For the number of ſeven it was ſacred, and therefore ſeven bullocks and ſeven rams are often ſpoken of, as 1 Chron.15.26. 2 Chron.29. 21. Job 42. 8. Toſtatus ſaith, that theſe ſevens were appointed by him with reference to the ſeven Planets, whereby the Gentiles held, that all humane affaires were governed, and that he looked into the entrails of the beaſts ſlain to judge thereby. R. Aben Ezra ſaith, that ſeven is a number of perfection, and R. Solomon, that it may be obſerved, that the holy Patriarks are commemorated to have ſacrificed ſeven times, Abraham, four, Iſaac

Prov.21.27.

Toſtatus.

Aben Ezra. R. Solomon.

four, Iſaac one, and Jacob two, to which he might have reſpect. But, as Toſtatus ſaith, this is improbable, and that which he hath of the ſeven planets is not ſo certain, but rather the firſt, becauſe Balaam pretended to be a worſhipper of the true God. And therefore I hold not with ſome, that theſe ſacrifices were intended to Baal, but, with Rickelius, to the Lord, who he knew was delighted with the number of ſeven, from whom he expected anſwer; ſee alſo for this, verſ. 3.17. Philo ſaith, that Balaam appointed Balak to offer theſe ſacrifices, whileſt he went aſide to have an anſwer from God, but it is plain here verſ.2. that Balak and Balaam offered together, and alſo ver.4. but whileſt the ſacrifice was burning, Balaam went aſide, Balak and his Princes ſtanding by ſtill, as is ſhewed, verſ. 6. Balak ſtood by his ſacrifice, as the manner was, to procure acceptance, if it might be, by his preſence, but Balaam went to an high place alone, to obſerve in the mean ſeaſon, if he could ſee any ſigns, he went to his inchantments, as we may ſee Chap.24.1.

Rickelius. Philo. V. 3.

Balaam being gone to ſee, whether the Lord would meet with him, he did meet him, as he expected, but he ſaid not ſo unto him, as he deſired, for he put a word in Balaams mouth, which he coming to Balak again uttered, as followeth verſ.7.

Balak the King of Moab hath brought me from Aram out of the mountains of the eaſt, ſaying, come curſe me Jacob, and deſie Iſrael. How ſhall I curſe whom God hath not curſed?]Here that was fulfilled which was noted before, Chap. 22.35. Balaam was onely made an inſtrument to ſpeak the words of the Lord, againſt both Balaks and his own deſire. When he uttered theſe words, it is ſaid, he took up a parable, that is, a wiſe and grave ſaying, that it might be the more attended to. The place from whence Balaam is ſaid to have come here, Aram, is Aram Naharaim in Meſopotamia, and therefore the Sept. render it, from Meſopotamia. One ſaith, that he is thought to have been of the lineage of Nahor Abrahams brother there. Joſephus ſaith, he dwelt near Euphrates; and Jerom, in a city called Phatnra, ſignifying an oracle, which interpreteth, from whence as my author ſaith, to the place of the vines, where the Aſſe ſpake, was 400 miles, and from thence to the high place of Baal 40 miles. But becauſe Laban purſuing Jacob to Gilead, Gen.31.23. when he fled from Aram to Canaan, near to which the Moabites country lay, is ſaid to have come from thence to Gilead in ſeven dayes; it is thought by ſome, that it could not be ſo much, but about four or five daies journey only, howſoever, it was a long way to come for ſo wicked and vain an end. The Mountains of the Eaſt, that place was called, becauſe it was eaſtward from Moab; the eaſt is noted to be infamous for ſorceries and divinations, Eſay 2.6. Some will have this country to be Damaſcus, being before called Hus, from Arams ſonne Hus, and becauſe the Huſſites were the ſame with the Midianites, that Balaam was a Midianite; but this is confuted Deut.23.4. where he is ſaid to have come from Meſopotamia of Syria.

Verſ. 7, 8.

H. Tunting Patriarks travailes. Joſeph. Hieron.

Fonſeca.

Come curſe me Jacob, and deſie me Iſrael.] In theſe words Balak had not ſent to Balaam, but they were words put into his mouth by God for further explication of Balaams meaning. By curſing, Lyranus underſtandeth the evil of puniſhment; by defying, the evil of ſin. Toſtatus by curſing, an inflicting of evil; and by defying, a depriving of good, as being rejected and abominable. The Cald. for deſie, hath, caſt away, as abominable; for ſo Balak deſired, that Iſrael ſhould be filled with evil, and and removed far away from his coaſts; but the word זעם, ſignifieth to deſpiſe, to contemn or to deteſt.

Lyranus. Toſtatus.

How ſhall I curſe whom God hath not curſed, &c.] Hebr. this is, How ſhall I curſe? God hath not curſed, the word, whom, being left out. By this ſaying the Lord made Balaam an inſtrument to ſhew the vanity of his own art, and how that Sorcerers can do nothing, but when God permitteth, ſo ſo Eſay 47.12,13. Here firſt the name אל, ſignifying ſtrong, is uſed to ſet forth God; as if he had ſaid, that in him only was all power, and men have none to do any thing.

Verſ. 8.

Verſ. 9. From the top of the rocks I ſee him, and from the hills, &c. the people ſhall dwell alone, &c.] By him, he underſtandeth the people of Iſrael, as one body, which he now ſaw from the high place, to which Balak had brought him, that he might curſe them thence, but he was rather amazed in beholding them, and delighted, as knowing them by the Spirit to be the moſt bleſſed people in the world: the people ſhall dwell alone, that is, ſafely and ſecurely, being diſtinguiſht alwayes from other nations, as peculiarly choſen of God for himſelf; ſo the phraſe is uſed, Jer.49.31. Deut.33.28. Joſephus hereupon thus paraphraſeth, O happy you, to whom God giveth large plenty of good things, and his providence for your continual guide and ayd, becauſe there is no kind of men, before whom ye are not to be preferred for the innocency of manners, and the ſtudy of virtue and honeſty, who ſhall alſo have children more excellent to ſucceed you, &c. wherefore ye ſhall obtain the land, to which God ſendeth you, and ſhall leave it to be poſſeſſed for ever by your poſterity, &c. The Caldee will have their reigning over all nations here propheſied of at the coming of the Meſſiah; but erroneouſly.

Joſeph. lib.4. antiq. c. 6.

Cald. Par.

Verſ. 10. WHo can count the duſt of Iacob, and the number of the fourth part of Iſrael, let me dye the death of the righteous, &c.] By duſt here, the children of Iſrael are underſtood, who God promiſed, ſhould be innumerable, as the duſt of the earth. Gen.28.14. thus the Caldee, Who can count the little ones of the houſe of Jacob, of whom it was ſaid, they ſhall be multiplyed as the duſt of the earth. The Sept. Who can count the ſeed of Jacob? Lyranus ſaith, that they are ſet forth by the duſt, to denote mans original, which was out of the duſt. Nazianzen ſaith, that they are compared to the duſt, becauſe now for their infidelity they are baſe, and ſcattered every where, as the duſt by the wind: but there can be no ſuch meaning here.

Cald.

Septuag.

Lyranus.

Nazianz. orat. 9.

Object. If it be ſaid, God appointed the people ſometime to be numbred and diſtinguiſhed into bands, how then is it ſaid, that they cannot be numbred? Anſw. as the ſtars cannot be numbred, yet God numbreth them, and calleth them all by their names; ſo the number of Iſrael is known to God, and when he appointeth, men may number them; but otherwiſe to attempt this is to ſin as David proved; alſo the ſpeech is hyperbolical, when the ſeed of Jacob is ſaid to be as the duſt.

Numb. 2.

2 Sam. 24.

and number the fourth part of Iſrael] This is ſpoken in regard of the diſtinction of the whole camp into four parts under four ſtandards towards the four quarters of the world, Numb. 2. as he might ſee them placed, where he now ſtood.

Let me dye the death of the righteous] Hebr. Let my ſoul dye; becauſe when the ſoul departeth out of the body, it is ſaid to dye, that is, not to vivifie it any longer, or becauſe the word ſoul, is put for the whole man; ſo Samſon ſaith, let my ſoul dye with the Philiſtims, that is, let me dye; ſee alſo Ezech. 17.17. Jona 1.14. Chap.4.8. By the righteous here are generally underſtood the Iſraelites; but ſome, as Lyranus ſaith, becauſe the Hebrew verb is in the future tenſe, underſtand it, as a propheſie of his own death by the Iſraelites, as it fell out Chap.31.8. but both he and Toſtatus reject this, and the ſecond future in Hebrew is in the nature of an imperative, and therefore it is better underſtood imperatively, let me dye, as the people of God dye, that is, in his favour, that ſo I may live for ever in his glory. Philo rightly, let my ſoul dye corporally, that it may be numbred amongſt the ſoules of the juſt, and be ſuch as they are. Ambroſe having expounded it thus, ad Chroma, allegoriſeth alſo hereupon, Chap.4. de bono mortis, Let my ſoul dye the death of the righteous, that is, let it dye and be buried buried together with the juſt by the putting off of vice,& taking the grace of the juſt, who every where in their ſouls and bodies, do bear about the mortification of Chriſt; wherein ſtandeth remiſſion of ſins,the abolition of crimes,the forgetfulneſſe of errour,and the aſſuming of grace,the former is the plain meaning of the words. The Iſraelites are called the righteous; not that they lived without ſin, for they were very rebellious, but becauſe they were the Church of God juſtified by his grace, and for the righteouſneſſe taught and profeſſed and followed by many amongſt them, thus intituled, as the Church now for theſe reaſons is called the holy Church, although there be many lewd livers herein. Balaam in this his ſpeech did like many more ſince his time to this day, they would dye the death of the righteous, but they will not live their life, and therefore this deſire in them is vain; for as the life is, ſo ſhall be the death, But herein is a plain teſtimony of the immortality of the ſoul, and of another world to come: for what elſe maketh the death of the righteous deſireable, but their hopes at their death, whereas the expectation of the wicked then periſheth? Note. Qualis vita, finis ita. Prov. 11.4,7.

Judg. 16.30.

Lyranus.

Philo. ἀποθανοι μὲν ἡ ψυχὴ τὰ τοῦ σωματικοῦ βίου, ἵνα ἐν ψυχαῖς δικαίων καταριθμηθῇ, &c.

and let my laſt end be like his] The Sept. Let my ſeed be like his: the word is אחרי, ſignifying after; ſo that it may be indifferently expounded by any thing or time coming after, and therefore of ſeed or poſterity, the Greek Fathers follow the Septuagint, and Eugubinus ſtandeth for this; neither do I ſee any reaſon againſt it, but for it: he wiſheth as to himſelf, ſo to his poſterity ſuch happineſſe, as they and their poſterity had; and this, ſaith the Gloſſe, was fulfilled in the Magi, that came out of the eaſt to worſhip Chriſt, who were of his poſterity, which although it be probable, yet it cannot ſo well be ſaid, that this was a propheſie of it, becauſe the firſt part was never fulfilled touching his dying the death of the righteous, which muſt be counted prophetical alſo, if the other touching his poſterity be a propheſie. It is rather then to be held,that both theſe clauſes are added by way of wiſhing further to expreſſe the happy condition of the Iſraelites, and their poſterity after them. Eugubinus. Gloſ. ordin.

Ferus upon theſe words, from the top of the rocks I ſee him, verſ. 9. ſaith, that herein Balaam yielded a reaſon, why the people of Iſrael were bleſſed, viz. he looked up to the holy fathers, of which they came, with whom God had made a covenant of grace, and what is here ſaid of Iſrael, he applyeth myſtically to the faithful under the Goſpel, who are the true Iſrael of God, they are ſeparated by faith from all other peoples, and ſhall be moſt ſafe, and in their death moſt bleſſed, all others deſiring the ſame bleſſedneſſe in vain. Ferus The myſtery.

And Balak ſaid to Balaam, What haſt thou done, I took thee to curſe mine enemies, and thou haſt bleſſed them altogether.] As Balaks, ſo the attempts of all the wicked againſt Gods faithful people ſhall ever be fruſtrated, and tend to their greater good, at which they ſhall gnaſh their teeth and pine with ſorrow. Balaam to this anſwereth nothing, but that he muſt ſpeak the words which God putteth in his mouth, hypocritically diſſembling his deſire to curſe for reward, and pretending to be altogether for obedience to God, as all hypocrites do. Philo upon Balaks words ſaith, I perceive that thou art ſecretly an enemy to me,and a friend to mine enemies, having no mind to curſe, but to bleſſe them, contrary to the faith, which thou ſhouldſt have kept with me, when I have with ſo much trouble and coſt brought thee hither, &c. Verſ. 11. Note. Verſ. 12. Philo. de vita Moſis.

And Balak ſaid, come with me to another place from whence thou maiſt ſee part of them,&c.] Hebr. a part of him, ſpeaking of the people, as one body, as Balaam had ſpoken before, v.9. Balak thought ſurely that Balaam ſeeing ſo great a multitude was amazed at it, and therefore durſt not curſe them, wherefore aſſayeth another way to have his purpoſe,by ſhewing him a leſſe company. He bringeth him then into the field of Zophim to the top of Piſgah,&c. This field is expounded the field of ſpies, and the Septuagint Verſ. 13. Verſ. 14.

Sol. Iarchi. render it the ſcoutwatch of the field, where as Sol. Jarchi ſaith, a watch was placed to ſee, whether any enemies were coming againſt the citie; the vulgar Latine rendreth it, an high place. It was moſt probably no proper name but an appellative, and therefore it is beſt to read it, the field of the ſpies; of Piſgah enough before, chap. 21.20. Here again ſeven altars are built, and offerings prepared as before, and Balak is appointed to ſtand by, whileſt Balaam went to meet the Lord again. But the Lord meeting him ſent him back with other words in his mouth, which when Balak had inquired of him returning, he uttered thus: Riſe up Balak and heare, hearken to me thou ſonne of Zippor. God is not a man, that he ſhould lie, or the Sonne of man, that he ſhould repent, &c. Balak is bidden to riſe up and heare for reverence to the word of God: for he ſtood before at Balaams coming to him, but then he ſtood to his ſacrifice, now he is bidden to riſe up and ſtand to heare the word of God, and hereuponin other like places is grounded a tenet, that even the greateſt ought to ſtand and hear the word of God, as Eglon the King of Moab roſe up, when Ehud came with a meſſage to him from God, and Jeremiah is bidden to ariſe, and Euſebius ſaith, that Conſtantine the great was wont alwayes to ſtand to heare the word; and for this ſtanding, are both Auguſtine tract. 19. & 112. in Johan. and Gregory, Moral. chap. 23. Serrarius ſaith, that they ſtand at the reading of the letters of great Princes, and at the reading of the Goſpel: whereas it is ſaid God is not a man to lie, it is meant to do contrary to that which he hath ſaid, curſing thoſe, whom he hath pronounced bleſſed; ſee the like ſpeech, 1 Sam. 15. 25. the Cald. hath it, the word of God is not like the ſpeech of the ſons of men, who ſay and lie, ſee Rom. 3. 4. Jam. 1. 17. whereas he is ſaid to have repented, Gen 6. 6. and to have gone contrary to his ſaying, in ſparing the Ninevites Jonah, 3. it is anſwered, that by repenting there is meant nothing elſe, but the changing of his work, which according to our capacity is called a repenting, and to the Ninevites he did not, as he ſaid, becauſe they were not as they had been, his threatnings are alwayes conditionall: for God knoweth how to change his ſentence, ſaith Ambroſe, if thou knoweſt, how to amend thy fault. Toſtatus proſecuteth this point at large, giving ſix rules to know when any word coming from God is mutable or not, amongſt which this touching his threatning word is one.

Judg. 3. 10. Ier. 1. 17. Euſeb. vita Conſt. l. 4. c. 29. Serrarius

Cald. Par.

Ambr. in Luc. 2. Novit Deus mutare ſententiam, ſi tu noveris emendare delictum.

Verſ. 21. He hath not beheld iniquitie in Jacob, nor ſeen perverſneſſe in Iſrael, the Lord his God is with him, and the ſhout of a King is amongſt them. For iniquitie the Cald. hath here ſervers of idols, the word uſed in Hebrew is אָוֶן ſignifying all manner of iniquitie and particularly idolatry, 1 Sam. 15. 22. Eſa. 66. 3. ſo alſo Targum Jonathan applieth it, and the vulgar Latine, I have ſeen no idol, &c. the Septuagint, there ſhall be no painfulneſſe or miſery in Iacob, taking אָוֶן for the puniſhment of iniquitie. For the word perverſneſſe, Hebr. עָמָל, it is alſo by the vulgar latine rendred image, and by the Septuagint labour, it ſignifieth either iniquitie or the pain and labour, that cometh by it. But how did God ſee none iniquitie in Jacob, or idolatry? Anſw. Becauſe he pardoned it, and did not impute it, as Pſalm. 32. 1. Rupertus becauſe the Iſraelites were full of iniquitie, will have this myſtically underſtood of the ſpirituall Iſrael, the elect. But if we follow the Septuagint underſtanding painfulneſſe and labour, it will beſt agree, becauſe this is the fruit of curſing, which ſhould not be to them, as Balak deſired. And the reaſon was becauſe God was with them, and the ſhout of a King amongſt them: this is ſpoken by way of alluſion to the ſound of the ſilver Trumpets, wherewith when the Prieſts ſounded in the time of battell, certain victory was promiſed unto them, the fame whereof doubtleſſe was already ſpread abroad, and of the victories thus obtained by them; ſee alſo 2 Chron. 13. 12. And the ſounding of an alarum with theſe is called the ſhout of a King, that is of God, who was their King mightily protecting and fighting for them:

Rupertus.

Numb. 6. 10.

them: for till Samuels time, when they would needs have a King like other nations, he reigned over them; thus generally all Expoſitors. So that the ſounding of trumpets amongſt them even when they went to war, was as a joyful ſounding in triumph after victory, ſo certain were they of prevailing againſt all enemies, what inchantments or ſorceries ſoever were uſed againſt them, as is expreſſed verſ.23. 1 Sam. 8. 7.

God brought them out of Egypt, he hath the ſtrength of an Unicorn.] This is oppoſed to Balaks complaint before going, when he ſent to Balaam, ſaying, there is a people come out of Egypt, Chap.22.5. as if they had come of their own minds, being wickedly bent to deſtroy Kingdoms. Now they are ſaid therefore to have been brought of God, as by the ſtrength of an Unicorn, which breaketh through and deſtroyeth all things that ſtand againſt it: yea the Unicorn ſaith Albertus fighteth with the Elephant, and woundeth him with his horn and killeth him; he hath but one horn 12 foot long, or more, ſharp like a ſword, not hollow, but whole throughout, growing out of the midſt of his forehead between his noſtrils being in the diameter of an hands breadth: from his one horn he is called an Unicorn, and in Greek Rinoceros, from εὶν naris, and κέρας cornu, becauſe his horn groweth, as it were, from his noſtrils; of his ſtrength, and how none can ſubdue him, it is ſpoken, Job 39. And therefore the compariſon was moſt apt to ſet forth the power of God breaking through all things oppoſed in bringing his people out of Egypt, and to the poſſeſſion promiſed them, ſo that whatſoever force or means were uſed againſt them by men or devils, ſhould not prevail to hinder their progreſſe. The Sept. render it, he hath the glory of an Unicorn. This is referred by ſome to God, by ſome to the people of Iſrael, and by ſome to both. Theod. Procop. and Apollinar. refer it to the people made thus ſtrong and unreſiſtible by God being amongſt them. Toſtatus, to God. Origen, Raban. Lyra. Rickel. Caje. to both, for the ſpiritual Iſrael, ſaith Origen, is like unto God and Chriſt in ſtrength through faith: and Iſrael, ſaith Cajetan, had ſuch ſtrength in God, who was amongſt them, which laſt I rather imbrace. How the people of God are ſet forth by the ſame compariſon, ſee Deut.33.17. Pſal.92.11. & Numb. 24.8. and ſometimes the great power of the wicked is ſet forth by this compariſon, as Pſal.22.2. thou haſt delivered or heard me from the hornes of the unicornes. It is a wonderful thing, that is reported by ſome, of the Unicorn, that he can for his great violence by no means be caught, but a virgin being ſet in the place, where he rangeth, he ſeeing her forthwith layeth aſide his ferity, and fawneth upon her, and lyeth down by her, his head being placed upon her lap, and ſo ſleepeth and is taken, but when he awaketh, finding himſelf taken, he falleth down forthwith and dyeth. Herein ſaith Rupertus, Chriſt was myſtically repreſented, who loved the virgin ſo to include himſelf in her womb, and ſo to be taken and to dye, when as no force was able to bring him to this. And both he and Iſidor by the compariſon made with this beaſt, will have the Iſraelites worſhipping of one God only ſet forth, as the unicorn hath but one horn, they being hereby made ſo unreſiſtible. But Iſidor addeth, that at length being puffed up, they neglected the Law of God, and raged againſt him and his Chriſt, whereupon is that ſaid, Pſal.22.21. thou haſt heard me from the hornes of the unicornes, being prophetically ſpoken of Chriſt. Geſner thinketh to be a fable, which is reported of the manner of taking the unicorn, becauſe Ariſtotle, Elianus, Pliny, and Solinus write nothing hereof, but that the unicorn when he hath coupled with his female, groweth more gentle, and is taken, from whence that report might ariſe. Howſoever, we may gather from hence with Rupertus and others, of what invincible ſtrength the true faithful people of God are through God, as long as they adhere to him und his truth, 1 Joh.2.14. c.5.4. And the unicorn whoſe ſtrength is in his horn, is, as Baſil and Nazianzen have it, an apt embleme of Chriſt our Verſ. 22.

Albertus.

Theod qu.44. Procopius. Apollinar. in Caten. Græc. Orig. Hom. 16.

Rickelius. Rupertus. Gregorius. Iſidor.

Pſal. 2.

Geſner of four-footed beaſts.

Note.

Baſil in Pſ.18. Nazianzen orat. 28.

our head in whom all our ſtrength lyeth, and his in God his head. And Vincentius. hereunto Vincentius addeth, that the horn of this beaſt is a preſent remedy againſt poiſon, and therefore in Africa where the watets are infected by reaſon of the multitude of ſerpents there, the beaſts are wont to follow the unicorn to drink, when he by his horn hath purged the waters, whereby he ſaith, Chriſts Baptiſme thus ſanctifying the waters to us is ſet forth.

Verſ. 23. Surely there is no inchantment againſt Jacob, nor divination againſt Iſrael, &c. the Cald. and Sept. For there is no inchantment, &c. making this a reaſon of that, which was before ſaid touching the unicorn; as if it had been ſaid, as the unicorn by his horn taketh away the force of poiſon, ſo God all power of inchantments, that they cannot hurt his people; and this reading is more according to the Hebrew כי for or becauſe. The Cald. alſo for, againſt Iſrael, hath it, in Iſrael: but although the בישתאל, may be ſo read, yet it may be alſo rendred againſt; and this is better, forſomuch as this is ſpoken to put Balak from all hope of doing any thing againſt them by inchantments: yet the vulgar latine followeth the Caldee, rendring the next words alſo thus, in due time it ſhall be ſaid to Iacob and Iſrael, what God hath wrought, for theſe words, according to this time it ſhall be ſaid of Jacob, &c. In Hebr. it is only כעת, according to time, ſo alſo the Cald and Sept. that is, when opportunity ſhall ſerve, ſay ſome, the things, that God hath wrought, ſhall be ſpoken of; but I rather think, that כעת denoteth the perpetuity as time ſhall alwayes be to the end of the world; ſo Gods famous Acts for his people ſhall ever be ſpoken of to his praiſe. They that follow the vulgar Latine expound it, as oppoſed to the firſt part of the ſentence, there is no inchantment or divination in Iſrael, thus, but in his time God will delare to them, what he will do, that is, by the Urim and Thummim of the high Prieſt, or by his Prophets, but thus the words are perverted; for it is not, what he will do, but, what he hath done. But the word ליעקוב, is better rendred, to Iacob, then, of Iacob: men ſhall alwayes be telling them, what God hath done for them; and their Teachers ſhall remember them hereof to ſtirre them up hereby to fear God, and to walk in his wayes.

Verſ. 24. Behold, the people ſhall riſe up as a great Lion, and as a young lion, &c.] The firſt word here, according to R. Kimhi, ſignifieth a great lion, the word לבא Lebiah, coming from לב, an heart, becauſe ſuch are of great cou-
Gen. 49. rage; and the next word, a leſſer lion. Judah alone was ſometime compared to a lion, but now all the people of Iſrael; the vulg. Latine hath a lioneſſe, but erroneouſly. Hereby the great power, that God would give Cazkuni. to his people againſt their enemies is further ſet forth, which, as Cazkuni noteth, was verified the next year, when they had paſſed Jordan; and to this he ſpecially referreth thoſe words before, verſ. 23. according to time it ſhall be ſaid, &c. it is a propheſie of their victories over the Canaanites, againſt whom they ſhould not proceed with the ſtoutneſſe and courage of a lion.

He ſhall not lye down, till he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the ſlain;
Cald. Par. that is, till he hath overcome them and taken their ſpoyles; the Caldee therefore hath it, he ſhall not dwell in the land, till he hath ſlain the occaſion, and inheriteth the ſubſtance of the people. This was partly fulfilled in Joſhua his time, Joſ.22.3,4,8. and afterwards in David, 2 Sam. 22.38. This is
The Myſtery. myſtically applyed by Origen, Rabanus and others, to the ſpiritual conqueſt of the faithful over ſin and Satan, 1 Pet.5.9. 1 Joh.5.4. and of this Micha ſpeaketh, uſing the ſame compariſon, Mich.5.8,9. but the proceedings in Eph.6.12,13. this warfare are altogether with ſpiritual arms, faith, hope, righteouſneſſe, the Word of God, and prayer, and in many ſufferings, 2 Cor.6.4,5, &c. Rom.8.36,37. according to the example of Chriſt, who ſuffering like a lamb, overcame as a lion, Rev.5.5.

And

And Balak ſaid to Balaam, neither curſe them at all, nor bleſſe them, Hebr. neither curſing curſe him, &c.] When as he could not prevail to have Iſrael curſed, he would hinder him from being bleſſed. Balak deſpairing now of bringing a curſe upon them, cried out, ſaith Philo, ceaſe O man either to curſe or to preſage, goe, it is better to be ſilent, then to ſpeak unpleaſing things. So the wicked cannot endure to hear the praiſes of the godly, as Saul envied David for this. Balak notwithſtanding this ill ſucceſſe, which he had, would not yet give over attempting the ſame again; and therefore bringeth him to another place, if God would ſuffer him to curſe them thence, viz. To the top of Peor, that looketh toward Ieſhimon, and there again 7 altars, &c. are prepared. This was Balaks third and laſt attempt, after which he gave over, as Satan tempted Chriſt 3 times, and then left him. Peor was a place, where the Moabites worſhipped the idoll Baalpeor, of which ſee chap. 25. 2. and here Jerome ſaith, the Iſraelites fell to the ſame idolatrie with them. Philo ſaith, that Balak as if he had forgotten what was paſt, brought Balaam again, where he might ſee but part of the people: but doubtleſſe he thought that God might as the devill, be moved to doe that in one place, which he would not doe in another, and therefore he bringeth him hither, this place being by thoſe ſuperſtitious people accounted the chief, conſecrated to the honour of their God, and ſo the moſt likely to prevail in. Toſtatus thinketh this Peor to have been another top of the ſame mountain, upon which Piſgah was, and the deſcription of it by looking towards Ieſhimon, maketh it not improbable, for thus is Piſgah alſo deſcribed, ch. 2. 20.

Verſ. 25.

Philo de vita Moſis.
1 Sam. 18. 6.

Verſ. 27. 28.

Ainſworth.
Hieron. de loc. Hebr.
Philo.

Toſtatus.

Chap. XXIV.

And When Balaam ſaw that it pleaſed God to bleſſe Iſrael, he went not for inchantments as at other times, but ſet his face towards the wilderneſſe, &c.] Hitherto it ſeemeth that Balaam had gone for inchantments, when he pretended to goe meet the Lord, that by the power thereof he might curſe, but ſtill God prevented him, and meeting him without delay, ſent him back with his word in his mouth for bleſſing, and not for curſing. Therefore he now reſolveth to go no more, but ſtanding ſtill in his place, and looking towards the wilderneſſe, where Iſrael incamped, he expected a new revelation for bleſſing. The Cald. and Targum Jonathan ſay, that he looked towards the wilderneſſe recounting the idolatry of the people with the golden calf there: hoping that for this God might be moved to curſe them, and Toſtatus ſaith, that ſome Hebrewes have written, that ſeeing inchantments could not prevaile, he turned himſelf to pray againſt them, beſeeching God to remember their ſinne about the golden calf, and therefore to give him leave to curſe them, as they were worthy. And Ainſworth ſaith, that ſeeing when he went to meet God, he was alwayes prevented with words of bleſſing, he thought now by ſuddenly turning him to the people without going out, to prevent God, and ſo to curſe them. But all this is againſt the words of this place, When he ſaw that it pleaſed God to bleſſe, he did ſubmit himſelf, and went no more to ſeek means of curſing: this alſo Ferus and others, preferring Balaam herein before many Chriſtians, who although they be reſiſted again and again in their evill courſes, yet will not be reclaimed, or deſiſt from the doing the like again, as he did.

Verſ. 1.

Cald. paraphr.
Targum Jonathan.

Toſtatus.

Ainſworth.

Ferus.
Note.

When Balaam ſtood looking upon the people in their camp, expecting a revelation, the ſpirit of God came upon him, that is, the ſpirit of Propheſie, and he tooke up his parable, Balaam the ſonne of Beor hath ſaid, the man whoſe eyes were opened, hath ſaid. &c.] Balaam being now to propheſie of of the future glory and greatneſſe of the Iſraelitiſh nation uſeth words of preparation to purchaſe attention and credit, as to that, which came from God. His eyes he ſaith were open, intimating, that they had been blinde, and he could not ſee, happily meaning when the Angel ſtood againſt him in the way, but now the eye of his underſtanding was opened to ſee into the ſecrets of God. Lyranus, that his eyes were ſhut by ſleep, and then he had this revelation. Rabanus, that they were ſhut practically, but open ſpeculatively, he ſeeing the truth, but having no power to follow it.

Verſ. 2.

Verſ. 3, 4.

Sol. Jarchi. In Hebr. for eyes is eye, whereupon Sol. Jarchi conjectureth, that he was blind of one eye, but this is vain. He ſaith alſo he heard the words of God, and ſaw the viſion of the Almightie, and falling into a trance had his eyes open, that is, although through aſtoniſhment and fear, when he had this viſion, he fell down as dead as other Prophets, both John and Daniel have done, yet his eye was then open to underſtand. The ſcope of his ſpeach then is, to prepare others to receive his word, as the word of God, ſuch as is the 2 Per. 1. 19. word of every Prophet of God.

Verſ. 5,6. How goodly are thy tents O Iacob, thy tabernacles (O Iſrael) as the valleyes are they ſpread forth, &c.] The tents of Iſrael are here commended from five things. 1. From their beautie, how goodly. 2. From their extenſion, as the valleyes. 3. Their pleaſantneſſe, as gardens. 4. Their firme ſtanding as lign-aloes trees, which God hath planted. 5. Their height, as Cedars. It may ſeem ſtrange, that ſuch commendations ſhould be given to Oleaſter. their tents having now been weather-beaten 40. yeares. But as Oleaſter hath it, whatſoever the habitations of the juſt are outwardly to the eye, yet unto God they ſeem moſt ſpecious and beautifull, moreover this is prophetically ſpoken of the magnificent Temple of Solomon and the goodly buildings, which they ſhould have: for by the name of tents were their habitations afterwards called, Mal. 2. 12. Zechar. 12. 7. 2 Chron. 10. 16. 7. 10. to put them in mind of their pilgrimage alwayes in this life: as the valleyes they are ſpread forth, hereby was ſet forth the large extent of their poſſeſſions: as gardens by the rivers ſide; hereby was ſhewed, that they ſhould be flouriſhing, and full of good and wholeſome fruits; as gardens by rivers are green and fruitfull, and that they ſhould be and were now fenced about with Gods providence, as a garden hath walls about it. To a garden is the Church alſo compared, Cantic. 4. 12. 16. Eſa. 61. as a watered garden, Jer. 31. 12. Eſa. 58. 11. they that being the Church live wickedly contrariwiſe are threatned, that they ſhall be as a garden that hath no water, as

Eſa. 1. 30. lign. aloes trees which the Lord hath planted: The Septuagint and the vulgar Latine, as the tents which the Lord hath planted, and the word אֹהָלִי ſignifying tents, doth not much differ from the word אֲהָלִים here uſed, but both Pa-

Pagnin, Vatablus, &c. gnin, Vatablus. R. Solomon, Toſtatus, &c. render it by aloes, the Cald. by ſpices, but the difference being onely in the points, there might eaſily be a miſtaking, the fume like ſweet ſpices or a pretious ointment, which the Iſraelites ſhould have, was meant hereby, for the aloes tree groweth in India

Ainſworth. or Arabia, and hath a ſweet ſmell like the Thyni tree, ſome render it, the Santall trees, and theſe are ſaid to be planted of the Lord, becauſe of their excellency, as ſometimes the Cedars are ſaid to be for their moſt high ſtature, as the Cedars beſides the waters: This is added to ſet forth their glory and durabilitie, as the Cedar hath the greateſt glory for height and bignes amongſt all trees, and is moſt incorruptible, wherefore the Aſſyrian in his greatneſſe is compared to a Cedar, Ezech. 31. 3. 4.

The Myſtery. Myſtically ſaith Origen, Rabanus, &c. the praiſes of the faithfull are here ſet forth, who are ſaid to dwell in tents, becauſe as men in tents, they fixe not their aboad, but are alwayes proceeding and going forward from grace to grace, and they have the ſweetneſſe of gardens and ſpices &c. God

Pſal. 92. 11. planteth them and not man, making them fruitfull in all good works, for they are planted by the waters, that is, upon Chriſt himſelf and the holy Ghoſt, as water of life never failing them, but making them to grow upward as the Cedars by heavenlineſs of mind.

He

He ſhall pour water out of buckets, his ſeed ſhall be in many waters, his King ſhall be higher then Agag, &c.] The Sept. There ſhall come a man out of his ſeed, which ſhall have dominion over many nations, and his Kingdome ſhall be higher then Gog, &c. to the ſame effect the Cald. and Targum Jonathan; but for Gog they have Agag. The vulgar Latine, his King ſhall be taken away for Agag, and his Kingdome ſhall be taken away: and this laſt reading is followed by Rupertus, Rabanus, Beda, Hugo and Rickelius, and this laſt author ſaith, it is the common expoſition. Theſe then make this a propheſie of Sauls loſing his Kingdom for Agag the King of the Amalekites, whom he ſpared contrary to the charge given him, 1 Sam.15. And Jerom having mentioned the Sept. reading preferreth this. But the Hebrew words ſignifie exaltation and lifting up, and not taking away, and not, for Agag, but, then Agag. And therefore leaving that tranſlation as unſound, although ſome of the Hebrews alſo expound it ſo; we follow the firſt. His King ſhall be exalted above Agag, that is, in particular above Agag, as King Saul was, when he had ſubdued the Amalekites, and all Kings of Amalek, who were called by that name generally, as the King of Egypt, Pharaoh; of the Philiſtims, Abimelek, and the Roman Emperour, Ceſar. For the Agag or King of Amalek was of great renown in times paſt, and of great power, as we may alſo gather from their bold coming againſt Iſrael, Exod. 17. and therefore this compariſon is uſed to ſet forth the great glory of the Kings of Iſrael to come, which was not verified ſo much in Saul as in David and Solomon, and moſt of all in Chriſt. That Amalek was of great glory, we may ſee verſ.20. he was the firſt or chief of the nations. For the reading of the Sept. higher then Gog; this is followed by Origen, expounding it not by any nation ſo called, but by tectum, the roof of an houſe, as the word ſignifieth, ſo likewiſe Cyprian. Theodoret following Symmachus, for Gog, hath Og: whereas it is ſaid, He ſhall pour water out of buckets, &c. this is commonly expounded according to the Sept. of his ſeed, by the buckets the holy Patriarks, of which the Hebrewes came being underſtood, and by the water out of them, their poſterity growing into great multitudes, he ſhall have a copious iſſue, ſaith Junius, and Rabanus likewiſe, and Toſtatus. But theſe two laſt will not only have their innumerable multiplying hereby ſet forth, but alſo the evangelical knowledge, which flowed from them by the miniſtry of the Apoſtles, like waters into all the world. And Toſtatus, beſides theſe two, hath a third ſenſe, by waters underſtanding the knowledge of the true God, which was amongſt the Hebrews; but he preferreth the two former. Ferus followeth this, according to which, he ſaith, God is called the Fountain of living water; and again, the Word of God is a fountain of water, which Word was committed to them. But he maketh Chriſt the bucket, from which this water floweth into all parts, according to that, the law ſhall go out from Sion, and the word of the Lord from Ieruſalem. For the firſt of theſe ſenſes make the next words, his ſeed ſhall be in many waters; and they are called the houſe of Jacob, which came forth out of the waters of Judah, and of the fountain of Iſrael, and many peoples are called many waters. And by this ſimilitude an innumerable increaſe is moſt aptly ſet forth, as the drops of water are innumerable. And by ſaying, his ſeed ſhall be in many waters, is meant their fruitfulneſſe, as of ſeed ſown in watery and moiſt places, Eſay 32.20. and this is the ſenſe, as Rabanus ſaith, according to the hiſtory, but myſtically the flowing of true knowledge out from them into all parts, is meant, which was fulfilled in Chriſt, whoſe Word and Spirit are often thus ſet forth, Joh.3.5.& 4.10. & 7.38. and ſo by their King ſo high in glory Chriſt is ſet forth, and his ſpiritual Kingdome the Church of the faithful.

Verſ. 7.

Rupertus. Rabanus, &c.

Hieron. in Ezech. 38.

Origen.

Theodoret

Junius. Rabanus. Toſtatus.

Ferus.

Jer. 2. Eccl. 1. Rom. 9. Pſal. 147. Eſay 2. 3

Eſay 48. 1. Pſal. 68. 27. Revel. 17. 15.

God brought him forth out of Egypt, he hath the ſtrength of an unicorn, &c.] Of this ſee before Chap.23.22. the ſame is here repeated, to terrifie Balak

Verſ. 8.

Rickelius. lak the more, which Rickelius thinketh is not done without a great myſtery; and Origen accordingly will have Gods bringing of his ſon Jeſus out Origen. Hom.17. of Egypt, after the death of Herod, and his bringing of him out of the Egypt of this world to heaven ſet forth hereby, a way being made thus Rabanus. for all the faithful to paſſe thither, ſo likewiſe Rabanus. He ſhall eat up the nations, his enemies, and break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrowes. Here that, which was ſpoken briefly before, is further inlarged, touching their unreſiſtible ſtrength. By eating up is meant his deſtroying of them, that is, of the Canaanites ſeven nations from being a people. By the vulgar Latine it may ſeem to be meant otherwiſe: for it is, the nations
Rabanus. ſhall eat up his enemies; being by Rabanus expounded of Titus and Veſpaſian, Romans, with the help of other nations in their army deſtroying the wicked Jewes, the enemies of Chriſt, and overthrowing their city. But the word, ſhall eat, is the ſingular number, and therefore cannot agree with the plural, nations; ſo that the firſt reading muſt ſtand, and therefore moſt expound it accordingly. Being myſtically applyed unto Chriſt, it will agree thus, he ſhall eat up, that is, ſubdue and bring under his obedience the Gentiles, that were his enemies before, and pierce them with his Word as with arrowes to the inward parts, as is propheſied, Pſal. 45.6. and of the Word piercing and dividing between the marrow and the bones, ſee Heb.4.12.

Verſ. 9. He couched, he lay down as a lion, as a great lion, &c.] Not much unlike to that, Chap.23.24. and the ſame with the words of Jacob, when he bleſſed Judah, Gen.49.9. where therefore the ſenſe both for the letter and
Gen. 27. 29. & Gen. 12. 3. myſtery may be ſeen. Bleſſed is he that bleſſeth thee, &c. thus before Iſaac concluded in bleſſing Jacob, and God in bleſſing Abraham, and Balaam here to ſhew, that he ſpake by the ſame Spirit. And thus he cutteth Balak off from all hope of having the Hebrews curſed, yea he doth in effect curſe him and his for attempting it, and himſelf alſo.

Qu. Rickelius. But how is this to be underſtood, bleſſed is he that bleſſeth thee; for Balaam bleſſed Iſrael, but yet he was not bleſſed? Rickelius anſwereth, he is bleſſed, unleſſe there be a barr in him, whereby he is hindred from the bleſſing, as there was in Balaam, becauſe he had a wicked heart in him.

Verſ. 10. And Balaks anger was kindled againſt Balaam, and he ſmote his hands together, &c. Thus Balak expreſſed his wrath and indignation at Balaam, as the phraſe of clapping the hands is uſed, Job 27.23. Lament. 2.15. as if he had bidden him, avant, for forbidding all to curſe them, and had been ready to offer him ſome violence, if he did not with the more ſpeed haſten away. Thus the wicked are deceived of all their expectation at the laſt, Verſ.12,13. as Balaam of his hoped for honour. Balaam to this ſaith nothing, but what he had in effect ſpoken before, he could not go from the Word of the Lord to ſpeak any thing of his own mind.

Verſ. 14. And now, ſaith he, I go to my people, come therefore and I ſhall adviſe thee, what this people ſhall do to thy people in the latter dayes.] The Cald. hath it, I
Cald. Par. will counſel thee, what thou ſhalt do, and ſhew thee what this people ſhall do, &c. for the advertiſement or counſel was given by Balaam moſt wickedly to Balak, as is noted, Numb.31.16. and touching the people of Iſrael, he ſhewed only, what they ſhould do to the Moabites hereafter. The counſel then, that he gave, was to lay a ſtumbling block before the chil-
Ri Solomon. dren of Iſrael by the Moabitiſh women enticing them to fornication and idolatry, as is alſo expreſſed Revel.2.14. According to the Caldee R. Solomon ſaith, the Scripture is ſhort, the meaning is, I will counſel thee to cauſe them to ſtumble, and I will tell thee what evil they ſhall do to Moab Cazkuni. hereafter. And Cazkuni, Moſes our maſter concealed the counſel, be-Cajetan. cauſe it was given to Balak in ſecret, but it is revealed Numb. 31.16. Cajetan, for that, which they ſhall do to thy people in the latter dayes, I will counſel

counſel thee, what thou ſhalt do to them forthwith to make them fall, and for that, which I ſhall now ſpeak of the evil to be done by them to Moab, thou ſhalt not need greatly to care, becauſe it ſhall not be, till a long time after thou art departed out of this life, wherein he ſeemeth to have attained to the true ſenſe of this place; thus alſo Munſter. This then is an eccliptical ſpeech, ſomething being left to be underſtood, as the Caldee hath ſupplyed it, or as Cajetan, and theſe kind of ſpeakings are not unuſual, ſee Exod.4.5.& 13.8. For the counſel given by Balaam, Philo ſaith, that he taking Balak by the hand led him aſide, after he had uttered the divine oracles, and having him alone, ſaid; There is no way to make the Iſraelites expugnable, but by drawing them to the contempt of Gods laws, and for this the evil of laſciviouſneſſe and luſt is moſt powerful. Let therefore a company of the moſt beautiful women of Moab moſt curiouſly adorned be ſent forth into the plains where they encamp, ſo that the young men of Iſrael may ſee them, and be taken with their beauty, but let not them yield unto them at the firſt motion, but ſeem coy and return from them again, and having ſhewed themſelves thus once or twice, that their luſt may be the more inflamed, at length let them come to more familiar parle, and when the Hebrews ſhall ſollicite them to love, ſay, We know ye cannot love us, becauſe ye ſerve not our gods; but if ye will come to our ſacrifices and condeſcend to our religion, then ſhall ye have your deſires ſatisfied by imbracing our bodies, &c. thus he, and Joſephus likewiſe, and Ambroſe following them, and others; ſo that by this relation they dealt almoſt, as Jacobs ſonnes had dealt with Shechem and Hamor about Dinah. Where this counſel was given, is not expreſſed, but Comeſtor ſaith, that it was in the borders of Midian, to which the King went with him to hear it. Joſephus contrary to Philo, ſaith, that he gave it him before the Princes. Origen, and after him Rabanus, expound the propheſie here following, as meant by the counſel which he ſaid he would give him, becauſe in a propheſie is revealed the counſel of the Lord: but no Prophet when he was to utter a propheſie ever ſpake thus; and the propheſies uttered by Balaam were now pronounced before all, but his counſel was given in ſecret after this, when he was now departing thence; & therefore Origen himſelf afterwards expoundeth it alſo according to the expoſition before going: in the latter dayes. It is ſtrange, that Toſtatus hath upon this, for he ſaith, by latter dayes, are meant the laſt dayes of the people of Iſraels ſtaying in thoſe parts, the whole time whereof he conjectureth to have been about 6. moneths, when Balaam meant to come again to give the foreſaid counſel to the King, neither did he give it till then. For Balaam lived not to come again, as we may well think, becauſe he was cut off chap.31.16. unleſſe it ſhall be thought, that he went home firſt, and then returned to give his counſel, and ſo fell with the Midianites, being again on his way homeward amongſt them. But certainly he gave him this counſel now, as all others hold, which appeareth by Balaks putting it immediately in practice, when he was gone chap.25.1,2.&c. And herein the great wickedneſſe of Balaam appeared, whatſoever ſhew of piety towards God he made, in that to avoid the Kings wrath, and to hold his favour he gave him ſuch peſtilent counſel againſt the people of God; that they might be curſed and periſh contrary to all his foregoing parables, which he knew to be the words of God. For theſe words, in the latter dayes, they are well referred by expoſitours generally to any times coming long after, and not onely to the time of the Meſſiah, as ſome would have them, becauſe the Moabites were ſubdued by David, and the Amalekites by Saul, and the like phraſe in this ſence is uſed Gen.49.1.

Philo de vita Moſis.

Gen.34.

Schola ſt. hiſt.

Origen.

Hom.20.

Toſtatus.

2 Sam.8.2.

1 Sam.15.

And he took up his parable, Balaam the ſonne of Beer hath ſaid, the man whoſe eyes were open, &c. He beginneth, as before, verſ.3,4. uſing the ſame words, verſ. 15.15. onely v.16. he hath theſe words more, and knew the knowledge of thee

Verſ. 15.

Baal Hatturim. Origen.

the moſt high, which are inſerted, ſaith Baal Hatturim, becauſe he was now to reveal the dayes of Chriſt. Origen here moveth a queſtion, how this happened unto Balaam, that he could ſay more magnifically of himſelfe, then any of the holy Prophets: for none of them ever ſpake of himſelf, but thus ſaith the Lord, and I had a viſion from the Lord, &c. but not which knew the knowledge of God? and anſwereth that he ſaid ſo, becauſe he was a wizzard, and had the knowledge of the ſecrets of nature from God, from whom all knowledge cometh, which he did herein confeſſe. But he ſpeaketh not herein of ſuch knowledge, but of divine knowledge now extraordinarily revealed unto him for the good of the Church, and becauſe it was extraordinary for ſuch an one, as he to ſpeak of theſe things, he ſetteth forth the perſon ſpeaking thus extraordinarily, that it might be the more noted, and touching the knowing of the knowledge of the moſt high, the ſame in effect is often ſpoken by the holy Prophets, although not in the ſame words.

Verſ 17. I ſhall ſee him, but not now, I ſhall behold him, but not nigh, there ſhall come a ſtarre out of Iacob, &c.] Here he propheſieth of David, and of Chriſt figured out in David, neither of which ſhould ariſe, till after a long time.

Qu. But how ſaith he, I ſhall ſee him, if he came not till a long time after his death? It is anſwered, the meaning is, that he ſhould ſee him, that is, Chriſt in his poſteritie, the Magi, that came to ſee him by the guidance of a new ſtarre, or at the end of the world, when he ſhall come to judgement, when every eye ſhall ſee him. Or the firſt word may be rendred, I ſee him, that is, by the ſpirit of propheſie, I ſee him a farre off to come, as Abraham is ſaid to have ſeen Chriſts day, and both he and the other Patriarks the promiſes, ſaluting them afarre off; they by faith, he onely by divine revelation without any good redounding to him herefrom: Thus ſome that have beſt skill in the Hebrew, render it, I ſee; thus R. Solomon, I ſee the praiſe of Jacob and his greatneſſe, but it is not now, but after a time. Maimony expounding theſe words, divideth them between Dauid and Chriſt. I ſhall ſee him, that is, David, I ſhall behold him, that is Chriſt the King, A ſtar ſhall proceed out of Iacob, that is, David, and a Scepter out of Iſrael, that is Chriſt, and he ſhall ſmite through the corners of Moab, that is, David, 2 Sam. 8.2. and unwall all the ſonnes of Sheth, that is, Chriſt, as is ſaid, Pſalm. 72.8. He ſhall have dominion from ſea to ſea. And Edom ſhall be a poſſeſſion, that is, to David. 2 Sam. 8.14. and Seir ſhall be a poſſeſſion, that is, to Chriſt, as it is ſaid, Obad. 21. and ſaviours ſhall come up on mount Sion to iudge the mount of Eſau. Thus the Rabbin both wittily and probably, neither doe ours much differ herefrom being generally for David and for Chriſt here ſet forth; as Jerom, Rupertus, Burgenſis, &c. which laſt ſaith, that Balaam in this and the three Propheſies before going ſpeaketh of foure times. 1. From the calling of Abraham to the giving of the Law, for then this people was particularly choſen, and the promiſe of innumerable increaſe was made. 2. From the beginning of the Law to the entring into the poſſeſſion of Canaan, for then they were without idols, and prevailed mightily, and the arke was in a Tent. 3. From thence till the time of Kings, and the Temple, when they overcame Agag. 4. Under Chriſt, of whom this Propheſie ſpeaketh. The Cald. for a ſtarre ſhall riſe out of Iacob. hath it, Meſſiah ſhall be annointed of the houſe of Iſrael. Cazkuni ſaith, he propheſieth of David. Whereas all the children of Sheth are ſpoken of, hereby are meant all men of whatſoever countrey or nation, according to the Rabbins expoſition before going; and the Cald. he ſhall have dominion over all the ſonnes of men, and R. Solom, all men, who do all come of Sheth: For of Sheth came Noah, who onely with his ſonnes were preſerved in the ark, ſo that all now be the ſonnes of Sheth, for all others were drowned. The amplitude of Chriſts dominion then is hereby ſet forth, as Pſal. 2.8. ſo likewiſe, Theodoret, Procopius, and Origen, &c. and accordingly it is propheſied, Eſa. 2.2. Mich.

Matth. 2.

Revel. 1. 17.

Iohn 6. 56.
Heb. 11.13.

R. Solomon.

Maimony.

Hieron. contr. Iudæos.
Burgenſis.

Cald. Par.
Cazkuni.

Mich.4.1. Some take Sheth for the proper name of a countrey as Oleaſter, and Nathan a Rabbin, that it was a river in Moab. Others according to the ſignification of Sheth, that nothing elſe is meant but the countries behind Ammon, and Midian; for theſe words deſtroy all the children of Sheth. Heb. is קר קר of קיר a wall, and therefore by the Rabbin it is rendred, unwall all the children of Sheth, which ſenſe is alſo followed by many, and the meaning is he ſhall break down the partition wall, as it is ſaid Eph.2.14. by ſome he ſhall wall them in, or incloſe them, thus taking them and making them his ſubjects, whereupon Origen wiſheth to be worthy to be one of his Captives or priſoners, as Paul writeth of himſelf, Paul the priſoner of Chriſt. Some, he ſhall take, as a prey, as fiſhermen incloſe in their nets and take fiſhes. By the corners of Moab are underſtood the quarters of Moab, by the Sept. the Dukes; by the Cald. the Princes of Moab. Some expound all of Chriſt, and then the ſubduing of Moab is to be underſtood, as that of the children of Sheth. And indeed Chriſt is the true morning ſtar, as he is called; and therefore it is to be held, although this propheſie were fulfilled in David in part, as in the type, yet the full accompliſhment thereof was in Chriſt, as all the Fathers hold, who therefore ſpeak onely of Chriſt, ſaying that the ſpeech is doubled, I ſhall ſee him, I ſhall beheld him, to ſet forth both his Humanity and his Divinity, but I ſee no reaſon, why David, in whom ſome ſparks of this Star, as it were, appeared, ſhould be excluded, as Calvin ſpeaketh. From this propheſie it was, that that impoſtor bearing him ſelf, as the Meſſiah, in the dayes of Trajan, called himſelf Barchobab, the ſon of ſtar, who who when he was ſlain, was called by the Jews, whom he had deceived Barchozibah, the ſon of falſhood. Of a Scepter which alſo is here ſpoken of, aſcribed to Chriſt, ſee Pſal.45.6.

Origen.

Revel.22.16.

Calvin.

And Edom ſhall be a poſſeſſion, Seir alſo, &c.] How Edom was ſubdued by David, hath been already touched, but whereas R. Maimony diſtinguiſheth between Edom and Seir, it is vain, becauſe Seir was the poſſeſſion of Edom, and therefore the ſame is ſet forth by both theſe names, and the Septuagint for Seir hath Eſau. The fulfilling of this in Chriſt is by ſubduing all enemies of the truth, as Toſtatus hath it, the Moabites, and Edomites being expreſly named, as the chief enemies of Iſrael, and others being in them underſtood; wherefore Eſay propheſying of Chriſt ſaith, who is this, that cometh from Edom, &c. So likewiſe Origen, Euſebius, Procopius, &c. by Edom underſtanding the fleſh, or men in the blood of ſin, who are ſubjected to Chriſt, when they are converted and the fleſh is ſubdued to the Spirit.

Verſ. 18.

Deut.2.8. Gen.36.7.

Toſtatus.

Iſa.63.1.

And Iſrael ſhall do valiantly,] Heb. valiantneſſe, Cald. be proſpered in ſubſtance, meaning that they ſhall be inriched by the ſpoiles of the enemies, for the Hebrew word ſignifieth as well riches, as valour; in the like phraſe David ſpeaketh Pſal.60.14. Myſtically, the Spiritual ſhall proſper and prevail every where.

Out of Jacob ſhall come he that ſhall have dominion, and ſhall deſtroy him that remaineth of the City.] This by R. Solomon is expounded of Chriſt, as if he had ſaid, yet there ſhall be another ruler. Cazkuni referreth it to Joab, of whom it is ſaid, that he remained in Edom ſix moneths, untill he had cut off every male in Edom. Lyranus and Toſtatus underſtand Chriſt ſubduing the City of Rome, the Miſtriſs of the world to the goſpel in Conſtantines time, and ſome will have Conſtantine underſtood by him, that ſhould have dominion. Origen by the City underſtandeth the world, Hugo Cardinalis, the Synagogue of the Jews, and ſome Hebrews by the dominatour here underſtand Solomon. Ferus, the ſecond coming of Chriſt to judgement, or Chriſt at his ſecond coming, when every one ſhall be ſubdued, and periſh, that was not before taken by being converted.

Verſ. 19.

R. Solom.

1 King.11.15, 16.

Lyranus.
Toſtatus.
Origen.
Hugo Cardin.
Ferus.

ted. I cannot diſlike that of Cazkuni touching Joab Davids Captain, in whom this was fulfilled according to the letter, and in Chriſts ſecond coming, ſhall be according to the Myſtery, as Ferus. For Solomon made no wars, and therefore it cannot be underſtood of him. And Conſtantine roſe not out of Jacob. And of Chriſt at his firſt coming it was fully ſpoken before, verſ.17,18.

Verſ.20. And when he looked upon Amalek, he took up this parable and ſaid, Amalek was the firſt of the Nations, but his end ſhall be, he ſhall periſh for ever.] The Amalekites were not far from Edom, on the South of Caanan, and therefore from this high mountain he might well look upon their Country alſo; they came as ſome think of Amalek the ſon of Eliphaz, the ſon of Eſau. But before this we read of Amalekites in the dayes of Abraham, ſmitten by Chedarlaomer, and therefore this cannot ſo well hold; ſee before Exod. 17.8. Amalek and his race, that came of Eſau, moſt probably were called by one general name Idumeans, as all the reſt of his poſterity. The firſt of the Nations Amalek is called, becauſe he firſt of all others fought againſt Iſrael, and therefore the Cald. hath it, Amalek was the beginning of the wars of Iſrael; and this is followed by R. Solomon R. Abenezra and other Hebrewes. And Toſtatus likewiſe, Lyranus, Rupertus, &c Alſo he might be called the firſt, becauſe chief in valour; wherefore Amalek ſhould be utterly deſtroyed, ſee before Exod.17 ſo that here the ſame thing is onely uttered prophetically again, and he was deſtroyed by Saul, and by David, and afterwards Haman the Agagite, as he is called, Heſter 3.1. and therefore moſt probably coming of the Amalekite Kings, with his children were deſtroyed by Mordecai and the Jews. For his latter end] the Sept. hath, his ſeed, or poſterity, as the word may alſo be rendred.

Numb.13.20. Gen.36.12. Gen.14.7. Exod.17.8. Cald. Par. R. Solomon. R. Abenez. 1 Sam.15.30.

Note. Note that ſuch as are chief in ſin, as Amalek was, and ſo the firſt fruits as it were of the devil, ſhall be moſt ſeverely deſtroyed; ſo Jericho, the firſt city of the Canaanites, as the moſt forward in piety; the firſt fruits of God ſhall be moſt graciouſly dealt withal. Amalek, ſaith Rickelius, is a licker of the people, and figureth out the covetous, whoſe riches wickedly gathered ſhall at once at the laſt periſh for ever. Origen and Philo apply this much after the ſame manner, but erroneouſly going upon Amalek, the ſon of Eliphaz, of Eſau, allegorizing upon the ſenames, and certain places alſo by their names.

Joſ.6. Jer.2.3. Jam.1.18. Rickelius. Origen.

Verſ. 21. And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his parable, ſaying, ſtrong is thy dwelling place, &c.] The Kenites, as it ſeemeth, dwelt near the Amalekites, for when Saul went to deſtroy Amalek, he ſent to warn the Kenites to go from amongſt them, as with whom the Iſraelites were alwaies at peace. They were the Countreymen of Jethro, Moſes father in law, the Kenites which came of whom dwelt afterward with Judah, Judg.1.16. for Jethro is there called a Keuite, and amongſt the men of Judah, they are again mentioned. 1 Chron. Chapter. 2. Verſe 55. thus the Targum Jonathan by the Kenites underſtandeth Jethro his poſterity. But the Chaldee the Kenites, mentioned Gen. 15.19. calling them Salmeans. Of the Kenites Jethro his poſterity it is again ſpoken, Judg.4.11. and of the Rechabites ſo much commended, Jer.35. who are noted to be Kenites 1 Chron.2.55. I think with the Caldee, that the Kenites of thoſe parts are meant, and not thoſe coming of Jethro, for he and his were now moſt probably with the people of Iſrael; ſee Numb. 10. 25. ſo that Balaam couldnot be ſaid to have looked upon the Kenites, as a people by themſelves, to ſet forth theſe. It may be, that Jethro was originally of that Nation, although his habitation was amongſt the Midianites, and coming into league with Iſrael, whoſe Religion it is likely, he and his imbraced, for his ſake the Kenites doing all likewiſe were uſed as confederates, and dwelt ſafely till the Babyloniſh captivity, when togetherwith Iſrael they were were carryed away, which is meant in this ſaying. Strong is thy dwelling, and thou putteſt thy neſt in a rock, wherein the name Kenite is alluded to, ſith Ken ſignifieth a neſt.

1 Sam.15.6. Targum Jonathan. Cald. Par.

Verſ. 22.

Neverthelesſe the Kenite ſhall be waſterd, till Aſhur ſhall carry thee away captive, Hebr. neverthelesſe Cain ſhall be waſted.] Which word is uſed happily, becauſe they came of one Cain, ſo Junius. Calvin by the Kenites underſtandeth the Midianites, and not Jethro his poſterity, his houſe being yet but ſmall, and the Midianites, he thinketh were called Kenites ſynechdochically, from Jethro his family properly ſo called, which was a part of them.

Iunius. Calvin.

Cajetan by the Kenites underſtandeth the Amalekites, who he ſaith, are alſo called Cain, becauſe as he roſe up againſt Abel, ſo theſe againſt Iſrael, Rupertus for Cain hath Cham, the Septuagint for, thou haſt thy neſt in a rocke, hath it, Although Beor were to him a neſt of ſubtletie. The vulgar Latine, Although thou putteſt thy neſt in a rocke, and haſt beene choſen of the ſtocke of Cin, how long canſt thou remain? for Aſhur ſhall take thee.

Cajetan. Rupertus. Sept. καὶ ἐαν γένηται τῶ Βεὼρ νοσσιὰ πανουργίας.

The place is ſo obſcure, that Expoſitours almoſt know not, what conſtruction literally to make of it; and therefore Origen and Rabanus will have it underſtood myſtically onely, of craftie worldly minded men, who thinke to ſettle themſelves ſo ſurely, as never to be removed; or who, if they be converted to Chriſt, are built upon a rocke, but if the Aſſyrians leade them away, that is, they bee corrupted with Hereſie, they ſhall periſh by Devils ſet forth by Aſſyrians. But theſe things doe ſo ill hang together, and are ſo farre fetcht; that it is better neglecting them to cleave to the litterall ſence, by the Kenites underſtanding, as before a people neare the Amalekites, who although they had peace with Iſrael, and other Nations neare them, as we may ſee Judges, 4. 17. 1 Samuel, 15, 6. and ſo built them a neſt, as it were in a rocke; not periſhing, when other Canaanitiſh Nations were deſtroyed; yet when the Aſſyrian ſhould come, they ſhould bee waſted, the beſt of them; that is, the poſterity of Jethro, who ſincerely imbraced the true Religion, being preſerved to bee brought backe againe to their old habitations together with the Jewes, as is noted, 1 Chronicles, 3. 55. and intimated, Jeremiah, 35. where the Rechabites, that were Kenites, are ſo much commended and comforted with promiſes of continuing alwayes.

Origen. Hom.

Calvin ſaith, that the Midianites are meant by theſe Kenites, who when they were ſmitten by Gideon, this Propheſie was fulfilled; Neverthelesſe, the Kenite ſhall be waſted; and for the next words, he rendereth them, How long ſhall Aſhur carry thee captive? Interrogatively, referring it to Iſrael, to whom hee ſaith Balaam here turned his ſpeech, ſhewing the miſeries that ſhould bee mixed with their felicitie before ſpoken of; and in that hee ſaith, how long hee intimateth, that this captivitie ſhould bee for a long time as it was indeede, even for threeſcore and tenne yeares. But how the Midianites could bee ſaid to have a ſure habitation, I cannot ſee, for ſo much as they were deſtroyed, Chapter 31. The words in Hebrew are, Becauſe if Cain ſhall bee for a waſting, or the Kenites for deſtruction, how long ſhall Aſhur carrie thee captive? The meaning whereof ſeemeth to mee to bee this, if thy neſt, ſet forth by the word קין bee deſtroyed, that is, thy habitation, as it ſhall bee one day by the Aſſyrians, how long ſhall thy captivitie then be? that is, it ſhall be very long. For why it ſhould be referred to Iſrael, which is here laſt ſpoken, I can ſee no reaſon, but onely to the Kenites, of whom is this Propheſie.

Calvin.

And hereof may this morrall bee made, that there is no eſtate in this world ſo firmely grounded, but it is ſubject to alteration, and ſhall bee altered to worſe in time, that we may ſeeke ſtabilitie onely in heaven.

Note.

Verſ. 23. And he tooke up his parable, and ſaid, alas, Who ſhall live when God doth this?]

Verſ. 24. And ſhips ſhall come from the coaſt of Chittim, and afflict Aſhur, and Eber, and he alſo ſhall periſh for ever.] Here firſt Balaam lamenteth the miſeries of theſe times foreſeene, as if hee had ſaid, who ſhall eſcape deſtruction, when theſe things following ſhall be fulfilled, both Aſhur, that ruled over others being ſubdued, and the Hebrewes alſo, that came of Eber, touching whom ſo much happineſſe hath beene hitherto ſpoken, and all this by ſhips comming from Chittim, now Chittim was one of the ſonnes of Javan, the ſonne of Japhet, Geneſis 10. 4. and of him came the Cylicians, Macedonians, Cyprians and Italians, as Joſephus ſaith; ſo that both the Empires of the Greekes, in Alexander the Macedonian, and his ſucceſſours, and of the Romanes in Italy, may well bee underſtood by the ſhippes of Chittim here, the firſt of which ſubdued the Aſſyrians Empire devolved to the Perſian, and the other; that is, the Romane, deſtroyed Ieruſalem: and theſe things being done, he ſaith, that hee who made this waſte, ſhall periſh alſo for ever, that is, the Romanes through diviſions and civill warres amongſt themſelves, as wee know, that this Empire hath been long ſince waſted and brought down hereby.

Gen. 10. 22.

Ioſeph. antiq. lib. 4. cap. 22.

The vulgar Latine, for Chittim, hath Italy; the Targum Hieroſ. the Province of Italy and the Romanes; the Caldee Rome. But Malvenda hath rightly noted, that the Cyprians, Cylicians and Macedonians, were ſo called Chitheans, ſee Daniel 11. 30. where the ſhippes of Chittim are again ſpoken of the Greekes, and the Selucidæ troubling both the Aſſyrians, and Hebrewes being meant hereby.

Verſ. 25. And Balaam roſe up, and went and returned to his place, and Balak went his way.] It may ſeeme, Numbers 31. 8. where Balaam is ſaid, to have beene ſlaine amongſt the Midianites, that hee never went home again: But Cazkuni ſaith, that hee went home, and when hee heard of the the plague brought upon Iſrael by his Counſell, hee returned to Midian to receive a reward promiſed him for his Counſell, and there was ſlain with them.

Cazkuni.

Or it may bee ſaid, that hee went with a purpoſe to returne, but was ſtayed amongſt the Midianites, deſirous of him for their ſafeguard, as was touched before, Chapter 22. 5. but I thinke now, that the firſt is rather to bee preferred. For Balaks returne, or going his way; it was as Toſtatus hath it, to the mount Peor, from which he had gone to the borders of his kingdome to accompany Balaam, for the counſell which he finally gave him, and coming from thence again to Peor; or as Comeſtor hath it, from the borders of Midian, he preſently put that wicked counſell in execution.

Toſtatus.

CHAP.

Chap. XXV.

And Israel aboad in Shittim, and the people began to commit whoredome with the daughters of Moab.] Of Shittim see before, chap. 22. 1. and of the time of their abode here, even untill that Joshuah led them from thence over Jordan to Gilgal after the death of Moses; whereupon it is, that the Prophet saith, Remember what Balak did to you, and what Balaam answered, from Shittim to Gilgal. And now the cursed counsell of Balaam was put in practice and tooke effect to the destruction of 24000. even all, that sinned with the daughters of Moab and Midian, who must also be understood, as we may see, v. 6. but the far greater part sinned not, and so were preserved alive. Vers. 1. Mich. 6. 5. Deut. 4.3.4.

And they called the people to the sacrifices of their gods, and they did eat and bow down to their gods.] Of their manner of inviting them, see before in the counsell of Balaam, chap. 24. 14. These gods, with whom they sinned by the means of Moabs, and Midians daughters, were Baalpeor, as is expressed, v.5. Psalm. 106.28. they ioyned themselves unto Baalpeor and ate the offerings of the dead, that is, of dead and dumb idols. Here a dispute is made by some, whether they worshipped their idols, as thinking them gods, some holding, that they did, and some that they did not, but onely to please the women with whom they consorted, which is the most probable, as August. saith, in speaking of the idolatry of Solomon, although Josephus saith, that they suffered themselves to be perswaded by the women, with whom they had their pleasure, that there were many gods, and that there was nothing which for their sakes they were not ready to do against the Lawes of God. Vers. 2. Augustine. 1 King. 11. Joseph. antiqu. lib. 4. c. 6.

And Israel ioyned himself to Baalpeor, &c.] The Cald. to them, that served Baalpeor. In the vulg. latine, Israel was initiated to Baalpeor. It was an idol, that had a name common to others; Baal, lord, but for distinction, peor is added hereunto, because his chief place where he was served, was mount peor. The Baals of the heathen, after whom the Israelites also were sometime carried, were called by the Prophets sometimes Besheth, shame, as Hos. 9.10. Jer. 11.13. and Jerub-baal so called for beating down Baals altar is called Jerub-besheth, 2 Sam. 11. 21. and Eshbaal 1 Chron. 8. 33. Eshbosheth, 2 Sam. 2. 10. and Merib-baal. 1 Chron. 8. 34. Mephibosheth, 2 Sam. 9. 10. for it was indeed the shame of any people, and much more of the people of God, that they should serve such filthy idols. This Baalpeor is thought by most to have been the idol Priapus, because peor signifieth opening, for that all manner of filthinesse was there committed before that idoll, the secret parts being opened for this purpose without all shame. Ainsworth saith, either it might have the name of peor from opening the mouth in propheſying, because Baal is said to have had his Prophets, as the idoll of the Babylonians was called Nebo from propheſying. Vers. 3. Ainsworth. 1 King. 18. 21

And the Lord said to Moses, take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the Sunne, &c. As the words here sound, by heads the rulers of the people being understood, it is commonly held, that Moses was charged to hang them up, because through their negligence the people under their command, had committed this foule sinne, a document being drawn herefrom, that the sinnes of the people are the sinnes of their governours, when they labour not to keep them from doing evill; thus Origen, Augustine, Rabanus, Rupertus, Comestor, Hugo, Glossa, Lyranus, Calvin, Ainsworth, &c. But R. Solomon cited by Lyranus, and Cajetan, Oleaster, Tostatus and Procopius, &c. say that the meaning is, Moses should take the heads; that is, the Princes of the people, and use their help to hang up the people, that had sinned: So the Caldee, Take all the Princes of the people, and iudge, and hang up everie one that shall be found guiltie. Of these two Expositions the first and most common is to be preferred, Vers. 4. Rabanus. August, Origen, Cald Par, becauſe the reſt of the people, that ſinned, are appointed to be ſlain, v. 5. it being a thing of too great labour to hang them up all, they being 24000. And they, whoſe help Moſes uſed in doing this execution, verſ. 5. are not called heads, but the word being varied, judges. It is to be thought then, as Calvin hath it, that the heads or rulers, which had ſinned by fornication and idolatry ſhould be hanged up, and the common people ſlain with the ſword, as when they had ſinned with the calf, Exod. 32. to doe which laſt execution the Judges were ſpoken to, every one in his juriſdiction. Or it may be, that the help of the Judges was uſed to ſlay both the heads and the people, and then the heads which were other inferiour governours, who were guiltie of the ſame ſinne, were to be hanged up for the more terrour, that they who were above others in place, might be made more eminent examples of Gods judgement. The Judges who were not tainted with this ſinne, moſt probably were thoſe 70. joyned with Moſes to judge the people, who were in place and authoritie above all other heads and Princes, that were by Jethro his counſell made Captains over thouſands, hundreths and fifties, and how prone theſe were to wickedneſſe, as well as the people, may be ſeen before in the conſpiracy of Chorah, and after in this chapter, verſ. 14. in Zimri: whereas it is ſaid, hang them up before the Lord againſt the ſunne. Cajetan will have it underſtood in deteſtation of Baalpeor, which he ſaith, was the Sunne, worſhipped by them as a god, in this idoll, and that he had this name from opening, becauſe the Sunne openeth the day and the yeare. But what the more generall opinion is touching this idoll, hath been ſaid before, and therefore this was nothing elſe, but openly to hang them up to their greater ignominy, who were not aſhamed to commit ſo fowle a ſinne. This example of judgement againſt fornicators is moſt remarkable, both for the groſſe idolatry, that they were drawn unto by their filthy luſts, and the puniſhment following, wherefore Saint Paul remembreth it, hereby to diſſwade from this abominable ſinne. For the difference in the number judged here 24000. verſ. 9. there 23000. ſee the reconciliation there. Happily the people, that periſhed onely are reckoned by Saint Paul, and not the heads who might be one thouſand.

Numb. 11.

Exod 18.

Numb. 16.

Cajetan.

Note.

1 Cor. 10. 8.

Verſ. 6. And behold, one of the children of Iſrael brought a Midianitiſh woman to his brethren in the ſight of Moſes, and of the congregation, who were weeping at the doore of the Tabernacle.] This was Zimri, as is expreſſed, verſ. 14. Of whom Joſephus ſaith, that when Moſes tooke order for the cutting off of thoſe that had ſinned, came openly, bringing with him a Midianitiſh woman, and expoſtulated with Moſes for uſing ſuch ſeveritie at his own pleaſure, ſaying, that there was no reaſon why they ſhould be thus debarred from all pleaſure and liberty, yea, it was worſe then the Egyptian ſervitude, and that Moſes under the pretext of religion exerciſed tyranny, and therefore was worthy himſelf rather to be puniſhed. Then he added, that he having taken a Midianitiſh woman to wife, thought it not good to conceal it, as being a thing wherein he had done no more, then he might; for which cauſe he would now openly carry her to his tent, and ſo went his way. And Moſes being out of his great meekneſſe ſilent at all this, leſt if that he had contended with him, new ſtirres might have riſen, Phinees followed them out of zeale into the tent, and there finding him in the imbraces of his miſtreſſe, thruſt them both through with his javelin. Howſoever, this man ſhewed himſelfe moſt impudent and graceleſſe, when Moſes and others were weeping and grieving, and humbling themſelves before God at his ſanctuarie for the abomination, in that he now came openly with his ſtrumpet amongſt all the tents of his brethren up to the Tabernacle ſo contemptuouſly profeſſing, as it were the ſinne now adjudged to ſo ſore a puniſhment to be no ſinne, but a lawfull thing; for all this is implied in this relation here, and therefore he was worthily purſued by Phinees, and deſtroyed in his ſinne.

Ioſeph. antiq. lib. 4. c. 6.

The

The Septuagint in a different manner render theſe words, there was a man of the ſons of Iſrael that brought his brother to a Midianitiſh woman; but this is certainly a corruption, and maketh the relation more obſcure. Let ſuch as go after whores and pleaſure, when others mourn and pray becauſe of theſe ſins, conſider this example and be aſhamed, and tremble. Note.

And when Phinees, the ſon of Eleazar, the ſon of Aaron ſaw it, he roſe up from the congregation and took a javelin in his hand, &c.] Verſ. 7. It is generally held, that Phinees did this by an inſtinct of the Spirit extraordinarily moving him as Moſes killed the Egyptian, that wronged the Hebrew, and therefore his fact is not to be imitated by others, that are private perſons. Or it may be thought, that Moſes having given command to the Judges, verſ. 5. to ſlay ſuch wicked men, they delaying to do it for fear of their great multitude, becauſe they could not prevail with the people under them to put their hands to this work, Phinees firſt thruſt himſelf into the danger by doing execution upon this impudent and contemptuous Prince and his ſtrumpet, whereby, as Joſephus ſaith, many other young and luſty men were incouraged and went out and ſlew many more. Joſeph. lib. 4. antiq. c. 6. The place in which he ſlew him ſaid to be his tent, is הקבה, in the vulgar Latine, Lupanar, by Vatablus rendred fornicem & tentorium; and the Sept. κάμινον, a furnace; it is properly a hollowed place like a furnace made purpoſely to commit ſuch wickedneſſe in, ſo that the height of wickedneſſe ſeemed to be in this Prince, for that he had provided a ſtewes, wherein to take the pleaſure of his filthy luſt, in deſpight of God and man, for the word אהל is commonly put for a tent or tabernacle. Verſ. 8. Here Phinees thruſting them both through the belly with his javelin, as they were exerciſing their wicked luſt, took a fit revenge upon them in thoſe parts, wherewith they ſinned; and to expreſſe this in the vulgar Latine it is, he ſtruck them both through in their genitals: the Hebrew word is הקבתה, alluding to the word הקבה before uſed to ſet forth the ſtewes, and ſignifieth the belly.

and ſo the plague was ſtayed.] We read of no plague before, but hereby is intimated, that God ſent a plague amongſt the people for theſe abominations, for which it is likely, that Moſes and all the godly people aſſembled themſelves to the door of the tabernacle, and wept and prayed there before the Lord to avert this judgment, and to convert them that ſinned herein from their wickedneſſe, at what time the Lord gave order, as ver. 4. for the hanging of the heads up, and to ſlay all the Delinquents beſides, as verſ. 5. that his fierce anger might be turned away, as it is there ſaid, intimating that wrath was gone out already, as was ſaid in a like caſe before, Chap. 16. 46. although it be no where here expreſſed. But before that execution could be done, or whileſt for fear it was delayed, Zimri coming ſo impudently with his ſtrumpet, Phinees carried with divine zeal did this noble act upon him and her, and ſo the plague was ſtayed; and others moved by his example took courage, as Joſephus hath it, and executed many others; whereupon the Lord made an end of ſtriking by his plague, 23000 haply being deſtroyed hereby, and 1000 by the ſword and ſpear; and thus alſo a reconciliation may be made betwixt the number here ſpoken of, verſ. 9. viz. 24000, and the number of 23000, 1 Cor. 10. 8. Joſeph. lib. 4. antiq. c. 6. And thus Joſephus ſaith, by the plague ſent amongſt them, and by the hands of men, that did the execution, there fell the ſame day 24000. If it be ſaid, it is improbable, that there was any plague ſent of God, but onely his commanding of ſuch execution to be done, when it was performed, is here called the plague, as the word is uſed 1 Sam. 7. 14. I anſwer, both this ſaying, ſo the plague was ſtayed, being the ſame that was uſed Chap. 16. 48. when there had certainly been a plague deſtroying them, and the words before in verſ. 4. that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away, evince the contrary, and David ſpeaking of this ſaith, a plague brake in amongſt Pſal. 106. 29.

them. Wherefore although ſuch execution was commanded, it is moſt probable, that it was never done, but only by Gods hand, who having begun to ſtrike, when he gave that charge, ſeeing the execution delayed, proceeded, till Phinees had expreſſed ſo great zeal for God, and haply many more being led by his example, all that remained, being thus cut off, and ſo the congregation delivered from this grievous judgment, in regard of which they were all in danger, as the whole hoaſt of Iſrael afterwards for the ſin of one Achan, Joſ.7.

Verſ.10,11. And the Lord ſaid Moſes, Phinees the ſon of Eleazar, &c. hath turned away my wrath, &c.] After the valiant fact of Phinees, here followeth his commendation and reward, God ſaith, that he by this his zeal had turned away his wrath from the children of Iſrael, and therefore he did give to Verſ.12,13. him a covenant of peace, that is, of an everlaſting Prieſthood, affirming, that he had made an atonement for the people. Before the Lord commanded the heads to be hanged up, that his wrath might be turned away, verſ. 4. now it ſeemeth that Moſes and the Judges had not done this, but Phinees took revenge upon one, therefore hereupon it is ſaid, Phinees hath now turned away my wrath by his zeal for me: for when he had done this, the plague ceaſed, which would otherwiſe for want of execution done upon the offenders, have ſtill waſted the people, even that had not ſinned in like manner. Now the Lord commendeth Phinees thus, becauſe haply he might otherwiſe have been cenſured by many, as doing that, which belonged not to him, being no magiſtrate, but a private perſon: whereas it is ſaid, verſ.11. whileſt he was zealous for my ſake, Hebr. it is, whileſt he was zealous with my zeal or jealouſie; implying both the cauſe, and that the Spirit, whereby he was moved, was from God. Hereby it appeareth, how greatly God is pleaſed with zeal when it is a good zeal, and not without knowledge; as the zeal of the Jews is called, Rom.10.2. and this is, when it ariſeth from the love of God, and an hatred of ſinne, and is directed according to his will; and how abominable the want of this zeal is, ſee Rev. 3.17. For the promiſe of the Prieſthood for ever made hereupon to Phi-

Targum Jonathan. nees, the Targum Jonathan thus paraphraſeth; Behold I decree him my covenant of peace, and I will make him the meſſenger of my covenant, and he ſhall live for ever to preach the Goſpel of redemption in the end of dayes. Whereby he ſeemeth to hold, that Phinees in his own perſon ſhould live ever; and Pet.

P. Damianus. Damianus following this, ſaith, that Elias was Phinees, having then lived 620 years according to Beda, when he was carried up in a fiery chariot to heaven, living ever ſince in an earthly paradiſe, from whence he ſhall come at the end of the world to preach againſt antichriſt; and for proof of Phinees his yet living till Davids time, he alledgeth 1 Chron. 1.9, 20. where Phinees is ſaid to have been over the Korites, and Jerom he ſaith, is for the ſame opinion, in quæſt. hebr. But this is an abſurd tenet, ſeeing divers other high prieſts have been ſince Phinees; and the meaning is nothing elſe but that in his family the high Prieſthood ſhould continue alwayes, as long that prieſthood ſtood, and that he in his own perſon ſhould ſerve in that office many years, his life being prolonged to a very great age, and that he lived very long appeareth Judg.20.28. where after the death of all the Judges he is ſpoken of, as miniſtring ſtill before the Ark. Now that the promiſe was not made to him of his own living alwayes to injoy this honour, appeareth, becauſe it is ſaid, to him and his ſeed after him. If this ſhall be thought to be no ſingular favour, becauſe he being the eldeſt

Calvin. ſon of Eleazar, the eldeſt ſon of Aaron ſhould have come to this dignity by courſe, although he had not ſhewed this great zeal, Calvin anſwereth well, that firſt he might have dyed before his father, and ſo never have come to it, or he might have been childleſſe, and ſo it could not have remained in his ſeed, or he and they after him might have had it without credit, in regard of all which he is by this promiſe ſecured. And whereas otherwiſe he and his might have attained to it by courſe, now it was given him, as a reward of his zeal, which was more dignity, as the promiſe made to Abraham, that in his ſeed all nations ſhould be bleſſed, when he had obeyed God in ſacrificing his ſon Iſaac was but the ſame that was before made unto him, but then it was made as a reward of his rare obedience to his greater comfort; yet both that to him, and this to Phinees was made out of Gods free grace, and not for the merit of either of them.

as

Note, who is moſt worthy and ought above all others to be preferred to dignity in the Church, even he that is of moſt zeal for God, as Phinees. Note.

The covenant of peace as it is here ſaid to be given to Phinees, ſo it is ſaid to be given to Levi, Mal.2.5. and the covenant of peace is Gods everlaſting covenant, as firm, ſure, and abiding covenant, the breaking of which he ſhall never fear, as Toſtatus hath it: moreover under the word peace, proſperity and all happineſſe is included, as Ezech. 34.25. chap. 37. 26. Toſtatus.

He had made peace by his zealous act betwixt God and his people, and therefore the covenant of peace is given to him, as is ſhewed in the next words, he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement for his people. And herein he was a figure of Chriſt, who maketh atonement for our ſins and continueth high prieſt for ever. David in celebrating the praiſe of this worthy man ſaith, it was counted to him for righteouſneſſe to generation and to generation for ever. Pſal. 106.30, 31.

If it ſhall ſeem, that this covenant was not kept, becauſe Eli who came of Ithamar, and his ſon Abiathar after him had that office, but was put from the high prieſthood by Solomon, and Sadok was ſet up again; It is eaſily anſwered, if there were any intermiſſion of the high Prieſthood in his family for the ill deſerts of ſome, that came of him, yet for as much as it ſoon returned again, the covenant held inviolably; of Phinees his ſucceſſours, ſee 1 Chron.6.4,5,&c. the poſterity of Ithamar not being mentioned. 1 King. 2.27, 35.

Note, in that he is ſaid to have made an atonement by cutting off the wicked, that the deſtroying of the wicked by ſuch as God giveth the ſword unto, is as a propitiatory ſacrifice for all the people, with whom God is offended otherwiſe, even for the ſin of one, as we may ſee in the caſe of Achan; ſo David afterwards pacified Gods anger by cutting off the wicked poſterity of Saul. Wherefore let Magiſtrates not ſpare capital offenders, but root them out likewiſe, as they would ſhew themſelves true parents of the countrey, and to deſire the preſervation thereof. Note. 2 Sam. 21.

Here is ſet down the name of the man ſlain by Phinees, and verſ.15. the name of the woman; he was Zimri a Prince of a chief houſe in Simeon; and ſhe Cozbi, the daughter of Zur, head over a people in Midian. This is ſet down, that the zeal and valour of Phinees might appear the more, in that he feared not a man and woman of ſo high rank for their wickedneſſe, which could not be without peril of his life. Zimri ſignifieth cutting off, and palu, which is ſaid to be his fathers name, treading under; and he had an end anſwerable, he was cut off and trodden under foot, as it were, as an unprofitable branch. The tribe of Simeon of which he was, as is moſt probable, periſhed in a great part with him, they being like prince, like people: for being muſtered ſoon after this, Chap.26.14. they are found to be but 22200, whereas Numb.1.22. they were 59300. Cozbi ſignifieth lying, or falſhood; and Zur, a rock, and her father Zur is afis afterwards ſaid to be one of the five Kings of Midian. Thus Ainſworth, who addeth out of Sol. Jarchi, that there were five fathers houſes in Midian, and he was head of one of them, or King, Gen. 25.4. And he maketh Cozbi this harlot a figure of Antichriſt: for, as ſhe diſſemblingly allured Zimri to fornication with her; ſo doth Antichriſt the Kings of the earth by falſe and lying miracles and pretexts, and as ſhe was the daughter of Zur a Midianite, one of the degenerated poſterity of Abraham, ſo Antichriſt ſprung from the rock Chriſt, and his people ſometime having built Verſ. 14. Chap. 31.8. Ainſworth.

built upon him by a true faith maintaining, but ſince degenerated to moſt groſſe errours; and as the fornicating of ſuch apoſtatiſing Iſraelites brought a great plague upon Iſrael, when Zimri, a Prince of theirs, brought Cozbi openly to his brethren; ſo God hath ſent many plagues upon Chriſtians, ſince that their Princes being bewitched with Antichriſts wiles, have brought that ſtrumpet to their people by their laws, inforcing them to fornicate with her. Laſtly, as the end of Zimri and Cosbi both was, they were cut off, as execrable, and then the plague ceaſed; ſo Antichriſt, and the Princes adhering to him, ſhall be deſtroyed, and then we ſhall be delivered from the plagues of civil wars amongſt our ſelves, and of the Mahumetans ſword, by which a great part of Chriſtendom hath been waſted already, and more is indangered. To this effect he, but not ſo largely and punctually. Rabanus giveth other ſignifications of theſe names, and maketh another allegory hereupon; but I reſt upon this as the beſt.

Rabanus,

Verſ. 16. And the Lord ſaid, Vexe ye the Midianites and ſmite them, for they vex you with their wiles, &c.] The Sept. War ye againſt the Midianites; for thus a people is vexed or diſtreſſed, as the Hebrew word ſignifieth. After judgment executed upon the Iſraelites, God would have the Midianites, the cauſe of their ſinning, deſtroyed alſo, that they might have no cauſe of rejoycing over them for the effect, that this their plot took.

Qu. But why muſt they war againſt the Midianites, and not againſt the Moabites, who may ſeem to have been the chief in contriving this miſchief?

Calvin. Calvin yieldeth no reaſon of this, but the good pleaſure of God, who deferreth the puniſhment of ſome ſinners, and taketh revenge immediately upon others, and laboureth rather in reſolving another quære, how this taking of revenge ſtandeth with that interdiction, avenge not your ſelves; anſwering that this was no unlawful revenge-taking, becauſe they were appointed unto it by God, to whom vengeance belongeth, and he may make ſuch the executioners of his will, as he pleaſeth. But there is a probable reaſon rendred by others, why the Midianites muſt now be ſmitten and not the Moabites, becauſe they propounded the greateſt temptation to the Iſraelites, not ſparing a Kings daughter, but proſtituting her, againſt the nature of all men, that are of an high rank, who cannot endure, but take it moſt heinouſly, that any of their daughters ſhould be made whores, as being a great blot to their families, and this reaſon is here intimated, in that this is ſaid to have been one of their wiles to deceive the Iſraelites, verſ. 18. in the matter of Cosbi a daughter of a Prince of Midian their ſiſter. So that it is likely, that by her, a Prince in Iſrael being ſeduced, many more in Iſrael fell, and that by all thoſe proſtituted daughters of Moab. Again, Balaam was amongſt the Midianites, who was moſt worthy to periſh for his moſt wicked counſel, and was ſlain in this war, Chap.31.8. whereby it ſeemeth, that the Midianites chiefly were addicted to that wizzard, and put his inſtructions moſt in practice. And hereunto we may adde, that Moab was ſpared for this time for Lots ſake, of whom the Moabites came, for which cauſe God had already given a charge not to war againſt them, Deut.2.9. but there was no ſuch charge given touching the Midianites, ſo that they were as other enemies. Laſtly, the Lord meant from a woman of Moab, viz. Ruth afterwards to raiſe up David, of whom Chriſt came, and therefore he would have them yet ſpared, being in the mean ſeaſon puniſhed by being debarred from entring into the congregation untill the tenth generation, as a moſt impure people for this their filthy act; and in Davids time, they alſo were ſmitten and deſtroyed, when Ruth had been before taken from amongſt them. The warring againſt the Midianites here commanded was not put in execution, till Chap.31. betwixt which and this the people are firſt by the Lord appointed to be muſtered, Chap.26. then finding the number of every tribe,

Verſ. 18.

Deut.23.3.

2 Sam.8.2.

it

it is ſhewed, that daughters ſhould inherit, where there were no ſons, Chap. 27. Thirdly, leaſt the people being now about to enter into the land of Canaan ſhould think it unneceſſary there to obſerve the lawes of Sacrificing, becauſe they were not kept now for many years in the wilderneſſe, ſince the giving of them, theſe lawes are renewed, Chap. 28. and 29. and the decrees touching vowes are ſet forth, Chap. 30. and then it proceeded to the Midianitiſh war. Toſtatus ſaith here, it is to be wondred at, that when the Iſrailetes were weakened by the fall of ſo many thouſands, and thereby the Moabites and Midianites might conceive that God was now angry with them, and would not protect them, yet they did not firſt ſet upon them by battel, but he reſolveth that God ſtruck a terrour into them, that they durſt not, as ſometime into the people about Shechem, that none durſt meddle with Jacob, when his ſons had ſo cruelly deſtroyed that City, and the propheſies of Balaam ſpeaking ſo magnifically of them, were doubtleſs, a great means to deter them from any ſuch attempts.

Toſtatus.

Gen.34.

CHAP. XXVI.

IN this Chapter, the plague being now paſt, of which Chap.25. 9. that it might appear to be true which the Lord had threatned, Numb.14. that none of the mutinous people from twenty years old and upward ſhould live to enter into the land of Canaan, nigh which entrance they now were, except Caleb and Joſhuah, the Lord commandeth them to be numbred the fourth year after their coming out of Egypt, as we may ſee Verſ.64,65. where it is ſaid, that none of them, that were before numbred, were numbred at this time, becauſe they were every one dead in the wilderneſſe, as the Lord had threatned. Twice before this the people were numbred. 1. That money might be levyed of them by the poll, for uſe of the Sanctuary, Exod.30.12. and Chap.38 25. 2. That they might be placed and march in order under their ſeveral ſtandards and Captains. 3. That it might appear to be true, which was before threatned, as hath been already ſaid. Sol. Jarchi ſaith, that they were at the firſt delivered by tale unto Moſes, when God had brought them out of Egypt, and now the death of Moſes being at hand, to Joſhuah, who was to ſucceed him likewiſe. The numbring of them at every time ſhewed the ſingular care of God over his people, even as of a ſhepheard over his flock, amongſt which wolves have been, when after this they number the ſheep, and the care that the Prince ſhould have of them all; ſo Ferus, who alſo obſerveth another end of numbring them here, viz. that we may ſee, that God hath no need of any people, which are now his people; for when the old people of Iſrael were all dead and gone, God yet wanted not a people, for there were almoſt as many now, notwithſtanding the deſtruction of ſo many thouſands, and God is able of ſtones to raiſe up children to Abraham. Laſtly, they were numbred now, that a more apt diviſion of the land might be made, more to the more, and leſſe to the fewer, as verſe 53. For heſe words, after the plague, Verſ.1. the Vulg. Latin hath it, poſtquam noxiorum ſanguis effuſus eſt, which is expounded, not onely of the plague, Chap. 25. but of all other deſtructions made ſince their murmuring at Kadeſh Barnea, viz. for Corah his conſpiracy, Chap. 16. for their murmuring, Chap.21. when Serpents were ſent, and Chap.25. for their fornication and Idolatry.

Sol. Jarchi

Ferus.

Luk.3.

Verſ. 1.

In this numbring firſt the ſons of Reuben are numbred, and found to be 43730. at the former numbring, Chap.1.21. they were 46500, ſo that they were diminiſhed almoſt 3000. and it is noted, that of Reuben came Dathan and Abiram, the Conſpiratours, whereby we may ſee the cauſe of their decreaſe, this remaining upon them, as a note of their rebellion in ſome

Verſ. 7.

Verſ. 9.

ſome of their Tribe. Yet it is noted, that the ſons of Corah dyed not, of the reaſon whereof ſee before, Chap.16.32. who the ſons of Chorah were is ſhewed, Exod. 6.24. Aſſir, Elkanah, and Abiaſaph, and their Genealogy is reckoned, Chron.22.38. and they were appointed by David to be ſingers in the houſe of God, Verſes 31,32. and many Pſalmes are intituled to them, as Pſal.42.44,45. &c. to Pſalm 49. ſo that they were men of great note, and of Chorah came Heman, 1 Chron. 6.33.37. who is called the Kings ſeer, and is ſaid to have propheſied, 1 Chron. 25.4,5. And Samuel, for he was the ſon of Elkanah, who came of Chorah, and Verſ. 14. Heman of him, 1 Chron. 6. 33, 34,35. &c. Of the diminution of the Simeonites from 59300. to 22000. it hath been ſpoken, Chap. 26. 14. the wickedneſſe of which Tribe appeared in Zimri a chief Prince amongſt them. There is one family more of this Tribe, viz. of Obad. Exod.6. 16. which is here omitted, becauſe it is likely, that it was wholly extinct
Ainſworth. by this time. And it is to be noted, that in the bleſſing of Moſes upon the Tribes, this Tribe is altogether omitted, ſo indignly was their ſinning before mentioned, Chap. 25. taken above the ſinning of all others at any time hitherto. The names of the Fathers of theſe families here differ from thoſe Exod.6.15. for there is Jamuel, here Namuel, and Jachin is called Jarib, 1 Chron.4.24. Zerah is called Zohar, Exod. 6. 15. and the like may be obſerved touching other names both in this Tribe and others; of which difference the reaſon may be, that mens names differ much in the pronouncing of them in time, or elſe one man had two names, and is ſometime called by one, and ſometimes by another.

Verſ. 15. Next unto Simeon, Gad is numbred, if it be demanded, why Judah is Qu. not next, who was next in birth. I anſwer, the order of numbring followed here according to the Standards under which each Tribe was before placed, Chap.2. and by that order Gad muſt be next, becauſe next to Si-
Qu. meon was Gad under the Standard of Reuben. But why doth he not begin with Judah and thoſe under his Standard before Reuben, as before Chap.2. but altering that order, which was beginning at the Eaſt to proceed to the South, he proceedeth now from the South to the Eaſt, for Reuben pitched South? Anſwer, It is moſt probable, that he began with theſe Tribes; firſt becauſe they had provoked God moſt, and becauſe he ſpake laſt of the plague ſent upon them, being therefore every one of them much diminiſhed, whereas Judah and the Tribes adjoyned to him were all greatly increaſed, as which had cleaved more conſtantly to the Lord. Of the diminution of Reuben ſee before, and of his wickedneſſe, Numb.1.25. as alſo of Simeon and his wickedneſſe, touching Gad their next neighbour, he had before 45659, but now onely 40500. It is likely therefore that he being near to two wicked Tribes was alſo tainted by them, and likewiſe puniſhed. The Authour of the Patriarks Teſtament ſaith, that Gad a ſon of one of the handmaids hated Joſeph moſt, and ſought often to have killed him, becauſe he told his Father, that the ſons of his handmaids purloined and waſted his goods, and for this he was puniſhed in his poſterity, but the former reaſon is more probable.

Verſ. 22. Of Judah were 76500, before 74600, Numb.2.4. in like manner Iſſachar and Zebulun joyned to him were increaſed, the one from 54400, Numb.2.6. to 64300, and the other from 57400. to 60500.

Verſ. 28, Here the children of Joſeph and Benjamin are numbred, who came of Rachel, and Joſeph, as he had by his father a double portion given him above his brethren, ſo he hath two Tribes, Manaſſeh and Ephraim, Manaſſeh increaſeth from 32200, Numb. 2. 21. to 52700, but Ephraim diminiſhed from 40000, Numb.2.19. to 32500. and whereas at the former numbring he was placed before Manaſſeh, although his younger brother, becauſe he was preferred by Jacob in his bleſſing and had a far greater number, yet now he is ſet after him, as his place by birth was, becauſe cauſe he was not ſo mighty in people. Of the reaſon, why Ephraim was thus diminiſhed, when others about him, Manaſſeh and Benjamin were ſo greatly increaſed, I find none ſpeaking, but haply God brought Ephraim down thus, that when afterwards according to Jacobs bleſſing he ſhould be increaſed above his brother Manaſſeh, Gods power might be the more magnified, in that at the firſt muſter he had made him more populous, now leſſe, but afterwards more again, when he was become the head of ten tribes.

Benjamin increaſed from 35400, to 45600. Verſ. 41.

Dan had but one family, and yet equal in number almoſt to Judah, and ſuperiour to any other tribe, and he increaſed from 62700, Numb. 2. 26. to 64400. Verſ. 43.

Aſher increaſed from 45500, Numb. 2. 28. to 53400. Verſ. 47.

But Nephtalim the laſt decreaſed from 53400, Numb 2.30. to 45400. Verſ. 50. So that here were ſeven tribes that increaſed in the wilderneſſe, and 5 that decreaſed, but the decreaſe was more then the increaſe by 1820, for at the former numbring the whole ſum was 603550, Numb. 2.32. at this numbring 601730. From whence we may note, becauſe in Egypt under grievous affliction they increaſed exceedingly; but ſince their deliverance, in fourty years they decreaſed more then they increaſed, that it is good for the Church and people of God to be afflicted; and in time of freedom herefrom there is great danger of being corrupted, and conſequently of being deſtroyed. For ſo long as the people were oppreſſed with hard bondage, they provoked not God by any murmurings, but prayed and cryed unto him, and ſo his bleſſing was upon them, that they increaſed incredibly; but ſo ſoon as they were delivered, they murmured, committed groſſe idolatry, and ſinned divers wayes in ſuch a notorious manner that God cut them off from time to time, ſo that inſtead of increaſing, they were thus diminiſhed in all the long time of their being in the wilderneſſe. Verſ. 51. Note. Again, forſomuch as this was in the time that they circumciſed not, neither offered ſacrifice, except a very few; note, that where the ſervice of God is ſlenderly performed, ſoules are not added, but rather diminiſhed in the Church of God, but contrariwiſe where he is duly ſerved, as afterwards in Canaan they multiplyed again, where all rites were duly obſerved. Note.

Unto theſe the land ſhall be divided for an inheritance according to the number of names, to the many, the more inheritance, &c.] To the ſame effect it is ſpoken again, Numb. 33.54. where it is ſaid, the diviſion ſhould be made by their families, according to the number in each family; and the families, if they be reckoned according to the former account, are 57. but in the account made, Gen.46. they were five more, ſo that five families were by this time quite rooted out. Upon this, that the names here numbred from 20 years old and upward only, are to be reſpected in dividing the land, the Rabbins note, that if any others attained to 20 before the conqueſt of the land, which was ſeven years in conquering, yet they were not counted at the diviſion, but only ſuch as were now numbred. And it is ſaid, that the diviſion ſhould be made by lot, the manner, ſay the Hebrews, was this: Men were appointed to divide the land into parts, according to the number of tribes, and this diviſion being made, they wrot in a book and brought it to Joſhua, who caſt lots for them before the Lord in Shiloh, both he and all Iſrael ſtanding before the high Prieſt, having his garments on, and the breſt-plate with the Urim and Thummim. Then two Calphi or veſſels were ſet, the one having the names of the tribes, and the other the names of the parts to be divided amongſt them; into the one of which he put his hand in and brought forth a tribe, then out of the other a part for that tribe, and ſo likewiſe for every one of the tribes. This dividing by lot, as it was to avoid contention; ſo to let every one underſtand, that the houſe and land, which he hath, cometh from the Lord, as a lot, and is Verſ. 53. Sol. Jarchi. Prov. 16.33. & 18. 18.

Note. is not to be aſcribed to his own getting. The lot, ſay the Rabbins, was the mouth of the Holy Ghoſt, and that Eleazar the high Prieſt in caſting lots was directed in drawing by the Holy Ghoſt. From hence whatſoever good men have is called a lot, Act.26.18. Col.1.12. and likewiſe the evil befalling any for ſin, their lot, Eſay 17.14. Laſtly, hereby was ſhewed, that the inheritance to come is of the only grace of God, ſeeing this land, the type thereof, which was now to be divided, fell to every one of his free gift, who were numbred, as choſen and appointed by him hereunto, no diviſion being made to any others, and all theſe were Iſraelites onely; ſo Iſrael only and the elect of Iſrael, whoſe names are regiſtred in heaven, ſhall have an inheritance there, that is, the Church and the Elect herein only, not all indifferently, for all are not Iſrael, that are of Iſrael.

Rom. 9 6.

By this appointment of the land to be divided, to the more numerous the greater part, to the leſſe the leſſer, we may ſee, that the tribes, which provoked God moſt by their ſins, and ſo were moſt diminiſhed, had a double puniſhment inflicted upon them; one of being conſumed and waſted in their number, and another of being confined for ever to a leſſe proportion of ground, howſoever they ſhould multidly afterwards.

Qu. If it be demanded, how the matter could be ſo handled in caſting lots, that the greater might ſtill fall to the more populous tribe, and the leſſe to the leſſer? Some anſwer, that if a leſſer part fell to a greater tribe in the lots drawing, an addition was made out of other parts adjoyning by the dividers, and if a greater to a leſſer tribe, part was by them taken away for others that might have need of it: but if ſo, then it had not been all diſtributed by lot. Some therefore ſay, that the high prieſt, who drew the lots being guided by the Spirit of God, when he drew any tribes lot, firſt ſaid, come up ſuch a tribe, and then drew him, and then the lot fit for that tribe, naming it alſo, and ſaying, come up ſuch a lot. And this is more probable then the other; yet I cannot ſubſcribe, that he named the tribe or lot before it came up, ſeeing there was no need thus to do: but God, in whom the whole diſpoſition of a lot is, guided his hands, or the hands of Joſhua in drawing, ſo that an apt lot came up for each tribe, according to his number, as was here provided. Now it is further to be underſtood, that all the 12 tribes had not the land thus divided amongſt them, but nine tribes and an half, for two and an half had their parts on this ſide Jordan upon a ſpecial occaſion allowed by Moſes, who did all things by the direction of God.

Lorinus

Hebræi.

Numb. 32.

Qu. If it be demanded, how contention was avoided by this lottery betwixt family and family, and betwixt houſe and houſe, and perſon and perſon in the ſame houſe and tribe, becauſe the lottery was only for the tribes. Toſtatus anſwereth, it is moſt probable, although it be not expreſſed, that lots were caſt as between the tribes, ſo between the families and houſes and perſons in each tribe; and this may well be conſtrued to be the meaning of the order here ſet down, verſ. 56. By lot ſhall the poſſeſſion thereof be divided between many and few.

Toſtatus.

Verſ. 56.

Verſ. 57. And theſe are they, that were numbred of the Levites after their families, &c.] Although the Levites were to have none inheritance in the land by lot; yet becauſe certain cities were to be ſet out for them in every tribe, their number is here alſo taken apart, as it had been before, Numb. 3.39.

Verſ. 62. They were increaſed from 22000, to 23000. Of the ſmalneſſe of this tribe in compariſon of others, and their numbring from a moneth and upward contrary to the courſe in the numbring of others, ſee there.

Verſ. 63. Here is nothing more, but a capitulation, as the manner is, of the things done in this Chapter, that they might be the better conſidered, and an obſervation, how the many thouſands now numbred were none of them numbred before, Numb. 2. for they were all dead, except Caleb and Joſhua,

Ver.64,65.

Joſhua, ſo that in all the army there were none but theſe two and Moſes above 60 years old, and therefore fit and able men of body to attempt and to proceed in the conqueſt of Canaan.

Chap. XXVII.

Then came the daughters of Zelophehad, the ſonne of Hepher, the ſonne of Gilead, the ſonne of Machir, &c. Becauſe in the Chapter before going the males only were numbred, and to them the land of promiſe is appointed to be divided, theſe daughters of Zelophehad fearing that they ſhould be excluded from an inheritance there, if they now held their peace, came to Moſes and the Elders to depart their fathers lot. Hereupon Ferus obſerveth three things commendable in them: 1. That they were ſollicitous, leſt they ſhould be excluded from the inheritance of God, and from having a part amongſt his people. And about this all both men and women ought to be moſt ſollicitous, and not to care ſo much for apparel and ornaments, which women ſpecially do chiefly regard. 2. That they did not go about the tents complaining, but came directly to Moſes, the Judge, wherein alſo he is to be commended, that any even of the meaneſt might have eaſie acceſſe unto him. 3. In that they ſpeak not tumultuouſly to him, but modeſtly and honeſtly. Ainſworth commendeth in them two things more; 1. Their honouring of their father deceaſed, verſ. 3, 4. he was not of the company of Corah, and why ſhould the name of our father be done away from among his family? 2. Their faith, whereby they believed, that God would give the land of Canaan to all the ſeed of Abraham, whereof they were, and that in reſpect of the future inheritance in heaven, of which Canaan was a type, there was no difference before him betwixt male and female. In their requiring an inheritance in this land then there, was a figure of ſeeking an inheritance in heaven; and becauſe they were women, and not men, that warred for it, but only looked at the promiſe of God made to Abraham, we are taught in their example to ſeek heaven, not of works, but onely of grace, through faith in Gods promiſes made unto all true believers in Chriſt Jeſus, whatſoever our infirmity and weakneſſe is. By the anſwer of God Sol. Jarchi noteth, that by faith they ſaw that, which Moſes yet ſaw not. Ferus, upon their ſeeking an inheritance, although they could not go to war, but were infirm women, noteth, that herein they are propounded to our imitation, what we cannot attain by virtue, we ſhould ſeek by prayer and humility; that is, forſomuch as we cannot attain heaven by our own merit, let us humbly ſue for it, and ſeek it of Gods free gift and grace.

Verſ. 1.

Ferus.

Ainſworth.

Note.

Sol. Jarchi.
Ferus.
Quod virtute non poſſumus acquirere, humilitate, et oratione quæramus.

Myſtically by theſe five daughters of Zelophehad, Rabanus underſtandeth the works coming from the five ſenſes, which ſhall be rewarded in heaven, although he that did them, had only the ſhadow in his mouth, as the word Zelophehad ſignifieth, that is, had onely the dead letter of the law, not underſtanding the myſtical ſenſe thereof. And this he hath out of Origen, who ſaith, that the gifts and endowments of the mind are as the male children, to which chiefly the heavenly inheritance belongeth; but he that wanteth theſe, and yet liveth in ſimple obedience to the laws of God, the works done according to which, are as females, ſhall have a part in that inheritance amongſt other people of God. But all theſe are ouer-curious, and indeed vain ſpeculations.

The myſtery, Rabanus.

Origen.

The naming of them in particular four times over, here and Numb. 26. 33. Numb. 36. 11. and Joſ 17. 3. ſheweth that they were very well eſteemed of for wiſe and godly, and ſome ſay, they had been much acquainted with Miriam, the ſiſter of Moſes.

Ainſworth in allegorizing upon theſe women goeth further, then any other: for having expounded Zelophehad, the ſhadow of feare, and his firſt daughter Machlah infirmitie; the ſecond Nognah, wandring; the third Coglah, turning about for ioy; the fourth Milchah, a Queen; the fifth Tirzah, acceptable: He ſaith, that in theſe are ſet forth by what degrees the faithfull attain to happineſſe. 1. We are in the ſhadow of fear by reaſon of ſinne. 2. For this we grieve, as the ſick and infirm. 3. We wander out of our ſelves for help. 4. By Chriſt, to whom we come, we are made Kings and Queens. 5. And thus we are all beautifull and well pleaſing in the ſight of God, Eph. 5. 27. Thus he, but becauſe in other places they are ſet down in another order, let the Reader judge hereof. For the time of their coming to make this demand, it was when Moſes and Eleazar, and the Princes were yet together before the doore of the Tabernacle, the number of the children of Iſrael, amongſt whom the land was to be divided, being now brought in a moſt fit time to ſpeak for the recording of their father alſo being dead, but living ſtill in them, although he had no ſonne.

Ainſworth.

Ioſeph. Philo. Whereas they are ſaid to have come, Joſephus and Philo ſay, that the Princes of the Tribe of Manaſſeh conſulted about with Moſes for them; but if ſo, either they deſired them to ſpeak in their fathers behalf, or after the motion made by the daughters, they ſeconded it, and talked further with Moſes about it.

Queſt. Verſ. 3. But why do they impeach their father ſo much, as to ſay, that he died in his ſinne. Anſw. Becauſe all that died in the wilderneſſe, died for their ſinnes; they ſpake this in way of acknowledgement, that God juſtly cut him off, as well as others in the 38. yeares laſt paſt, as he had threatned, Numb. 14. when they murmured at the return of the ſearchers, but from the infamous ſinne of Corah they clear him, for which if he had been guilty thereof, they might have juſtly been excluded from any inheritance in that land, and his name might well have been blotted out of the land of the living, which we may ſee was counted a moſt grievous judgement in Iſrael, by that imprecation, Pſalm. 109. 13. But now, ſith his ſinne was but as the ſinne of all others, whoſe children had parts, in reaſon he in his children ought to have a part alſo.

Hugo Card. Toſtatus. Vatablus. Hugo without reaſon ſaith, that his ſinne was the gathering of ſticks upon the Sabbath day, Numb. 15. and Toſtatus, that it was his going out contrary to the will of God againſt the Canaanites, Numb. 14. and Vatablus, that it was his murmuring, when the Serpents were ſent. For who told them that he ſinned any of theſe wayes? They are then but vain conjectures, and therefore Toſtatus forſaking that firſt of his, preferreth, that which I before delivered. He died in his ſinne, is nothing elſe, but that he bare, as a million more did, the puniſhment of his ſinne by being cut off together with them, from entring into the land of Canaan. He died in his ſinne then is, he died for his ſinne, and not as they, that die impenitent, and ſo periſh for ever.

Verſ. 5. The requeſt of theſe daughters is by Moſes brought to the Lord, as the caſe of the men in uncleanneſſe at ſuch time as they ſhould eat the Paſſeover, Numb. 9. 6. where it hath been ſhewed how Moſes conſulted with God.

Verſ. 7, 8. 9, 10, 11. The Lord juſtifieth the demand of theſe daughters, bidding that their fathers inheritance or part ſhould be given to them, and hereupon he maketh a law, that the like ſhould be done hereafter, and if a man had no daughter, then his brethren ſhould have his inheritance, otherwiſe his fathers brethren, and laſtly, the neareſt of kinne unto him.

Talmud Babyl. The Talmud Babyl. ſaith, that the daughters of Zelophehad had beſides their fathers inheritance, two other parts, one of their fathers goods, and the other of Hepher his father, becauſe he alſo came out of Egypt, but here onely their fathers inheritance is appointed unto them. Moreover, whereas it is here determined, in caſe a man wanteth iſſue male, his inheritance muſt go to his daughters, &c.

Maimony in Nachaloth. c. 1. ſect. 1. Maimony according to the Hebrew canons further explaineth it thus. If a man a man hath no ſonne when he dieth, but there be a ſonnes ſonne, or daughter, or any children of either of them they ſhall inherit, if no ſuch, then the daughter, or ſhe being dead, her ſonne or daughter, &c. If no ſuch, then his father, if he be dead, the fathers ſonne which is his brother, is next, and then his ſeed, next his fathers daughter, which is his ſiſter, then her ſeed, if there be none ſuch, next is the grandfather, then the grandfathers ſonne and his ſeed, then his daughter and her ſeed; Laſtly, the great grandfather, and the next to him. For the widow of the deceaſed, and the daughters, when they leave ſonnes, they have theſe rules. The widow is maintained out of her husbands goods with food, apparell and houſe-roome, till ſhe hath her dowry, and the daughters have each one ſo much, as it is thought by the neareſt kinſmen that her father would have given her, or the Magiſtrates give her a tenth part of his goods, and if he leaveth many daughters, the ſecond hath the tenth part of that which remaineth after the firſt hath had her part, and ſo the third the tenth of the remainder, when that is taken out, &c. and the brethren have the reſt amongſt them. But if the father dying had before ſignified, that he would not, ſuch a daughter ſhould have any part, then ſhe hath none. And all this ſeemeth to ſtand with good reaſon, as Philo reaſoneth touching the father inheriting before the ſonne, the brother of the deceaſed, it is abſurd, that the uncle ſhould inherit rather then the father; but becauſe it is ominous and contrary to godly wiſhes, that the father ſhould come to ſucceed the ſonne in his inheritance, he is paſſed over in ſilence, leſt he ſhould ſeem to gape after gain by the untimely death of his ſonne.

Maimony. of wives, ch. 18 Sect. 1.

Philo de vita Moſis.

And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, get thee up into this mount Abarim, and ſee the land, &c.] There were many mountains thus called, Numb. 33. 47. but this more particularly is ſaid to be Nebo, Deut. 32. 49. Theſe mountains were called Abarim, becauſe they were by the paſſages or foords of Jordan, where men paſſed over into the land of Canaan; for Abarim ſignifieth paſſages, ſo Moſes Gerundenſi: And for this mountain Moſes having ſeen the land of promiſe, muſt die for his tranſgreſſion, at the waters of Meribah, as Aaron had done before. By his aſcending to a mount, where he might ſee Canaan to die, was taught myſtically, ſaith Ferus, that the ſervants of God in preparing to die lift up their minds to things above, and ſee to their comfort the promiſed land now to be poſſeſſed, whereas in ſpeaking of his death, it is onely ſaid, Thou ſhalt be gathered to thy fathers; but nothing terrible is ſaid unto him; he further noteth, that the godly are taken away in much grace and favour, and if it troubleth them, that they muſt now go from all their friends; here is a comfort againſt that, they go to their friends, for they are now gathered to their fathers. For the ſinne of Moſes remembred, as the cauſe ſee before, chap. 20. 12. Comeſtor touching Moſes his ſeeing of the land, becauſe it is ſaid, Deut. 34. 1. That he ſaw all the parts of it farre and wide, ſaith, that God ſhewed it unto him miraculouſly, becauſe otherwiſe he could not ſee ſo farre; and Toſtatus agreeth, that he did miraculouſly increaſe the virtue of ſeeing in him.

Verſ. 12.

Moſes Gerund.

Verſ. 13. 14.

Ferus. The Myſtery.

Note.

Scholaſt. Hiſtor.

Toſtatus.

And Moſes ſaid, let the Lord, the God of the ſpirits of all fleſh, ſet a man over the Congregation, &c. For the phraſe here uſed before Numb. 16. 22. The godly care of Moſes for the good of the people after his diſeaſe is hereby wonderfully commended; for he deſireth, that a good and able Governour may be ſet over them, which is a thing of great conſequence in any Commonwealth, ſeing the people are ready to follow their Prince to any impiety. And although he had ſons, it is to be noted, that he nominateth none to this high office, but referreth himſelf to God, deſiring large, that he would appoint one moſt fit. A notable example to be imitated by all others, to ſeek more the welfare of the people after their deceaſe, then of their own children in the office or dignity diſpoſing, which they muſt leave.

Verſ. 15, 16

Note.

Verſ.18,19. And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, take thee Joſhuah the ſon of Nun, a man in whom is the Spirit, and lay thine hands upon him, and ſet him before Eleazar, &c.] Joſhuah or Jeſus, a figure of Jeſus Chriſt, is ſaid to be a man, that had the Spirit in him, according to that, Numb. 11. when the Spirit was taken off Moſes and given to ſeventy Elders, wherefore the Cald. explaineth it, a man, which hath the Spirit of propheſie, and Targum Jonathan, the Spirit of propheſie from before the Lord remaineth upon him; Toſtatus will have not onely the Spirit of propheſie meant, but alſo of zeal and courage to rule well, and to go to the wars againſt the Canaanites, for which there was great need of ſuch an one; upon Joſhua having theſe gifts of the Spirit already muſt Moſes put his hands, that he might have them increaſed, Deut.34.9. and that by this outward ſign he might be inaugurated to this Principality, as Aaron had been to the High Prieſthood. Numb.8.10.

Cald. Par. Targum Jonathan. Toſtatus.

Verſ. 20. And thou ſhalt put ſome of thine honour upon him, that all the Congregation of the children of Iſrael may be obedient. Cald. thou ſhalt give of thy brightneſſe, the Septuagint, of thy glory, and this is by the Rabbins expounded of the ſhining of his face, ſo R. Solomon and R. Menahem, and others, he gave to Joſhuah ſome of his bright ſhining, but not all, ſo that Moſes his face ſhone, as the Sun, and the face of Joſhuah, as the Moon, this outward ſign being imparted unto him to make the people the more obedient. But becauſe we no where read of the ſhining of the face of Joſhuah, it is more probable, according to others, that nothing elſe is meant, but that he ſhould as an inſtrument of God by putting his hands upon him make him glorious by the gifts and graces of the Spirit, wiſdom, zeal, courage, meekneſſe, and care of the good of the people, which gifts Moſes had in a greater meaſure, and that he ſhould ſet him by him, as together with him the Prince and chief Magiſtrate of the people, and his ſucceſſour in the Government. But by thus imparting his gifts to Joſhuah, they were not in Moſes diminiſhed, as neither before, Chap. 11. when his Spirit was taken off, and put upon the ſeventy Elders. And it is ſaid, ſome of thine honour, becauſe although Joſhuah alſo were an excellent Prince, yet none ever was ſo graced, as Moſes, till Chriſt, the true Jeſus typified in Joſhuah came.

R. Solom. R. Menahem. Calvin. Munſter. Deut. 34 10.

Verſ. 21. And he ſhall ſtand before Eleazar, the Prieſt, who ſhall ask counſel for him by the Urim, &c. the Sept. and they ſhall ask him the judgement of the things manifeſted before the Lord, as if Joſhuah by ſeeing the urim ſhould learn and ſo declare the will of God in any thing to be done. But, as it is plainly meant, Expoſitours generally agree, that Eleazar the High Prieſt and his Succeſſours afterwards ſhould ask for Joſhuah and the Princes, that ſhould ſucceed him from time to time, and then declare the anſwer of God. Of the judgement by the Urim in the breaſtplate of the High Prieſt, ſee before Exod.28.30. Moſes through his great familiarity with the Lord had hitherto conſulted with God immediatly in any difficult caſe, going into the moſt holy place at any time, where the Lord promiſed to meet him, but now from henceforth God manifeſted his will by the High Prieſt in his garments, not going in at all times into the holy of holies, for that he might not do, but once in the year, but in the Tabernacle, at the door of that moſt holy place. Whereas it is added, at his word they ſhall go out and at his word they ſhall come in, both he and all the children of Iſrael. Toſtatus will have it underſtood at the word of Joſhuah both Eleazar ſhall go in to inquire, and come out, and all the people ſhall be ruled by him. But the contrary is generally followed, as Eleazar having received anſwer from the Lord ſhall direct, ſo Joſhuah and all the people under him ſhall do, and either go out upon any expedition, or ceaſe from it. So Joſhuah is made chief Governour over the people, and that in hard caſes he might not erre. Eleazar is ſet over him to Godward, to direct and counſel him from the Lord in ſuch caſes what to do. And thus all Rulers and gover-

Levit.16. Toſtatus.

nours

nours of what high dignity ſoever muſt ſubmit themſelves to the teaching and direction of Gods chief Prieſts in things ſpiritual, and ſuch as Gods word onely can rightly direct in. The Jeſuites apply this to the Pope, as if according to this rule all kings and Emperours ſhould be under him, holding that he now hath the Urim upon his breaſt, and infallible true judgment to direct in all difficult caſes. But this is arrogation in the Papacy without ground, any Biſhop in the Church having as good right to challenge this priviledge, as he. It is then the faithful miniſtery of the goſpel in general, by which all are now to be directed, and in caſe they differ amongſt themſelves, a councel of godly and learned Divines rightly called together to Judge and determine.

And Moſes did as the Lord commanded him, and took Joſhuah and ſet him before Eleazar, &c.] He murmureth not, ſaith Ferus, becauſe his ſons are paſſed by and another appointed, but readily inaugurateth Joſhuah to this Principality, as he was commanded, for he ſought not his own, but the peoples good in all things. Verſ. 22. Ferus.

And he gave him a charge,] This was commanded alſo, Verſ. 19. in what words he charged him, ſee Deut. 3.21. and Verſ. 28. Moſes ſaid, God bad him charge, corroborate and comfort him, Deut. 1. 38. ſo that he was in an errour, that expounded this charging of charging him to take this high office upon him, to which for the weightineſſe of it he was unwilling. Verſ. 23. Cajetan.

Chap. XXVIII.

My offerings and my bread for my ſacrifices made by fire for a ſweet ſavour ſhall ye obſerve to offer unto me in due ſeaſon, &c.] The people being numbred which were now to enter into the land of Canaan, after the death of all their rebellious fathers, and a new Governour conſtituted, that the ſervice of God might not, when they ſhould come into the land of Canaan be neglected, but duly performed according to the laws before made, God giveth a charge here again touching the ſame, that none might think, that becauſe theſe offerings had been intermitted now a long time in the wilderneſſe, they might alſo be neglected in that land, when they ſhould think good. For the intermitting of ſacrifices in their times was neceſſitated in the wilderneſſe by reaſon of their often removes and takings down of the tabernacle, and carrying it about, but now they ſhould come to a ſettled dwelling, and therefore muſt do otherwiſe, then hitherto they could. So that it is moſt probable, that theſe ordinances were thus repeated, as they are ſet down in order in the 40 year, which was the laſt of their abode in the wilderneſſe, 38 years after the firſt making of them at mount Sinai. Verſ. 2.

Whereas it is ſaid, my offerings and my bread, Origen well obſerveth, that the Lord ſpeaketh thus, that none might think the offerings brought by them to be their own, but the Lords, of whom they receive all and bring to him a part again. As David afterwards acknowledged, when he had made great preparation for the houſe of God. All things are thine, and what we have received from thy hand we have given to thee. By bread, Hebr. לחמי, not only the ſhew-bread, but alſo all the fine flowr, and that which is made thereof for offerings is to be underſtood; and becauſe it is added here without a conjunction copulative, in the Hebrew it is to be taken as largely, as the word offerings for bread and flowr and fleſh alſo, as Lev. 3 11. ſo that to render it verbatim, it would go thus, my offerings, my food, by fire, R. Pinhas obſerveth hereupon, that in the time of the Meſſiah all ſacrifices ſhould ceaſe, but there ſhould remain a ſacrifice of bread and wine according to the order of Melchiſedek. And R. Johai ſaith, that Orig. Hom 23. R. Pinhas. R. Johai.

this ordinance hath reference to the time of the Meſſiah, the ordinances following, verſ. 3.4,&c. to thoſe ſacrifices, that were to be done away.

R. Judas. And R. Judas ſpeaking of the bread here mentioned, and expounding it of the ſhew-bread, ſaith, it was bread of faces ſo called, becauſe, as our Maſters have taught, in it there ſhall be two ſubſtances, divinity and humanity, becauſe the bread being ſacrificed ſhall be turned into the ſubſtance of the body of the Meſſiah, which deſcended from heaven, and he ſhall be the ſame ſacrifice.

Lorinus. Hereupon Lorinus the Jeſuite triumpheth, as if by the ſayings of the Rabbins both the ſacrifice of the Maſſe were ſufficiently confirmed, and the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation. But haply ſome other of his own ſtamp under the name of a Rabbin ſpeaketh thus, which is a thing not unuſual amongſt them; or if a Rabbin ſaid ſo, it is not unknown, that in many other things they were vain in their imaginations, and ſo they might be in this alſo. Here we muſt put in practice that precept of our Lord, call no man Rabbi; receive nothing no not from a Rabbi, but firſt approved for truth by that one Rabbi, Chriſt Jeſus. It is plain, that in this place the Lord being about to declare his ordinances again for ſacrificing beginneth firſt generally, and then particularly enumerateth the offerings that he required and the times, ſo that to gather a diſtinct offering from theſe firſt words, differing from the particulars following, is plainly to wreſt the text. The laſt words here, in due ſeaſon, are added, to ſhew, that not only ſuch ſacrifices as are here ſet forth, muſt be offered, but each one in the time proper to it, if the time appointed by God for it be paſt, it is unlawful to offer it, the burnt-offering of one Sabbath, hereupon ſaith Maimony, muſt not be offered upon another Sabbath.

Maimony. It is a common proverb amongſt the Jews, Gnabar Tſeman, Gna'ar Korban, if the appointed time be paſt, the offering is paſt.

1 King. 12 32. It is reckoned up amongſt the ſins of Jeroboam, that he kept the feaſt of the ſeventh moneth in the eighth moneth; and of Antiochus it is ſaid, that he ſhould change the times in ſpeaking of his oppoſing God and his lawes.

Dan. 7. 25. The Sept. for theſe words, in due ſeaſon, hath, in my feaſts, becauſe the ſame word ſignifieth both.

Verſ. 3. This is the offering by fire, which he ſhall offer to the Lord, two lambs, &c.] From hence to ver. 9. is repeated the law of the daily ſacrifice given before, Exo. 29. 38. &c. neither is there any more ſet down touching it in this place, then in that, and therefore the reader may have recourſe thither for the expoſition.

Verſ. 9. And upon the Sabbath two lambs, &c.] This of doubling the ſacrifice morning and evening upon the Sabbath day was before omitted, and therefore is now ſupplyed; and it is ordained, that theſe ſhould be offered, the daily ſacrifice not being therefore intermitted, as neither upon any other feſtival day.

Verſ. 10. Upon the Sabbath then firſt the daily ſacrifice was to be offered, and then theſe two lambs, as a further expreſſion of thankfulneſſe for greater favours, of which they were made partakers upon this day.

Ezech. 46. 4,5 The Prophet afterwards, to ſet forth greater graces yet imparted to the Church under the New Teſtament, ſaith, the burnt-offering, which the Prince ſhall offer upon the Sabbath day, ſhall be ſix lambs perfect, and a ram perfect, and the meat-offering for the ram ſhall be an Ephah, &c.] For the myſtery, Origen. Hom. 23. The Myſtery. Heb. 4. 9. Origen very piouſly ſaith, by the Sabbath daies ſacrifice was prefigured that upon the Sabbath now appointed to the people of God, we ought not to do any worldly works, but attend upon ſpiritual, come to the Church, hearken to the Word taught and read, lift up our minds to heavenly things, be ſollicitous about our future hope, and have in our minds the judgment to come, not to regard things temporal and viſible, but the inviſible to come, not to carry burthens of ſin, not to go out of our place by wandring from the way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, not to kindle a fire, but to walk in the light of that fire, which is now kindled unto us. Thus if we do here, we ſhall keep more perfectly a Sabbath in heaven hereafter, after, continually offering the ſacrifices of praiſe. By the two lambs now offered, Rabanus and others underſtand ſimplicity of mind and innocency of life; by the two tenth deales of fine flowr, the knowledge of the two Teſtaments, faithfully now communicated to all by the Preachers. Rabanus Hugo.

Iſay 50 11.

And in the beginning of your moneths ye ſhall offer a burnt-offering, two bullocks, one ram, ſeven lambs without blemiſh, &c.] Verſ. 11. Of blowing the trumpets upon the new moones over the ſacrifices, it was before ſpoken, Num.10.10. as at a feſtival time, but what ſacrifices ſhould now be offered, and how theſe times ſhould be kept, nothing is there ſaid, wherefore this is here ſupplyed. There muſt now be a greater burnt-offering offered, then upon the Sabbath, as this feſtival time came ſeldomer, viz. but once a moneth, the moneth alſo being reckoned by the moon, and it is provided, that the ſacrifice daily ſhould now go on alſo, verſ.15. and if any Sabbath day fell upon a new Moon, the ſacrifice belonging to it muſt by the like reaſon be then offered alſo. Nor for the keeping of this time, although no reſting from ſervile work be ſpoken of, or holy convocation, yet it is implyed, becauſe it was a feaſt, wherein the ſervice of God muſt be only attended upon. And that they aſſembled at theſe times to be inſtructed in divine knowledge appeareth, 2 King.4.23. and that they reſted from worldly works, Amos 8.5. and kept an holy feaſt, 1 Sam.20.5,6. For the reaſon of appointing this feaſt, the Hebrews ſay, as the moon is now renewed in this world in the light thereof, ſo ſhall Iſrael be renued and ſanctified in the world to come. R. Eliezer. So that they conceived a ſpiritual end in this ordinance, which is more fully ſet forth by Chriſtian doctours, as by Origen and Rabanus after him. Origen. Hom. 23. Rabanus. In the new moon there is a conjunction of the moon with the ſun, therefore now a feaſt was kept with exceeding great joy and blowing of trumpets and many ſacrifices offering, to ſhew the joy of the Church, when ſhe is joyned to Chriſt, the Sun of righteouſneſſe, as he is called, and the Church is ſaid to be as the moon; and thus every faithful ſoul is joyned, when the old man is put off, and the new put on by righteouſneſſe and holineſſe: for then do we keep a new moon unto God, when we are joyned unto Chriſt, when we ſavour not carnal, but ſpiritual things, not ſeeking to pleaſe men, but Chriſt, being wholly addicted to the light of wiſdom, and to the quickening heat of the Spirit. Mal. 4. 2. Cantic. 6 10. Revel.12. And that the Moon was figurative, appeareth, Col.2.16. To ſhew the light, comfort, and grace then, which cometh from Chriſt unto us in the Goſpel, the new Moons muſt be obſerved, and this light ſhall increaſe more and more, till it cometh to perfection in heaven. Again, the Moon was obſerved therein to praiſe God, as governing theſe inferiour things hereby, and that thus the firſt fruits, as it were, of the times might be offered to God for the obtaining of a more happy courſe in all attempts all the dayes of the Moon following. As at the new Moons the Jews aſſembled together to hear the law, and to ſacrifice, ſo the old Romans monethly obſerved the Calends, therein holding aſſemblies at Rome, to which the people reſorting might learn things both divine and humane to be done, and they had their Ides and Nones alſo. And in ſome imitation of the Jews dedicating the moneth to God by keeping the firſt of it holy, the heathen dedicated each moneth to ſome one of their gods, January to Juno, February to Neptune, March to Minerva, April to Venus, May to Apollo, June to Mercury, July to Jupiter, Auguſt to Ceres, September to Vulcan, October to Mars, November to Diana, December to Veſta, that they might be the tutelar gods of them. The twelve moneths dedicated to twelve gods. But to leave their vanities: at the new Moons repreſenting greater graces under the Goſpel, more ſacrifices for thankfulneſſe are appointed, then upon the Sabbath, two bullocks, one ram, ſeven lambs, and three tenth deales of fine flowr with oyl for one bullock, &c. the general law for which, ſee before Chap.15.9.

And in the 14 day of the firſt moneth is the paſſeover.] Verſ. 12. Verſ. 16. Of this feaſt it hath been been entreated before Exod.12. & chap.13. & Lev. 23.5. only the ſacrifices to be offered upon each of the ſeven paſſeover dayes not before appointed are here ſet down, and they be the ſame with thoſe in the new Moons.

Verſ. 26. Alſo in the day of your firſt fruits, when ye bring a new meat-offering to the Lord, &c.] Of this feaſt, otherwiſe called Pentecoſt, or the feaſt of weeks, ſee Lev.23.15,16. and of other offerings then to be made with the firſt fruits, whereunto theſe ſacrifices, not before ſpoken of are now added, two bullocks, one ram, ſeven lambs, &c. as upon the new Moon feaſt.

CHAP. XXIX.

Verſ. 1. AND in the ſeventh moneth, the firſt day of the moneth, ye ſhall have an holy convocation, &c.] This is called the feaſt of blowing trumpets, Lev.23. 24. and both there and Exod.23.16. before appointed, but becauſe it was not ſet down, what ſacrifices ſhould then be offered, this is here ſupplyed, viz. one bullock, one ram, ſeven lambs, one kid, beſides the daily ſacrifice, Verſ. 6. and the ſacrifices of the new Moon, as is expreſſed verſ.6. all being appointed to be done in the manner, that is, ſay the Hebrews, in order; 1. The daily ſacrifice, then that for the new Moon, and if this feaſt happened upon a Sabbath, then the ſacrifice thereof alſo; and laſtly, the ſacrifices proper to this feaſt; 1. the bullock. 2. the ram. 3. the lambs and the meat-offerings: laſtly, the kid for a ſin-offering, although at other times the ſin-offering was offered firſt.

Verſ. 7. And on the tenth day ye ſhall have an holy convocation, and afflict your ſoules, &c. For this day ſee Levit.16.29. and what other ſacrifices were then appointed, unto which theſe here ſet down muſt be added.

Verſ. 12. And on the 15. day ye ſhall have an holy convocation &c.] Of this feaſt, being the feaſt of tabernacles or boothes, ſee before, Lev. 23. 34, 35, &c. onely whereas there an offering is appointed only in general to be made, here the ſacrifices to be offered are particularly expreſſed, 13. bullocks the firſt day, 2 rams and 14 lambs, and the ſecond day 12. and every other day one leſſe of the bullocks to the ſeven, and upon the 8. day but one bullock only, & one ram, &c. The myſtery whereof Rabanus ſheweth to be the diminution of ſins daily in thoſe that are ſanctified, and the aboliſhing afterwards in the time of Chriſts coming of legal and carnal ſacrifices and rites, perfect purification and cleanſing from ſin being attained by his bloud alone. As the ſacrifices of this feaſt are more at the firſt, and daily after fewer and fewer, ſo the regenerate are firſt full of ſins, that need many ſacrifices to expiate them, but through Gods Spirit and grace they daily mortifie them, ſo that the power of ſin is much abated, yet at the laſt one bullock muſt be offered, ſome ſin and infirmity ſtill remaineth, for which there is need of the bloud of expiation, none can attain to perfection, till they be tranſlated from this mortal life to the immortal, and therefore muſt alwayes daily pray, forgive us our treſpaſſes.

Rabanus.
The Myſtery.

Note.

Verſ. 39. Theſe things ye ſhall do in your ſet feaſts beſides your vowes, &c.] Of voluntary offerings, and upon vows, ſee before, Lev.7. Now the Lord to prevent an opinion, that if theſe offerings were all made upon their feſtivals, they ſhould not need then to bring any free-will offerings alſo, provideth, that peace-offerings and voluntaries ſhould now alſo be offered over and above all the ſacrifices here preſcribed, and contrariwiſe, that becauſe there might at theſe times be many free-will offerings to be offered, by reaſon of them the ſacrifices preſcribed ſhould not be neglected. From whence we may learn, that no man ſhall be diſpenſed withal in reſpect of things expreſly commanded for any thing done in way of piety or charity of a mans own good will, juſtice muſt be done, and mercy ſhewed alſo; and it muſt not be thought, that becauſe a man is charitable in a great meaſure, he ſhall be accepted of before God, although he be unjuſt.

Note.

Chap. XXX.

If a man vow a vow to the Lord, or ſwear an oath to binde his ſoul with a band, he ſhall not break his word, &c.] Here becauſe vowes and things vowed were laſt ſpoken of, and appointed to be brought beſides the offerings preſcribed, the law of vowes is further explained. And herein Moſes is ſaid to have ſpoken to the heads, Verſ. 1. that they might every one in his juriſdiction have a care, that the vowes might be duly performed. A vow is either with an oath or without an oath, either of which bindeth. Oleaſter diſtinguiſheth betwixt a vow and an oath, ſaying, that a vow is to the Lord, but an oath by the Lord. The Hebrewes ſay, that it is ſpoken here of the vow of abſtinence which is to be noted from the word bind his ſoul, or prohibit his ſoul to keep his body back as it were, with a bridle from ſin, and to keep it in the duty. To vow therefore they ſay is to vow abſtinence from wine or from fleſh, and there be other vowes, which reſpect not the maceration of the body, which are called holy vowes, that is, the vowes of oblations; all which are to be kept, if it be but a childe that is thirteen years and a day old, or a female twelve years and a day, not being under the government of their Parents. But if under, the father may diſſolve the vow of the child, and the husband of the wife. And the wiſe men diſſolve their vows, that repent them of them, and the cuſtome of the place, and in vowes the common cuſtom of men and their common interpretation is to be followed. Thus, in many more particulars they; but of vowes it hath been ſpoken before, Levit.27. Chap. 7. 16. And as vowes muſt not be broken, ſo they muſt not be delayed, Deut.23.21.

Verſ.2.

Hebræi in præcept. negativis.

The law here excepteth only the vowes of women married, or in their fathers houſe, being diſallowed by the huſband or father, in the day that they heare thereof, but not of widows, or the divorced, whoſe vow muſt ſtand. For ſons or daughters, out of their fathers houſes, the Hebrews have this rule, if he be upon the thirteenth year and a day, or ſhe upon the twelfe and a day, when they vow they are examined, to whoſe name they vowed, which if they cannot tell, their vowes are nothing, if they can, they ſtand, but after this time they ſtand, as the vowes of men and women not under, although they cannot tell, to whoſe name, becauſe they are at this age counted young men, and young women, and paſt children. And for the fathers or husbands diſallowing in the day that they hear thereof, this they ſay, is ſo to be underſtood, as that if many dayes be paſt, before they hear, yet if when he heareth, he diſalloweth, it ſhall be fruſtrate. But the mans fruſtrating of any vow muſt be with pronouncing his diſlike with his lips, and not onely diſliking it in his heart; and touching a woman at her own liberty, when ſhe voweth, if ſhe marry afterwards, before ſhe hath fulfilled it, her husband hath no power to diſanul that. A woman eſpouſed, but yet in her fathers houſe, is in the ſame caſe if ſhe voweth, with one not eſpouſed, but onely, that her husband muſt joyn with her father in diſallowing, if her father dyeth, not having diſanulled, her vow ſtandeth, for the husband cannot diſanul his wives vow, till ſhe be married.

Verſ.3,4,5.

Maimony, of vowes, Chap.11.

Every vow that a woman maketh to her ſoul, the husband may eſtabliſh or diſallow it. This is by the Rabbins expounded, as if it were meant, that onely vowes of this kind to afflict the body by abſtinence, and faſting, were diſallowable by the husband, but not other vowes made by his wife. But the law beforegoing is more general, and therefore this is rather to be underſtood as an inſtancing in one caſe, the like courſe being taken in all others; for if a vow touching her body onely, to macerate it by abſtinence, ſtood no further then her husband allowed, much leſſe could a vow touching his goods to offer any part thereof ſtand without his allowance ance, but they for covetouſneſſe, becauſe benefit came by ſuch vowes, would not have the husband authorized therein.

Verſ.13. R. Sol. Jarchi Maimony.

Verſ. 15. If the husband by holding his peace eſtabliſheth his wives vowes, and yet hindreth the performance of them afterwards, it is ſaid, that it ſhall be his ſin. Thus who ſo is an occaſion of ſin to another bringeth ſin upon his own ſoul.

Note.

Chap. XXXI.

IN this Chapter Moſes before his death is appointed to take revenge upon the Midianites, through whoſe wiles ſo many had periſhed, Chap. 25. he being therefore in that Chapter Verſes 16, 17. commanded to ſmite them for this cauſe. And now after the numbring of the people, Chap. 26. and the repeating of the lawes touching feaſts and inlarging them, Chap. 28. 29. and the law of vowes, Chap. 30. he is again commanded the ſame, this being the time, that the Lord would have this execution done upon them, that were the cauſe of the Iſraelites ſinning, and of ſo great a deſtruction before amongſt them. So that as Toſtatus noteth, when God ſpake of this to Moſes before, he did onely ſignifie, that he would have the Midianites ſmitten, but for the time, he appointed it not till now as he ſignified long before, that Amalek ſhould be deſtroyed, Exod. 17. Verſ. 14. but appointed the time, when Saul was King.

Verſ. 1. Avenge the children of Iſrael, Heb. Avenge the vengeance of the children of Iſrael, but Verſ. 3. it is called the Lords vengeance, becauſe to him onely vengeance belongeth, and men may not avenge themſelves, but onely being armed with authority from above. The difference is noted here by Ferus betwixt the Lords proceedings againſt Iſrael ſinning, and againſt Midian, occaſioning it. Amongſt the Iſraelites they onely were deſtroyed, that were guilty of ſinning, but amongſt the Midianites all periſh, it being ſhewed hereby, that God is moſt highly offended with them above all others, that are ſcandals to others, and lay ſtumbling blocks before them to make them fall; and wo be to them, ſaith Chriſt, by whom offences come. Why the Midianites muſt be ſmitten and not the Moabites at this time, hath been examined before, Chap. 25. 16. Before Moſes his death this muſt be done for his greater comfort, becauſe he had ſeen execution done upon the Iſraelites, and theſe who were the cauſe of their ſinning, had been hitherto ſpared, that he might not therefore be diſcouraged ſeeing nothing done againſt ſuch wicked enemies, they are here adjudged to deſtruction before his death, and for his further aſſurance of the Iſraelites prevailing againſt all other their enemies under the conduct of their now captain Joſhuah, after his death, for ſo much as he did both living and dying ſo greatly deſire their welfare.

Ferus.

Note.

Matth. 18.

Verſ. 3. Moſes biddeth arme ſome of them onely to the warre, viz. of each tribe 1000. and ſo they go forth under Phinees, the Prieſt ſo much commended, chapter 25. and he beareth none other armes, but the holy inſtruments, and the trumpets. Cajetan will not have Phinees the Captain now, but Joſhuah, although not here named, becauſe he had been Captain before againſt the Amalekites, Exod. 17. and therefore now much more, ſeeing he was to ſucceed Moſes, and was already inaugurated to his office. But for as much as that all the army went not, but a ſmall part, 12000. out of 600000. it is more probable, that Joſhuah ſtayed with Moſes in the camp to govern at home in the mean ſeaſon, and that they who were ſent out, were not ſo much men of the greateſt note for the warre, but of greateſt zeal to cut off tranſgreſſours. And ſuch were now ſent with Phinees, a pattern of godly zeal, that the victory following might be aſcribed to the Lord, and not to the prowes of the army ſent out. As Gideon afterwards went againſt them, but with 300. men, for the ſame end. Thus allſo Comeſtor, Lyranus, Ferus, Joſephus, Philo, &c. who are all for Phinees going out, as Captain, and not Joſhuah. Touching the holy inſtruments and trumpets ſaid to be in the hand of Phinees, Cajetan admoniſheth rightly, that none ought to be ſo groſſe in underſtanding, as to take it ſo, as if Phinees carried all theſe things, for he alone could not blow with the two trumpets at once; but he is ſaid to have them in his hand, becauſe they were under his care, and he had the charge of them. What the holy inſtruments were, it is not agreed, ſome holding that there were none other, but the ſilver trumpets, thus making and redundant, the holy inſtruments and the trumpets, as if it had been ſaid onely, the holy inſtruments, the trumpets. But others better by the holy inſtruments underſtand the arke and the appurtenances thereof, that is, the things contained in the arke, and the high Prieſts garments. But becauſe Eleazar went not, that is not ſo probable; and R. Solomon, who is the chief authour of this opinion touching the Prieſts garment is ſo falſe and fabulous in other things, that no credit is herein to be given to him; For he ſaith, that 12000 went out of every tribe, and that Balaam by art magick made the Midianites to come down armed from above upon the Iſraelites, that they might the more eaſily oppreſſe them, but Phinees having put the golden plate upon his forehead, made them all to fall down backward, and ſo the victory fell eaſily to the Iſraelites. Yet I doubt not but the ark with the things therein meant by the holy inſtruments was carried as a ſign of Gods preſence, by whoſe power and not by their own ſtrength his people prevailed, becauſe it is noted before, Numb. 14.44. when they were overthrown by the Amalekites and Canaanites, that that the ark went not amongſt them; and afterwards in Samuels dayes, the ark is noted to have been carried to the warre againſt the Philiſtins, intimating it to be a thing uſuall to go out to warre with the ark. To the Prieſts ſounding the ſilver trumpets, a promiſe of victory is made, Num. 10. By theſe then they prevailed more now then by the ſword, ſeeing ch. 14. when they went without the ark, although they were 600000. they were diſcomfited, as is probable, by no greater company of enemies, but now with 12000 they get the victory. What a multitude came now againſt them, we may gather, both by the prey of Virgins taken, 32000. verſ. 35. and of ſheep 65000, and beeves 72000. and of aſſes 61000. and from this, that they had 5 Kings, v.8. Prayer and devotion then are of more force, then all armes in the time of warre.

Verſ. 6.

Cajetan.

to

Scholaſt. hiſt. Lyranus. Cajetan. Vatablus. Oleaſter. Ainſworth. Toſtatus. Caietan. Rabbin. R. Solomon. 1 Sam. 4. Note.

The 5 Kings of Midian are otherwiſe called Dukes, Joſ. 13.21. They were the Dukes of Sihon king of the Amorites; but now he being ſlain before, chap. 21. It ſeemeth that they reigned all as Kings, but they fell before Iſrael, and Balaam alſo, and all the males of Midian. How Balaam came to fall amongſt them, who was none of them, but of another countrey hath been already ſhewed, chap. 24. viz. either becauſe having left Balak he ſtayed till this time amongſt the Princes of Midian, or having gone home came again, when he heard how his counſell took effect for a reward, and it was accordingly paid him, he was ſlain amongſt the wicked. Verſ. 8.

And the children of Iſrael tooke all the women of Midian captive, and their little ones, &c.] Here is ſet down, what wealth in perſons, cattell, and other goods they carried away of the Midianites, viz. all that they had, and burnt all their cities and caſtles, becauſe although they had deſtroyed the people all but ſuch as ſaved themſelves by flight, yet they might not poſſeſſe their countrey, as being the countrey of Madian, that came of Abraham by Keturah, and not of the poſteritie of Canaan. How great the ſpoiles taken were is reckoned, verſ. 32. 33. &c. and the moſt miraculous preſervation of the Iſraelites in this expedition, not one of them being loſt herein, v. 59. Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 12. 13. The ſpoyles of the enemies taken, are brought to Moſes and Eleazar, &c.] Who went out with the Princes to meet them, as Melcheſideck had ſometime gone out to meet Abraham returning from his victory. And to them they bring all to be divided, as the manner was afterwards amongſt the Romans to come to the Princes after victory, who went out for honours ſake with all the people to meet them, celebrating their conqueſt with joyfull acclamations and all ſignes of joy, and then the ſpoiles being brought together were at there diſcretion divided amongſt the victours, and the ſtate publick, the Emperour chiefly bearing ſway herein.

Gen. 14.

Verſ. 14. When Moſes ſaw the women brought he was very angry, and reproved the Captains and officers, cauſing all ſuch as had lien with man to be ſlain and all the little ones that were males, thoſe becauſe through them the plague came upon Iſraell, and theſe, leſt growing up they ſhould afterwards ſeek revenge for their fathers death, but all the females, that had not lien by man, they ſave alive at his direction for themſelves. His reproofs are directed to the officers, becauſe they ſhould have ruled better, and not have ſuffered ſuch a thing to be done amongſt the ſouldiers.

Verſ. 19. Here Moſes according to the Law provideth for the purification of thoſe that were defiled by the dead, commanding them to abide without the 20 camp 7 dayes, and to purifie themſelves and their captives third day, and the ſeventh day, and all their garments, skins, goats hair and wodden veſſels. Purifying was with ſprinkling the holy water preſcribed, Numb. 19. and ſeven dayes uncleanneſſe by the dead is hereby in purging, verſ. 23. For captives, Hebr. is captivity, the captives coming now to be the inheritance of Gods people muſt go under this purifying alſo for their relation to them, being otherwiſe uncapable as the Rabbins ſay, of legall uncleanneſs and of purifying.

Verſ. 21. After Moſes, Eleazar now ſpeaketh, who was high Prieſt, as it is likely, ſomething being left by Moſes to be further ſpoken by him touching purification, that according to the dignitie of his place, he might procure him the more reverence. And therefore the care of the ſanctuary being committed to him as the chief about it, and of legall purifyings to inſtruct the people herein, he telleth them how they ſhould purifie their mettals, viz.

Verſ. 22. by making them to paſſe through the fire, and then ſprinkling them with water, but other things that could not be put into the fire without conſuming them with the ſprinkling of water onely, and on the ſeventh day, he Verſ. 23. ſaith they muſt waſh their clothes, as the Lord commanded Moſes, Numb.

Verſ. 24. 19. 29. and ſo as clean enter into the camp. Of purging by fire it was not ſpoken before, ſo that this is here added by the Lord for mettalls. The Rabbins ſay, that ſuch things onely were to be purged by the fire, as did uſe to come in the fire as pots, kettles, ſpits, &c. but not cups, platters,

Sol. Jarchi. Targum Jona. drinking veſſels, &c. rendring theſe words, Every thing that may abide the fire, thus every thing that goeth through the fire, as alſo the Hebrew fraſe ſignifieth, but becauſe ſilver and gold, and not veſſels onely taken from the Midianites are appointed to be purged by fire, we muſt rather take it according to the ſence, every thing that may go through or abide the fire, and not be conſumed. For all things taken from the heathen were to be counted unclean till they were purged, becauſe they were unclean that poſſeſſed them, as it is ſaid to the unclean all things are unclean. So that the purging here preſcribed by fire and water, the things to be purged being put into the one, and waſhed with the other, and then ſprinkled with the holy water, was not onely in the caſe of being defiled by the dead, but by the heathen, which occaſioned ſomewhat a different proceeding from that chap. 19.

The Myſtery. Rabanus. For the myſtery of this, Rabanus by the fire underſtandeth the holy Ghoſt, and by water Baptiſm and repentance, by which every one that would be a veſſel of honour in Gods houſe, muſt be purged. But fire may may better be applyed to the fire of affliction, which is as fire to gold and silver to purifie it, and water to the grace and Spirit of God. And thus it is applyed, Psal. 66. 10, 12. thou hast tryed us, as silver is tryed, and we went through fire and water; so Ainsworth. But if it be thus uwderstood by the things, that cannot endure the fire, they must be set forth, who although they suffer in some sort also, for all that will live godly, must suffer persecution, yet they are not so much put to it, by being tormented and killed by tyrants for the truth. Ainsworth.

Here the sum of the prey both of persons and beasts is appointed to be cast up, that a division might be made and a tribute levyed out of it for the Lord, after the dividing of the whole betwxit those that went out to war and the congregation of the people, from their part one of 500. and from the part of these one of 50. to be given, the first to Eleazar for an heave offering, and the second to the Levites according to this order; for dividing the prey as well to those, that went not to the war, as to those, that went; Joshuah did afterwards by the two tribes and half, and David made it an order amongst his men. A tribute must be given out of all to the Lord in acknowledgement that the victory came from him, but lesse from the warriours, then from the rest, because they had laboured and hazzarded their lives so, as the other did not. And the High Priest for him and the other Priests hath the lesser tribute, as they were fewer and the Levites the greater, as being many more. And in appointing one of 500. to Eleazar, but one of 50 to the Levites, a proportion was held with the manner about tythes, for the tenth of the tythe was paid by the Levites to the High Priest, and so it was here. One soul of 500. Vers. 28. that is, one person of the Virgins, and one head of the beasts. The number of sheep was 675000. of Beeves, 72000. and of Asses 61000. and of Virgins 32000. of Camels nothing is said, and yet when Gideon afterwards overcame the Midianites, their Camels are said to be without number. The reason, Cazkuni, why these are not now spoken of, was, because such cattel onely are summed, as of which a Tribute was levyed for the Lord, which were onely of clean beasts and Asses, because the Asse, though unclean, is sanctified by the firstling of an Asse, Exod. 13 13. Ch. 34. 19. For the mystery of drawing out so few to go to the war, and yet making the division amongst all, Rabanus saith it sheweth that amongst Christians, who are innumerable, there are but few in comparison, that fight manfully the Lords battels, who therefore shall have the far greater reward, and they are the valiant warriours in Gods cause, that intangle not themselves with secular things, such as Timothy and others by Bishops and Pastours of the Church, who fight for themselves and for others, that are weaker, knowing how to oppose the word of truth against the adversaries thereof, and fight daily by prayers, fastings, righteousnesse, piety, meekenesse, and chastity. But others who are weaker in gifts, if quietly they abide with Moses, and continue in obedience to the Lawes of God, shall have a share in that heavenly reward also.

Ver. 26, 27, 28, 29. &c.

Jos. 22. 8. 1 Sam 30. 24.

Vers. 32, 33, 34.

Judg. 6. 5.

Cazkuni.

The mystery. Rabanus.

2 Tim. 2. 4.

After the division of the prey into two parts and the Tribute taken out for the Lord, out of each part, and the summing thereof, here is another offering brought by the captains and officers of the army, in way of thankfulnesse for the miraculous preservation of the whole Army, so as that not one of them was lost in that war, and this offering was of jewels of gold, chains, bracelets, rings, and earings and tablets to make an attonement for their souls, the weight whereof was 16750 shekles. All this was a freewill offering out of the spoiles not required to be divided, which before the men of war had taken every one for himselfe. And all this received by Moses and Eleazar and brought into the tabernacle and there laid up for a memorial. This offering brought for an attonement for their souls was doubtlesse so spoken of with respect unto their

Vers. 48.

Vers. 50.
Vers. 51.

Vers. 53.

Vers. 54, 55.

ſin, in ſaving the Midianitiſh women alive, for which Moſes had before ſo ſharply reproved them. So that in ſaying thus they meant, that it ſhould both be an offering of thankſgiving for the miraculous preſervation of every one of their lives, and alſo to reconcile Gods favour, who might juſtly have been offended and cut them off for that their great overſight. And reſpect was alſo had to the Law of giving a ranſom for their ſouls, when they were numbred, there being otherwiſe danger of ſome plague to be ſent amongſt them. Hereby plainly God was acknowledged to be the giver of the victory, and on the victours part there was no proud boaſting, but an humble ſhewing of their own unworthineſſe, an example moſt worthy to be imitated by all, that prevail in their wars for all time to come, Pſal. 115. 1. Pſal. 44. 3. For the bringing of it into the Tabernacle for a memorial, ſee the like before, Exod. 30. 15, 16.

Exod. 30. 12.

Note.

Chap. XXXII.

IN this Chapter is ſet forth the requeſt of the tribe of Reuben and of Gad made to Moſes, becauſe they had very much cattel, that they might have the Countries already conquered, viz. thoſe of Sihon, the King of the Amorites, and of Og the King of Baſhan for their poſſeſſion, and not be compelled with the reſt to go over Jordan. For which he firſt reproveth them ſharply, but upon their proffer to go armed over Jordan before their brethren, and not to return to dwell here, till they had likewiſe gotten every one a poſſeſſion in the land of Canaan, he conſenteth, and giveth theſe Countries to them, and to the half of Manaſſehs tribe, verſ. 33. How theſe tribes came ſo much to abound with cattel more then others, is uncertain, but only that being the firſt born, Reuben of Leah, Gad of Zilpah, and Manaſſeh, who in half his tribe cometh alſo in afterwards, verſ. 33. of Joſeph, the firſt born of Rachel; and Machir, his firſt born, verſ. 39. haply they being moſt expert in keeping cattel had a greater ſtock at the firſt, and their poſterity afterwards likewiſe, which they had brought out of Egypt, and increaſed now by the acceſſion of other cattel taken in the enemies countreys, and becauſe they were moſt addicted to cattel, bought of their brethren. Whereas verſ. 1. Reuben is firſt named; but verſ. 2. Gad is firſt, and ſo afterwards, this may be, becauſe the tribe of Gad, though younger, was firſt in this counſel. This requeſt at the firſt ſeemed moſt wicked and dangerous. For here was firſt, as Ferus noteth, a ſhew of idleneſſe, as if, their brethren travelling on and hazzarding themſelves, they would reſt idly there and take their pleaſure. 2. It tended to the diſheartening of their brethren, when they ſhould ſee them draw back from paſſing over Jordan. 3. It ſhewed a ſeparation of the tribes intended, which ſhould hold together as one. 4. The reſt might have been provoked againſt theſe two, and ſo a dangerous variance might have followed. 5. It ſeemed to be a new provoking of the Lord to wrath, to the hindring of them ſtill longer from the promiſed land. All which, as Moſes, ſo every Governour in the Church ſhould carefully conſider, and ſpeak againſt. Ainſworth further addeth, that it might ſhew in them a covetous mind, and a diſtruſt in God touching the giving of the Land of Canaan unto them, a want of love to their brethren, when they had gotten a poſſeſſion leaving them to themſelves, and not affording them their aſſiſtance to conquer parts for them; and an evil preſident it might alſo ſeem to be to others, when more was conquered, to deſire likewiſe parts before the reſt: and laſtly, a croſſing of Gods former Ordinance, chap. 26. 55. that the whole land ſhould be parted by lot amongſt all the tribes. Wherefore Moſes taking this, as ill meant, reproveth them at large, verſ. 6, 7, 8, &c. to verſ. 16. For the places deſired by them; Jazer was a city taken from

Verſ. 1.
Verſ. 2.
Ainſworth.
Ferus.

Note.
Ainſworth.

from the Amorites, Chap.21.32. and Gilead likewiſe a mountain, of that people of Dibon, ſee chap.22.30. of Nimrah, Joſ. 13. 15, 17. Heſhbon was the city of King Sihon, chap.21. Shebam, a place of vines, Eſay 16. 8,9. Meon is called Baal Meon, Joſ. 13. 17. Verſ. 3.

Theſe two tribes after Moſes his reproof, explaining themſelves, that they meant not, as he ſuſpected, but to go before the reſt over Jordan to fight for them, are approved by him, and have their requeſt granted. If this ſhall ſeem ſtrange, becauſe contrary to the firſt ordinance of parting all the land of Canaan by lot, chap.26.55. and that Moſes was too blame for thus yielding to them without conſulting with the Lord. Calvin anſwereth well, that howſoever it be not expreſſed, yet his often mentioning of the Lord implyeth, that he had direction from him hereabout different from the firſt, as alſo before upon the requeſt of the daughters of Zelophehad, chap.27. he had direction to ſet them out a part. Here was a new caſe, theſe tribes to gain this for their part, would take the greateſt pains, and endure the greateſt hazzard to conquer the reſt, becauſe this eſpecially was fit for their uſe; and therefore although out of ſuch a caſe all ſhould have been divided by lot to all the tribes, yet for their extraordinary pains and hazzards, it ſeemed good unto Moſes to grant them this part without putting it upon the hazzard of a lottery. Whereas he ſaith, ye ſhall go all armed, &c. Toſtatus well noteth, that it is meant onely from amongſt them all ſhould go ſo many as were needful, the reſt being left in thoſe parts with their wives and little ones and cattel, to defend them from enemies, to build and to do works of husbandry. And therefore when their going out before the reſt is ſpoken of, it is ſaid, that there went of theſe two tribes and of the half of Manaſſeh about 40000, Ioſ.4.13. whereas together theſe two tribes and that half made 100000. chap.26. Ver. 16,17. Ver. 20,21. Calvin. Toſtatus.

Whereas verſ. 26. upon another reply to Moſes they ſay, that they will leave their wives, little ones and flocks in the land of Gilead, whileſt they went forth to fight, it is to be underſtood, that Gilead is ſometime taken more largely for all the countrey of Sihon and Og, as in this place and ſometime for one part of it poſſeſſed by the half tribe of Manaſſeh, as verſ. 39. of the diviſion of this whole countrey of Gilead betwixt the Reubenites, and Gadites, and the half of Manaſſeh, ſee Deut.3.12,13. viz. the one half to Reuben and Gad, and the other to half Manaſſeh. Toſtatus ſaith, that there was a mountain called Gilead, having divers cities and ample paſtures on both ſides, all called Galead, thoſe on the one ſide being the Kingdom of Sihon, and thoſe on the other of Og, that mountain dividing between theſe two Kingdoms. Verſ. 26. Toſtatus.

But he further moveth a queſtion, conſidering, that the land of Canaan beyond Jordan was ſeven years in conquering, and theſe men returned not to their wives, till all was conquered, how they could live ſo long without them? To this he maketh divers anſwers, but his beſt is, that they being not far off all this time, their wives might ſometimes repair unto them, not altogether, but ſome at one time and ſome at another, or they might ſeverally, when they had reſpite, repair to them, and then return again to the army againſt the times of imployment. But rather it may be thought, neceſſity requiring it, they had the gift of continency for the moſt part, during this time, and the wars, wherein they were buſied, gave them no leiſure to intend generation. Qu.

Moſes being fully ſatisfied, if the conditions propounded were on the Reubenites & Gadites part performed, appointeth Eleazar and Joſhua to allow them thoſe countries for their poſſeſſion, but if not, they muſt have their parts amongſt the reſt beyond Jordan, and here, as it ſhould fall out by lot, the words are, they ſhall have poſſeſſions amongſt you in the land of Canaan, whereby was meant all the land, as well on this ſide Jordan, as beyond it, which had formerly been poſſeſſed by the Amorites, Canaanites, &c. for Ver. 28,29. 30. Exod. 23 31.

their border muſt be from the Red Sea, to the Sea of the Philiſtins.

Calvin. Yet Calvin ſeemeth to hold, that the firſt intent was onely that the land beyond Jordan ſhould be that, to which the 12 Tribes ſhould all have been confined, and that this addition for two and an half was upon this occaſion now firſt granted. Thus Moſes appointeth, but Joſhua muſt perform it, who was the type of our Jeſus, as Moſes was of the Law which made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Heb. 7. 19.

Verſ. 33. And Moſes gave unto them, &c.] Here the half tribe of Manaſſeh, not hitherto ſpoken of, cometh in to be a ſharer with theſe two tribes in the Kingdom of Sihon and Og, and upon the ſame conditions, although not here expreſſed, as we may ſee, Joſ. 4. 14. Deut. 3. 18. Some think, that this half tribe was at the firſt of the ſame counſel with the other two, but Lorinus left unmentioned, becauſe but an half tribe: Others, that becauſe theſe Ainſworth. Kingdoms were thought too great for two tribes only, hold, that the half tribe was added, and the rather, becauſe they had fought valiantly to conquer it, eſpecially Machir, verſ. 39. Ioſ. 17. 1. How theſe Countries were divided between thoſe two tribes and this half, ſee more ver. 34, 35, &c. and Deut. 3. 12, 13, &c. And Moſes is ſaid to have given them, becauſe he willed them to be ſo given.

The Myſtery. For the Myſtery of all this, Reuben ſignifying, they ſee a ſonne, typifieth Biſhops; Gad, accinctus, girt to, Princes and Rulers; Manaſſeh, forgetfulneſſe, other Prieſts and religious perſons; for theſe are all as the firſt born and chief amongſt others, as they were; and ſuch Biſhops, Princes and Prieſts are here typified, as meeting with dignities and beneficial preferments in this world are taken ſo with them, that they would willingly do nothing elſe, but intend theſe and worldly pleaſures; but being ſtirred up by ſome Moſes, the ſhamefulneſſe of ſuch a life, fear of dangers and diſcredit, they go before others, in fighting the Lords battels, that is, taking ſome ſpirituall pains in their functions, the ſpirituall perſons in preaching, praying, &c. and the temporal in ſeeing to the execution of good laws, and inculcating them to contain others in goodneſſe; and thus they take the heavenly Canaan, as it were, for them to poſſeſſe, but not for themſelves, when all is done, they having no part in it, but only in worldly things, as theſe were taken with the fat paſtures of Gilead and goodly buildings there, and ſo would have gone no further to paſſe over Jordan, had it not been for the ſharp reproofs of Moſes, whereby being ſtirred up they go over and fight to conquer the land of Canaan for their other brethren, but have themſelves no part there, but only on this ſide in the Countries of Sihon and Og, which they were ſo inamoured withal for their worldly profit. To this effect Ferus, and Lyranus and Toſtatus, who make Manaſſehs half tribe a figure of the religious, becauſe they profeſſe a forgetting of the world for heavenly things. The Ordinary gloſſe for Princes in the ſecond place, hath Prieſts, and the religious in the laſt.

Ferus. Lyranus. Toſtatus. Gloſ. ordin.

Procopius. Procopius underſtandeth thoſe, that abound with worldly wealth, being hindered hereby from the baptiſme of the Spirit, and going on in good works to the attaining of heaven. Origen and after him Ra-Origen. banus, and Hugo, by theſe, the Jews adhering to the carnal underſtanding of the law, but not paſſing further to the ſpirituall ſenſe, by the reſt of the children of Iſrael, Chriſtians piercing further, and brought by Jeſus to the heavenly Canaan. They alſo allegorize divers other wayes, which I ſpare to recite, becauſe I think the firſt is to be preferred.

Verſ. 34. Verſ. 37. Here the building of the Gadites after this requeſt granted, is ſet forth of Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, &c. and then of the Reubenites, Verſ. 37. Heſhbon, Elealeh, and Kirjathaim, &c. whereas it is ſaid they built theſe cities, ties the meaning is, that they build up the ruined places thereof again, for they were before, but being greatly decayed by theſe wars, they repaired them. Toſtatus.

Lyranus ſaith that becauſe at the firſt they thought that they ſhould not inhabit here, they beat them down and demoliſhed them, and now built them up again, but it is not ſo ſaid, as of the Midianites cities, but onely that they took them, and Moſes had before intimated, that they ſhould have theſe for part of their poſſeſſion; when he ſaid, riſe up and begin to poſſeſſe the countrey of Sihon. Lyranus. Numb.21.25. Deut.2.24.

Touching Nebo and Baal-meon, it is ſaid, they changed their names, and called them by other names, this ſaith Sol. Jarchi was done becauſe the Amorites called them by the names of their gods Nebo and Baal, for theſe were their Idols, Judg.6.31. Iſa.46.1. and they might not name the names of Heathen gods; ſo Toſtatus, which Tertullian yet obſerveth, is not ſo ſtrictly to be taken, for we cannot ſometimes but name them, according to the common cuſtom, but then it muſt be with expreſſion, that we hold them not to be gods, in the names of cities, the very uſe of the names might well be aboliſhed in deteſtation of them. Sol. Iarchi. Exod.23.13. Tertul. de idol. cap. 10.

And the children of Machir of Manaſſeh went to Gilead and took it, &c.] This is to be underſtood of the other part of Gilead, as hath been already noted. Some think becauſe the half Tribe of Manaſſeh was not ſpoken of, as coming in to petition with Reuben and Gad, that here is expreſſed the reaſon of a part in this country ſet out notwithſtanding to them of this Tribe alſo. Theſe parts not being yet wholly ſubdued, Moſes offered to them, that would go and ſubdue them, that they ſhould have them for a poſſeſſion, whereupon the children of Machir went out, &c. Or it may be thought, that theſe expeditions were made ſingularly by theſe Captains before the Amorites being overthrown by the whole Army in other parts of the countrey, and ſo they were given unto them for a reward. Verſ. 39. R. Nehmannus. Verſ.41.

For Jair, who is ſaid to have taken the ſmall Towns of Gilead and to have called them after his name, Havoth Iair, that is the villages of Jair, it is to be noted, that he was not of Manaſſeh, but of Hezron, the ſon of Judah by the fathers ſide, and of Machir of Manaſſeh by the mothers, yet becauſe he had a band of Manaſſeh he was counted amongſt them, and is ſaid to have had three and twenty towns, 1 Chron. 2. Verſe 22. and another Jair, afterwards a judge in Iſrael had thirty ſons, who had thirty cities called likewiſe Havoth Jair, Judg. 10 3,4. all in the land of Gilead. 1 Chron.2.21

Nobath took Kenath and called it after his name] Of this name there was a city Nob, of Prieſts ſlain by Saul afterwards to 85. perſons. Adricomius placeth that Nob in Benjamin ſometime, and ſometime in Gad, but others more probably in Manaſſeh holding it to be the ſame, that is here ſpoken of, although in Hebrew, this be Nobach, that Nob. Of the two Tribes and the half hitherto ſpoken of, it may be noted, that as they firſt had their poſſeſſions given them, ſo they were amongſt the firſt carried captive into Babylon. Verſ.42. 1 Sam.21. Adricomius. Toſtatus. 2 King.15.29. 1 Chron.5.25.

CHAP. XXXIII

IN this Chapter the journeyings of the children of Israel ever since they first disposed themselves to come out of Egypt towards the land of Canaan, are briefly summed up, and they are noted by Expositours generally to be 42. which they call mansions, and so the vulg. latin rendreth it, because they abode some time in every of these. But Tostatus not counting Rameses a Mansion, from whence they first went, reckoneth onely 41. Mansions, but he is herein contrary to all Ancient Writers, and to the Hebrews in their Seder Olam, for they all with one consent make 42. counting Rameses for one, because the children of Israel first came thither together, that they might from thence, as being in the utmost bounds of Egypt set forth on their journey. If any man shall wonder, why Moses having already at large set down the reckonings of the Hebrews from place to place, doth now turn again to capitulate all together, it is answered, that hitherto he onely remembred such places, as wherin some notable things were done, omitting others, and therefore that all might be known and remembred he maketh this repetition with these additions. And it is held by many ancient fathers, Origen, Ambrose, Jerom, Isidor, Beda, Rabanus, &c. that they are thus set down for a mystical signification, for the journeyings of of this people towards the Land of Canaan represented our passing, whilst we are in the wilderness of this world, towards the heavenly Canaan, so that they have been thought worthy exactly to be written upon, most observing the analogy betwixt these two and forty Mansions and the two and forty generations unto Christ, set forth by St. Matthew, and some his 42. hours lying in the grave, and some the fast of Lent, although it cometh short of this number. And certainly many good instructions lie couched herein, of which we shall speak in their order.

Tostatus.

Seder Olam.

Vers. 2. And Moses wrot their goings out, according to their journeys, by the Commandment of the Lord.] These words, at the command of the Lord may have reference either to the journeyings, for at the command of the Lord they journeyed, and at his command they rested, Numb. 9. 18, 20. or to Moses his writing, but it is rather to be thought, that God bad Moses make this Register of them for spiritual instruction.

Vers. 3. And they departed from Ramases the first moneth, &c.] To say nothing of Vers. 4, 5. this History had before Exod. 12. or of the killing of their first born, and executing judgments upon their gods.

The Mystery. By Rameses signifying a turbulent commotion, according to Origen, or Mansion 1. bitterness, as Jerom, is set forth trouble of mind, or repentance, whereby we leave sin, and direct our course to virtuous living, so Ambrose.

Mansion 2. From Rameses they came to Succoth] This signifieth Tabernacles, and hereby is set forth, that when we are inlightned to see the vanity of this world and to come out of it by Repentance, we forthwith come, as it were, to dwell in Tabernacles, accounting our selves Pilgrims and strangers here, and therefore raising up our minds to heaven, and laying up treasures there.

Vers. 6. And they pitched in Etham.] This is interpreted strength and fortitude, Mansion 3. shewing, that to the heavenly minded God giveth strength to grow in grace, and sanctification.

Vers. 7. And they turned to Pihahiroth, before Baalzephon, and before Migdol.] Pi-Mansion 4. hahiroth signifieth a moneth cut out, or as Jerom hath it, a moneth of Nobles, Origen will have a little narrow passage set forth hereby, for he saith, hereby is shewed, that at the first we cannot come to perfection, but are able onely to do a little, proceeding by degrees, and that before Baalzephon, signifying the ascent of a watchtower, and Migdol, signifying magnificence magnificence, that is, having in onr eye the heavenly magnificence to co me, by which we are carryed through all ſtraits and difficulties. But it is better to apply this to the ſtraitneſſe of the way to heaven through perſecutions, and temptations, by which that we may not be diſcouraged, we muſt alwaies have the heavenly happineſſe to come before us.

Verſ. 8. Manſion 5.

From Pihahiroth they went through the ſea to the wilderneſſe, and went three dayes in the Wilderneſſe of Etham, and pitched in Marah.] Hereby the fifth thing in our travell towards heaven is ſet forth, viz. that God will carry us ſafely through all dangers, if we put our truſt in him, and overthrow all our enemies, as they went ſafely through the red ſea, Pharaoh being drowned therein, but yet after deliverance from ſome great dangers we muſt not looke that all bitterneſſe of affliction ſhould be quite over with us, becauſe they came next to Marahs bitterneſſe, but as the bitter waters were made ſweet unto them, ſo ſhall our bitter croſſes be ſweetned unto us by ſpirituall conſolations, ſo Ambroſe.

Verſ. 9. Manſion 6.

And they iourneyed from Marah to Elim, Where were twelve fountains of Water, and ſeventie palm-trees.] Hereby was ſhewed, that after bitterneſſe of affliction ſuffered, God giveth ſome refreſhing and reſpect therefrom to his faithfull people. Elim, ſaith Origen, ſignifying rams, ſetteth forth the Apoſtles, and the fountains here were 12. according to their number, and the palm-trees refreſhing by their ſhadow were 70. according to the number of the 70 diſciples more ſent out to preach the Goſpell. Origen.

Verſ. 10. Manſion 7.

And they iourneyed from Elim, and pitched by the red Sea.] This is omitted in Exod. becauſe nothing of note was done here, it is not to be underſtood as if they had turned back again to the red ſea; but becauſe the ſea was ſinuous, and winding, a boſom of it lay up to the way, by which they were to paſſe, ſo Jerom. They came not hither then to go through the dangers which they had before paſſed, but to the ſight thereof, which might put them in mind of their great deliverance, and ſtirre them up to renue their thankfulneſſe to God therefore, and hereby was ſhewed, that we ought in our proſperitie to remember adverſities paſt, to be the more thankfull, and to prepare to ſuffer again, when God will. And becauſe the red ſea was a figure of baptiſme, and of the bloudy paſſions of Chriſt, we ought although but once to be baptiſed; yet to conſider it afterwards again, to be continually dying to ſinne, and riſing to righteouſneſſe, and the paſſions of Chriſt for us to be affected therewith, and to abhor our ſinnes, the cauſe thereof. Hieronym.

Verſ. 11. Manſion 8.

And they encamped in the Wilderneſſe of Sin. Sin ſignifieth a buſh, and in a buſh in this wilderneſſe, God firſt appeared to Moſes, and talked with him about the deliverance of the children of Iſrael out of Egypt. This then ſhewed, that after Baptiſme and ſerious meditation hereupon, that we may die to ſinne and riſe to righteouſneſſe, we ſhall come to God and to his glory, attaining perfect deliverance from ſinne and all miſery, which ſhall be in the reſurrection, figured by the eight manſion, as Chriſt his reſurrection was upon the 8 day, thus almoſt Ambroſe.

Verſ. 12. Manſion 9.

And from Sin they came to Dophkah.] This and the next manſion in Aluſh, being alſo in the wilderneſſe of Sin, are omitted in Exod. and Rephidim is put next unto Sin, and then the wilderneſſe of Sinai. But as hath been noted out of Rabanus, Exod. 17. 1. Theſe 3 places and the boſom of the red ſea alſo before ſpoken of were all in the wilderneſſe of Sin, which had the name from Sinai adjoyning to it. Their coming to Dophkah after Sin, ſhewed that in the reſurrection, whereby we come to ſee Gods glory, we ſhall be perfectly healed of all our ſinnes, which are as ſickneſſes to the ſoul, as the word Dophkah, or Raphakah ſignifieth healing ſo Origen and Ambroſe. Origen. Ambroſ.

Verſ. 13. Manſ. 10.

From Dophkah, they came to Aluſh.] Aluſh, ſaith Ambroſ. ſignifieth labour, and here they ſaw the glory of God, had fleſh and manna given them, them, whereby is ſignified, that they which labour for it, ſhall be fed with the heavenly manna. But thoſe things happened in Sin, Exod. 16. and therefore Origen ſaith better, their coming to Aluſh after Raphaca; for ſo the Greek readeth it, that is, to labour after healing ſhewed that we are to this end healed of our ſinnes, that is, have them forgiven unto us, that we ſhould labour hence forth to walk in the way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe.

Origen.

Verſ. 14. Manſ. 1. Origen. Ambroſ.

From Aluſh they came to Rephidim.] Rephidim ſignifieth the praiſe of judgement, their coming then from Aluſh ſignifying labour to this place ſhewed, that after labour in the way of righteouſneſſe ſhall come the praiſe of God, as a crown thereof.

Verſ. 15. Manſion 12.

And from Rephidim to Sinai.] Here the law was given, and the ſecrets of Gods will revealed many myſticall ordinances being appointed, to ſhew that he, which hath attained to the praiſe of God ſhall have his ſecrets revealed unto him, and ſee that, which others ſee not.

Verſ. 16 Manſion 13

And they removed from Sinai, and pitched in Kibroth-hattaavah.] That is, the graves of concupiſcence hereby was ſhewed, ſaith Origen, that they who have inwardly received the Lawes of God, and have them written in their hearts, have mortified and buried as in a grave, their fleſhly concupiſcences.

Verſ. 17. Manſion 14.

And from Kibroth-hattaavah to Haſeroth.] This ſhewed, that after the mortification of all fleſhly luſts, ſhall follow perfect bleſſedneſſe, according to the ſignification of the word Aſeroth, and not otherwiſe, for fleſh and bloud ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God.

Verſ. 18. Manſion 15. Origen.

And from Haſeroth to Rithmah.] This ſhewed, that coming to heavenly bleſſedneſſe we ſhall have our viſion of God and of all divine things perfected, as the word Rithma ſingifyeth viſion perfected.

Verſ. 19 Manſion 16.

From Rithma to Rimmon parez.] Hereby was ſhewed, that they who have their eyes opened, ſee ſpirituall and heavenly things ſo excellent, that they make an high diviſion of them from earthly, as the word Kimmonpaſez, ſignifieth an high diviſion.

Verſ. 20. Manſion 17.

And from Rimmon parez, to Libnah.] This ſhewed, that they who are ſo lifted up to heavenly things are made white as ſnow, the blemiſhes of their ſinnes being done away, or that they, who take the right way to heaven, doe waſh them and make them clean, that their ſinnes as red as ſcarlet may be done away, and they may be white as wooll or ſnow, as Eſay, 1. 16, 17, 18. as the word Libnah, ſignifying whiting or whited implyeth.

Verſ. 21. Manſion 18.

From Libnah, they came to Riſſah.] Riſſah is by Origen rendred laudable tentation, by Jerome a bridle, and their coming hither was ſhewed, that the ſoul being purged from ſinne is to be preſerved by tentation, being otherwiſe ready to be corrupted again, and hereby, as by a bridle it is to be plucked back from ſinne, tentation being as ſalt, wherewith it is ſaid, every ſacrifice is ſalted with ſalt; ſee alſo James 1. 2. and 2 Corinthians, 12. 7.

Verſ. 22. Manſion 19.

From Riſſah they came to Kehelathah.] This is expounded dominion or a rod, the ſign thereof, in alluſion to Aarons rod that budded, the ſign of his Authority, hereby was ſhewed, that they, who patiently endure tentations and profit by them, come to have dominion over all evil luſts, and over the world, which is mortified unto them; ſo Ambroſe. Jerom expoundeth it the Church, ſaying, that hereby is ſet forth the returning to the Church being bridled by tentations.

Verſ. 23. Manſion 20. Adricomius.

And from Kehelathah to mount Shapher] This is by Jerom expounded the mountain of beauty, and is ſet forth by Adricomius to be beautiful to the eye, being in the wilderneſſe of Paran, by their coming hither, it being ſhewed, that they, who are brought to the Church are built upon the rock Chriſt, a ſtone cut out of the mountain without hands, and ſo have a Dan. 2. 34.

moſt

moſt beautiful ſcituation. Origen expoundeth it by a trumpet and draweth to the ſpiritual warfare.

From Shapher they came to Haradah.] This is by Jerom expounded a miracle; intimating, that ſuch as are built upon Chriſt attain ſuch happineſſe, as is admirable, which the eye hath not ſeen, nor the ear heard, &c. Verſ. 24. Manſion 21. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

And from Haradah they came to Makheloth.] By Jerom expounded aſſemblies, ſhewing, that the whole aſſembly of the firſt born are joyned together in Chriſt through brotherly love. Verſ. 25. Manſ. 22.

And from Makheloth they came to Tahath] That is, under, ſhewing, that the faithful for all the graces received are not lifted up, but continue humble. Origen, patience, ſhewing, that the ſervant of God muſt be patient ſuffer many things, that he may do good to others. Verſ. 26. Manſ. 23.

And from Tahath they came to Tarah.] That is, a driver away, by which name Abrahams father was called, becauſe he drove crowes and other birds away from the corn; and hereby was ſhewed, that evil ſpirits, which as fowles are ready to eat up the good ſeed of the Word, ſhould be driven away; ſo Jerom. Verſ. 27. Manſ. 24.

And from Tarah they came to Mithcah,] That is, to ſweetneſſe, ſhewing, that evil ſpirits not being ſuffered to eat up the Word, great ſweetneſſe is by and by found therein. Verſ. 28. Manſ. 25.

And from Mithcah to Heſhmonah,] That is, acceleration, or haſt-making, to ſhew, that ſweetneſſe in the Word being found, there is no ſloathfull reſting, but a making haſte to more perfection in grace and knowledge. Verſ. 29. Manſion 26.

And from thence to Moſeroth,] That is, bands with diſcipline, to ſhew, that they who make haſte towards more perfection are held with godly diſcipline, as with bands, that are never broken off again. Verſ. 30. Manſion 27.

And from Moſeroth to Benejaakan,] That is, the children of neceſſity, ſaith Jerom, or percolation, ſaith Origen, to ſhew, that the truly faithful do not ſtrein out one of the leaſt of Gods Commandements, but apply themſelves carefully to keep them all. Verſ. 31. Manſion 28.

And from thence to the Mountain Gadgad.] That is, expedition, or girting to, ſhewing, that in the ſpiritual fight we muſt do, as they that have their ſwords girt to them, killing and cutting off the adverſe powers, that would draw mens ſoules to deſtruction. Verſ. 32. Manſion 29.

And from thence to Jotbathah.] That is, goodneſſe, ſetting forth the reward of thoſe that fight the ſpiritual warfare. Verſ. 33. Manſion 30.

And from thence to Ebronah,] a paſſage, to ſhew, that having come to good, we muſt be paſſing on ſtill, till we come to Canaan it ſelf, the perfection of all good. Verſ. 34. Manſion 31.

And from thence to Eziongaber.] That is, wood carved by man, or as Origen, the counſels of man; ſhewing, that from childiſh thoughts and ſpeeches, we muſt grow to be men in knowledge and underſtanding, and hereby we muſt do all things. Verſ. 35. Manſion 32.

And from thence to the Wilderneſſe of Zin, which is Cadeſh.] Zin ſignifieth a commandment; and Kadeſh, holy, but here per ἀντίφρασιν, ſaith Jerom, it ſignifieth impiety; this ſhewed, that where the commandement is, there is ſin. Verſ. 36. Manſion 33.

And from Kadeſh to Mount Hor,] That is, a Mountain, ſhewing, that when we are overcome by ſin, we ſhould go to the Mountain, Chriſt, that in him we may overcome wherein we have been overcome. Of the myſtery of Aarons dying here, ſee before, Chap. 20. Verſ. 37. Manſion 34.

And from Hor to Zalmona,] That is, a ſhadow, becauſe here and in the next called Punon, they were bitten with ſerpents, and had a brazen ſerpent ſet up, a ſhadow or figure of Chriſt for their cure, ſo Jerom. Hereby was ſet forth Chriſt, under whom we come to be ſhadowed from all heat of temptation. Verſ. 41. Manſ. 35. Origen.

And

them, whereby is ſignified, that they which labour for it, ſhall be fed with the heavenly manna. But thoſe things happened in Sin, Exod. 16. and therefore Origen ſaith better, their coming to Aluſh after Raphaca; for ſo the Greek readeth it, that is, to labour after healing ſhewed that we are to this end healed of our ſinnes, that is, have them forgiven unto us, that we ſhould labour hence forth to walk in the way of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe.

Origen.

Verſ. 14. Manſ. 1. Origen. Ambroſ.

From Aluſh they came to Rephidim.] Rephidim ſignifieth the praiſe of judgement, their coming then from Aluſh ſignifying labour to this place ſhewed, that after labour in the way of righteouſneſſe ſhall come the praiſe of God, as a crown thereof.

Verſ. 15. Manſion 12.

And from Rephidim to Sinai.] Here the law was given, and the ſecrets of Gods will revealed many myſticall ordinances being appointed, to ſhew that he, which hath attained to the praiſe of God ſhall have his ſecrets revealed unto him, and ſee that, which others ſee not.

Verſ. 16 Manſion 13

And they removed from Sinai, and pitched in Kibroth-hattaavah.] That is, the graves of concupiſcence hereby was ſhewed, ſaith Origen, that they who have inwardly received the Lawes of God, and have them written in their hearts, have mortified and buried as in a grave, their fleſhly concupiſcences.

Verſ. 17. Manſion 14.

And from Kibroth-hattaavah to Hazeroth.] This ſhewed, that after the mortification of all fleſhly luſts, ſhall follow perfect bleſſedneſſe, according to the ſignification of the word Aſeroth, and not otherwiſe, for fleſh and bloud ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God.

Verſ. 18. Manſion 15. Origen.

And from Hazeroth to Rithmah.] This ſhewed, that coming to heavenly bleſſedneſſe we ſhall have our viſion of God and of all divine things perfected, as the word Rithma ſingifyeth viſion perfected.

Verſ. 19 Manſion 16.

From Rithma to Rimmon parez.] Hereby was ſhewed, that they who have their eyes opened, ſee ſpirituall and heavenly things ſo excellent, that they make an high diviſion of them from earthly, as the word Kimmonpaſez, ſignifieth an high diviſion.

Verſ. 20. Manſion 17.

And from Rimmon parez, to Libnah.] This ſhewed, that they who are ſo lifted up to heavenly things are made white as ſnow, the blemiſhes of their ſinnes being done away, or that they, who take the right way to heaven, doe waſh them and make them clean, that their ſinnes as red as ſcarlet may be done away, and they may be white as wooll or ſnow, as Eſay, 1. 16, 17, 18. as the word Libnah, ſignifying whiting or whited implyeth.

Verſ. 21. Manſion 18.

From Libnah, they came to Riſſah.] Riſſah is by Origen rendred laudable tentation, by Jerome a bridle, and their coming hither was ſhewed, that the ſoul being purged from ſinne is to be preſerved by tentation, being otherwiſe ready to be corrupted again, and hereby, as by a bridle it is to be plucked back from ſinne, tentation being as ſalt, wherewith it is ſaid, every ſacrifice is ſalted with ſalt; ſee alſo James 1. 2. and 2 Corinthians, 12.7.

Verſ. 22. Manſion 19.

From Riſſah they came to Kehelathah.] This is expounded dominion or a rod, the ſign thereof, in alluſion to Aarons rod that budded, the ſign of his Authority, hereby was ſhewed, that they, who patiently endure tentations and profit by them, come to have dominion over all evil luſts, and over the world, which is mortified unto them; ſo Ambroſe. Jerom expoundeth it the Church, ſaying, that hereby is ſet forth the returning to the Church being bridled by tentations.

Verſ. 23. Manſion 20. Adricomius.

And from Kehelathah to mount Shapher] This is by Jerom expounded the mountain of beauty, and is ſet forth by Adricomius to be beautiful to the eye, being in the wilderneſſe of Paran, by their coming hither, it being ſhewed, that they, who are brought to the Church are built upon the rock Chriſt, a ſtone cut out of the mountain without hands, and ſo have a Dan. 2. 34.

moſt

moſt beautiful ſcituation. Origen expoundeth it by a trumpet and draweth to the ſpiritual warfare.

From Shapher they came to Haradah.] This is by Jerom expounded a miracle; intimating, that ſuch as are built upon Chriſt attain ſuch happineſſe, as is admirable, which the eye hath not ſeen, nor the ear heard, &c. Verſ. 24. Manſion 21. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

And from Haradah they came to Makheloth.] By Jerom expounded aſſemblies, ſhewing, that the whole aſſembly of the firſt born are joyned together in Chriſt through brotherly love. Verſ. 25. Manſ. 22.

And from Makheloth they came to Tahath] That is, under, ſhewing, that the faithful for all the graces received are not lifted up, but continue humble. Origen, patience, ſhewing, that the ſervant of God muſt be patient ſuffer many things, that he may do good to others. Verſ. 26. Manſ. 23.

And from Tahath they came to Tarah.] That is, a driver away, by which name Abrahams father was called, becauſe he drove crowes and other birds away from the corn; and hereby was ſhewed, that evil ſpirits, which as fowles are ready to eat up the good ſeed of the Word, ſhould be driven away; ſo Jerom. Verſ. 27. Manſ. 24.

And from Tarah they came to Mithcah,] That is, to ſweetneſſe, ſhewing, that evil ſpirits not being ſuffered to eat up the Word, great ſweetneſſe is by and by found therein. Verſ. 28. Manſ. 25.

And from Mithcah to Heſhmonah,] That is, acceleration, or haſt-making, to ſhew, that ſweetneſſe in the Word being found, there is no ſloathfull reſting, but a making haſte to more perfection in grace and knowledge. Verſ. 29. Manſion 26.

And from thence to Moſeroth,] That is, bands with diſcipline, to ſhew, that they who make haſte towards more perfection are held with godly diſcipline, as with bands, that are never broken off again. Verſ. 30. Manſion 27.

And from Moſeroth to Benejaakan,] That is, the children of neceſſity, ſaith Jerom, or percolation, ſaith Origen, to ſhew, that the truly faithful do not ſtrein out one of the leaſt of Gods Commandements, but apply themſelves carefully to keep them all. Verſ. 31. Manſion 28.

And from thence to the Mountain Gadgad.] That is, expedition, or girting to, ſhewing, that in the ſpiritual fight we muſt do, as they that have their ſwords girt to them, killing and cutting off the adverſe powers, that would draw mens ſoules to deſtruction. Verſ. 32. Manſion 29.

And from thence to Jotbathah.] That is, goodneſſe, ſetting forth the reward of thoſe that fight the ſpiritual warfare. Verſ. 33. Manſion 30.

And from thence to Ebronah,] a paſſage, to ſhew, that having come to good, we muſt be paſſing on ſtill, till we come to Canaan it ſelf, the perfection of all good. Verſ. 34. Manſion 31.

And from thence to Eziongaber.] That is, wood carved by man, or as Origen, the counſels of man; ſhewing, that from childiſh thoughts and ſpeeches, we muſt grow to be men in knowledge and underſtanding, and hereby we muſt do all things. Verſ. 35. Manſion 32.

And from thence to the Wilderneſſe of Zin, which is Cadeſh.] Zin ſignifieth a commandment; and Kadeſh, holy, but here per ἀντίφρασιν, ſaith Jerom, it ſignifieth impiety; this ſhewed, that where the commandement is, there is ſin. Verſ. 36. Manſion 33.

And from Kadeſh to Mount Hor,] That is, a Mountain, ſhewing, that when we are overcome by ſin, we ſhould go to the Mountain, Chriſt, that in him we may overcome wherein we have been overcome. Of the myſtery of Aarons dying here, ſee before, Chap. 20. Verſ. 37. Manſion 34.

And from Hor to Zalmona,] That is, a ſhadow, becauſe here and in the next called Punon, they were bitten with ſerpents, and had a brazen ſerpent ſet up, a ſhadow or figure of Chriſt for their cure, ſo Jerom. Hereby was ſet forth Chriſt, under whom we come to be ſhadowed from all heat of temptation. Verſ. 41. Manſ. 35. Origen.

And

Verſ. 42. Manſion 36. And from Zalmona to Punon] That is, a diminutive mouth, ſhewing, that ſuch as are come under the ſhadow of Chriſt, ſpeak ſparingly and warily of the deep myſteries of Divinity.

Verſ. 43. Manſ. 37. And from Punon to Oboth.] That is, Pythones, ſuch as have a ſpirit of divination, ſhewing, that after an eſtate in Chriſt attained, we ſhall be aſſaulted by the charmes and witcheries of Satan.

Verſ. 44. Manſ. 38. And from Oboth to Jieabbarim in the border of Moab.] Jieabbarim ſignifieth an heap of ſtones of thoſe that paſſe on; and hereby was ſhewed, that the faithful are as ſtones founded upon the chief corner ſtone Chriſt, ſo that they cannot be moved, but notwithſtanding the charms of Satan, go on from grace to grace.

Verſ. 45. Manſ. 39. And from Jim to Dibongad,] That is, ſaith Origen, a bee-hive of tentation, to ſhew, that even when we come near our journeyes end in the way to heaven, and have profited moſt, yet tentations await us.

Verſ. 46. Manſ. 49. From thence they came to Almon Diblathaim,] That is, the contempt of figs, that is, of the ſweet and alluring things of this world, as they muſt proceed, that will have the pleaſures of a better world.

Verſ. 47. Manſ. 41. From thence to the Mountains of Abbarim before Nebo.] That is, to the Mountains of paſſengers before Nebo, that is, ſhutting up, for here Moſes dyed, and the lawes being concluded from having any power, was ſignified, ſuch as paſſe on then in the contempt of this worlds pleaſures ſhall pitch upon Gods holy mountain, and no more be under condemnation by the Law.

Verſ. 48. Manſ. 42. From the Mountain of Abbarim to the plains of Moab by Jordan near Iericо.] This ſhewed, that this is the end of all our proceedings, that we may be refreſhed with the waters of Gods river, and ſo be counted worthy to enter into the promiſed land, but becauſe they pitched here unto Abel-Shittim, that is, the mourning of thornes, it is intimated, that we muſt ſtill to the end mourn for our ſins.

Thus I have run through the allegories of Origen, Ambroſe, and Jerome, and others made upon theſe Manſions, but although I acknowledge great myſteries to lye hid herein, yet many denominations here occurring being but according to the phantaſies of the Writers, I cannot conclude, that any certainty is herein. Such paſſages, as we may aptly apply ſpiritually, we may make uſe of, and leave the reſt, till it ſhall pleaſe the Father of lights, who cauſed them to be written for our inſtruction, to inlighten us further herein.

Note. Generally we may from theſe journeyings learn firſt, that we muſt look to meet with many troubles in our paſſage towards the Kingdom of heaven, by ſtreights into which we ſhall come, by dangers of enemies, by wants of worldly comforts, of meat and drink, &c. by many temptations, by the tediouſneſſe of the way, ſo in time being through our own default ſet backward, and ſometime made to fetch compaſſes to wonderful wearineſſe, and by many plagues and judgments cauſing many to fall about us. 2. In our troubles and ſtreights God will not leave us, but alwayes extend his mercy, ſuccour and grace unto us to ſupply all our wants, if we put our truſt in him. 3. How much ſoever any people are favoured of God, yet he will not forbear taking revenge upon them, and executing moſt grievous judgments if they provoke him by their ſins, as he ſent plagues, and fires and flying ſerpents amongſt this people. 4. No ſort of men are free from ſin, either people, prieſts, or princes, or propheteſſes, and therefore all ſhould work out their ſalvation with fear and trembling continually.

Ver. 50, 51, 52, 53. A catalogue of their journeyings being thus made, now followeth a charge to drive out the inhabitants of Canaan, and to beat down their pictures, molten images and high places. Of the breaking down of their images, and driving them out, ſee before Exod. 23. 24, 31. and of high places, ces, Lev. 26. 30. and of carved images, Levit. 26. 1. And this charge is repeated, Deut. 7. 1, 2. Deut. 12.

The old inhabitants being driven out, they must divide the land amongst them by the lot, to the more a greater part being given, to the fewer a lesse, Chap. 26. 54. Vers. 54

Those that ye let remain, shall be pricks in your eyes and thornes in your sides, &c.] See the like phrase, Josh. 23. 13. Ezech. 28. 24. The meaning is, that if they laboured not according to their power to drive them all out, as they should subdue them, but consent to make leagues with them, and make interchangeable marriages with them; as the Lord, if the Israelites had followed his directions herein, had fully purposed in time to have brought all the Canaanites into their power, so for neglect hereof he would give the Canaanites power over them, to compasse them with armies, as with an hedge of thornes, and their beautiful women or images, with beholding which they had been taken, should turn to pricks in their eyes alwayes galling and tormenting them, such sharp miseries should afflict them therefore. And this we may see verified in Judges, and Psal. 106. 34, 35. Vers. 55.

And here it would be considered, whether we are not likewise bound under the same pain, to expel all Popish Idolaters from amongst us, seeing by daily wofull experience many to be drawn away by them. Note.

Chap. XXXIV.

HEre the Land of Canaan is described by the four quarters lying South and West, North and East.

The South quarter shall be from the Wilderneſſe of Zin by the coast of Edom, to the utmost coast of the salt Sea Eastward, &c.] In describing Canaan, the parts inherited by the two tribes and an half are left out, because they had their parts assigned them already, as is expressed, vers. 13, 14. whereby it is confirmed further, that Moses had direction from God in setting them out their parts on this side Jordan; but Calvin saith, that these parts were also comprehended within these limits. This description and bounding of the land was made, that the Israelites might see the great bounty of God towards them, in giving them so large a tract of ground in so pleasant and fruitful a place, to be accordingly thankfull, and that they might know, how far to challenge against the incroachments of bordering Nations, and where to stay without seeking to inlarge their Kingdome any further, Ezech. 47. 15. it is begun at the north and ended at the west in describing this land, here at the south, and endeth at the east; but this might be, because their return then to this land should be out of the north from their Babylonish captivity. The Wilderneſſe of Zin lay one hundred and twenty miles from Jerusalem towards the South, the salt Sea, otherwise called Asphaltites, is the dead Sea of Sodom, into which the river Jordan runneth, in the neerest part thereof northward, being within 14 miles of Jerusalem, but in length it is thirty six miles; of the strange nature of this Sea, see Gen. 14. Hitherto the South borders extent eastward. Now for the extent of it westward, it shall turn to the ascent of Akrabbim, and passe on to Zin, and to Kadesh Barnea, and to Hazar-addar, and to Azmon, thence fetching a compasse to the river of Egypt, the going out of it being at the Sea. For the ascent of Akrabbim, the Sept. hath the ascent of Scorpions, according to the signification of the word. But it must needs be the proper name of a place, haply so called from Scorpions that abounded there, because it is a boundary, so Vatablus and Munster. It was an high mountain in the wilderneſſe full of terrible serpents, Deut. 8. 15. Vers. 3. Patriarks travailes. Vers. 4, 5. Vatablus. Munster.

15. of Acrabatane a city it is ſpoken, 1 Machab. 5. 3. which haply had the name from hence, ſo Jerom and Adricomius. Zin the next boundary cannot be the wilderneſſe ſo called, nor Sin, where mount Sinai ſtood, for that was far beyond the bounds of Canaan, as Toſtatus noteth, and is written with ס, this with ץ. But it was a tower called Megdal Senna, the tower of Sin, ſo Jerom, and Adricomius, who calleth it alſo Senna, Sene, Sina, Sin. Cadeſh Barnea was near to Edoms countrey 40 miles from Jeruſalem, of which ſee more chap. 14. For Haſar addar, Joſ. 15. 4. is Hezron, and then Adar, ſpoken of as two places. Of Adar Jerom writeth, as being a city in Arabia. Azmon, by the Sept. rendred Aſemona, is thought by many not to differ from Heſmona in the 26 Manſion. The river of Egypt, this is held by ſome to be Nilus, but becauſe the bounds of this land came not up ſo far, others better, Rinocolura, a river coming from Nilus along by the ſouth coaſt of Canaan. the great ſea, this is ſo called in reſpect of other leſſer ſeas within the land, and it was on the weſt ſide of the ſouth bound, to ſet forth which the ſea is often named in the Scriptures.

Hieron.
Adricom.

Maſius.
Arias Magalian.

Verſ. 6.

Hitherto the ſouth border. The weſt border was the great ſea, this is called commonly the Mediterranean ſea, and lay weſtward from Canaan, Gen. 12. 8. This ſea divideth Aſia from Europe and Africa. This border is no further deſcribed, but left to be underſtood, that it went all along from that place where the River of Egypt runneth into it to mount Hor, the north border next ſpoken of, and Hamath a city, ſince called Epiphania from Antiochus Epiphanes. For the north border is ſet mount Hor, and Hamath, at the entrance thereof, ending at Zedad and Ziphron, the end of it being at Hazar Enan. This was not Hor a mountain of Idumea from Jeruſalem 88 miles, for that lay Southward; but mount Hermon, Joſ. 13. 5. which was near Hamath; and Hamath was a city much ſpoken of as a boundary, from the River of Egypt unto Hamath, ſome hold this to be Antioch. Ziphron is by Jerom called Zephyrium in Cilicia. Hazar Enan was a village in the border of Damaſcus.

Verſ. 7, 8, 9.

Patriarks travailes.

Numb. 13. 21.

The eaſt border was from Hazar Enan to Shepham, and from thence to Riblah on the eaſt of Ain, extending to the ſea Cinnereth, and to Jordan ending at the ſalt ſea. Shepham is by the Hebrews, ſaith Jerom, called Apamia. Riblah was in the tribe of Naphtali in the land of Hamath, of which it is afterwards ſpoken, 2 King. 23. 33. and Chap. 25. 6. & 20. 21. Ain, according to the ſignification, a fountain, is rendred in the vulgar Latine the fountain of Daphnis. The ſea Cinnereth, is otherwiſe called the ſea of Tyberias, and the lake of Geneſareth, having the name Cinnereth from a city near to it, ſo Lyranus, it was in Galilee. Jordan was a famous River ſpringing from two others Jor and Dan about mount Libanus, and running all along on the eaſt of Canaan from the north to the ſouth, through the lake Geneſareth, and finally into the ſalt ſea of Sodom. For the whole length and breadth of this land, it was not ſo large but that many other countries do far exceed it, eſpecially that which the Iſraelites poſſeſſed, when they inlarged their bounds furtheſt, from Dan to Beerſhebah, for this length according to Brocardus and Adricomius was but 64. or 66. miles, and the breadth from the ſea to Jordan, but 16 in ſome places, and in others 18 miles. But the miles by them ſpoken of are three of our miles, becauſe they deſcribe a mile to be as much as one can go in an hour. So that of our miles the length was about 180, and the breadth about 48, which was not above the third part of England; and yet ſet forth as very large, partly for the great fertility thereof throughout, and partly in compariſon of the ſtreight place, wherein they had been cooped up before in Goſhen in the land of Egypt. For that is a large countrey indeed, where no parts are barren, but all both vales and mountains fruitful for the nouriſhment of the Inhabitants. And the ſcituation is to be noted, the great ſea on the weſt, and Jordan and the ſea Cinnereth on the eaſt, and on the ſouth

Verſ. 10, 11, 12.

Lyranus.
Joſ. 19. 35.

Brocardus.
Adricomius.

south and north high mountains, so that it was a most well defenced place, fitly typifying the company of the faithful compassed about with Gods providence; as with high hills and mountains on every side, Psalm 125. 2.

Here is shewed, to whom this whole land is to be divided, viz. to nine tribes and an half, for two tribes and an half had their inheritance already on this side Jordan eastward, wherefore their possession came not within the compasse of this description, the utmost of which eastward is the River Jordan. Ver. 13, 14, 15.

The description of the land being made, the men are now nominated that shall divide the land amongst these nine tribes and an half, viz. Eleazar, and Joshua, and a Prince of each tribe, Caleb of Judah, &c. The names of altogether are ten, besides the two Princes Eleazar and Joshua, for the two tribes, which had their possessions already yield no Prince to be over this businesse. Whereas it is said, that these should divide, the meaning is, that the lots being cast before them, they should consider each tribe with his lot, according to the greatnesse or smalnesse thereof, and proportion them out accordingly, that the smaller might not have more, or the greater lesse, but each tribe should, as hath been before shewed, Chap.26.54. And the parts being fitly proportioned, the prince of each tribe should take possession of the whole for his tribe, and then divide it amongst the several families. Vers. 16, 17, 18.

These Princes were neither the same that are named Chap. 1. nor the Searchers sent out, Chap. 13. nor the sons of them, except Caleb, who only survived, neither are the tribes named according to any former order, but their order is altered, but yet such an order is here followed in setting them down, as doth most aptly agree to their placing in the land of Canaan, as we may see, Josh.15.16,17,18,19. For first Judah had his lot in the south, Ios.15.1. Simeon within Judah, Ios. 19. 1. Benjamin next, Ios.18.11. then Dan, Ios.19.40. then Manasseh and Ephraim, Ios.16. & 17. next Zabulon and Issachar, Ios. 19. 10, 17. Lastly, Asher and Naphtali, Ios.19.24,32. wherein the wonderful providence of God appeared, in that, as it is here ordered, their lots fell out. And it is to be noted, that in placing them thus, respect was had to their brotherhood, Judah and Simeon being placed first abreast, who were the sons of Leah: next Benjamin of Rachel, and Dan of her maid one also by another: thirdly, Manasseh and Ephraim sons of Joseph. Fourthly, Issachar and Zabulon of Leah. Lastly, because there were no more paiers by the same mother, Asher and Naphthali, that came last of the two maids furthest north in Galilee abreast, as every two of the former had been also placed. Ainsworth.

God would have those, that were neareſt one to another by birth, to be placed neareſt together, that they might live together in the more unity and concord, which for brethren to do is a most happy and joyfull thing, Psal. 133. and thus Judah and Simeon are said to have gone out to war together, Judg. 1. 1. Note.

Chap. XXXV.

Verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

After the diviſion of the land appointed amongſt the other tribes, the tribe of Levi is here provided for, which had none inheritance by lot, becauſe the Lord was their inheritance, as hath been ſaid before. The proviſion made for the Levites is of cities to dwell in with their ſuburbs, out of all the 12 tribes, 48 in number, from thoſe tribes that had more cities, more, and from thoſe that had fewer cities, fewer, and of theſe ſixe muſt be cities of refuge, for the man-ſlayer to flie unto. Here becauſe it is ſaid, the tribes ſhould give them cities out of their inheritance to dwell in, and ſuburbs for their cattell: ſome thinke, that the dominion of theſe cities, when they were given to the Levites, ſhould not be in them, but in their former Lords, who ſhould have the benefit of the vineyards, corn-fields, milnes, and ſuch like which were not for the Levites uſe, becauſe touching them onely habitation is expreſſed, and ſuburbs for their cattle, beaſts and goods: And accordingly the Levites come to Eleazar and Joſhuah, deſiring cities to dwell in, &c. and have them ſet out unto them. And they inſtance in Hebron which was given to the Prieſts, and yet Caleb had it, Joſ. 20. 7. But by this inſtance all that hath been hitherto ſaid, falleth to the ground, becauſe it is expreſſed how Hebron was given to Caleb, viz. the villages and fields about it, but the citie and ſuburbs to the Prieſts, and thoſe they poſſeſſed and injoyed to them and theirs, as the other tribes did their lots, otherwiſe they had not been given, but lent unto them, ſee Levit. 25. 33. 34. the houſes of theſe cities and their ſuburbs are the Levites poſſeſſion, and their perpetuall poſſeſſion. And in particular, Barnabas, a Levite had a poſſeſſion which he ſold, and Solomon ſaith to Abiathar the Prieſt, goe to thy own field. They had then theſe cities and ſuburbs for a poſſeſſion, as the other tribes had theirs, as alſo Toſtatus concludeth, although ſometimes he ſpeaketh doubtfully, as inclining to the other opinion. The ſuburbs indeed are ſaid to be for their cattell and their goods, but ſowing of corn or planting of vineyards here is not ſpoken of, to ſhew that ſuch, as ſerve about the altar are not to intangle themſelves with works of husbandry, like other men, but wholly to attend the divine ſervice to which they are appointed. Their diſperſing amongſt the other tribes was to fulfill the propheſie of Jacob, Gen. 49. 7. but yet in great favour, it being turned into a bleſſing both to them who were taken from amongſt their brethren to be the Lords lot, and to greater dignity, and to all the tribes there being placed all over the kingdome amongſt them, tending to the preſerving of religion pure and uncorrupt amongſt them. They were thus placed, ſaith Calvin, that they might the better hold all the people under the yoak of the Law, and that their cities might ſhine as lights to the uttermoſt corners of the land; they were as watch-towers, wherein they might watch and ward to drive away impietie from the bounds of this holy land, and from hence diffuſe heavenly doctrine, and ſpread abroad the ſeed of life, and from hence examples of all holy integrity might be fetcht continually.

Lyranus. Cajetan.

Joſ. 21. 1.

Joſ. 21. 11, 12.

Act. 4 34.

1 King. 2. 26.

Toſtatus.

Calvin. Vt alias tribus retinerent ſub iugo legis. Eorum urbes quaſi lucernæ erant, quæ ad extremos uſq; angulos fulgerent: & quaſi ſpecula in quibus excubias agerent ad impietatem à finibus terræ ſanctæ arcendam.

Moreover it was thus beſt provided for their own good, to place them in cities by themſelves, and not to leave them to the living of dwelling promiſcuouſly amongſt others. For if they had dwelt promiſcuouſly with the reſt they might have been more prone to contract many vices, and to neglect the ſtudy of the Law. But now their very placing by themſelves was a continuall admonition unto them, that they were ſingled out from the people, that they might wholly addict themſelves to God. Their cities were as ſo many academies, wherein they might the better and the more freely exerciſe themſelves in the ſtudy of the Law, and be the better formed to undergoe the office of teaching. They were ſhut in with walls, that that the vulgar corruptions might not ſo eaſily pierce unto them, and that by living together one might ſtimulate another to piety, temperance, and all other good manners.

Thus Calvin; And hereunto it ſeemeth that reſpect was had of old, when the Clergy of this land lived in like manner in diſtinct places, the Clergie of each dioceſſe together with their Biſhop coming thence amongſt the people to preach, and to doe other holy duties, and then returning again to their cells. But now we are ſeated otherwiſe, and ſo are leſſe given to divine ſtudies, and by conſorting more with the vulgar, we come to have vulgar conditions, to intend earthly husbandry more then heavenly, and are infected with their evill manners many of us, intemperance, incontinence, blaſphemy, curioſitie in apparell, and other fowle vices. But let us remember howſoever our placing is, that we are disjoyned, as the Levites were from the vulgar in our education, holy orders, imployment and maintenance, that our Parſonages and other Eccleſiaſticall dignities may ſhine as lights to all the corners of our Pariſhes, and be as watch-towers to drive away vice, for which our examples muſt ſhine, or elſe our preaching will be fruitleſſe and unprofitable. Note.

The ſuburbs are ſaid to be for their cattell, goods and all their beaſts: The Septuagint and vulgar latine have onely their κτήνη καὶ τετράποδα, pecora & iumenta, cattle and fourefooted beaſts. But both in the Hebrew, and Cald. there are 3 words; the firſt ſignifying moſt properly their beaſts; the next, their ſubſtance; that is, their corne, and hay and ſuch like, for which happily they had barns and houſes in the ſuburbs, and the laſt all other living things that they had, as ſmaller cattle and poultry. The Rabbins, becauſe the laſt words ſignifie all living things, infer, that beſides the ſuburbs, they had to every Citie a place alſo given them, wherein to bury their dead, becauſe the ſuburbs were for living things, not to bury the dead in, ſee alſo, Luc. 7.11,12. Verſ. 3. Maimony of releaſe and buriall, ch. 13. ſect. 3.

For the extent of the ſuburbs of each city, they muſt be from the wall 1000 cubits round about, but it is further added, and ye ſhal meaſure from without the Citie on the Eaſt ſide 2000 cubits, and on the Weſt 2000 &c. If theſe ſuburbs muſt reach but 1000 cubits, how is it ſaid, they ſhould meaſure to every quarter 2000. The Rabbin reſolveth it thus, the thouſand were for ſuburbs, and the two thouſand for fields and vineyards. But this is againſt the text concluding, This ſhall be to them the ſuburbs, ſo that they had no fields or vineyards, but ſuburbs onely, as was alſo touched before. Some, ſaith Ainſworth, reſolve it thus, the firſt 1000 cubits may be underſtood of the ſacred meaſure which were twice ſo great as the common cubits. Some following the vulgar Latine, in which the firſt is rendred 1000 paces, the next 2000 cubits; ſay, that a pace is twice ſo much as a cubit, and ſo there is no difference, but the word both firſt and laſt is in Hebrew the ſame, a cubit: and therefore this is of no force, and no better is that of ſacred and common cubits, becauſe there is no reaſon why we ſhould take the ſame word twice uſed in the ſame verſe to ſet forth divers things. There is then another ſolution to be preferred, and that is, that towards every quarter of the world, both Eaſt and Weſt, North and South, two right lines ſhould be drawn from the walls. either of them 1000 cubits, and ſo towards every quarter would be in both theſe lines 2000 cubits, and at the end of each line they ſhould ſet up a mark, the whole number being 8 and by theſe draw a circle round about. Verſ. 4. Verſ. 5. Maimony of Releaſe and Jubilee, c. 13. Ainſworth.

And thus more eaſily all occaſion of controverſie being avoyded, the bounds might be ſet out, whereas if they were left to meaſure in as many parts as they would, it could not ſo readily have been done, and more queſtion might ariſe about it. Some bring other ſolutions, as that the meaſure in the fifth verſe, is not like that verſe foure, from the wall outward, but at the end of the line drawn from the wall Eaſtward, Mariana.

another ſhould run right oppoſite to the city 2000 cubits, and as much weſtward. &c. and ſo the whole ſquare of the ſuburbs ſhould be 8000 cubits: but ſeeing ſome cities were greater, and ſome leſſe, and therefore if they went this way to meaſuring in ſome parts, the direct line from the wall might in ſome places come ſhort, and in ſome over-reach 1000 cubits, this cannot be admitted. Some thinke that the ſemidiameter being 1000 cubits, the diameter ſhould be 2000. Calvin is for the circle of the ſuburbs round about every quarter, of which it is meant ſhould be twice ſo much as the right line drawn from the center, but the line was not drawn from the center, but from the wall of the city.

Rickelius, Cornelius à lapide. Calvin.

Verſ.6. For the cities of refuge, which ſix of theſe 48 ſhould be, in that they were amongſt the Levites, it was hereby ſhewed, that the miniſters of God ſhould be patrons of the miſerable, and without reſpect of perſons judge of every mans caſe that fled thither, that if he were a murtherer, he might be redelivered again to the ſecular power to bear his deſerved puniſhment; if otherwiſe by accident he had killed, he might amongſt them bee protected. Theſe cities of refuge are called cities המקלט, that is, of gathering, in Cald. Shezabuth of deliverance, in the Septuagint, φυγαδευτηριον, to flie unto, the uſe of which is ſet down verſe 1.&c. Philo queſtioning why the Levites Cities muſt be Cities of refuge, anſwereth, becauſe they were profugi as it were, for Gods ſake leaving parents, children, kinsfolk, and worldly alliance, when without reſpect they killed the worſhippers of the golden calf; and becauſe they had the power of abſolving and condemning, this office belonging to the holy miniſtery, and hereunto may be added, that they were moſt expert in the Law, and ſo fitteſt to judge of divers caſes, and theſe cities being appointed in the great mercy of God to ſave innocent bloud from being ſhed, they who were neareſt unto him, were fitteſt inſtruments to be imployed about the ſeeing to the obſervation of his ordinance herein. The Lord promiſed to appoint cities of refuge, Exod. 21.13. and now he taketh order about them, and Deut. 4.43. three of them on this ſide Jordan are nominated by Moſes, and Joſh. 20.7. the other three in the middeſt of Canaan. And theſe three muſt be appointed, out of every third part of the land one, a way being prepared, that the man-ſlayer might readily flie thither, Deuteronomy 13.3. The Rabbins adde, that theſe Cities ſhould be high like watch-towers, that they might be ſeen a farre off, and inſcriptions ſhould be made upon the way to direct him, that fled where two wayes met, and this was Refuge, Refuge. And for the preparing of the way, they ſay that it muſt be 32 cubits broad, and the Magiſtrates muſt once a yeare ſend to prepare the way by evening hills and dales, and making bridges over rivers. Of theſe Cities of refuge it is further added, Deut. 19.8. that as their bounds ſhould be inlarged, they ſhould appoint 3 more.

Philo lib. de profugis.

Verſ. 8. For the injunction, that every Tribe ſhould give cities, according to his inheritance, the Tribe, that had many cities more, and the Tribe that had fewer, fewer, we may ſee how reſpect was had to this, Joſ. 21.9. &c. that is, not going preciſely by the number of cities in each Tribe, but by the quantity of ground poſſeſſed by them. For Judah and Simeon together had one hundred and twenty Cities, and yet gave but nine to the Levites, Joſhua 21.16. Naphtalim, which had but nineteen, gave three, which was much more then by their proportion. Iſſachar had but ſixteen, and Aſher two and thirty, Zabulon onely twelve Cities, yet gave either of them four Cities to the Levites. But it may be that reſpect was alſo had to the greatneſſe or ſmalneſſe of the Cities given, greater, although no more, being given by the Tribes, that abounded more, and leſſer by thoſe that had fewer. And all theſe Cities were divided to the Prieſts, and 3 families of Levites by lot, Joſ. 21.9.

Joſ. 15.

Verſ. 10. When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan, ye ſhall appoint you Cities

Cities of Refuge, that the ſlayer, that killeth any perſon unawares, may flee thither, &c. that the manſlayer dye not before he ſtand before the congregation.] Of theſe Cities being ſix; three muſt be on this ſide Jordan, and three in the land of Canaan both for an Iſraelite and a ſtranger, and ſojourner amongſt them to flee unto. Amongſt the Hebrews the neareſt of kin to him that was ſlain ought to ſlay the murtherer, as we may ſee verſ. 19. and Deut. 19. 12. if any man then were ſlain amongſt them, his kinſman was ready preſently to ſeek the killer to ſlay him; wherefore that ſuch as killed any unawares, and ſo not being worthy to dye for it, might not thus be be cut off, the Cities of Refuge were appointed forthwith to flee unto, within the walls of which, and not in the ſuburbs he might be ſafe, till his caſe were judged, and thenceforth if he were found not guilty of murther, but if otherwiſe, he was to be delivered to the kinſman, the avenger of blood, that he might ſlay him, verſ. 19. and in caſe he had no kinſman, that were able to do it, ſaith Maimony, the judges cauſed him to be put to death by the ſword. Theſe words, from the avenger, are in Hebrew מצאל from the kinſman who is the avenger, the ſame word is rendred a redeemer, Levit. 25. 25. and a kinſman, Ruth 2. 20. and Chap. 3. 9. For his ſtanding before the Congregation] the order was this, he that had accidentally killed another man, fled immediately to one of the cities of refuge, where in the ears of the Elders of that City, he told his caſe, and ſo was received in, when the avenger of blood came thither in the purſuit of him, if thoſe Elders judged him a murtherer or not, they ſent him to the City where he had done the murther, and there by the Elders in the name of the whole Congregation he had his Judgement, and ſo might be cut off, but not otherwiſe, Joſ. 20. 3, 4, 5, 6. for the not guilty lived in a kind of exile in the City, to which he fled, till the death of the High Prieſt, Verſ. 25. being ſent back thither again after his trial. Whereas this proviſion is made not onely for the Iſraelite, but alſo for the ſtranger and ſojourner amongſt them, ſome will have all one meant by both theſe two words, viz. any of the Heathen coming and going, or dwelling amongſt them, and imbracing the true Religion, which ſort of Heathen were called Proſelytes. But others better, becauſe God would have no innocent blood, no not of the Idolatrous Ethnicks ſhed, except Canaanites, by the firſt word underſtand Proſelytes, and by the other the Heathen unconverted for even to the worſt Humanity was by Gods people to be ſhewed, that they might the rather be won to the truth. But if an Heathen killed an Heathen, ſaith Maimony, no City of Refuge might receive him, but of this I can ſee no reaſon, if the ſlaughter were made in the land of Iſrael. Touching this fleeing to one of theſe Cities, and abiding there, Calvin thinketh, that this means of eſcaping danger was deviſed in favour to the kindred of the ſlain, that they might not be vexed by ſeeing him that had ſhed their kinſmans blood to be exaſperated againſt him.

For the diſtinction of the Cities of Refuge, three on this ſide Jordan and three in Canaan, as many out of two Tribes and an halfe, as out of nine and an half, Philo giveth this reaſon, becauſe the Countrey on this ſide Jordan exceeded, and was further from our kindred, but thoſe on the other ſide were nearer to it, which is ſubject to ſin; what he meaneth hereby I cannot tell, but this ſeemeth to be the beſt reaſon, becauſe on this ſide Jordan the bounds were very great, and ſome think that blood was oftner ſhed. Arias and Magalianus will have the priviledge extended to all the forty eight Cities, but in ſix of them onely caſes were to be tryed, but this is a fond aſſertion, and againſt the Text. That is more probable of the Tabernacle and the Altar, whereſoever it were, the fleer hereunto was in a Sanctuary. But of this ſee, Exod. 21. 13. and many things more touching ſuch priviledged places.

Here is ſhewed, who is not to be judged to have killed his neighbour unawares

Verſ. 12, 13, 14, 15.

Maimony of murther, cap. 1

Toſtatus. Hebræi.

Maſius.

Maimony.

Calvin.

Philo.

Arias. Magalian.

Verſ. 16, 17.

unawares, viz. 1. He that ſmiteth with any inſtrument of iron, be it ſmal or great, or with ſuch a ſtone or woodden inſtrument, as wherewith he may be wounded and dye, for in any of theſe caſes, although the ſmiter had no intent to kill, if he willingly ſmiteth, and death followeth, he is a murtherer, but if the ſtone be very little, or the wood, viz. a ſmall wand, which no man would think dangerous to kill, it is man ſlaughter, and for ſuch Verſ.20,21. were theſe Cities of Refuge. 2. He that any other way killeth a man willingly, although the inſtrument be unapt to kill, or he doth it without an inſtrument, with his hand onely, he is a murtherer; for a man may thruſt and throw another to the ground and ſo kill him, or by throwing a ſmall ſtone, or beating him with his fiſt, therefore herein it is to be judged Maimony. by the hatred of the killer: and Maimony ſaith, if he would not ſpeak to him in three daies before, he is judged to have hated him, but this rule alone is not ſufficient, becauſe as Cain to Abel, ſome will ſpeak to thoſe that they hate when they are ready to cut their throats, as Joab to Abner. There are therefore three things put here. 1. If he hated him. 2. If he laid wait for him. 3. If out of enmity he thruſt, threw at him, or ſmote him: for if in enmity, to which he is ſuddenly ſtirred up, he ſeeketh to hurt him, and he dyeth, he is a murtherer, Verſ. 23. but if there were no hatred, or enmity, or lying in wait to kill, but he killeth by a ſudden thruſt, haply into the water, or fire, or in parting thoſe that fight with a drawn weapon, or in exerciſing himſelf, one coming ſuddenly upon his weapon, or by caſting a ſtone at ſome bird or beaſt, or ſomething elſe, or ſhooting an arrow likewiſe, not ſeeing any man in the way, &c. this is man-ſlaughter, and a City of Refuge was given for it. See alſo Deut.19. 4,5,6. where it is further expreſſed, if one killeth a man ignorantly and hated him not in times paſt, heri & nudius tertius, that is, ſome ſhort time before, as is not the caſe of thoſe, that quarrel, and upon quarrelling ſtrike and kill, for here enmity goeth at the leaſt a little time before the blow, and therefore it is murther. Touching the inſtrument, by which in the Maimony of Murther, Ch. 3. Sect. 1. firſt caſe it is to be judged, Maimony ſaith, that they conſidered the thing wherewith he ſmote, the place where, and the ſtrength of the ſmiter, and the ſtrength of the ſmitten. If it were a ſharp iron inſtrument, as a bodkin, or but a needle, it is murther, ſo likewiſe if the ſtone or woodden inſtrument, were great enough to kill ſuch an one, which is meant by the ſtone of his hand, or the wood of his hand, as it is in Hebrew, that is killing his hand, or if he ſtruck him without any inſtrument, if the ſtrength of the ſmiter were ſo great, and the ſtrength of the ſmitten ſo ſmall, that he might hereby be killed in common judgment, it was murther, and for the death to which the murtherer was to be put, ſee before, Exod. 21. 12. the revenger of blood ſhall ſlay the murtherer when he meeteth him, ſo Verſe 19. alſo. The meaning is not, that he ſhould do it raſhly of his own head, but being firſt examined and judged and delivered unto him by the Judges. Of the Expoſition made hereupon by Calvin, ſee before upon Exod. 21.13.

Verſ. 25. And he ſhall abide in it, until the death of the High Prieſt, that was anointed with holy oyl.] Here a caſe is put by Toſtatus, if he that killeth another Toſtatus. accidentally be fled into a City of Refuge, and before his tryal the High Prieſt dyeth, he muſt then abide there till the death of the High Prieſt ſucceeding him, and if he killeth the High Prieſt himſelf, he muſt likewiſe abide, till the death of his ſucceſſour. And he that by chance killeth any in a City of Refuge muſt not flee to that, but to another, becauſe ſo he ſhould be in the ſight of the kinsfolk of the ſlain to grieve and provoke them, which is againſt the ſcope of this law. But why the High Prieſts death ſhould be the limit of his abiding here, ſeeing it is ſometime ſooner and ſometime later, and ſome going by this rule muſt abide much longer, and
R. Solomon. ſome a far ſhorter time; there are divers conjectures. R. Solomon ſaith, becauſe becauſe it was the office of the High Prieſt to intercede for ſinners, and he did after a ſort bear the ſins of the people, therefore by his death ſatisfaction being, as is were made for the man-ſlayer, he muſt not go any longer in danger of death, but freely return to own his place. Rabbi Iſaack ſaith, he that fled, ſerved the high Prieſt in the time of his baniſhment, for all the Cities of Refuge were under him, and therefore having ſerved till the death of one, he muſt not be compelled to ſerve under another alſo, this being too great a puniſhment. R. Moſes ſaith, becauſe the High Prieſt being dead, it was a time of mourning to all the congregation, and therefore if any man was grieved for his kinſman ſlain, he ſhould now ceaſe, and think no more of it, to take any revenge, that hemight attend to mourning for the common loſſe in the High Prieſt.

R. Iſaack.

R. Moſes.

Oleaſter, becauſe the High Prieſt repreſented God, to ſhew how hateful unto him is the ſhedding of innocent blood, he kept the manſlayer, as it were in ward, as long as he lived. Others ſay, that the High Prieſt the common father of the Countrey being dead, all wrath conceived ſhall alſo dye, and all offences be buried with him, the ending of his life being as the ending of that world, and from thence a new beginning. Some other frivolous reaſons are yielded by other Rabbins; but I reſt in theſe for the literal reaſon, and ſpecially in that of the High Prieſts keeping him in ward, as it were, as long as he lived, to ſhew the odiouſneſſe of bloodſhed before his God. Leo the great, telleth of the moſt godly Emperours, that they likewiſe upon the day of the death of our Saviour Chriſt, remitted of the ſeverity of their lawes, and let thoſe that had offended in ſmaller matters, to go free, that they might feel the comfort of their mercy upon the day, that God ſhewed his greateſt mercy to ſinful man. The myſticall reaſon was to ſhew, that none are freed from their leaſt ſins unwillingly committed, but by the death of our High Prieſt Chriſt Jeſus, but are held even hereby, and cannot come to any poſſeſſion in the heavenly Canaan, till that by this they are ſet free, as he that ſhed blood was baniſhed, and could not be releaſed till the High Prieſts death, although he ſhed it ignorantly, without any enmity, with the caſting of a ſtone, or ſtriking off his hand, in jeſting, and ſporting, through infelicity more then ill will, as Jerom ſpeaketh Gregory ſaith, what is prefigured in that he which fled might not return, till the death of the High Prieſt, but that mankind becoming guilty of death by ſin, is looſened after the death of the true High Prieſt, Chriſt Jeſus, from the bands of their ſins, and repaired in the poſſeſſion of Paradiſe? Cyril Alex. that the ſoul being departed out of the body is puniſhed by baniſhment in ſecret or low places, as in a City of Refuge, until that it be ſet at liberty by Chriſt deſcending to hell, opening the gates, and looſing the bands, and ſaying go out, and be revealed. And Origen applyeth it to the abiding of thoſe, that ſin ignorantly a certain time after this life, as it were in baniſhment. But hereby and by that of Cyril, the opinion of a Limbus, to which the ſouls of the faithful dying went and remained there, till Chriſt coming after his death, ſet them free, ſeemeth to be favoured, touching which becauſe nothing is ſaid in the holy Scriptures, I leave it as a fond conjecture, adhering to that of Gregory followed by Rabanus, and others, as Ambroſe, who ſaith, that the fleeing to theſe Cities figured out the fleeing to that ſoul, wherein the word dwelleth, that is the Prince of Prieſts, Chriſt Jeſus, by whoſe death we are delivered from all fear of death, ſeeing he is the Lamb of God that taketh away the ſins of the world, being propounded of God a propitiator, a Prieſt for ever, juſt, holy, innocent, unpolluted, and ſeparated from ſinners. Iſidorus ſaith, hereby was ſignified, that if by the death of the High Prieſt involuntary ſins of ignorance were remitted, much more by the voluntary death of that High Prieſt even voluntary ſins are remitted to the faithful, and they are reſtored to Jeruſalem above, which is free, ſeeing his death

Oleaſter.

Leo Magnus Ser. 2. de quadrageſ.

The myſtery.

Hieron. contra Pelag. lib. 1. Gregor. magn. Hom. 6 in Ezek.

Cyril Alex. in Collectan. c. 15. ex Deut.

Origen.

Ambroſ. de fuga ſæculi. c. 3. Joh. 1. 27. Heb. 7. 26.

Iſidor. Peluſiota lib. 3. Epiſt. 108.

is again extinguisht by his resurrection. Now for the Cities of refuge appointing, and not immediately acquitting the guiltlesse man-slayer, but injoyning him a kind of penance, that was partly to avoid further strife betwixt him and the kinsman of the slain, and so more bloud shed, that might have ensued; so obstinate and stubborn were the Jewes, partly that they might not be grieved by his presence, whom they therefore hated, and partly to shew the odiousnesse of bloud shed, although unwittingly, that all men might the more take heed of it.

The Mystery of this was to shew, that so soon as a man is overtaken by any sin, he should by true faith and repentance flee to Christ to avoid the danger; he that fleeth not thus is in continual danger of being destroyed: and who fleeth thus to Christ, but he that cometh to the Levites cities? that is, cleaveth for time to come to the Ministers of Gods Word, dwelling as it were, by diligence in frequenting their holy exercises amongst them, that he may be more sanctified and inlightened in the knowledge of the truth. But why are three on this side Jordan appointed, and three in Canaan? To this the Ordinary Glosse saith, that by the first three the remedies against sin before baptisme are set forth, viz. the faith of parents, their offering the child to God, and circumcision; by the other three, the remedies after baptisme, fasting, prayer and almes. Rabanus, going by their names, saith, that Bosor signifieth streights, which is the first city on this side Jordan, shewing, that he who hath sinned, must seek to escape by being streightned and afflicted in conscience therefore: the second City, Ramoth, an high death, shewed the mortification of sin: the third City, Gaulon, volutation, or tumbling, shewed, lying down in sackcloth and ashes. Then follow three in Canaan, 1. Kadesh, signifying holy, and so shewing an holy and new life. 2. Hebron, signifying conjunction, and shewing the joyning of the soul unto the Spirit of God, from which she was by sin separated. 3. Sichem, a shoulder, shewing the carrying of a sheep, that had erred, but now returned by repentance upon Christs shoulder amongst the 99 again. Others make other allegories upon these names, which I spare to set down.

Glos. Ordin. in Jos. 10.

Rabanus.

Vers. 26. But if the slayer come at any time out of the border of the city, &c.] Maimony saith, that if he came out to go up to Jerusalem at any of the feastival times, or to be witnesse in matter of life and death, he should be in danger of being slain by the avenger of blood, so strict was the charge of his keeping within this city, that not only he might not come out upon other occasions of his own, which were more sleighty, but not for these being most weighty.

Maimony of Murther, c. 7.

Vers. 27. In speaking of the avenger of bloud, finding him he saith, if he shall find him out of the border of the city] Maimony seemeth by the border, to understand the limits; but Tostatus better, all those parts within the walls only, because it is said, he should have remained within the city, so that the suburbs are not meant by the limits, but the walls. After the high priests death he might return to his possession, but never to his high state and dignity again, saith Maimony, because of the great scandal that came by his hand. But some thing he hath superstitious, a man-slayer adjudged to exile, if he dyeth, before he come at the city, they carry his bones thither to be buried; and if he dye there and be buried, after the high priests death, they take up his bones again, and carry them to the sepulchres of his fathers. Much like to this law of refuge, Philostratus relateth one amongst the Egyptians. It was the law, saith he, of the Memphites, that he who had killed another unwittingly, should flee to the Gymnosophists, and being by them absolved, he might return home again, if he had first offered some small gift at the tomb of the slain, but not otherwise.

Tostatus.

Vers. 28.

Maimony of murther, c. 3.

Philostrat. de vita Apoll. c. 3.

The Mystery.

This case of being in danger of killing, if he were found out of this city, saith Rabanus, shewed, that such as have fled to Christ by repentance and faith, faith, ought to continue to the end in the true faith, hoping for ſalvation only by the merits of Chriſts death, and in penitency; but if he doth not, and the great Judge of all, that is, Chriſt, who is the kinſman for our fleſh taken, take him and cut him off, he ſhall be juſtified in his proceedings againſt him. Thus then they hazzard their ſoules, that after repentance fall to licentiouſnes again, as the dog returning to his vomit: but ſuch as fleeing by repentance continue penitent and faithful to the end, are acquitted from all their ſins, and by the death of Chriſt come to an heavenly poſſeſſion, from which for ſin they had been baniſhed, although involuntary. 2 Pet. 2 20.

Rabanus.

Whoſo killeth any perſon ſhall be put to death by the mouth of two witneſſes being a murtherer, but one witneſſe ſhall not cauſe him to dye.] Who is a murtherer, that muſt dye for it, was ſhewed before, Verſ. 16, 17, 18. & Exod. 21.14. but becauſe it was not ſhewed what witneſſes muſt come againſt him, the ſame law is here repeated, and this is added, and the witneſſes muſt be two or three, Deut.17.6. & 19.15. and that not only in the caſe of murther, but in every other caſe. And accordingly Timothy is forbidden to condemn an elder, but only by the teſtimony of two or three witneſſes; and of this it is ſpoken, Matth.18.18. In the civil law ſeven witneſſes at the leaſt are required againſt any Clergy man, 27 againſt a Cardinal, a deacon, 44 againſt a Cardinal, a prieſt, 72 againſt a Cardinal, a biſhop; the reaſon whereof, ſaith Tho. Aquin. is, becauſe theſe men are much envied for their reproving and puniſhing of ſin. But the Apoſtle thought, not ſuch a number of witneſſes requiſite, but ſufficient witneſſe onely to prove the accuſation true. And ſometime a man may be condemned without witneſſe upon his own confeſſion, or upon the teſtimony of one, other things concurring to teſtifie againſt him alſo. But generally one witneſſe is judged inſufficient, becauſe one may be carried with envy, as two are not ſo commonly, and if they be, they may, being ſeparated and ſo examined, be found out by their differing tales. Verſ. 30. 1 Tim. 5.19. Tho. Aquin. 2. 2. qu. 70. artic. 2.

Ye ſhall take no ſatisfaction for the life of a murtherer which is guilty of death, Hebr. Wicked to dye. the Sept. Condemned to dye. This is ſpoken to Judges, who muſt not be ſwayed by bribes to ſave the life of any murtherer, or to defer his execution; no though he would give all the goods of the world, as the Rabbins ſay, and the avenger of bloud be content to let him eſcape, becauſe the ſoul of man ſlain is not his poſſeſſion, but the poſſeſſion of the moſt holy bleſſed God. And as death may not be bought off from a murtherer, ſo may not baniſhment from an involuntary ſhedder of bloud. Verſ. 31. Maimony of murther, ch. 1. Sect. 4.

So ye ſhall not pollute the Land wherein ye are, for bloud defileth the land, &c.] Theſe words have reference to verſ. 31. and it is meant, that not only he, who murthereth is polluted, but alſo the whole land by the blood thus ſhed, neither can this pollution be expiated, as other pollutions by any ſacrifice, but of the murtherer, the like foul pollution to which is noted by the Rabbins not to have been imputed to any other ſin, except ſpiritual whoredome of idolatry, Jer.3.2,9. and idolatrous bloudſhed, Pſal. 106. 38. whereby the abomination of the ſin of murther appeareth. Bloodſhed againſt the will is not of this polluting nature; yet he that killeth thus muſt keep in his city of refuge, and not return for any bribe, but being ſet at liberty by the high Prieſts death, that all might account the life of man a precious thing, and take better heed, how they ſhed the bloud of one another; and for the myſtery, that was herein, of which enough before: of Gods dwelling amongſt them, ſee before, Chap.5.3. Verſ. 32. Verſ. 33. Verſ. 34.

CHAP.

Chap. XXXVI.

HEre is nothing elſe, but a confirming of the inheritance of each tribe unto it, that in no part it might paſſe to another in caſe of daughters inheriting and marrying, for ſuch muſt marry onely within their own tribe; and this determination is made upon occaſion of the daughters of Zelophehad, of whom ſee before, Chap.27. Some it ſeemeth, out of a deſire to get their inheritance, would have married them, which were of another tribe; wherefore Machirs ſons ſtand up and plead againſt it before Moſes, and not only for them but for all other daughters having inheritances a law is made, that they ſhould alwayes marry within their own tribe, and conſequently all women, becauſe although they had a brother at the time of marriage, yet he might dye, and ſo the inheritance fall to them. And upon this is the reaſon grounded why Mary muſt needs be of the tribe of Judah and of the houſe of David, becauſe Joſeph her husband was: for not men of the ſame tribe onely be here ſpoken of, but of the ſame family. And for this is Origen, Severus, Theodoret, Procopius, Iſidor, Chryſoſt. Theoph. Enthymius, Hilar. Hieronym. &c. onely they except, that the tribe of Levi was free to marry into any other tribe, becauſe Levi had none inheritance, and by this allowance it fell out, that Chriſt came of Mary of the tribe of Judah, and ſo of Kings, and yet of Levi and ſo of Prieſts alſo, ſeeing ſhe was akin to Elizabeth, Zachariah his wife, and thus the birth of Chriſt ſuited with him being both King and Prieſt. But others hold, that only daughters having poſſeſſions are here prohibited to marry out of their own tribe, and David of the tribe of Judah married Michal Sauls daughter of Benjamin, and when the women of Benjamin were all cut off, the other tribes vow not to give of their daughters to them to wife, intimating, that they might have done it notwithſtanding any law made to the contrary, ſo Hugo, Burgenſis, Oleaſter, Vatablus, Maſius, Cajetan, &c. But it is eaſily anſwered, the caſe of David in this was extraordinary, he had Michal for a reward of his valour, and neceſſity requiring, that the Benjamites wanting women, ſhould be ſupplyed otherwiſe, gave occaſion to that vow, which if it had not been made, this law for that time might have been diſpenſed withal.

Verſ. 8.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

Myſtically, ſaith Rabanus, the care here ſhewed, that no inheritance might paſſe to another tribe by the marriage of a daughter, did ſet forth the care that every one ought to have, that the heavenly inheritance may not paſſe from him by his hearts being wedded to worldly things, when he doth gaod works, which ſhall be rewarded in Heaven.

A COMMENTARY UPON THE BOOK OF Deuteronomy.

CHAP. I.

THis book, as the other foure before going, hath the name in Hebrew from the first words, Elleh hadebarim, in Greek being called Deuteronomy, or a second repetition of the Law; the Rabbins call it Sephertochechoth, the book of rebukes, because in the Targum Hierosolym: the first words are thus explained. These be the words which Moses spake to all Israel, he rebuked them for that they had sinned on this side Jordan. It containeth, as Ferus noteth, Moses his sayings to all Israel, being now ready to depart out of this world, being left by him, as his last will and testament, he being herein an example to us, to have a care of the good of the Church of God, not onely whilest we live, but after our death. Herein first he reciteth Gods benefits towards them. 2. The sinnes of the people, and the punishments following hereupon. 3. By all sorts of arguments he seeketh to stir up in them a care to keep the Law. 4. That no man might excuse himselfe saying, I know not the Law, he repeateth and explaineth it. 5. He denounceth judgements against transgressours and promiseth blessings to all, that keep the Law. 6. He maketh an holy hymne for them. 7. He blesseth every tribe, and then goeth up to the mount Nebo and dieth.

Targ. Hierosol

Ferus.

Vers. 1.

These be the words which Moses spake to all Israel on this side Iordan in the wilderneſſe, in the plain over against the red sea, between Paran and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab. The place where Moses uttered these words is most accurately here described, the plaine, in which was the plain of Moab, see verse 5. and chapter 34. 1. For here the children of Israel were, and abode till the death of Moses, Numb. 22. 1. Over against the red sea, Hebr. over against Suph, that is, a flaggy place of Jordan; for Suph signifieth a flagge, as Ainsworth saith, some expound it, but the Septuagint and Cald. both render it the red sea; but happily Suph was the name name of ſome place not farre off, ſee before, Numb. 21. 14. Touching the other places, whereby this is deſcribed, viz. Paran, Tophel, Laban, &c Junius ſaith, that Jordan was on the Weſt, Paran on the South, Tophel and Laban on the North, and Hazeroth and Dizahab on the Eaſt. Paran was a wilderneſſe on the South of the plains of Moab, Tophel on the North, being the bound of Syria Cæles, where the citie Pella ſtood; Laban was the town by Geographers called Lybias, Hazeroth, Gazorus, Dizahab an inferiour tract belonging to Arabia Petræa. The vulgar latine, for Dizahab, hath ubi auri eſt plurimum, the Sept. by the gold-mines, according to the ſignification of the word Zahab gold.

Ainsworth.

Junius.

Verſ. 2. Eleven dayes iourney from Horeb by the way of mount Seir to Kadeſh Barnea.] That is, this place was but eleven dayes journey going about by Mount Seir from Horeb, where the Law was given, and yet as followeth, v. 3. they were in coming thither to the 40 year; ſo Junius, for the firſt moneth of this yeare they came to Kadeſh, Numb. 20. and the 11 moneth of this yeare having paſſed on hither Moſes ſpake theſe words to them. Some thinke that all this was ſpoken in eleven dayes, and then Moſes died, but no ſuch thing can be gathered hence, onely by computing the times it is certaine, that he could not ſpend many dayes in ſpeaking, becauſe Joſh. 5. a paſſeover was kept by Joſhua the fourteenth day of the firſt moneth, and after the death of Moſes they mourned for him thirty dayes, Deuteronomy 34. 8. Then the Lord incourageth Joſhua, and hee ſpeaketh to the Reubenites and Gadites, &c. Joſh. 1. paſſeth over Jordan, ſendeth ſpies to ſearch Jericho, and circumciſeth all the people, all which could not but take up almoſt thirtie dayes more. Rabanus will not have this accurate deſcription of the place and time of Moſes his ſpeaking to be without a myſtery: For Moſes, ſaith he, ſetteth forth the Law on this ſide Jordan; that is, before baptizing into Chriſts name, and the Law ſpake in the wilderneſſe to ſhew the barrenneſſe of that carnall people, who brought forth no ſpirituall fruit of virtues, when they were inſtructed in the Law. And this was between Paran ſignifying increaſing, becauſe the people increaſed greatly; and Tophel ſignifying unſavoury, becauſe they loved not the ſalt of ſpirituall wiſedome, and Laban, white, becauſe they were waſhed white with divers waſhings and ceremonies, and Aſeroth, courts, or entries, becauſe by the Law they were prepared to the entrance of faith, learning many things touching Chriſt thereby, and it is ſaid, Where is much gold, to ſhew the treaſures of divine wiſedome lying hid in the Law. And theſe words were in ſpeaking eleven dayes from Horeb through mount Seir, ſignifying hairy and ſordid, to Kadeſh Barnea, ſignifying the changed, elect and noble, to ſhew that the Law given in Horeb ſhould firſt come to a baſe people, the Iews, and then be changed into a noble ſpirituall obſervation under the Goſpel, &c.

Rabanus.

The Myſtery.

Verſ. 4. After he had ſlaine Sihon, King of the Amorites, &c.] The Hiſtory of this ſee before, Numbers 21. The deſtruction of theſe enemies is ſpecially commemorated, becauſe they were in the way to Canaan, and had come out againſt the people of Iſrael to ſtoppe their paſſage into that land, whereupon they were the more obliged to the Lord, and might the better be moved to dutifull obedience, and be confirmed in a more aſſured hope to prevaill afterwards. Of the myſtery of theſe two Kings ſee before, Numb 21.

Verſ. 6. The Lord our God ſpake to us in Horeb, ſaying, yee have dwelt long enough in this Mount, &c.] Here Moſes beginneth to reckon up Gods benefits towards them and their ſinnes againſt him. The remove from Horeb. here ſpoken of is ſet forth, Numbers 10. 11. the twentieth day of the ſecond moneth after their comming out of Egypt, but the Words of God then uſed, were left to be recited here, it being one-

ly

ly ſaid there, that the Cloud was taken up, and the children of Iſrael iourneyed.

Turn to the Mount of the Amorites, &c.] This alſo was paſſed over in ſilence before, yea, and when they came nigh the Ammorites land, Moſes ſent to deſire leave to paſſe through it, and fought not againſt them, till this was denied, and their King came forth to battel againſt him, Numbers 21. 21. but how this may be reconciled, I have already ſhewed upon that place. Verſ. 7.

And I ſpake unto you at that time ſaying, I am not able to beare you my ſelfe alone, &c.] Here ſeemeth to be a commemoration of under rulers appointed to judge the people by the counſell of Jethro, the father in law of Moſes, Exodus 18. which becauſe it was done, before they came at the mount Horeb; and here Moſes ſaith, at that time as having reference to the time, when God bad them depart from Horeb: A queſtion ariſeth, how theſe two may be reconciled? I doe not finde this touched by any, but Rabanus, Calvin, and others agree, that the conſtituting of Rulers, Exodus 18. is here pointed at, but they ſay nothing of this difference: But Rabanus reſolveth it well, by theſe words, at that time the whole tract of time from their going out of Egypt, till their departure from the mount, and murmuring upon the return of the ſearchers, is to be underſtood: For there were two parts of the whole time from their comming out of Egypt, till their entering upon the poſſeſſion of Canaan, the firſt of their bringing to mount Sinai, and from thence to the borders of the promiſed land, the ſecond of their bringing backe, and wandering in the wilderneſſe, becauſe they murmured, untill that all the murmurers were conſumed; of the firſt of theſe it is ſaid, at that time: But whereas Jethro, his father in law gave him this counſell to appoint Rulers over them; by this ſpeech it appeareth, that he concealed that, leſt as Calvin hath it, comming from a ſtranger, it ſhould be diſtaſtefull to them; therefore he ſpake as finding himſelfe overburthened, and propounding to the people the choice of other Rulers from amongſt themſelves, which they well liked, and ſo choſe them, and Moſes conſtituted them, and gave them their charge. Verſ. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. &c. Queſt. Rabanus. Calvin.

Heare the cauſes betweene your bretheren, and iudge righteouſly, &c.] Of hearing the ſmall and the great indifferently, and not reſpecting perſons here ſpoken of, ſee Levit. 19. 15. Exod. 23. 3. and that the cauſe is the Lords, 2 Chron. 19. 6. Ver. 16, 17,

And I commanded you at that time all the things that yee ſhould doe, &c.] That is, both Rulers and Officers in judgeing, and people in obeying. Verſ. 18.

And when We departed from Horeb, We went through all that great and terrible Wilderneſſe, which ye ſaw by the way of themonntain of the Amorites, &c.] This was the wilderneſſe of Paran, Numbers 10. 12. and bordered upon divers Countreyes, Madian, Edom, Moab, &c. Of the greatneſſe of it, ſee before Numbers, 10. And it is called terrible, becauſe of the fierie Serpents and Scorpions in it, Deuteronomy, 8. 15. and for many other terrours occurring therein, It was a land of deſerts and pits, of drought, and of the ſhaddow of death, a land, that no man paſſed through, and where no man dwelt. Jer. 2.6. And yet by this way tending to the mount of the the Amorites, God carried them by his ſingular providence, ſupplying them with all neceſſaries, and guiding them in the way, even unto Kadeſh Barnea, of which ſee Numbers 13. 26. Of the exhortation of Moſes to them not to feare, but to be of good courage, and to enter and poſſeſſe the land, or of the peoples motion to ſend firſt to ſearch the land, nothing was ſpoken before in Numbers 13. but onely that God commanded ſearchers to be firſt ſent out, which how it is to be recon- Verſ. 19.

ciled with this, ſee upon that place. And all that followeth from henceforth to the end of the Chapter, is nothing elſe but a further Declaration of the proceedings of the ſearchers, of the peoples murmurings upon their returne, the Lords wrath kindled againſt them, Moſes his exhortation, then made unto them, and their preſumptuous going up armed, when they were forbidden, and their being ſmitten therefore by the Ammorites, of all which enough hath been ſaid, upon Numbers 13. and 14. and this repetition is made, that ſomethings there omitted might bee ſet forth more fully; and that being all laid together, they might be the more moved to repentance, and feare to offend ſo againe: where as verſe 37.

Verſ. 37. Hee ſaith, God was angry with mee alſo for your ſakes, &c. This is, repeated from Chapter 20. 12. and 27. 12, 18. and brought in here to aggravate the wrath of God the more, to which hee was moved for their murmurings, not onely that one time, but afterwards alſo at the waters of Meribah, and Maſſah.

Chap. II.

Verſ. 1. HEre is commemorated their returning into the wilderneſſe by the way of the red ſea, as was commanded, Numbers 14. 25. in which when they had wandered almoſt eight and thirty yeares, till all the rebells were conſumed, they came to paſſe mount Seir, abiding in Verſ. 14. Kadeſh in the wilderneſſe of Zin, till they ſhould have leave of the King, Numbers, 20. 1. which Kadeſh, whether it were the Kadeſh before ſpoken of Numbers 13. or another, hath been already diſcuſſed, upon Numbers 20. 1.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth ſaith here, it was not, but another Kadeſh betweene the coaſts of Edom and of Moab, by which way they were now brought upon the Amorites countrey, and not the way, by which they had beene brought before. He ſaith, yee have compaſſed Mount Seir long enough, whereby it may be gathered, that their wanderings in the wilderneſſe of Paran were a great part upon the coaſt of that mountainous countrey of the Edomites, now they are invited to paſſe along by this coaſt Northward, that is towards Canaan, and they are forbidden to meddle

Verſ. 4,5. with the Edomites, becauſe the Lord had given mount Seir to Eſau for Verſ. 6. a poſſeſſion. They muſt therefore buy meat and water of them for money in their paſſage, which was not ſpoken of before, Numbers 20. but this we may here ſee, was the ground of Moſes his ſending to the King of Edome to this effect, verſe 17. 19. who refuſing to let them paſſe

Verſ. 8. through his Countrey, they went a more tedious journey about it, and they are ſaid to have gone from Elah through the plaine; and from Eziongaber; of this Eziongaber mention is made before, Numb. 33. 36. but of Elah not.E

Toſtatus, becauſe buying bread is here ſpoken of, thinketh that when the people of Iſraell could get other food for their money, as they paſſed along they did not feede upon Manna onely, but ate of that alſo; ſo alſo Maſius, Serrarius, Magallianus, ſee Joſh. 1. From theſe places they came to the wilderneſſe of Moab, where a charge is given them alſo againſt medling with the Moabites, for God had given

Verſ. 9. Ar to Lots childeren, the Moabites and Ammonites, and here the expelling of the old inhabitants that they might be planted in this Countrey is commemorated, as alſo of the old inhabitants of mount Seir, that the Edomites might have that land, the Lord doing this for them for a time for his ſervants ſake, Lot and Iſaack, of whom they came, as hee after expelled the Canaanites, that Iſraell might inhabit their land.

as

The old inhabitants of Ar, being now the poſſeſſion of the Moabites were Emims great and tall as the Anakims, Giants. Emims ſignifieth terrible ones, ſee ſomewhat of them, Geneſis 14. 5. the Cald. rendereth it here according to the ſignification of the word, ſo that God had wrought by his power to put the Moabites in poſſeſſion in this place, caſting out a people ſo great and mighty. Verſ. 10. Numb. 13.

The old inhabitants of mount Seir were Horinus; of theſe ſee Geneſis 14. 6. and 36. 20. theſe the Edomites deſtroyed and dwelt in their land, as Iſraell in the land which God gave unto him; that is, in the Amorites countrey already ſubdued, being a beginning of a more ample poſſeſſion ſhortly to bee injoyed by them, with which the Edomites comming to their poſſeſſion and the Moabites, and Ammonites is compared, that they might not place happineſſe in poſſeſſing Canaan, or any worldly thing; but from hence looke up to an heavenly inheritance, ſeeing earthly poſſeſſions are not onely of Iſraelites, but Edomites, wicked people alſo. Verſ. 12. Note.

The old inhabitants of the Ammonites Countrey were Zamzummims, Giants like the Anakims alſo. Zamzummins ſignifieth preſumptuous wicked men, theſe happily were the Zuzims, Gen. 14. 5. Verſ. 20.

The Avims alſo which dwelt in Hazerim even unto Azzah, the Caphtorims deſtroyed, &c. Theſe Avim or Avites, Greeke, Evites, the vulgar Latine, The Evites, the Cappadocians, that came from Cappadocia deſtroyed. Theſe Avims were the old inhabitants of Paleſtina, but the Cappadocians, otherwiſe called Philiſtims, came and diſpoſſeſſed them, and dwelt in their ſtead: For that the Philiſtins were Cappadocians, Pererius proveth from Jeremiah 47. where the Prophet ſpeaking of the deſtruction of the Philiſtins ſaith, The Lord hath deſtroyed the reliques of the Iſland Cappadocia, and Amos 9. I made Iſraell to come out of Egypt, and the Philiſtins from Cappadocia. But he doth not thinke that by theſe Cappadocians, are meant the inhabitants of Cappadocia by Pontus and Taurus, becauſe that Countrey was too farre off; but in ſome other place ſo called. Calvin ſaith, it is uncertain, whether the Caphtorim were Cappadocians comming ſo farre off or no, and if they were, it is a marvell that they pitched not upon ſome other more fruitfull place, before they came thus farre, but he concludeth, that moſt probably they came out after the manner of robbers, and could not prevaill, till they came at this Countrey more incult, and more weakely defended. Verſ. 23. Pererius. Calvin.

The charge touching the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites being thus commemorated, Moſes ſheweth next, how he excited them to paſſeover the river Arnon, and to fight againſt Sihon, and yet to have juſt cauſe, he firſt ſent unto him for leave to goe through his Countrey, whereof ſee enough before, Numbers 21. 21. where all the paſſages of note, in this ſpeech of Moſes have been taken in and expounded. Verſ. 24.

Chap. III.

HEre Moſes proceedeth to relate the victory over Og, the king of Baſhan, of which ſee Numb. 21. 33. and in ſetting it forth he is much more ample then before, that the greatneſſe of Gods mercy towards them might the more appear in ſubduing ſo mighty a kingdome unto them, and they might be the more confident of future victories. All the land taken, he ſaith, was from the river Arnon to Hermon, the Sidonians call Hermon Syrion, the Amorites Shenir. Moſes himſelf, for Syrion, hath Sion, ch. 4.48. by a ſyncope, as Junius noteth, the ſame is alſo called mount Hor, Numb. 34. 7. for divers people called it by divers names, ſaith Ainſworth, and the divers parts of it gave occaſion hereunto; wherefore in Cant. 4. 8. Shenir and Hermon are ſpoken of as divers, the Cald. calleth this Syrion the ſnow mount, becauſe it was ſo high, that ſnow lay continually upon the top of it, and yet Pſ. 29. 6. he rendreth it the mount, that bringeth forth fruits. Mount Sion in Jeruſalem is diſtinct from this in the Hebrew writing, that being צריון this שיאן. The Sidonians, of whoſe calling this place it is here ſpoken, dwelt in Sidon on the North of Canaan being otherwiſe called Phœnicians, the city of Sidon was a great city. Beſides this Hermon, there was another of the ſame name on the other ſide of Jordan not far from mount Gilboah.

Verſ. 8, 9. Iunius. Ainſworth.

Verſ. 10. All the cities of the plain, all Gilead and all Baſhan unto Salcah, &c. This Salchah was the boundary of the kingdome of Og neare Hermon on the North, as Adricomius hath it, but it ſeemeth by that, 1 Chron. 5. 11. that it was rather on the South.

Verſ. 11. Onely Og remained of the Rephaim, or Giants, his bedſtead was of iron, is it not in Rabbah of the childr en of Ammon, &c.] The huge greatneſſe of this King is ſet forth by his bed-ſtead, ſaid to be nine cubits long, and foure broad by the cubit of a man, that is, not of a childe or youth, but of one grown to the perfect ſtature of a man; the Cald. hath it by the cubit of that King, and ſo Complutenſ. editio, and if ſo, as his ſtature was farre greater then another mans, ſo was his cubit or by the Kings cubit may be underſtood the common cubit, whereby men uſed to meaſure as the kings high way is the common way. Gellius ſaith Calvin, derideth ſuch relations of Gigantæan ſtatures, but he doth herein bewray his ignorance, ſeeing all ancient Hiſtorians doe tell of ſuch. Herodotus of Oreſtes ſeven cubits long, Plinius of a carkaſe diſcovered in Crete by the gaping of the earth ſix and fourty cubits long, and more lately in the dayes of Auguſtus and Claudius one lived, that was nine foot and nine inches, and another ten foot high. Of the Rephaims in Aſhteroth it is ſpoken before, Gen. 14. 5. of whom this Rephaim Og ſeemeth to have come, for he reigned in Aſhteroth. His bed is ſaid to have bin kept for a monument in Rabbah of the Ammonites, of which 2 Sam. 12.26.

Cald. Par. Calvin.

Verſ. 12, 13, 14, 15. The kingdomes of Sihon and Og being ſubdued, he ſheweth, how he divided them to the Reubenites, Gadites, and the half tribe of Manaſſeh, as Numbers 32. but whereas there he ſpeaketh onely generally, here he ſheweth what part each tribe had.

Verſ. 21, 22. Then verſe 21. he ſheweth with what words he ſpake to Joſhuah to encourage him, as he was commanded, and is ſaid to have done Numb. 27.23. but there the words are omitted.

Verſ. 23, 24, 25. Laſtly, he ſheweth, how he beſought the Lord, that he might go and ſee the land of Canaan, which was denied him for their ſakes, and he was bidden to ſpeake no more of it, but to goe up to the top of Piſgah and ſee it, and ſo die as he did, Deuteronomy 34. 1. Such an earneſt deſire had

Moſes

Moſes to go into that land for the promiſe ſake made to Iſrael, it being a type of the heavenly inheritance, but he could by no means get the ſentence, Numb.20. reverſed, ſo greatly doth ſin diſpleaſe God even in the beſt, as alſo in David, 2 Sam.12. whereas he ſaith it was for their ſake, it is meant, that their rebellion provoked him to ſpeak ſo, as he did at that time, for which God was angry with him, and would not ſuffer him to enter into Canaan. He putteth not as Calvin hath it, all faults from himſelf, nor accuſeth God as dealing unjuſtly with him, but by this ſpeech he intimateth the ſingularity of Gods mercy towards them, who ſhould enter into that land, from which he was debarred, that they might be the more moved to obedience and thankfulneſs. And he rendreth theſe words, I prayed, I had prayed, becauſe it is not to be thought, after Gods will made known, that Joſhua ſhould bring the people into Canaan, and he was inaugurated into this office, that Moſes prayed thus, but onely before that time. In this prayer he pleadeth from Gods beginning to ſhew him his mighty works deſiring him to perfect this thing, and in ſpecial he ſpeaketh of the goodly mountain, & Lebanon, as motives to this his deſire, by that goodly mountain underſtanding mount Sion, the joy of the whole earth, and from Lebanon came the Cedars to build the Temple, and it was a moſt ſweet place for adoriferous things growing there. In that Moſes is ſent up to a place, from whence he might ſee the land, it ſhewed Gods great favour towards him, and was a mitigation of his puniſhment, in that he, as other Patriarks ſaw the promiſes a far off. And he concludeth, we aboad in the valley over againſt Bethpeor] That is near Moab, Numb.23.28. for here they ſtayed till the death of Moſes, that Joſhuah might ſucceed him.

Note.

Calvin.

See alſo Ch.4.21,22

Verſ.25.

Verſ. 29.

Chap. IIII.

Now therefore (O Iſrael) hearken to the Statutes and judgements, which I teach you to do them, &c.] Here Moſes beginneth his exhortations upon the premiſes, and he leaveth out no argument, that may perſwade to dutiful obedience. Verſ. 1.

Theſe exhortations are continued from hence unto Chap. 12. and from thence unto Chap. 27. the Ceremonial and Judicial lawes being propounded, and further illuſtrated, his exhortations together with the Elders are renued again, Chap. 27.28,29,30. Then Moſes and Joſhua are called to appear before the Lord at the Tabernacle, where the revolting of the Jewes is foretold and a ſong commemorative is made, Chap.31. and 32. Then Moſes being ſummoned to dye, Chap.32. verſ. 48. and having bleſſed each Tribe ſeverally, Chap. 33. goeth up to mount Nebo and dyeth, Chap.34.

For theſe Exhortations ſet down Chap. 4, 5,6,7,8,9,10,11. they have the law of the ten Commandments included together with them, ſo that this part of the book may be divided into Exhortations before the propoſal of the Law, Chap. 4. unto verſe 44. the propoſal of the moral Law from thence to verſ. 32. of Chap. 5. and Exhortations after the propoſal of the Law from thence to Ch.12.

The Exhortations going before the Law, are firſt general, to hearken to and obſerve all the Statutes and judgments of the Lord, verſ.1.&c. to verſ. 9. Secondly, ſpecial to flee all Images, Idols, and Idolatries, verſ.9,10,11. &c. to verſ.41. where a commemoration is made of Moſes his ſeparating 3. Cities on this ſide Jordan for refuge, as was before appointed, and of their names.

Touching the general, he exhorteth them to hearken to Gods Lawes, and to keep them without adding or detracting. Firſt from the conſideration The Exhortation general.

tion of the danger of being ſmitten with death, and ſo never coming to poſſeſs the promiſed land, if they did not, as befell thoſe that were joyned to Baalpeor, but contrariwiſe if they kept them, they ſhould live, and go in and poſſeſs that land, as all that cleaved then to the Lord were preſerved alive, the followers of Baal being deſtroyed, verſ. 1,2,3,4. By Statutes and Judgments are meant both the moral Lawes, and ordinances about the worſhip and ſervice of God, and the judicial Lawes whereby they were to be judged by the Judges. And here is ſet forth the condition of the Law, a man muſt hear and do all things commanded, that he may live thereby, to this reference it had, Rom. 2.13. and 10. 5. and ſo he ſhall poſſeſs Canaan a type of heaven, but becauſe none can thus do, this inheritance is attained onely by faith, Rom.13.16. & 6.23.

Verſ. 1,2, 3,4.

Rabanus.

Ye ſhall not add to the word, nor diminiſh] Here, ſaith Rabanus, it is forbidden to add any thing to the true doctrine by corrupt inventions, or to ſtand againſt any thing brought forth according to the truth of a right faith, ſo that all hereſie is hereby ſmitten. And this is a notable place ſaith Calvin, againſt all humane inventions in the worſhip of God, the meaning being, that we ſhould wholly and onely depend upon the lawes of God, and go onely according to the genuine meaning thereof, being content with the holineſs therein preſcribed, and not deviſing wayes to be more holy, then the Law requireth. All traditions of men are here beaten down, Matth.15.9. and the al-ſufficiency of the written Word of God is avouched, Gal.3.15. 2 Tim. 3.16. Prov. 30.6. neither ſhall any tittle of it ever fail, Matth.5.19. For the judgments upon the men that followed Baalpeor, ſee Numb. 25. Lorinus the Jeſuite ſaith, that nothing is to be added as immediatly coming from God, that their traditions might eſcape untaxed. And hitherto of the firſt argument in this Exhortation.

Calvin.

Revel. 22. 18.

Secondly, he perſwadeth them to keep theſe Lawes, becauſe they came from God and ſo were moſt righteous, no nation in the world having ſuch Lawes as theſe, the greateſt wiſdom that is, ſtanding in the keeping of them, Verſ.5,6,7,8. Of wiſdom acquired by the word, ſee alſo, Pſal. 19. 8. and 119.88,89,100. 2 Tim.3.15. Jer. 8. 9. Whereas he ſaith, what Nation is ſo great, who hath God ſo nigh to them, &c. this is ſpoken in reſpect of the dignity of gifts, not of the multitude of people, as Rabanus hath it; for God, Heb. is Gods, but the triplicity of perſons is meant in the unity of the Godhead, therefore both the Sept. and Cald. have it in the ſingular number, God.

Verſ.5,6,7, 8.

Rabanus dignitate donorum non multitudine populorum.

And hitherto of the general Exhortation, to keep all the Statutes and Judgments of the Lord; now followeth the ſpecial, to flee Idols. And unto this firſt it is prepared by bidding them take heed and keep their ſouls, and not to forget what they had ſeen, and to teach it to their ſons, and in ſpeciall the terrible ſight that they had ſeen, and the voice that they had heard in Horeb, Verſ. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Secondly, it is propounded Verſ.15,16,17,18,19. Thirdly, preſſed by divers Arguments. 1. Their deliverance out of Egypt to be a peculiar people to God, verſ.20. 2. Their former provocation, whereupon he was denyed the entering into that land, whereas they notwithſtanding ſhould enter, verſ.21,22,23. 3. The great danger of Idolatry, they ſhould, if they ſinned, thus be deſtroyed, verſ. 24, 25. &c. to verſ. 32. 4. Gods extraordinary dealing towards them in ſigns and wonders, verſ. 32,33, &c. to verſ. 41.

The Exhortation ſpecial.

For the preparative, he biddeth them to keep their ſouls diligently, leſt they forget what their eyes had ſeen, and they ſhould go from their heart; ſo that he keepeth his ſoul, that endeavoureth diligently to have the works of God, and his ſayings alwaies in his heart, and to this end, is continually ſpeaking thereof to his children, as here followeth and he is negligent of his ſoul, and letteth it lye open to deadly danger, that ſetteth not his mind upon theſe, nor careth for inſtructing his children in Divine things.

The preparative to the Exhortation.

Verſ. 9.

Note.

In

In mentioning the things,that their eyes had ſeen,he alluded to the fire and darkneſſe appearing in Horeb, when God ſpake the words of the law unto them, but no ſimilitude was then ſeen, as is expreſſed, verſ. 10, as &c. In Horeb God bad gather them together, that they might hear his voyce, and ſo fear him all their dayes and teach their children, as Exod.19. then they came and ſtood under the mount,and the mount burnt with fire, &c. Verſ. 10, 11.

For the Exhortation againſt idolatry, propounding verſ.15. forſomuch as they ſaw no ſimilitude at the time of giving the law, therefore he chargeth them not to make any image or ſimilitude of male or female; the ſimilitude of any beaſt, fowl, creeping thing, or fiſh, or to worſhip the ſun, moon or ſtars. The making of idols, Hebr. gods, was before expreſly forbidden, Exod. 20. 23. Levit. 19. 4. but now leſt an image ſhould be thought not to be an idol, as the Roman Catholicks do at this day fondly diſtinguiſh, here is forbidden the making of any image or ſimilitude to be uſed in adoration; a ſimilitude ſaith Rabanus, following Auguſtine, is the repreſentation of any man,or of any other living thing in general,an image of this or of that individual; and an image, he ſaith, is proper to a man, a ſimilitude both to man and beaſt. The ſcope of this place is, as Calvin hath it, to ſhew, that God is to be held, not in any ſimilitude or image, but in his Word onely, as he was pleaſed to manifeſt himſelf, when he gave the law; moreover we may behold him in his works, Rom.1.20. but not in any thing wrought by man to repreſent him. Ver.15, 16, 17, 18, 19. The Exhortation propounded. Rabanus. Auguſt qu.4. Calvin.

If it be objected, although now no ſimilitude was ſeen, which is the ground of this prohibition,yet at other times God appeared to his ſervants in ſome likeneſſe,as to Jacob, Gen.28. to Eſay, Chap. 6. to Daniel,Chap. 9. to Ezech. &c. Exod.24.10. ſoon after the law given; wherefore from hence we may argue on the contrary ſide, a ſimilitude may be made, becauſe ſome ſimilitude hath been ſeen. Object.

To this he anſwereth, what was done at the giving of the law muſt be looked at, as the ground of our actions; for hereby rules are to be framed for us to go by, Gods ſhewing himſelf in ſome likeneſſe at other times was a thing ſingularly done then, to lift the mind up to contemplate his heavenly glory, not to teach us to make a common practice of repreſenting God by ſimilitudes: for even Eſay, that had ſuch a viſion, both ſetteth it forth ſo, in the Seraphims covering their faces, as that he intimateth, that the divine glory cannot be beheld with our eyes, and envieth more againſt making images, then any other Prophet; ſo that it is plain, there was no meaning in ſetting forth theſe apparitions, that men ſhould be incouraged to make any image of God. The charge againſt making Images is extended to the very creeping thing and the fiſh,as Commandement 2. becauſe God knew the corruptions that would grow in the wicked world,of which we may ſee Rom. 1.23. and the Egyptians, amongſt whom they had lived, worſhipped all theſe things, and Dagon, the Idol of the Philiſtims, 1 Sam. 16. 23. was in the inferiour part thereof like a fiſh. Touching the hoaſt of heaven, the Sun, Moon and Stars, which they are forbidden to worſhip, this was not added without cauſe; for that not onely amongſt the heathen, but even in Iſrael theſe were worſhipped, as Ainſworth noteth, 2 King.21.3. & 17.16. Amos 5.25,26. of which wickedneſſe Job profeſſeth himſelf to be clear, Job 31.26. They held, ſaith Calvin, theſe heavenly lights to be the images of Gods glory, and ſo looked up to them and worſhipped them. Sol. Eſay 40. Ainſworth. Calvin.

The reaſon againſt this worſhip is here added, which the Lord thy God hath divided to all nations under the whole heaven; That is, ſaith he, not as the Rabbins would have it, becauſe other Nations were ſubject to the influences of the Stars, but the Iſraelites not, for this is a meer fiction of theirs, but becauſe the Sun was made as a ſervant, and the Moon as an handmaid to all Nations, as alſo the Stars with their light and influence to ſerve them:

them: and he ſaith, divided to all nations, becauſe of their divers poſitions and motions, the Sun being ſometimes nearer to ſome parts, and further from other, and ſhining to other parts, when it is gone from us, and the Moon likewiſe and the Stars ſometime riſing upon our Horizon, and ſometime ſetting, and then riſing upon another. And if theſe be creatures made to ſerve all men, yea the wicked heathen, then the peculiar people of God ſhould abhor from turning ſervants to them, leaving their Creator. Thus alſo Rabanus, he ſaith not, God hath divided them to all nations, meaning, that other Nations ſhould worſhip them; but they not, but that he ſet them, as Gen. 1. for ſigns and ſeaſons, &c. to all other Nations in common with them; yet haply, ſaith he, hereby was prophetically foretold, that the Nations in all parts ſhould ſerve theſe, but they muſt not follow them in ſo doing.

Rabanus.

The Exhortation preſſed.

And hitherto the propoſal of the Exhortation, now followeth the preſſing of it with Arguments: Touching the firſt, verſ. 20. But the Lord hath brought you out of the iron furnace to be to him a people of inheritance.] That is, although other Nations of the world, whom God hath left to ſuch vanities, are idolatrous, yet it is againſt reaſon, that ye ſhould be ſo, for he hath dealt ſingularly with you in mercy, that ye ſhould ſerve him onely, the Lord brought you out of the iron furnace; this is again ſpoken of, 1 King. 8.51. Jer.11.4. and thus Egypt is called, for the cruel oppreſſion ſuffered there by the Hebrews, as if they had been put into the hotteſt furnace, that melteth Iron.

Argum. 1. Verſ. 20.

Touching the ſecond Argument, Verſ. 22. Moreover the Lord was angry with me for your ſakes, &c.] That is, he hath born with you wonderfully already, being ſo much provoked by you, as he hath been, Numb. 20. in that notwithſtanding the great wrath to which he was ſtirred up even to the excluding of me out of Canaan, yet he permitteth you to enter, therefore provoke him not again by your idolatry.

Argum. 2. Ver.21, 22, 23.

Touching the third Argument, verſ. 24. For the Lord thy God is a conſuming fire, even a jealous God, &c.] This argument is firſt laid down briefly verſ. 24. if they ſin by idolatry, they ſhall be in danger of ſudden deſtruction, as by fire, as many were conſumed, Numb. 16. & Chap. 11.1. and Nadab and Abihu, Levit. 10. then more largely, verſ.25,26.&c. 1. A caſe being put of their multiplying and dwelling long in Canaan, ſo that they might ſeem inexpugnable, yet if then they ſhould ſet up and worſhip images, they ſhould be deſtroyed. 2. Shewing that if thus they were deſtroyed from off that land, and ſcattered amongſt the heathen, if then they turned heartily from this ſin, he would again ſhew mercy unto them, verſ. 29, 30, &c.

Argum. 3. Ver. 24,25, 26,27,&c.

Touching the fourth Argument, verſ. 32,33,&c. God never dealt ſo with any people as with them, to make them hear his voice out of the midſt of the fire, and ſo powerfully delivering them out of Egypt, hereby teaching them, that he alone is God, and that there are none other gods, and all this for the love which he bare to their fathers, wherefore they ſpecially ſhould keep his Lawes, and flee the diſhonouring of him by Idols: for he did not onely in ſingular mercy deliver them from miſery, but expelled other Nations, that they might inhabite their land. Whereas verſ.34. in ſpeaking of the means of delivering them out of Egypt, he nameth ſeven, temptations, ſigns, wonders, War, a mighty hand, a ſtretched out arm, and great terrours. By the firſt Ainſworth underſtandeth Gods propounding of his Will to try their obedience, as when he tempted Abraham, but the increaſe of their miſery, when he firſt went about their deliverance, may better be underſtood, becauſe this was a great tryal of their faith. By ſigns, he underſtandeth thoſe, Exod.3.12. by wonders, thoſe Exod.4.21. & 7.9. by war, Exod.8.1,2. ſtrong hand, Exod.6.1. by ſtretched out arm, his power more manifeſted, Exod.6.6. by great terrours, the inward affrightings of the Argum. 4. Ver.32,33, 34, &c.

Ainſworth.

the Egyptians, Exod.9.20,27,28. & 10.7. & 12.30. Whereas verſ.33. it is ſaid, they heard his voyce out of the midſt of the fire, but 36. out of heaven; here is no difference, but that in the laſt place they are given to underſtand, that the voyce, which they could not perceive to come from any other place, but out of the fire, yet came from heaven. And hitherto of the exhortation to ſerve God onely, and not Idols.

Now at the end of this, before the repeating of the law, here is inſerted a commemoration of three cities of refuge appointed by Moſes by name, on this ſide Jordan, of which, ſee before upon Numb.35. Ver. 41,42, 43.

The ſecond part of theſe Chapters from the beginning of the fourth to the twelfth now followeth, verſ.44,45,&c. viz. The propoſal of the moral Law. And here firſt is ſet down the place where, and the time when, after they came out of Egypt, on this ſide Jordan over againſt Beth-peor, &c. as chap. 1.1,4,5. and for the deſcription of the Amorites Countrey, verſ.48,49. ſee before, Chap.3.8,16. Part 2.

Theſe things are again repeated before the propoſal of the law, that the greater heed might be taken thereunto, as being moſt weighty. Secondly, the ſpeech of Moſes tending to preparation to hearken diligently to this law, Chap. 5. verſ.1,2,&c.

Chap. V.

And Moſes called all Iſrael and ſaid unto them, Hear, O Iſrael, the ſtatutes and judgments, &c.] To the ſame effect with that, Chap. 4. 1, 10,33. onely here it is added, which was not ſpoken before, I ſtood between the Lord and you, and ye were afraid; of which ſee Exod.19. & chap. 20.19, 20. By this calling to attention and propounding again the terrour, in which the law was delivered, is intimated, how averſe we are by nature from regarding and reverencing it. Verſ. 1. Verſ. 5.

Thirdly, the law of the ten Commandements is repeated in the ſame words, wherein it was delivered, onely here be ſome alterations and additions for explanation, verſ.6,7,&c. to verſ. 22. God is ſaid Ezech.20.5, 9. not only to have delivered them from the ſervitude of the Egyptians, but alſo from their idolatries, and from their gods, 2 Sam. 7.23. Verſ.12. for, Remember to keep, he hath, Keep the Sabbath day to ſanctifie it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee, implying an older command implyed, Gen. 2. Verſ. 14. in ſpeaking of reſt from work upon the Sabbath, he nameth not only ſon and daughter, &c. but alſo thy oxe and thy aſſe, and addeth, that thy man-ſervant, and maid-ſervant may reſt as well as thou, for further explanation, and to ſhew, that the eaſe of ſervants is reſpected by God in appointing the Sabbath: and verſ. 15. Remember that thou wert a ſervant in the Land of Egypt, and the Lord brought thee out, &c. therefore remember to keep the Sabbath day, theſe words, for in ſix dayes the Lord made heaven and earth, &c. being omitted. This remembrance is added, to move them the more to this mercy towards their ſervants: but the reſt of ſervants is not to be conceived from hence to be the chief end of the Sabbath, as Calvin reaſoneth, but the worſhip of God, becauſe the children of Abraham were the ſons of God, and ſo free at the firſt, but this came upon them afterwards accidentally, yet not without Gods providence. The reaſon from Gods creating all things in ſix dayes and reſting the ſeventh, uſed before at the giving of the Law is general, concerning all Nations, together with the Iſraelites, but this ſpecially concerning them, and therefore aptly added here by Moſes, when he had urged the reſt of ſervants. And hence we may gather, that not onely the creation is to be meditated upon on the Sabbath day, but alſo their deliverance out of Egypt, and our deliverance by Chriſt figured out hereby. If any man ſhall wonder, that even Verſ. 6, 7. Verſ. 12. Verſ. 14. Verſ. 15. Calvin. Ainſworth.

ſtrangers

ſtrangers, that were uncircumciſed, muſt alſo reſt, and beaſts, whereas the true God was not worſhipped by them. Calvin anſwereth, well that God appointed this, that in the Iſraelites reſting, they might not ſee any thing to offend them, and becauſe beaſts could not labour without men, and in mercy to all his creatures. To which we may add, that Heathen ſervants, and ſtrangers amongſt them, finding the comfort of this reſt, might be drawn to think the better of the true Religion, and ſo to turn unto it.

Verſ. 16. In the fifth command, verſ.16. it is alſo added, as the Lord thy God hath commanded, and again, that it may go well with thee; for further explanation and to ſhew how much the Lord ſtandeth upon the honouring of Parents. This is again inculcated, Epheſ. 6.3.

Verſ. 18. The ſeventh command, the eight, ninth, and tenth are joyned here to the ſixth by a conjunction copulative, and thou ſhalt not, Heb. which is rendred, neither ſhalt thou, to ſhew the inſeparable connexion of theſe Lawes, ſo that if one be broken, and the reſt be kept, it is as if all were broken, Verſ.21. Jam.2.10,11.

In propounding the tenth Commandment the order is inverted, thou ſhalt not deſire thy neighbours wife, is placed before this, thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours houſe, which we may conceive is done purpoſely to prevent the errour of thoſe, that make theſe two Commandments, and the firſt and ſecond but one, for if they be two, let them tell, which is the ninth, and which the tenth, if they ſhall ſay, they are to be reckoned in order, as Exod.20. this place maketh againſt it. And in the firſt clauſe, for theſe words thou ſhall not deſire, Exod.20.are theſe, thou ſhall not covet, but they are promiſcuouſly uſed being both of one ſignification; yet Maimony ſaith, deſire is that, which bringeth a man to coveting and coveting to unjuſt taking away, which is when the owner is unwilling to ſell, but the buyer is urgent, for in this caſe although he giveth a great price, he taketh by violence, as is complained Mich.2.2. they covet fields and take them by violence. By placing the houſe firſt, Exod.20. the order is obſerved of naming the thing conteining before the content, becauſe a man firſt hath or ſhould have an houſe to bring a wife unto, and then a wife, but by placing here the wife before the houſe, the dignity of the wife is intimated above houſe, and field alſo, which is here named, but not before, Exod.20.

Maimony treat. of rapine Ch.1.

4.

Verſ.22,23. Fourthly, the Law being repeated, he ſheweth in what manner theſe words were uttered, and with how great terrour, and how they ſtood then affected; they feared becauſe of the fire, and acknowledged the great mercy of God, that they were preſerved alive, having ſeen Gods glory, and deſired that God would not ſpeak to them any more, but Moſes, promiſing to obey in every thing.

Verſ.24,25, 26,&c.

5.

Verſ.28,29, 30,31. Fiftly, the Lords approving of their ſaying, and wiſhing ſuch an heart in them, his diſmiſſing of them to their tents and ſtaying of Moſes to receive more lawes for them to obſerve in Canaan.

Whereas it is ſaid, Verſ.22. God ſpake theſe words, and added no more, it is to be underſtood, to the people, for he ſpake more to Moſes, Exod. 21. neither did he ſpeak every word here ſet forth, for ſome are inſerted for Explication, bu the addeth to the ten words, or decalogue of God, that maketh any other Commandment contrary to Deut. 4.2. verſ. 25. in ſaying why ſhould we dye? is implyed, that the Law killeth and terrifieth, but the goſpel onely comforteth and maketh alive. Verſ.27. In that in this their fear they ſeek to Moſes to mediate betwixt God and them, the effect and end of the Law is ſet forth, it is a Schoolmaſter to bring us to a Mediatour, that is, Chriſt, for this their deſire the Lord approveth, verſ. 28. And our Mediatour, Chriſt is the prophet like Moſes, Deut. 18. 18. that goeth near, and revealeth the will of the father to us, Joh.1. 18. & 3.13. & 8.28.

Rom.7.9.10. Rom.8.15. Gal.3.24.

And

And hitherto of the propoſal of the Law. Now follow the Exhortations made again after this, verſ. 32, 33. and Chap. 6. 1, 2. &c. to the 12. Chapter. And theſe are firſt to keep Gods Commandments and Statutes from verſ. 32. to the end of Chap. 6. 2. To deſtroy the Heathen inhabiting the land of Canaan and their Gods, Chap. 7. 3. to recount diligently Gods mercies both in the way that they came, and in caſting out the Canaanites before them, and not to aſcribe it to themſelves, Chap. 8. and Chap. 9. to verſ. 7. 4. To remember their former provocations of the Lord to become the more dutiful for time to come from verſ 7. to verſ. 12. of Chap. 10. 5. He concludeth again with Exhortations to keep the Law from verſ. 12. to the end of Chap. 11.

Part. 3. The Exhortations after the Law propounded.

For the firſt of theſe particulars, the Exhortations to keep the Law are firſt general to keep all without declining to the right hand or left, becauſe ſo it ſhould go well with them, verſ. 32, 33. even as he that goeth in the Kings highway, and turneth not out of it to the right hand or left, as Deut. 2. 27. ſo that any turning is an erring from the ſtreight way of Gods Commandments; ſee Iſa. 30. 21. Prov. 4. 27. Deut. 17. 11, 20. and Ch. 28. 14.

1. Particular. Ver. 32, 33.

Chap. VI.

Secondly, they are extended to their children, and childrens children: for he ſaith, that theſe Lawes were taught them that they might learn to fear God and their ſons, and ſons ſons alwaies, and that the effect of all theſe laws might be the better remembred, he ſetteth down the ſum of them, viz. thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy ſoul and with all thy might; charging them to have them in their heart, to teach them to their children, to talk of them, to binde them for a ſign upon their hands, to place them, as frontlets between their eyes, and to write them upon the poſts of their houſes and gates. For the words preparing to this ſum, hear (O Iſrael) the Lord our God is one Lord, in Hebrew the laſt letter of שמע here and the laſt of אחד one are ſet down very great, with this note o upon the top, to ſhew doubtleſſe the great attention, which ſhould be given to this ſaying, and the myſtery of one God in three perſons, which we have. 1. The Lord. 2. Our God. 3. Lord. The word [is] which is wanting here in the Hebrew is ſupplyed by Chriſt, Mark. 12. 29. where he ſheweth this to be the firſt and great command of the Law. From this charge, thou ſhalt talk of them, when thou lyeſt down, and when thou riſeſt up. Maimony ſaith, that they uſed to read twice a day, at night and in the morning, both theſe words; Hear O Iſrael, &c. and two ſections more, one Deut. 11. 13. and the other, Ex. 13. 3. but 1. Hear O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one, becauſe in it there is the property of God, the love of him, and the Doctrine of him, which is the great foundation, whereupon all do depend. But I have ſhewed already out of the ſame Rabbin, Exod. 13. 9. that they had not three onely but four Sections in ſingular account, which they wrot upon phylacteries of parchment, & wore them upon their foreheads and arms, grounding upon that place and this, verſ. 8. ſee the notes there. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy ſoul, and with all thy might.] The heart implyeth underſtanding, of which it is the ſeat, 1 King. 3. 9. Prov. 2. 2, 10. and belief, Rom. 10. 10. and ſincerity, Matth. 15. 8. by the ſoul are meant the will and affections, Deut. 21. 14. & 24. 15. & 12. 20. for [might] the Cald. hath riches, the Sept. power Mark, 12. 3. there is another word Sidrola uſed for explanation, ſignifying the efficacy both of the mind and will, ſo that we are here required to love the Lord with all that is in us, or in our power, honouring him with our ſubſtance, as Prov. 3. 9. thus Joſiah is ſaid to have loved him, 2 King. 23. 25. Maimony ſaith, by this word [might] adding we are bound to bleſs God with cheerfulneſs of ſoul,

Verſ. 1. 2.

Verſ. 5.
Verſ. 6.
Verſ. 7.
Verſ. 8.

Maimony in Miſuch, in Keriathſhemangh.

Maimony in Berachoth, ch. 10.

soul, for evill or affliction, even as for good, as Job 1.22.

Vers. 9. And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thine house and on thy gates, vers. 9. for posts, Hebr. is מזוזות, put Exod.21.6.for the door-posts, and so it is meant, that they should write them, that seeing them, when they went out or came in at the door, they might alwayes have them in their mind, and speak of them, and iterate them, as is appointed, vers. 7. where the Hebrew word is whet them, that is, rub them over again and again by repetition. The practice of the Jews, saith Maimony, upon this ground, is to write upon a piece of parchment these words from vers. 4. to vers. 9. and also Deut.11. from vers.13. to vers.21. and then having rolled the parchment to put it into a pipe of reed, or wood, or the like, and to fasten it with a nail a good height upon the door-post within, and on the right hand, as a man entred the door to come into the house. And by this means every time that a man goeth in and out, he meeteth with the name of the holy blessed God, and shall, as his duty is, remember the love of him, and awake out of his sleep and errours amongst the vanities of the time, and know, that there is nothing which abideth for ever and ever and ever; but the knowledge of God, the everlasting rock, &c. Moreover he addeth, our ancient wise men have said, whoso hath phylacteries on his head and arm, and fringes on his garment, and the post writing on his door, is fortified, that he shall not sin; for he hath many remembrances, which are the angels, that deliver him from sinning, as it is written, Psal. 34. 8. But this is one of the traditions of the elders taxed by our Lord, as a superstition, Matth. 23. 5. writing out and having such charges before our eyes, are indeed a good means to make us alwayes remember our duty, but to place confidence herein, as if a man that hath these writings about him, must needs be sufficiently sanctified hereby is altogether to pervert the end of them by laying a foundation of neglecting inward sanctimony, and putting confidence in the outward in a pharisaical manner.

Maimony in Misneh, Tephilin, c. 5.

Thirdly, a warning is given them in time of prosperity afterwards, not to forget the lawes of God.

Vers.10,11. And when the Lord shall have brought thee into the Land, which he sware to thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, &c. then beware, lest thou forget the Lord, &c. The case of being rich and full by Gods blessing, which should rather move men to duty and obedience, is commonly most dangerous, the forgetting of the Lord being caused hereby, and therefore the exhortation to remember Gods laws to keep them is amplified here by putting this case, so again, Deut.8.10, 11. see Prov. 30. 8. give me not riches, lest I be full and deny thee: the Cald. hath, Lest thou forget the fear of the Lord: the Sept. addeth, Lest thy heart be deceived and thou forget: both further expressing the meaning: of this forgetting, see Psal. 106.20,21. & 44.21. Judg.3.7. Jer.3.21. chap. 18.15. he forgetteth God, that goeth after other vanities as he is said also not to know God.

Hos. 4.6.

Ver.13,14, 15. Fourthly, they are exhorted to cleave to the Lord onely, to fear him, and to swear by his name, and not to go after other gods, destruction being threatned, if they did. Thou shalt fear the Lord, serve him and swear by his name: the Sept. hath, serve him onely; and so it is rendred Matth. 4. 10. according to the meaning, for not only service, but fear and swearing must be by God onely, and therefore going after other gods in any of these, is opposed hereunto, vers. 14. and to swear by other gods is threatned, Jer. 5.7. Amos 8.14. The Sept. also insert, thou shalt cleave to him and swear, &c. The fearing of God in this place, is an inward act of the mind, the serving of him; and swearing by his name are outward expressions hereof by prayer and praise. So Maimony saith, the serving of God is by prayer, wherein the heart is lifted up unto him: of prayers there is no certain number, no set form or time appointed in the law, and therefore every every one must pray according to his ability, first praising God, then making supplication; and lastly praising him again: and this must be done by every one; even by women and servants every day.

Maimony of prayer, chap. 1.

Fifthly, they are warned not to tempt God, as in Massah, of which see Exod.17. and Numb.20. but to keep his Commandements, the promise, if they did so, of entring into Canaan, and having their enemies driven out before them being repeated. In that immediately after the precept of serving God, this warning not to tempt him through distrust is added, Calvin well noteth, that God cannot be rightly served, but when his due is given unto him by trusting in him, seeking to him for help in time of need, and patiently expecting help from him in all times of tryal. Ver.16,17, 18,19. Calvin.

Lastly, they are charged to tell their children, what God had done for them in bringing them out of Egypt, and planting them in Canaan, that they might be the more moved hereby to fear God. The Hebrew begineth this thus, when thy son shall ask thee to morrow, &c. where by to morrow, is meant hereafter, as Exod. 13.14. Ver.20,21, 22,23,24, 25.

CHAP. VII.

AND hitherto of the first particular; now followeth the second, an exhortation to make no leagues with the seven Nations, into whose land the Lord should bring them, but utterly to destroy them and their gods, burning their idols in the fire, which exhortation is interlaced with most ample promises of blessings, if they did thus, and all fear of being able to overcome them, that they might have power so to do, is taken away. In this exhortation then, 1. there is a charge against these heathens and their idols, vers. 1,2,3,4,5. 2. A reason, why they should do according to this charge, they were chosen to be a special people, vers.6,7,8. 3. They are pressed to execute this charge by threatenings and promises, vers. 9,10, &c. to vers.17. 4. An objection is answered, if they should say in their hearts, that they were not able to root out these peoples, vers. 17, 18, &c. to vers. 25. 5. The charge of destroying their images is further explained, they must be utterly consumed with fire, none of the gold or silver of them being possessed by any of them, vers.25,26. 2 Particular Touching the first, when the Lord, saith he, shall bring thee into the land, whither thou goest to possesse it, and shall cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, the Amorites, &c] Here first the peoples are reckoned up, with whom they must thus deal, being seven, yet sometime said to be more, as Gen.15.19. where ten are numbred, and sometime fewer, as Exod. 23. 23. where only six are numbred, see my exposition upon Gen. 15.19. where fewer are named, the rest are left to be understood under the name of the Canaanites Synecdochically. Comestor in his Scholast. history saith, that three of the ten Nations reckoned up, Gen. 15. 19. were expelled, before the children of Israel came thither, viz. the giants by the children of Lot, the Horites by the Edomites, and the Evites by the Cappadocians. And we read indeed of the Emims, giants expelled before the Moabites, and of the Horites before the Edomites, Deut.2.10,11,12. and of the Avims expelled by the Caphtorim, vers. 23. But these seem to be peoples divers from them mentioned, Gen.15.19. see the notes Deut.2.10. and therefore the former, which is Calvins, is to be preferred. Vers. 1, 2.

Then followeth the charge, 1. To destroy them utterly. 2. To make no covenant with them. 3. To make no marriages with them. 4. To break down and to destroy their altars, images, and groves, and to burn their graven images with fire. For the charge to destroy them utterly, and to make no covenant, or marriages with them, see before Exod.34.11,12, 15,16. & Exod.23.31,32,33. If this shall seem to be too cruel, to shew Vers. 3, 4, 5.

Calvin.

no mercy, but to deſtroy all without reſpect of ſex or age : Calvin anſwereth well, that they having been ſpared now 400. years, and having abuſed this lenity to wax the more audacious to commit all manner of abominable wickedneſſe, it was juſt with God at the laſt to root them quite out, and to purge the land of ſuch an impure generation, and the Iſraelites being appointed to execute this his wrath upon them, it was no cruelty but dutiful obedience in them to deſtroy them. Moreover God is judge over all men, and therefore what he appointeth in his juſtice to be done, far be it from man, out of a fooliſh conceit to ſhew more pitty, to call cruelty. The making of covenants or marriages with them is ſo ſtrictly forbidden, leſt hereby they ſhould be hindred from executing this judgement upon them, and as is expreſſed, Verſ.4. leſt they ſhould be corrupted by their idolatries, neither could the land, where the ſanctuary of God was, be ſufficiently purged if they were ſuffered to live in it.

Maimony in Iſſurei biah. Ch. 12.

Touching marriages, Maimony ſaith, they are not onely unlawful with any of theſe ſeven Nations, but alſo with any other peoples, and therefore what Iſraelite ſoever lay with ſuch a woman by way of marriage was to be beaten. And thus, he ſaith, this Law is expounded by Ezra, where not onely the wives taken of theſe nations, but alſo of the Amorites, Ezra 9.1,2,3, &c.

Moabites, and Egyptians are ſpoken of; and order is taken for the puting of them away again as unlawful. Of the charge againſt their altars, groves, and images, ſee Exod.23.24. and Exod. 34.13. Numb. 23. 52. and Deut 12.1,2,3.

2.
Verſ.6,7,8.

Touching the ſecond, verſe 6,7,8. they were an holy people, ſpecially choſen, and that not becauſe they were numerous and mighty, for they were feweſt, but for Gods free love, and for the oath to their fathers, which was a reaſon of great force, why they ſhould cleave to God, being ſeparate from both idols and idolaters. The word rendred ſpecial people, Heb. is עם-סגלה, a people of price, for the word ſignifieth a treaſure, or precious thing, ſee Exod.19.5. hereby, ſaith Calvin, gold, ſilver, and pretious ſtons are ſet forth in many places.

Calvin.

3.
Verſ.9,10,11. 12,13,14,15, 16.

Touching the third, verſ. 9, 10, &c. here is a moſt terrible threatning, if they diſobey herein, God will repay them as haters of him, to their face, to deſtroy them, and a moſt gracious promiſe, of love and bleſſing in every kind, if they obeyed, and finally that they ſhould conſume their enemies. The word rendred [conſume] is אכלתה thou ſhalt eat up, ſo it is ſaid, Numb.14. 9. they are bread for us. And theſe words verſ. 16. are both a promiſe, and a charge to deſtroy them without pity.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

Myſtically, ſaith Rabanus, we are here threatned, if we deſtroy not the ſeven Nations, and promiſed if we do; the ſeven Nations being ſeven ſins, gluttony, fornication, covetouſneſs, wrath, worldly ſorrow, fearfulneſs, and pride. Theſe if we ſeek to deſtroy by enſuing temperance, chaſtity, liberality, patience, ſalutiferous joy, fortitude, and humility, we ſhall be bleſſed with all ſorts of bleſſings but if we joyn with them, they ſhall certainly turn to our deſtruction. Again, he ſaith, theſe Nations are ſaid to be many, and they the feweſt of all people, it being myſtically intimated, that where the foreſaid vices take place, they are not alone, but each one hath a brood of other vices. From gluttony come eating and drinking; from fornication filthy ſpeeches, ſcurrility and fooliſh talking; from covetouſneſſe lying, deceit, thefts, perjuries, falſe teſtimonies, violence, and rapacity; from wrath murthers, cryings and indignation; from worldly ſorrow rancour, puſillanimity, bitterneſſe, deſperation; from fearfullneſſe, idleneſſe, unquietneſſe, inſtability of mind and body, verboſity and curioſity; and laſtly, from pride contentions, hereſies, boaſting, contempt, diſobedience, blaſphemy, murmuring, and detraction.

Verſ.17,18, 19,20.

Touching the fourth, verſ. 17, 18. &c. If they ſhould fear, that they ſhould not be able to deſtroy them, becauſe they were more then they, the mighty mighty works done for them againſt Pharaoh muſt be remembred, and the like help from God almighty expected again. And particularly it is promiſed, that the hornet ſhall be ſent to deſtroy thoſe, that hide themſelves, ſo Exod.23. 28. and Joſh. 24. 12. by weak means God will confound the mighty, as Pharaoh by flyes, and frogs, &c. But he ſaith, that they ſhould not be driven out all at once, but by little, leaſt the wilde beaſts ſhould multiply againſt them. If that Deut. 9. 3. thou ſhalt deſtroy them quickly ſeemeth to be againſt this, it is eaſily reconciled, they ſhould deſtroy ſo many of them, quickly, as was neceſſary to make room for them to inhabit, but the reſt by degrees. How this was accompliſhed, and how many of their kings were ſoon deſtroyed, ſee Joſh.10.24. and Chap.12.7. & 9.24. even to 31. But for the fulfilling of this, that they ſhould not drive them all out at once, ſee Joſh. 15.63. And beſides the reaſon here rendred, leſt the wilde beaſts of the field ſhould multiply upon them, there is another rendred, Judg.3.1, 2. &c. that by this remnant he might prove them and chaſtiſe them afterwards for their ſins, as Judg. 2. 21, 22. For becauſe of their ſins he there threatned never to drive them out. This promiſe then, that none of them ſhould be able to ſtand before them was conditional, if they obeyed his Lawes, and for a means to make them the more careful to do this, and more fearful of offending, the driving of them all out at once was deferred. The Lords hand is not ſhortned, that he cannot help, but our ſins do ſeparate between our God and us, neither may we ever expect the fulfilling of his gracious promiſes to us, but when we ſerve and obey him. Again note, that enemies and afflictions are neceſſary to keep us from pride, ſecurity, and diſobedience. The hornets here promiſed to be ſent, and Exod. 23, Verſ. 28. to drive out their enemies ſaith Rabanus, were never ſent, that we read of, and therefore by them the ſtings and inward prickings through fear, to the conſuming of their enemies are to be underſtood, for hereby they were weakned and made to flee before them.

Verſ.22.

Note.

Iſa.59.1.

Rabanus.

Moreover he applyeth the reaſon, leſt the beaſts of the field multiply upon thee; to us, when our ſpiritual enemies, our ſins ſubdued unto us, we muſt take heed, that the beaſts, pride, boaſting, and vain-glory, grow not upon us, to deſtroy us, unto which we may add, ſecurity, all moſt dangerous to to Chriſtians.

The myſtery.

Again, the leaving of ſome enemies ſtill unſubdued, who were weaker, when the ſtronger were deſtroyed, ſheweth, that even to thoſe, to whom God giveth greater gifts, he giveth not the leſſer, that there may ever be ſomthing to humble them, and to ſtrive againſt, and ſeeing when they ſtrive they cannot prevail, they may acknowledge, that the good things which they have attained, they have not of themſelves, who by their own ſtrength are not able to attain the leaſt. Thus when ſin is expelled, the virtue of humility and holy ſollicitude being brought in, the invaſion of the aforeſaid beaſts moſt dangerous ſhall be prevented, whereas if theſe virtues be not brought in, the houſe will be found empty, and ſeven evil ſpirits will enter, and the latter end will be more dangerous, then the beginning.

Matth.12.43.

Touching the fifth, verſ.25,26. the graven images of their gods muſt not onely be burnt, but the gold and ſilver of them conſumed with fire upon pain of being accurſed, like them, if any preſumed to do otherwiſe, reſerving and bringing any of this treaſure into his houſe. By graven images, molten images are alſo underſtood, which are mentioned Eſay 30. 22. and all the coverings, ornaments and appurtenances thereof. But images made by the heathen for beauty only, and not for idolatry, are lawful, ſaith Maimony, for they be the graven images of their gods onely, which are forbidden, that is, both they and the things, that ſerve them, and which are offered to them, or made for them, they are all unlawful for any uſe.

5.

Verſ.25,26.

Maimony.

Note. By this ordinance it appeareth, in how great abomination the Lord had idols, in that the very metals and things about them, were counted ſo filthy, as that they could never be purged or made fit for uſe any more, wherefore idolatry is a moſt foul and filthy ſin. If it be demanded, whether the things about idols be unlawful likewiſe for us to put to any uſe at this day, Calvin. I anſwer with Calvin, that this was but a temporary precept, and therefore in this time of the Goſpel, wherein the Apoſtle ſaith, all things are lawful, bindeth not, but to abhor idols, and all their appurtenances. This gold and ſilver about idols is called accurſed, and it is threatned, that they ſhall be curſed, if they take any of it, here Cherem is put for accurſed, ſignifying cut off or ſeparated, and not onely things ſeparated to utter deſtruction are thus called, but alſo the gold and ſilver of Jerico, which muſt come into the Lords treaſury; it was Cherem, curſed to any that ſhould take it, and brought a curſe, that is, cutting off, as to Achan. The Rabbins in explaining what things are accurſed and made unlawful through idols, ſay that it is any thing made by man for that purpoſe, but any creature, as mountain, tree, fountain or beaſt, which the heathen have worſhipped and ſo turned into idols, are lawful notwithſtanding, but a beaſt being killed for the ſervice of an idol, is unlawful, if it be his own, that killed it, otherwiſe not; ſo Maimony.

Joſ.6. 17,18, 19. Joſ.7. Maimony treatiſe of Idolatry, chap. 8.

Chap. VIII.

And hitherto of the ſecond particular of the Exhortations after the propoſal of the law; now followeth the third, from hence to ch. 9. 7. being an exhortation to remember Gods ſingular mercies towards them, and not to aſcribe their victories to their own proweſs. And here again is firſt a commemoration of mercies paſt guarded with exhortation before and behind, verſ.1,2,3,4,5,6. 2. A deſcription of the good land, to the poſſeſſion whereof they were going, verſ.7,8,9. 3. A caveat againſt forgetting God, and ſelf-conceitedneſſe, teaching them, from whom all good cometh, verſ. 10,11,&c. to verſ.19. 4. A commination, if they ſinned hereagain, verſ. 19, 20. 5. A repetition of Gods going before them to expel their enemies, chap.9.1,2,3. 6. A caveat not to aſcribe their future victories to their own righteouſneſſe, but to Gods mercy, verſe 4, 5, 6.

3 Particular.

Verſ. 1. Touching the firſt, he beginneth with exhortation, verſ. 1. to keep all Gods Commandements that it might go well with them: then to enforce it the more, he commemorateth ſingular favours paſt, the long way and the long time, that God led them in the wilderneſſe, even 40 years, thus humbling and proving them with hunger, but then feeding them with Manna, keeping their garments from waxing old, and their feet from ſwelling all that time, verſ. 2,3,4,5. Laſtly, he concludeth with the ſame exhortation, verſ. 6. For theſe words, to know what was in thine heart, the Verſ. 2. vulgar Latine hath, to make known; verſ. 2. the meaning being hereby ſet forth: for God needeth not to uſe any means to know any thing in man, ſith that of himſelf he knoweth what is in every one; but by ſending afflictions he maketh known and manifeſteth, what vice or what grace is in mens hearts, a faithful heart truſteth in God in adverſity, but an unfaithful uttereth murmurings, Pſal.78.40,41.

Verſ. 3. Rabanus. that man liveth not by bread onely, but by every word, that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord.] Here, ſaith Rabanus, is intimated a double ſubſtance in man; one of the body ſuſtained by bread, the other of the ſoul fed by the Word of God, and ſuſtained by faith wrought hereby; for thus a man cometh to be in Chriſt, and is a new creature, walking in newneſſe of life, and ſo this may be applyed unto him, which here followeth, his garment garment waxeth not old, and his feet ſwelleth not, becauſe he that goeth in the way of good works, is kept unhurt, according to that, God knoweth the way of the juſt, and the way of the wicked ſhall periſh. Thus alſo many Expoſitors more. But Calvin better, by every word of God, underſtandeth any way that God willeth to ſuſtain men, ſometime miraculouſly ſupplying them with other things inſtead of ordinary bread, as he did the Iſraelites with Manna, ſometime by his immediate power without any thing, as Eliſha and Moſes were ſuſtained 40 dayes without any food. That they might know and believe, that God had other wayes to ſuſtain them, as long as he pleaſed, beſides the ordinary of common food, he fed them 40 years with Manna, and that in every want they might truſt in his providence. Moreover he ſaith, that this is ſpoken to draw their minds up to God, acknowledging, that it is by his power that they are preſerved at all times, even when it is not ſo apparently ſeen, as when they were fed with ordinary food; for never doth man live by bread only, but by every word of God, although in ordinary times he is moſt unapt to look into this. Now that according to this interpretation only the bodily food is meant, and not the ſpiritual by the word here ſpoken of, appeareth by our Lords producing of this paſſage, Matth. 4. 4. to beat off a temptation to turn ſtones into bread, it being, as if he had ſaid, there needeth no ſuch miraculous tranſmutation to be made, for man liveth not by bread only, but any way, that God hath appointed, even without all ſuſtenance, when he pleaſeth thus to ſuſtain him. And according to this ſenſe it beſt agreeth to this place, ſeeing by this experience ſo many years they might well learn to truſt in Gods providence in all times of want, becauſe they ſaw, that he could ſuſtain them, when ordinary means failed, by extraordinary. Ainſworth applyeth it to the written Word of God, the ground of faith, Rom.10.17. which they, that have abiding in them, ſhall be fed aſſuredly in ſoul and body, Pſal.37.3. but I reſt in the former.

Pſal. 1.

Calvin.

Ainſworth.

Thy garment waxed not old] That is, was not worn out with age, as the Sept. hath it both here and Deut.29.5. Nehem.9.21. ſo that God did not onely ſhew a miracle in their food, but alſo in their clothing, that we may learn for all theſe to truſt in him, and not to take care, what we ſhall eat or drink, or wherewith we ſhall be cloathed.

Verſ. 4.

Matth. 6. 31, 32.

and thy foot ſwelled not] Deut.29.5. thy ſhoe waxed not old upon thy foot. the Cald. and Sept. thy ſhoes were not bare or broken: but the not ſwelling of the feet in this place ſeemeth to imply their preſervation from ſurbating, when they travelled ſo long through a dry and hard wilderneſſe full of ſands, and ſo their preſervation in bodily health and ſtrength.

As a man chaſteneth his ſon, ſo God chaſtened thee] This is again propounded to be conſidered, Prov.3.12. Pſal.94.12. Heb. 12. 9, 10. and to know this in the heart, as is here ſaid, is by experience and feeling from the heart to acknowledge and to make uſe of afflictions accordingly; ſee a like phraſe, Joſh.23.14.

Verſ. 5.

Touching the ſecond, verſ. 7,8,9. For the Lord thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains, and depths, &c. a land of wheat, and barly, vines and figtrees, pomgranats, oyl olive and honey, &c.] By a good land is meant a fruitful land, and becauſe plenty of waters conduce unto fruitfulneſſe, here are ſaid to be brooks of water, and depths, that is, not ſhallow and with little, but much water in them for the uſe of men and cattel, Pſal.104.10,11. By oyl olive, are meant olive trees, yielding oyl, ſo the Cald. olives, that make oyl. And it is added, that they ſhould eat bread without ſcarceneſſe, but for ſin they were ſcanted herein, Ezech. 4. 16. as is threatned Deut.28.30,33,39.

Verſ.7,8,9.

Whoſe ſtones are iron, and out of whoſe mountains thou mayſt dig braſſe] This is peculiarly applyed to Aſher, Deut. 33. 25. but Job 28.2. iron is ſaid to be taken out of the duſt, and braſſe out of the ſtone, Deut.11.10,11. this commendation of this land is further amplified by comparing it with Egypt, becauſe although that was a moſt fruitful countrey by the inundation of the river Nilus, yet it coſt great labour to make ditches and channels to bring the water into all parts, which labour ſhould be ſpared in Canaan, becauſe there the land was all watered from time to time with rain, which fell not in Egypt.

If it ſhall ſeem incredible, that the land of Canaan was then ſo fruitful, ſeeing it is now ſo barren, and before this in the dayes of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob there were divers families in that land. I anſwer, it is not to be doubted but by Gods ſingular bleſſing it was made at their entrance to exceed in fruitfulneſſe, a token whereof was the cluſter of grapes and other fruits brought thence by the ſearchers, Numb.13. but now for ſin it is in barrenneſſe made like Sodom, as is threatened Deut.29.23.

The Myſtery. By the good Land of Canaan, heaven was figured out, wherein there is no want, but fulneſſe of joy for ever, and the ſtate of the Church of the faithful here, who are refreſhed with the Spirit, as with waters, Joel 3.18. Ezech. 47. 1. Revel.22.1. Pſal. 65. 10. and as with fine wheat flowr and wine and honey, Pſal.81.16. & 147.14. Cantic.8.2. And as the faithfull enjoy ſuch comforts of the Spirit, ſo they yield fruit to refreſh others, as the pomgranate tree, Cantic.4.13. c.6.11. Hoſ.10.1. c.14.7. Pſal.1.3.& 52. 10. and in the Church is braſſe and iron to make the ſhield of faith, the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, &c. Eph.6.12,13. and God is a wall of fire and of braſſe about it.

Ver.10,11. Touching the third, verſ.10,11,&c. When thou haſt eaten, and art full, thou ſhalt bleſſe the Lord, &c. Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God in not keeping his Commandements.] Three things are here given warning of; 1. That they give thanks unto God, when they have eaten and filled themſelves. 2. Not to ſhew unthankfulneſſe by neglecting Gods Commandements in the midſt of their proſperity and abundance, when he hath ſo greatly obliged them unto him, in bringing them out of Egypt, providing for and guiding them in the way, and feeding them with Manna; and finally after many afflictions doing them ſo much good, verſ.11,12,13,14, 15,16. 3. Not to aſcribe their wealth and plenty to themſelves and their own power, but to Gods bleſſing, whereby wealth is gotten, verſ. 17, 18.

Heb. 12.11.

For the firſt, the wicked are ſaid to eat and not to be ſatisfied, Mich. 6 14. Hag.1.6. and this is a further favour added to the godly to have meat to eat and to be ſatisfied, Prov.13.25. Pſal.147.14. From this precept of bleſſing God, when they had eaten, the Rabbins teach, that after eating every one was bound to bleſſe, that is, to praiſe God, and after drinking likewiſe, although they ate but one morſel, or drank but one little draught, and not unto fulneſſe, and as after, ſo before eating and drinking, and before ſmelling to any ſweet thing, and before the doing of any thing in the law commanded. And not onely men, but alſo women and children, that they might be trained up to the Commandements; and unclean perſons were to bleſſe alſo, thus Maimony. Thus the Lord Jeſus hath taught us in his own example to bleſſe God before meat alſo, Matth.14.19,20. Mar. 14.22. Luc.22.19. And in every thing, ſaith the Apoſtle, give thanks, 1 Theſſ.5.17. 1 Tim.4.4. 1 Cor.10.30.

Grace before and after meat.

Maimony of Bleſſings, c.1. Sect. 1.

Ver.13,14. For the ſecond, hereby is ſhewed, that to tranſgreſs againſt Gods Laws is to forget God, as Pſal. 106. 19,20. Jer. 2. 32. Pſal. 103. 18. and that in proſperity we are moſt apt thus to forget him; ſo Hoſ.13. 6. it is complained, that they did, when they were full, their hearts were lifted up and they forgat God, firſt pride cometh of proſperity and plenty, and then this forgeting as Calvin noteth; wherefore pride is ſpecially to be taken the heed of by the wealthy, 1 Tim. 6. 17. His leading them through great and terrible wilderneſs was ſpoken of before, Chap. 1.19. but onely

Verſ. 15.

it

it is here amplified, wherein were fiery Serpents and Scorpions and drought; see the notes there, for the water brought out of the flint, Numb. 20. and Exod.17.6.

For the third, for these words, hath gotten me this wealth, Heb. hath made me this wealth. The Lord would have us all to know, that his blessing maketh rich, as Prov. 10. vers. 22. how they sinned herein, see Hos. 2. vers. 8. Touching the fiery serpents spoken of vers. 15. Rabanus saith, it was called dipsas, from thirst, because it killeth those that were stung by thirst, they were so small that they could scarce be seen, when they were trodden, and killed, before their poyson was felt; rightly therefore figuring out heresies, which be divers, as these serpents, but all mortiferous, in the midst of which God preserveth his faithful servants. As wealth in Canaan figuring out the Church was the gift of God, so grace here and glory hereafter are in no part to be ascribed to our selves, but to Gods mercy alone. Rabanus.

Touching the fourth, vers. 19, 20. if they disobeyed and served other gods, he testifieth against them, that they should surely perish, as the nations, of whom they learned this, perished. For these words, I testifie against you, the Septuagint hath, I take heaven and earth to Witnesse against you; and thus indeed Moses also speaketh, Deut. 30.19. for, surely perish, it is also, perishing ye shall perish. The gold and silver gotten in greatest abundance shall not save them that transgres, when the day of destruction cometh, Zeph.1.18. 4.

Chap. IX.

HEre followeth the fifth, vers.1,2,3. where the people inhabiting Canaan are first set forth, to be greater and mightier then they, even the sons of Anak, Giants, that none could stand against, dwelling in great Cities and fenced up to heaven: and then the Lords going before them to expel these, is mentioned, as it must needs be, that the greater and the more mighty might be driven out before the lesser and weaker. 5. Vers.1,2. Vers.3.

Thou art to passe over Jordan this day,] That is, very shortly, day is put here for time, comprehending many daies, as Deut.1.1. and Numb.34.12. and for Cities walled and very great, and the sons of Anak there, see before Numb.13.28.

The Lord goeth before thee, as a consuming fire.] Against which no strength of man is able to stand, see Deut. 4. 24. and whereas it is said, that they should drive them out quickly, see Deut.7.22.

Touching the sixth, vers. 4, 5, 6. It is twice repeated, that God gave them not that good land for their own righteousnesse, but for the wickednesse of the inhabitants they were expelled, and for Gods mercy and his oath to their fathers, the Israelites were brought in, when as they were unworthy, being a stiff-necked people. Therefore he warneth them to take heed, that they never say, for their own righteousesse, God brought them in thither. And he nameth not onely righteousnes, but also uprightnes of heart, v.5. least any should think, that although for their fails in their works they are not worthy, yet for their upright and good intentions they are. In like manner it is not for the good works or good meaning of any man that God bringeth him to the heavenly Canaan, but onely for his mercy and promise sake, Ephes.2.8,9. but for their wickednes, the wicked are deprived hereof, Jude ver. 14, 15. This title of a stifnecked people given to them seemeth to be taken from the Lord, Exod.32.9,10. see Ezech.20. 43. Ch.36.31,32. speaking to the same effect. 6. Vers.4,5,6.

And hitherto of the third particular; now followeth the fourth, being a commemoration of their rebellions formerly commited, most aptly brought 4. Particular.

Verſ.7.

brought next to their ſtifneckedneſſe, verſ.6. as an illuſtration thereof, and of their own great unworthineſs. In reckoning up of their rebellions, he firſt ſpeaketh generally, ever ſince they came out of Egypt, telling them that they had been rebellious. Secondly, he inſiſteth upon that act of rebellion whereby the Lord was moſt provoked at Horeb, where the Law was given, when they worſhipped the golden calf, not omitting other particular rebellions alſo, as at Taberah, Maſſah, and Kibroth-hattaavah, verſ. 22. and at Kadeſhbarnea, verſ. 23. In relating their ſin at Horeb he firſt ſheweth, what it was with all the circumſtances, and how greatly God was provoked thereby, verſ.8,9,10, &c. to verſ. 18. Secondly, how long Moſes humbled himſelf and faſted and prayed for them, before he could avert the anger of the Lord, Verſ. 18,19,20,21. Thirdly, he addeth four other rebellions, verſ.22,23,24. Fourthly, he repeateth that of his faſting and praying for them, verſ. 25,26, &c. to the end of the Chapter. 5. He commemorateth the renuing of the Law in two tables, which he was commanded to prepare, Chap. 10. v.1,2,3.4,5. Sixthly, certain removes to the place, where Aaron dyed, another rebellion of theirs being herein intimated, when they wanted water, Numb.20. for which he was cut off, before the entring into Canaan, Verſ.6. Seventhly, ſome other removes which were made after Aarons death, but theſe being onely mentioned, he reflecteth upon the Tribe of Levi, of which Aaron was, commemorating the ſeparating of that Tribe to the ſervice of the Sanctuary, and to live upon it and therefore to have none inheritance in Canaan, which was firſt ordained, Numb.3. and again, Numb. 18. the ſame words being uſed, that here. Wherefore Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren, for the Lord is his inheritance, verſe 20. which alſo is brought in to put them in mind of the conſpiracy of Korah and his company and of their mutining hereupon, which was another great rebellion, provoking the Lord to wrath againſt them, Numb. 16. But all this is to be underſtood to have been done before Aarons death, not after, according to the order here followed; for Moſes reſpected not order in every thing in this diſcourſe, but was intent to the touching upon all their rebellions onely, and this part is had v.erſ.7,8,9. Laſtly, he concludeth with repeating again with how long a times interceſſion and faſting he prevailed for their preſervation, and a grant, that they ſhould go in and poſſeſs the Land of Canaan, verſ. 10, 11. where the third time he ſpeaketh of his forty dayes and forty nights faſting, as if he could never ſufficiently inculcate, how difficult it was to reconcile Gods favour to them, ſo great was his indignation againſt them, whereby they might be the better prepared to receive his Exhortations next following, to take heed of rebelling again hereafter.

1. Verſ.8,9,10, &c.

For the firſt, from v.8. to v.18. ſee Exod.32. here being nothing elſe, but a repetition of the ſame.

2. Verſ.18, 19. Calvin.

For the ſecond, verſ. 18, 19, &c. Moſes faſted not, ſaith Calvin, thoſe forty dayes by way of ſorrow, it being as eaſie for him to faſt, as for the Angels, but thus ſequeſtring himſelf, as it were from men, and renouncing an humane life he was gathered unto God, becauſe without his doing thus, ſo great a wickedneſſe could not be expiated. This his faſting was, when he was called up into the mount with his new Tables prepared for the renuing of the covenant, being fruſtrated by their Idolatry, Exod.34.28. ſo that his praying was not onely at his being in the mount, but before, whereupon God ſhewed himſelf to be reconciled by calling him up and cauſing him to prepare new Tables, wherein he might write the covenant again in token of his reconciliation, yet he prayed alſo, when he was gone up, that he might be further confirmed touching the ſame. And he further ſaith, although the ſecond faſt of Moſes be ſpoken of three times, yet it wus but once; thus Calvin, and Junius to the ſame effect, when I had prevailed by my prayers for pardon, I was with the Lord in the mount again 40 dayes to receive the Law renewed, which was by that fowle ſinne of idolatry fruſtrated.

Junius in c. 10.1.

had

The words uſed here, and v.25. ſeem to imply 40 dayes and 40 nights, firſt ſpent in faſting and prayer to obtain pardon, and thoſe c.10. 10. other 40 dayes, and 40 nights in receiving the Law again, after that at the command of the Lord he had prepared two new Tables for the Law to be written upon. But becauſe two times onely of his faſting are mentioned, Exod.24. 18. and Exod. 34. 28. I have already rejected that opinion. But yet I cannot thinke, that he prayed ſometime without faſting to obtain mercy for them in this caſe, and much leſſe that he faſted without being humbled for their ſinne, becauſe it is expreſly ſaid, I fell down before the Lord 40, dayes and 40 nights, I did neither eat bread nor drinke water, becauſe of all your ſinnes, &c. for I was afraid of the anger, &c. and v. 26. I prayed therefore, &c. It is rather therefore to be held, as I conceive, that the 40 dayes and 40 nights three times ſpoken of was all one and the ſame time, from his firſt returning to the Lord to pray (after the ſtamping of the golden calf to powder, and execution done upon 3000 offenders, as Exod. 32.) untill his laſt coming back again, the covenant being renewed in the compaſſe of which time, he prayed, as Exod. 32. 31. and could not at the firſt prevail, but to have an Angell ſent with them, then he deſcended and brought the people word, and removed the tabernacle out of the camp, prayed therein, for the Lords preſence to goe with him, and prevailed, Exodus 33. And laſtly, having prepared new tables, he went up again, &c. Exod. 34. If it be objected againſt this, that he is ſaid to have ſtayed in the mount 40 dayes, and 40 nights, chap.10.10. it may well be underſtood, that from this firſt going up to his laſt coming down, thus much time was expired, in all which the holy man was ſo intent to this pacification, that he utterly neglected to take any food, God miraculouſly ſuſtaining him, that in all this time he fainted not for want thereof.

He ſaith, God was angry with Aaron alſo to have deſtroyed him, but he prayed and obtained pardon for him, which was not particularly ſpoken of before. Verſ.20.

He ſaith, he tooke their ſinne, meaning the calf, and ſtamped it to powder, &c. the calf made for idolatry is called their ſinne, becauſe hereby they had ſiunen, ſee the like phraſe Eſa.31.7. Verſ. 21.

And hitherto of the ſecond, touching the third, v.22, 23, 24. their other rebellions were firſt at Taberah, of which Numb. 11,1. 2 At Maſſah, which was before that Exod. 17. although it be here placed after. 3 At Kibroth-hattaavah, Numb.11. 34. 4 At Kadeſh-barneah, Numb. 13. and he concludeth, yee have been rebellious againſt the Lord, ſince the day that I knew you. Implying many other rebellions, as Numb. 16. Numb.20. &c. which for brevities ſake are omitted. 3. Ver.22,23, 24.

Touching the fourth, v. 25. Becauſe in mentioning his falling down before the Lord, v.18. he had ſaid nothing of his praying, and the form uſed by him, he here repeateth his falling down 40 dayes and 40 nights; that is ſometime praying, and then having an uncomfortable anſwer, bringing them word thereof, then praying again, and preparing new tables of ſtone, and receiving the Law the ſecond time, as hath been already ſhewed. And then remembreth the words, which he uſed, v. 26. O Lord God deſtroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou haſt redeemed by thy greatneſſe, &c. This prayer is no where had before, but when he returned up to the Lord again, he is ſaid to have uſed other words, If thou wilt forgive this ſinne, if not, blot me out of the book which thou haſt written, Exod. 32. 32. yet before his firſt coming down, he prayed to this effect, Exod. 32.11, 12. For theſe words, Thus I fell down before the Lord 40 dayes and 40 nights, as I fell down at the firſt. Junius hath it, therefore I fell down before the Lord 40 dayes and 40 nights, wherein 4. Verſ. 25. Verſ.26,27, 28,29. Iunius.

wherin I ſaid that I fel down, v. 25. the Heb. word tranſlated as is אשר ſignifiing, which or wherein, as Junius rendreth it, and theſe words, at the firſt, are ſupplyed by the tranſlatours, and therefore they being left out, it is better to reade it, as Junius doth, ſupplying theſe words I ſaid, for ſo the time is apparently the ſame with that, v. 18. whereas this other reading maketh it doubtfull, whether another time of faſting and praying be not meant here. The vulgar Latine hath it, quibus eum ſuppliciter deprecabar, ne deleret vos.

Chap. X.

Verſ. 1,2. 5. TOuching the fifth cap. 10. 1. 2. And the Lord ſaid unto me at that time, hew thee two Tables of ſtone like unto the firſt, and come up to me into the mount, and make an arke of wood, &c.] This was done, Exod. 34. 1. but no mention is there made of the Ark, but Exod. 25. 10. ſo that here is an hyſteron proteron, the making of two new Tables, which was laſt, being placed firſt. And yet becauſe Moſes mentioneth them here in this order, it is to be held, that the Ark making was now again appointed the ſecond time, as the tables for the Law were made again, the firſt being broken, for the uſe of which the Ark ſerved. For although the Arke was appointed to be made before, yet nothing was herein hitherto done, nor the materialls called for, of which it was to be made, till Exod. 35. and as the covenant, ſo the ordinance of making the Ark to keep it in was by that fowle ſinne of theirs fruſtrated; and therefore it was neceſſary, that it ſhould be again ſpoken of at this time. But v. 3. where he ſaith, that he made an Ark, and hewed two tables of ſtone, the order is plainly inverted, for theſe tables were hewed firſt, Exod. 34. and the Ark made by Bezaleel, Exod. 37. For it is not probable, that Moſes himſelf made a temporary Ark to put the tables in, in the mean ſeaſon: whereas the Lord both ſaith here, that he would write upon theſe tables, and v. 4. it is ſaid, that he did write, but Exod. 34. 27. that Moſes wrot theſe words, ſee how it is to be reconciled, upon that place, and the myſtery herein, v. 5. And I put the tables in the Ark which I had made, that is, not immediately, but when the Ark and Tabernacle, and all things about it were finiſhed, and ſet up, Exod. 40. 20. and he ſaith, that he made it, becauſe he appointed it to be made, and ſaw to the making of it.

Verſ. 5.

Verſ. 6,7. Touching the ſixth v. 6. 7. And the children of Iſrael tooke their iourney from Beeroth of the children of Iaakan to Moſera, there Aaron died, &c. From Beeroth of the children of Iaakan is from the wells of that people, for ſo Beeroth ſignifieth; what place this was, is uncertain, becauſe it is no where mentioned before.

Ainſworth. Some think it is that called Bene-Jaakan, Numb. 33. 31. becauſe Benei Hebr. ſignifieth ſonnes, and Beeroth, the wells or pits of them not before ſpoken of, are here mentioned, to denote in what part of the land of theſe children of Jaakan the Hebrewes then were. But becauſe they are ſaid, Numb. 33. 30. to have removed from Moſeroth to come to Benei-Jaakan; but here from Beeroth of the ſons of Jaakan to Moſera, which Ainſworth, himſelf acknowldgeth to be the ſame with that Moſeroth, onely the plural being here changed into the ſingular: that of Aben Ezra is rather to be preferred, that Beeroth of the ſonnes of Jaakan was not all one with the Bene-Jaakan ſpoken of Numb. 33. 31. but another place, otherwiſe called Kadeſh; for Kadeſh was in the border of the Edomites countrey, ſee Numb. 20 and Iaakan came of Eſau or Edom, 1 Chron. 1. 42. and from Kadeſh they are ſaid to have come to the place where Aaron died, Numb. 20. 22. And as for Moſerah, he ſuppoſeth that the wildernes, where mount Hor ſtood, might be ſo called, ſeeing Aaron died upon mount Hor, and that was many journeyes from Moſeroth, even 7. ſee Numb. 33.30. and 37,38. Iunius, who is the authour of the former, ſaith, that Moſerah is here named after, although before Bene-Iaakan, Numb. 33.30. per συναθροίσμον, and to make it the more probable, he rendreth the words thus from the Wells of the children of Iaakan and Moſerah; but here is no word ſignifying and, and therefore it is better to follow our tranſlation to Moſerah, although there be no word neither, ſignifying to, becauſe to is commonly to be ſupplied in ſpeaking of removes from place to place, as here immediately after, v.7. Moreover it is ſaid, there Aaron died, which muſt have reference to Moſerah, which cannot be that, Numb. 33. 30. becauſe that was too farre diſtant; but ſome other as hath been already ſaid. His ſpeaking of Aarons dying here ſheweth the reaſon, why paſſing over all other removes to this he mentioneth this next to their coming from Horeb, viz. to put them in mind of their rebellion. Numb. 20. which cauſed Aarons cutting off on this ſide Jordan. Iunius.

Aben Ezra.

was

From thence they iourneyed to Gudgodah, and to Iotbath, &c. Numb 33,32,33. they are ſaid to have removed to Horhagidgad, and from thence to Jotbathah, that is, the mount Gidgad and Jotbath, the names but little differing from theſe here uſed; wherefore they are thought by ſome to be the ſame: but becauſe removes were after the death of Aaron, it is rather to be held, that this Jotbath was that place for the plenty of waters there, otherwiſe called Beer, a well. Numb. 21.16. to which they came after that Aaron was dead, for here it is accordingly deſcribed, a land of rivers of water, and then Gudgodah happily was the place on the other ſide of Arnon not named before, to which they came next before this, Numb. 2.13. Verſ 7.

Touching the ſeventh, v. 8,9. At that time the Lord ſeparated the tribe of Levi to bear the Ark of the covenant, &c. This ſeparating of Levi was long before Aarons death, and the removes immediately before commemorated, and therefore by theſe words at that time, is not to be underſtood the time ſpoken of v.7,8. but the time, whileſt they were about mount Horeb or Sinai, as v.1. and yet not till the tabernacle erected, for after this God ſpeaking out of the tabernacle appointed the tribe of Levi to be ſeparated for his ſervice, Numb. 3. and after the rebellion of Corah renewed this ordinance again, Numb. 18. appointing their maintenance. So that having gone in his diſcourſe far from Horeb, he here returneth again to ſpeak of the tribe of Levi, of which Aaron was, and of the Levites being peculiarly choſen to miniſter about the tabernacle, whileſt they were there, becauſe one great rebellion had bin about this alſo, Numb. 16. for which many periſhed. 7. Verſ. 8.9.

Touching the eighth, v.10.11. And I ſtayed in the mount, as at the firſt time, 40 dayes and 40 nights, &c. This was twice before ſpoken of, and here he concludeth with it again, to ſhew that by his interceſſion the Lord was reconciled unto them, he being herein a type of Chriſt, by whoſe mediation alone, we can recover Gods favour, which we have loſt by our ſins. 8. Verſ. 10.11.

And hitherto of the fourth particular in the exhortations after the law, now followeth the fifth, being a preſſing of them with more exhortations upon the premiſes from hence to the end of ch. 11. The arguments here uſed to preſſe to obedience, are divers. 1 Becauſe this is all, which the Lord requireth for all his benefits, and to be for time to come preſerved from his judgements, and that they might injoy good things, v.12.13. And now Iſrael, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord, to walk in his wayes, to love and to ſerve, &c. The word rendred require is aske, or crave; for ſo the Lord condeſcendeth unto us, Mich. 6.8 2 Cor. 5.20. that he might move our hard hearts the more, for loving God, ſee before, Deut. 6. 5. for fearing him, Deut. 6. 13. and likewiſe for ſerving him. To walk in his wayes is to keep his commandements, as is expreſſed, v. 13. and Pſ. 25.4,5. and he is neither feared, nor loved, nor ſerved, but ſo farre forth as his commandements are kept And theſe, he ſaith, they are commanded to keep

5 Particular.

Arg. 1.

Arg. 2. keep for their good, Prov. 9. 12. Deut. 6. 24. The ſecond argument, becauſe God being Lord over all the world, out of his free grace choſe them above all other people, verſ. 14. 15. &c. This argument is here fir ſtpropounded.

Verſ. 14,15. Behold the heavens, and the heavens of heavens are the Lords, the earth alſo, &c. By the heaven of heavens, the third and higheſt heaven, and all the holy Angels there is meant, 2 Cor. 12.2. So Targ. Jona. paraphraſeth upon it, the heaven of heavens, and companies of Angels, which are there to miniſter before him, ſee the like ſpeech, 1 Kings 8. 27. and Nehem. 9.6. Secondly, he exhorteth hereupon to circumciſion of heart, and not to be any more ſtif-necked, that is, neither to have rebellion in their hearts, nor outwardly to ſhew it. In ſaying be no more ſtif-necked, he hath reference to Deut. 9.6. where they are ſaid to have been ſuch, and inſtances are given of their ſtif-neckedneſſe: of the circumciſion of the heart, ſee alſo Rom. 2.29. Col. 2.11. Phil. 3.3. Deut. 30.6. Ier. 9.26. Act. 7. 51. to be circumciſed in heart is to have the rebellious affections and motions of the heart mortified, the fore-skin of the heart being that naturall corruption, from whence all theſe ariſe.

Targum Jon.

Verſ. 16.

Verſ. 17. Thirdly, he amplifieth the argument taken from Gods power over all, v. 17. For the Lord your God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, mightie and terrible, which regardeth not perſons, nor taketh reward, ſo that if ye will not be moved in way of gratitude towards him, who hath peculiarly choſen you to flie all ſinne and rebellion for time to come, ye can expect nothing but deſtruction from his Almighty power, no reſpect being had unto you, although now in much mercy taken to be his peculiar people. God is here called God of gods in reſpect of all others that have this title, as idols, 1 Cor. 8.5,6. the Angels, Pſalm. 8. 5. Heb. 2.7. and Magiſtrates, Pſalm. 82. It is ſaid alſo that he reſpecteth not perſons, 2 Chron. 19. 7. Iob 34. 19. Acts 10.34. Rom. 2. 11. Gal. 2. 6. &c. and taking of rewards is ſaid to be done by the unjuſt to pervert judgement, 1 Sam. 8. 3. and therefore the moſt juſt Iudge of all will take none. And that he is no reſpecter of perſons, nor will take reward, he proveth, verſe 18. He doth execute the iudgement of the fatherleſſe and widow, and loveth the ſtranger, &c.] For to take rewards is againſt the innocent, Pſalm. 15. 5. and not to judge juſtly the fatherleſſe and widow, Eſay 1.16, 17. Fourthly, hereupon he exhorteth to love the ſtranger, &c. verſe 19. and not tranſgreſſe by doing them, or any other helpleſſe perſons any wrong, or denying reliefe unto them in their need, which were not to love them, James 2. Fifthly, from this particular he proceedeth again to inculcate the generall; To fear God, to ſerve and to cleave to him, and to ſwear by his name; inforcing it with a new argument, He is thy praiſe and thy God, and hath done for thee theſe terrible things, &c.] Of cleaving to God ſee before, Deut. 4.4. and after Deut. 11. 22.13. 4.30.20. and Acts 11: 23. 1 Cor. 6. 17. it is as a wife cleaveth to her huſband, being inſeparable from him in her affection. Of ſwearing by his name, Deut. 6.13. He is thy praiſe, that is, thou oughteſt thus alwayes to glorifie him by doing his will, which is to his praiſe. He is thy praiſe ſaith Iunius, that is, the argument of thy praiſe metonymically; ſo Gen. 46.27. Exodus 15:2. and Ier. 17.14. Pſalm. 109:1. Theſe terrible things; the Septuagint render it, Theſe glorious things, meaning both his mercies to them, and judgements upon their enemies, as Pſalm 106: 22. 2 Sam. 7.23.

Verſ. 18.

Verſ. 19.

Verſ. 20.

Verſ. 21:

Iunius:

Verſ. 22: And hereunto he addeth their unſpeakable increaſe from ſeventy to be as the ſtarres in number, as he had alſo ſaid before, Deut. 1.10.

Chap. XI.

THe third Argument, becauſe they had had ſo much experience of Gods great goodneſſe in delivering them out of Egypt, and had ſeen terrible acts of his upon the way, and in particular againſt Dathan, &c. being ſufficient to deter any the moſt hard hearted from ſinning, verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. to verſ. 10. Therefore thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God, and keep his charge, his ſtatutes, judgments, and commandements alway. And know you this day, for I ſpeak not to your children, which have not known or ſeen, &c. By charge, here is meant his cuſtody or obſervation, as Levit. 8. 35. & 18. 30. of ſtatutes and judgments, ſee Chap. 4. 1. He ſaith, that he ſpeaketh not to their children, that had not ſeen, but knew only by hear-ſay, but to them that were eye-witneſſes of Gods moſt mighty geſts, ſo as that if they made not an impreſſion in them to cauſe the better obedience, they ſhould ſhew themſelves moſt ſtupid and ſenſleſſe. He meant not by thus ſaying, that their children and poſterity after them ſhould not be likewiſe bound to love and ſerve God for theſe ſingular favours, for he chargeth them often to recount them to their children, as Exod. 13. 14. Deut. 6. 7, 8. and in this Chapter, verſe 19. but he hereby putteth them on to be Ring-leaders and examples of piety to them. The word rendred chaſtiſements, here, is מוסר by Calvin rendred eruditio, properly ſignifieth nurture both by words and works, and therefore the Cald. hath it, doctrine, or inſtruction; and ſo it is uſed Deut. 4. 36. and 8. 5. Levit. 26. 18. Prov. 1. 2. Touching the acts done for them againſt Pharaoh, ſee Exodus 14. and Exodus 7. 8, 9, 10, &c.

3. Argum. Verſ. 1, 2, 3. Cald. Par.

And what he did to you in the Wilderneſſe, &c.] Of this, ſee Deut. 8. 15, 16. Verſ. 5.

And what he did to Dathan and Abiram.] Of which ſee Numb. 16. This might ſpecially move them to fear to rebel in going beyond the bounds ſet them, although under a pretence of piety, this being the moſt terrible judgment that had yet been ſent amongſt them, even like to that againſt Sodom, Gen. 19. Verſ. 6.

Therefore ye ſhall keep the commandements, &c.] As he began with exhortation, verſ. 1. ſo he here concludeth this paſſage, adding a promiſe, if they obeyed, that they ſhould be ſtrong to enter into that land flowing with milk and honey, &c. Verſ. 8, 9.

4. Argum. Ver. 10, 11, 12.

The fourth Argument is taken from the conſideration of the ſtate of the land of Canaan, into which the Lord would bring them, verſ. 10, 11, 12, &c. to verſ. 22. It is not as the land of Egypt, where thou ſowedſt thy ſeed and wateredſt it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs; But it is a land of hills and valleyes, &c.] In Egypt it never rained, but by the river Nilus all the grounds being plain were watered at one time of the year continually, and when the overflow of waters being gone, the ground grew dry again, they watered all their fields, where their corn grew, with water drawn in ditches, and thence taken with much labour to water them. But in Canaan it was not ſo, the Inhabitants there depended from time to time upon rains falling from the clouds upon hills and valleys, and therefore it would ſtand them in hand to ſerve God diligently, that he being pleaſed might ſend ſeaſonable rains, and not in wrath ſhut up the heavens from raining. Which that they might the better do, he calleth upon them to have Gods Lawes continually in their hearts, to bind them upon their hands, and as frontlets between their eyes, &c. as Deut. 6. 7, 8, 9. where ſee the meaning of all theſe charges. And for the compariſon made between Egypt and Canaan, ſee what hath been ſaid upon occaſion of a like paſſage, Deut. 8. 7, 8, 9.

Whereas it is ſaid, I will give you rain in due ſeaſon, the firſt and the latter Verſ. 14.

rain, it is to be underſtood, that commonly they had but two times of rain in the year in Canaan, the one at the beginning of their year in the moneth anſwering to our September in part, and in part to October, for at this time the year began for civil things, and the other in the moneth Abib, anſwerjng to our March in part, and in part to April; and at this time began their Eccleſ. account of the year, the firſt was ſoon after their corn ſown, the ſecond a little before harveſt, at which times therefore good ſtore of rain falling availed much unto plenty, but if it wanted, or overabounded, ſcarcity enſued. And of the rains of theſe two times it is here ſpoken, the firſt and the latter rain, ſee alſo Joel 2.23. Zechar.10.1. Hoſ.6.3. Jer.5.24.

Touching this that the eyes of the Lord are ſaid alwaies to be upon this land, hereby is meant Gods care and providence for good, as alſo Jer. 40.4. Ezr.5.5. Pſal.34.16. The eyes of the Lord upon any place are like the Sun ſhining upon it, which being kept away by an eclipſe, all things therein do ſuffer, ſo that the aſpect of his eyes is as neceſſary, that a countrey may ſubſiſt and the creatures in it, as the Sun: wherefore it cannot be denyed, but that his eyes are upon all countries to make the ſun to ſhine and the rain to fall ſeaſonably, Act. 14. 17. yea upon thoſe parts, where no man dwelleth, Job.38.26. but they were in a ſingular manner upon the land of Canaan.

5. Argum. The fifth Argument is, becauſe if they were obedient, they ſhould drive out their enemies, and none of them ſhould be able to ſtand before them, Verſ.22,23. ver.22,23,24,25. Every place, whereon the ſoales of your feet ſhall tread, ſhall be yours, from the wilderneſſe, and Lebanon, from the river even the river Euphrates to the uttermoſt ſea ſhall your coaſt be.] See the ſame deſcription of their bounds, Joſh. 1.3,4. where the utmoſt ſea is ſaid to be towards the ſun going down, that is weſtward, Hebr. for utmoſt, is אחרון, the after ſea, or the ſea behind, becauſe the eaſt was counted the forepart of the world, the ſouth the right hand, and the north the left; and Euphrates, Hebr. פרת was eaſt, being called the river κατ' ἐξοχήν, for the greatneſſe thereof, the wilderneſſe was Paran ſouthward, and Lebanon was northward, for the river Euphrates, when this was afterwards accompliſht in Solomons dayes, there is nothing but the river mentioned, the ſame yet being meant, 2 Chron.9.26. of the bounds of that countrey, ſee more fully Numb.34.3. & Exod. 23.31.

6. Argum. The ſixth Argument, becauſe they ſhould be bleſſed, if they obeyed, but otherwiſe accurſed, and he commandeth the bleſſing to be put for this end upon Mount Gerizim, and the curſe upon Mount Ebal, verſ. 26, 27,&c. to the end of the Chapter.

Ver. 26,27, 28, &c. In ſpeaking upon diſobedience, he ſaith, if ye will not obey, &c. but turn aſide out of the way, which I command you this day to go after other gods.] This particular of idolatry is brought for an inſtance, becauſe hereby a man turneth away from all the Law of God, ſo that he, who committeth

Sol. Jarchi. idolatry, is as if he denyed the whole law, thus Solom. Jarchi. Likewiſe verſ.16. this ſame is brought for inſtance, and Chap.8. 19. and in many other places. That idolatry is a breaking of the whole Law alſo, is intimated, Commandement 2. where idolaters are called haters of God, and keeping the Commandements is oppoſed to idolatry. The Mount Gerizim here ſpoken of is ſaid to be

Verſ. 30. over againſt Gilgal in the champion, beſides the plains of Moreh. Gilgal was the place where Joſhua circumciſed the people, Joſh. 5. 9. ſo ſoon as they were gone over Jordan, having this name from the reproach of uncircumciſion, being now rolled away; for

Gen. 12. 6. Talmud Babyl. in Sotah, c. 7. Gilgal is rolling. In the plain of Moreh God appeared firſt unto Abraham, after his coming into Canaan, and this is ſaid to be by Sichem, and here Abraham built an Altar. And this Sichem was Samaria, ſee Joh. 4. 5. ſo that Mount Gerizim was near to Samaria. In Talmud Babyl. it is ſaid, said, that Mount Gerizim and Ebal were in Samaria, and that upon Gerizim the Samaritans had a temple, of which mention is made, 2 Machab. 6.2. and here they did sacrifice calling themselves those, that belong to the blessed Mount, taking occasion thus to erre, as Ainsworth thinketh, from this putting off the blessing here; but Joh. 4.20. it seemeth rather, that they grounded upon the fathers worshipping there, as Abraham and Jacob. Of the manner of putting the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon Mount Ebal, see more Deut.27.12. and Josh.8.32. half the tribes standing by one mount to blesse, and the other half by the other to curse, Joshua reading both the blessings and the curses before them, and then the Levites pronouncing them, when the cursings were read, they upon mount Ebal said Amen; and contrariwise when the blessings were pronounced, they upon Mount Gerizim said Amen, as may be gathered from that which is expressed about the cursing, although nothing be said Deut. 27. of the like answer to the blessing, because Jos. 8. it is said, that he read both the blessings and cursings, as Moses commanded. By putting the blessings and the cursings thus upon two Mountains, which were alwayes conspicuous to the eye, the Lord set up, as it were a continual monument to be seen of that, which was spoken to the ear, that whensoever they looked upon them, they might remember the curses hanging over their heads, if they transgressed, and the blessings ready to follow them, if they obeyed, and so be restrained from sinning, and excited to obedience.

Ainsworth. Samaria, saith Benjamin in itinerario, is in a valley between these two mounts.

Chap. XII.

Hitherto of the proposal of the moral law in the ten Commandements and of the exhortations to keep it. Now followeth the repetition and illustration of the ceremonial and judicial, from hence to Chap. 27. And first that Ordinance touching the place, where they should serve God, is repeated at large, Chap.12.& 13. and all idolatrous places are appointed to be destroyed together with idols, and images, and such as go after them. 2. Divers other ordinances about the service of God are set forth, Chap. 14,&c. to Chap.19. 3. There is a catalogue made of many judicial laws, Chap.19,&c. unto chap. 26. 4. Formes of confession and prayer are added, when they brought their first fruits and tythes, Chap.26. In the first tract again there is first a preparative, vers. 1,2,3. Secondly, the ordinance, vers.4,5,&c. to vers.29. Thirdly, a caveat against hearkening after the manner of the heathen in serving their gods, vers. 29. 39,31, 32. Fourthly, a charge not to hearken to those amongst themselves, that should entice to go after other gods, but to destroy all such, Ghap. 13.

1 Particular. Vers. 1,2,3.

Touching the first, that they might the more acceptably serve God in the place, which he should choose, he first chargeth them to destroy all the places, where the heathen served their gods upon mountaines, and hills, and under green trees, and to demolish their altars, pillars, groves and graven images there, and to put out their names from those places. Touching altars, groves and images, see before, Deut.7.5. of pillars, see what they are, Levit.26.1. If there were any buildings erected any where for these, they must be beaten down, see this executed upon some built by Solomon and by Jeroboam, 2 King 10.27. and Chap. 23. 13. these were the high places so much spoken of in the sacred history; and the green trees were the groves appointed to be cut down, for in such places the heathen delighted to worship and to sacrifice to their gods. For the abolishing of their names, see the like done Numb.32.38. and they are forbidden to name these names, Exod.23.13.

Note. Note hence, that who ſo will ſet up the pure worſhip of God, muſt put down and aboliſh all known Idols and ſuperſtitions in the land, there is no agreement betwixt God and Idols.

2. Particular. Touching the ſecond, verſ. 4,5, &c. ye ſhall not do ſo to the Lord, but to the

Verſ. 4,5,6. place which the Lord ſhall chooſe to put his name there, even to his habitation ſhall ye ſeek, and thither ſhall ye come, and bring your burnt offerings, &c.] The firſt words here are by the Hebrews applyed both to the names of God, to the holy Scriptures, which ſerve to ſet him forth, and to his ſanctuary and Altar and Court. For as the names of Heathen gods are commanded to be aboliſhed, and their Altars and houſes to be deſtroyed, ſo contrariwiſe it was unlawful in any place to raze out any holy name, whereby the bleſſed God is ſet forth, to burn any part or parcel of his holy Scripture, and therefore when it is very old, it muſt be laid up, except it be ſuch, as hath been written by hereticks; and laſtly, to take away one ſtone from his Altar, Sanctuary or Court, by way of deſtroying. Wherefore he that doth thus, ſaith Maimony, was to be beeten. Touching the place appointed for ſacrificing, &c. it is appointed, Levit. 17. but that which is there briefly ſet down, here is declared more largely, for the reaſon of reſtraining them to one place, ſee the notes there. But in that place it is ſaid, that they muſt come to the door of the Tabernacle, here to the place which the Lord ſhall chooſe to put his name there, reſpect being had to the Temple, which ſhould afterwards be built, in which the Lord ſaith, that his name ſhould be, 1 King. 8.29. & 14.21. 2 King. 21.4,9 by his name, as the Cald. hath it, his divine preſence being meant, which dwelt there. To reſtrain them thus to one place was a ſingular means as Rabanus noteth, to preſerve them from idolatry and erroneous worſhip, becauſe here the pure worſhip of God was maintained. Againſt going to other places it is alſo ſpoken, Amos 5.5. In ſaying, to his habitation ſhall ye ſeek; he meaneth that they ſhould come for anſwers from God, and to pray, Exod. 25.22. Numb. 7.89. & 27.21.

Maimony in feſtudei hatorah, Ch. 6.

Cald.

Rabanus. Ideo præcepit in templo & in altari domini ſacrificare, ut ubi religio integra exiſtebat, ibi & cultus congruus exhiberetur.

Verſ. 6. Thither ſhall ye come and bring your ſacrifices and burnt offerings, your tythes and heave offerings of your hand, your vowes and freewill offerings, and the firſtlings of your herd and flocks.] Levit. 17. ſacrifices onely are ſpoken of, but the ſacrifices are here explained to be all theſe, ſin-offerings and peace-offerings, tythes were both of corn, of the herds and flocks Levit. 27. 30,32. and of tythe corn it is ſpoken again, verſ. 17. the heave-offerings of their hand, were the firſt fruits of the earth, Numb. 18.11. ſo called becauſe they muſt bring them in their hands, and they were heaved up before the Lord, Deut. 26.2. Concerning vowes and freewil-offerings, ſee Levit. 7.16. of firſtlings, Numb. 18.15,17.

Verſ. 7. And there ye ſhall eat, &c.] That is, ſuch of theſe holy things, as the people were allowed to eat, Levit. 7. 19,20. and in this Chap. verſ. 17. of the ſin-offerings they might eat nothing but the Prieſts onely, Levit. 7. and ſome tythes were holy, which alſo belonged to the Prieſts, ſee Levit. 27. 30. that ye may rejoyce in all, that ye put your hands unto; that is, that ye may be bleſſed of God in every thing, Deut. 15. 10. & 23. 20. & 28. 8. ye and your houſholds, who are meant by houſholds is more particularly explained, verſ. 18.

Verſ. 8. Ye ſhall not do after all the things, that we do here this day, every man whatſoever is right in his own eyes, &c.] Here the time is ſet, when they ſhould obſerve the former ordinance, viz. when they ſhould be quietly ſetled in the Land of Canaan, for now they were in travel, and therefore could not keep their Paſſeovers and other feaſts, with ſacrifices, or bring tythes &c. as Exod. 13. 5. the time of keeping the Paſſeover, and paying firſt fruits is preciſely ſet down to be, when they ſhould come into Canaan, And here verſe 1. theſe are ſaid to be the Statutes, which they ſhould keep in that Land. The Septuagint, for theſe words, as we do, have it, as ye

ye do, as if Moſes had here taxed their Idolatry, but he doth plainly diſtinguiſh onely betwixt the times of keeping the ceremonies of the Law and not keeping them, wherein at this time they offended not, becauſe the leaving of them undone now was neceſſary. This is ſpoken, ſaith Calvin, not that now they might ſacrifice where every one thought good, but to ſhew that yet they were not tyed to one place onely, for they had their Altar, and ſo ſacrificed ſometime in one place, and ſometimes in another, as the Campe removed from place to place, ſo that by ſaying [every one what is right in his own eyes, he meaneth nothing elſe, but that they had more liberty for the place to worſhip God in at this time, then they ſhould have afterwards, and the reaſon here following Verſ.9. Calvin.

For ye are not yet come to the reſt, &c. But when ye go over Jordan, &c. then there ſhall be a place, &c.] Proveth this to be the meaning. Verſ.9,10, 11.

If it be ſaid, they had a Tabernacle now, and not in any place, but onely at the door of the Tabernacle might they kill their Sacrifices. Object. Levit.17.

I anſwer, yet he ſaith truly, we do what ſeemeth right in our own eyes, in reſpect of the place, becauſe they were well pleaſed, whilſt the Tabernacle was no further from them, to bring their offerings thither, but when they ſhould dwell many miles further of, it would be far more laborious, and not ſo willingly aſſented to come thither. It is then ſaid thus alſo, becauſe they could not but think well of it to come ſo far as the Tabernacle to worſhip and ſerve God, when as they all pitched round about it, and ſo were nigh unto it. Sol.

In deſcribing the time of appointing one certain place, he ſaith, when he giveth you reſt from all your enemies round about, ſo that ye dwell in ſafety, intimating, that the place of Gods habitation ſhould not be appointed immediately after their coming into Canaan, but the Tabernacle ſhould be ſometime in one place and ſometime in another, whereunto they ſhould reſort, till that a Temple was built, which was not till the time of Solomon, in whoſe dayes there was great peace, and then a moſt magnificent one was built. Here in ſtead of vowes, free-will-offerings, and firſtlings mentioned, verſ. 11. nothing elſe is repeated, but your choice vowes, for which the Cald. hath, your faireſt vowes, Calvin, the offerings brought upon vowes, which ſhould be all of the beſt and choiceſt, the reſt are for brevities ſake left to be underſtood. Verſ.10. Verſ.11. Cald. Calvin.

Notwithſtanding ye may eat fleſh, &c.] Leſt they ſhould think in being commanded to bring and eat before the Lord, Levit. 17. that they might not eat fleſh in other any place, this is here inſerted, being a permiſſion to kill and eat in every place their common meat, both the clean and unclean, only the blood muſt not be eaten, ſo Lev.7.26. & 17.13. Verſ.15.

Thou mayeſt not eat within thy gates the tythe of thy corn, wine, oyl, &c.] There was one kind of tythe, which belonged altogether to the Levites, that is, the yearly tythe, Levit. 27. 30. but the tythes of the nine parts which were ſecond tythes, are here meant, Deut. 24 22. 23. Of theſe the owners and their families might eat at the place appointed onely, and likewiſe of their firſtlings, heave-offerings, vowes, &c. ſee Chap. 14. 23. of divers ſorts of tythes, ſee Levit. 27.30. This is myſtically applyed by Rabanus to the aſcribing of all our good works to Gods grace and not to any virtue in us. For he that doth thus, eateth of the holy things within his own gates, and is ſubject to be cut off therefore, becauſe he ſeeketh his own praiſe, and not the praiſe of God, and ſo doth grievouſly offend God. But whoſo out of humility of heart aſcribeth all his goodneſs to the divine virtue and grace, eateth in the place, which the Lord hath choſen, for the affection of true humily and innocency is doubtleſſe the place, which God hath choſen. And therefore all both men ſervants and maid-ſervants, ſons and daughters, and Levites are thus to endeavour to do good, and thus they ſhall be accepted before him. Verſ.17. Rabanus.

Verſ. 19. Take heed that thou forſake not the Levite as long as thou liveſt] This is added, becauſe the Levite was alſo ſpoken of verſ. 18. as one, that they muſt call to partake with them and their families in all their holy feaſts. He forſaketh the Levite, that either defraudeth him of his tythes, or offerings, the means appointed for his maintenance, Mal. 3.8. Nehem. 10.39. or that neglecteth him, ſetting up to themſelves a Miniſtry of their own, which is taxed, 2 Chron. 13.9. And hereby are commended to all Chriſtian people the Miniſters of the Goſpel likewiſe, 1 Cor. 9. Gal.6.6. 1 Theſſ.5.12.

Verſ. 20, 21. When the Lord ſhall inlarge thy border, as he hath promiſed thee, and thou ſhalt ſay, I will eat fleſh, &c. If the place, which the Lord hath choſen to put his name there, be too far, &c.] Here is nothing elſe, but a more large repetition of that, verſ. 15. onely in caſe, that any of them dwelling far off from the temple ſhould think, that they might kill there for ſacrifice and eat of the fleſh without ſinning, this conceit is here beaten down: for even ſuch far dwellers might eat the fleſh of ſheep and oxen, none otherwiſe, but as others, viz. as they eat the Roebuck and the Hart, which were not for ſacrifice; but for ordinary food only. Our tranſlation rendring it, if the place be too far, then thou ſhalt eat, &c. maketh the ſenſe ſomewhat perplexed, as if the meaning of the former permiſſion, verſ.15. were, that only ſuch far dwellers ſhould eat fleſh within their own gates, but others onely before the Lord in the holy place. But in the Hebr. which Junius alſo followeth, it is, if the place be far off, &c. and thou ſhalt kill and eat, וזבחתה, even as the Roebuck and the Hart is eaten, thou ſhalt eat thereof; whereby the ſenſe is made plain to be that which hath been already ſaid. Nearer dwellers then are permitted thus to eat fleſh, verſ. 15. within their own gates, and here far dwellers in other parts of the countrey, which ſhould afterwards by Gods bleſſing be added to their firſt conquered poſſeſſions. Maimony grounding upon this, and rendring the words, if the place be far off, and not too far, ſaith it is unlawful to kill any beaſt or fowl for common food in the court of the ſanctuary, but for ſacrifice only; and if any preſume to kill ſuch there, it may not be eaten, but buried, ſo that even they that dwelt near, were not only permitted to kill and eat at their own houſes their common meat, but were interdicted the killing of it in the holy place.

Junius.

Maimony in Shechitah, c.2.

Verſ. 26. Onely the holy things, which thou haſt, thou ſhalt take and go to the place, which the Lord ſhall chooſe.] This law is not abſolute for all holy things, it is not neceſſary for every one to carry them in kind, but if the way be not too far, if it be, they may redeem them and carry the price, Deut.14.24.

Verſ. 27. Thou ſhalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the fleſh and the bloud upon the altar, &c. and the bloud of thy ſacrifices ſhall be poured out, &c. and thou ſhalt eat the fleſh.] If here ſhall ſeem to be a contradiction in that they are bidden to offer the fleſh and yet to eat it, this eaſily reconciled, the fleſh of burnt-offerings muſt be offered upon the altar, Levit.1. but of the peace-offerings meant by the ſacrifices here, the owners did eat. Levit.7.

3 Particular. Ver. 29,30, 31, 32. And hitherto of the ſecond particular; the third followeth, verſ.29,30, &c. When the Lord ſhall cut off the nations before thee. &c. take heed that thou be not ſnared by following them, &c.] They are charged here not onely not to ſerve their gods, but not to enquire, how they ſerved their gods, to ſerve the Lord ſo; whereupon Maimony ſaith, that they ought not to enquire how any idol was ſerved, although they never meant to ſerve ſuch ſervice; and Ainſworth, that not only idolatry, or worſhipping of idols is here forbidden, but alſo the falſe and idolatrous worſhip of the true God. And indeed it is plainly againſt ſerving God with ſuch rites, as Idolaters ſerve idols with, as the Papiſts do, erecting images, aſcribing divers things to the tuteleſhip of divers Saints, as they of divers gods and goddeſſes, &c. but it is not hereby taxed to uſe any rite, which was firſt uſed by the people of God, although it be taken up amongſt idolaters, ſuch as be ſome of of the rites of our Church of England. For not doing as the heathen idolaters, see Levit. 18. 3. and for keeping Gods Ordinances only, as here vers. 32. Levit. 18. 4, 5. & Deut. 4. 2. he addeth then against this precept to the Word of God, that bringeth in to the worship of God, that is heathenish.

Maimony of Idolatry, ch.2. Ainſworth.

Chap. XIII.

TOuching the fourth particular in this 13 Chapter, here are 3. cases put of enticers to idolatry; 1. Of prophets, vers. 1, 2, &c. 2. Of near friends, vers. 6. 3. Of any whole city, vers. 12. For the first, prophets were such as spake to the people for their instruction in divine things, having some immediate revelation from God, or pretending to have such revelation either by vision, or dream, of which two, Numb. 12. 6. Wherefore it is said here, if there shall arise, or Hebr. when there shall stand up amongst you a prophet or dreamer of dreams: by the first one being meant, that had something revealed more plainly unto him in vision; and by the other, one that saw things more darkly. Having given them warning hitherto against Ringleaders to idolatry amongst the Heathen; now he warneth them against corrupt teachers, that should stand up amongst themselves to seduce them; by the word, stand, noting their open and bold carriage.

4 Particular.

Verſ. 1.

Hereby is intimated, that even in the Church of God there are never wanting some Doctors, that stand for errour, 2 Pet. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 11. 19. Act. 20. 29. and that under a pretence of working by God, and by the power of his Spirit. For such Prophets sometime may shew signs, or foretell things to come, as it is here said, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and and the sign or wonder come to passe, whereof he spake to thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, &c. thou shalt not hearken to him, for the Lord your God proveth you, &c.] By sign or wonder here any miraculous and supernatural thing is to be understood; by giveth, either his doing of any such thing, or his foretelling of it; of both which in a true Prophet, see 1 King. 13. 2, 3. and in false prophets, Exod. 7. 22. 1 King. 22. 17. Matth. 12. 39, 40.

Note.

Verſ. 2. Verſ. 3.

If it be demanded how false prophets are able at any time to give such signs, or to foretell things to come? Chytræus sheweth, that there are divers wayes to know things to come; 1. By Divine revelation. 2. By natural causes, as Astronomers know the weather, and Physitians the events of many diseases, and astrologers divers things. 3. By political reason, as Cicero knew long before by observing the state of things, and the dispositions of rulers the civil wars to come. 4. By the help of the devil, thus Pythia is said, sitting upon a tripos and blown upon by the devil furiously to give answers, and such were all the Oracles of Apollo, and of Jupiter Dodoneus, Hammon, and of the Sybills. Thus all that have familiar spirits, inchanters, sooth-sayers and wizzards foretell things. 5. By superstitious observations, as by the flying of birds, the entrails of birds and beasts, &c. And any of these wayes may a wicked instrument give a sign of something to come, for even Balaam prophesied by the Spirit of God, and Caiaphas.

Qu. Chytræus in Deut.

But how is it said, the sign or wonder come to passe, when as Deut. 18. 22. this is put as a means to try, whether the Lord hath spoken by a Prophet or no; if the thing, that he speaketh of, cometh not to passe, the Lord sent him not? I answer, that is spoken of, as a tryal of those, which seek not to seduce, but to acquire vain glory to themselves, hereby they shall be known from such, as the Lord truly honoureth with the Spirit of prophesie, that their predictions shall not come to passe: but here seducers are spoken ſpoken of, that would draw after other gods, if ſuch foretell any thing truly, or do any wonder, they are by this convinced to be falſe prophets, viz. that they would draw to idolatry. For the Church of God hath ſomething certainly to relye upon, viz. the written Word, which we know is of God, whoſoever therefore of what dignity ſoever or glory in the Church ſhall ſeek to pervert this truth, and give a ſign for this end, is undoubtedly a Deceiver, and worketh not by God, but by the devil. To the ſame effect Maimony ſaith, if there ſtandeth up a prophet and doth great ſigns and wonders, ſeeking to ſatisfie the Propheſie of Moſes, we know certainly, that this is by inchantment or ſorcery, and therefore we may not hearken to him, &c. Popiſh ſigns then ſhewed to perſwade to idolatry and ſuperſtition do plainly evince the doers of them to be deceivers, neither ſhould any man be moved hereby, for they are but ſtrong deluſions to make men believe a lye.

Qu.

Maimony in Feſudehatorah, c. 8.

2 Theſſ. 2.11. Matth. 24.24.

Moreover Maimony putteth 3. differences more betwixt theſe propheſies and the true; 1. Although ſomething ſpoken of by a deceiver be true, yet it is never all true, and ſometimes nothing at all, as Eſay 44. 25. and Jerem. 23. 28. what is the chaffe to the wheat? the deceiver hath ſome wheat, and ſome chaffe; but the true prophet all wheat of truth, and no chaffe of falſhood, 2 King. 10. 10. not a Word of his falleth to the ground. 2. A deceiver can foretell no good truly, as Jeremiah ſaid to Ananiah, a deceiver, the prophet that ſpeaketh peace when his words ſhall come to paſſe, it ſhall be known, &c. A true Prophet may indeed foretell judgement, and yet the thing not come to paſſe; as when Jonah propheſied of the deſtruction of Nineveh, becauſe ſuch propheſies are alwayes conditional, unleſſe they repent; but he never foretelleth good, but it is effected, for herein God never changeth. 3. Although a Prophet ſheweth no ſign, but cometh with the commandement, and ſeeketh not to bring in a new commandement, if another known and approved Prophet teſtifieth of him, it is a ſign, that he is a true Prophet.

Maimony in Feſudehatorah, c. 10.

Jer. 28. 8,9.

Note.

This laſt is to be noted to convince the Jews by their own rules, that Chriſt was a true Prophet, becauſe John the Baptiſt, whom all men acknowledged to be a Prophet, bare witneſſe of him, Matth. 21.26. Joh. 1.15. Joh.5.33. and Moſes and all the Prophets, Act. 2. 22,24. John 1. 45. and Moſes and Elias appeared talking with him, Matth. 17. and God the Father, Matth. 3. 17. Moreover, he came with many ſigns and wonders, neither did he ſeek to draw any from the Commandements, but to fulfill them.

Matth. 5. 19.

If it be demanded, why the Lord would ſuffer any falſe prophets to give any ſigns, this being ſo dangerous a thing to draw men after them? It is anſwered, he did thus to prove them, that is, that their conſtancy in cleaving to him and to his truth might be manifeſted, as is ſaid, 1 Cor. 11. 19. If this ſhall ſeem harſh dealing to expoſe men to danger, by ſuffering deceivers to work ſo powerfully amongſt them, ſeeing God knoweth the weakneſſe of men? Calvin anſwereth well, the Lord doth arm all ſuch, as love him with a pure heart with the inexpugnable virtue of his Spirit, ſo that they cannot be inſnared with lyes: but others, whoſe hearts were ſeen before not to be right, are carried thus headlong to deſtruction through their own default only, becauſe they were reprobates before, and never had any hearty love to the truth. The children of God may indeed alſo through their own injury and neglect be drawn away for a time in part, but they ſhall ſoon riſe again by repentance.

Calvin. Quiſquis puro corde deum amat, inexpugnabili ſpiritus virtute armatur, ne illaqueetur mendaciis.

Verſ. 4. a preſervative is preſcribed to keep from the danger of ſeducers, Ye ſhall walk after the Lord and fear him, &c.

Verſ. 5.

And that prophet or dreamer of dreams ſhall be put to death, &c.] This, ſaith Maimony, was after conviction and judgment given by the great Synedrion conſiſting of 71 Elders. For thus both God would have ſuch ſuch wicked perſons deſtroyed in way of revenge, that ſought to deſtroy the ſoules of others, and by making them examples of judgment deterre others the more from attempting the like.

Hitherto of the firſt ſort of ſeducers, now followeth the ſecond. ver. 6. If thy brother, the ſon of thy mother, thy ſon or thy daughter, or wife of thy boſome or friend, &c.] There is no relation ſo near, but in caſe of enticing to idolatry, the deareſt brother, daughter, ſon, or wife muſt be revealed and ſtoned to death. Thus we muſt ſhew, that we love neither brother nor ſiſter, &c. above the Lord. For the proceedings hereabout Maimony ſaith, he that was inticed, muſt firſt take witneſſes to ſee, whether the enticer would ſpeak before them, and if not, he muſt lay privy wait thus, place two witneſſes ſecretly, where they may not be ſeen of the enticer, but they may ſee him, then he muſt ſay to the enticer, What is that which you ſaid to me? and when he hath anſwered, he muſt reply, How ſhould we leave our God which is in heaven, and go and ſerve ſtocks and ſtones? if hereupon the enticer holdeth his peace, he is free, but if he ſtill perſwadeth, then the witneſſes bring him to the judgement hall, and ſtone him: of the manner of ſtoning, ſee upon Levit. 24. 23.

Verſ. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

Matth. 10. 37.

Maimony of Idolatry, c. 5.

Touching the third caſe here, put verſ. 12, 13, &c. If thou ſhalt hear ſay in one of thy Cities, which the Lord thy God hath given thee to dwell there, Certain men the children of Belial are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, &c. the children of Belial, the wicked are many times called, as 1 Sam. 2. 12. Judg. 19. 22. 1 King. 21. 10. 1 Sam. 1. 16. 2 Sam. 23. 6. Nahum. 1. 15. a wicked thought is alſo called a thought of Belial, Deut. 15. 9. Hebr. it is בְּלִי יַעַל, ſignifying either without yoke, or without profit, or which aſcendeth not: for the wicked caſt off the yoke of the Lord, having nothing good in them, but are moſt hurtfull, and therefore ſhall not aſcend to the heavenly glory, but ſhall be caſt down into the bottomleſſe pit; Ainſworth is for the firſt of theſe, Calvin for the ſecond; but I ſee no reaſon, but that we may take them all in. The Cald. rendreth it, ſons of wickedneſſe; and the word is uſed, 2 Cor. 6. 15. to ſet forth the devil.

Ver. 12, 13.

Ainſworth. Calvin.

are gone out from among you] They are ſaid to go out, that forſake the truth and go after errours, 1 Joh. 2. 19. and the looking to and puniſhing of ſuch foul evils is not committed to them in any other place, but within their own limits, in their own cities; for the Church judgeth not thoſe that are without.

1 Cor. 5. 12, 13.

Then thou ſhalt inquire, and ſearch diligently, &c.] Becauſe the judgement to be executed in this caſe is moſt terrible, there muſt be no raſh, but moſt deliberate proceedings, the thing muſt be found to be certain, and then the judgment executed. And accordingly Joſh. 22. when the tribe of Reuben, Gad and half Manaſſeh had made an Altar, whereupon they were ſuſpected to have an idolatrous intention, Joſhua and the reſt of the Elders went not to fight againſt them preſently, but firſt inquired into the reaſon of it.

Verſ. 14.

Thou ſhalt ſurely ſmite the Inhabitants of that City with the edge of the ſword, deſtroying it and all that is therein with the edge of the ſword, &c.] Gods hatred is ſuch againſt idolatry, that he will have Idolaters and their poſterity rooted out, if any of his people turn to ſuch abominations, he will neither have old nor young ſpared, male nor female, nor their very cattel, houſes, ſtuffe or ſubſtance, but all muſt be conſumed with fire, and ſo lye as an heap for ever, never to be built again. For the manner of proceeding about this, Maimony ſaith, that the great Synedrion of 71 being firſt informed of ſuch a revolt, ſendeth to the City revolted to inquire more certainly of the truth thereof, and hearing, that the whole City, or the greateſt part, is thruſt away from God, they forthwith ſend

Verſ. 15.

Verſ. 16.

Maimony of Idolatry, ch. 4.

ſend two learned men thither to convert the ſeduced, whereupon if they repent and be converted, they are ſpared; if not, all Iſrael is warned by this Synedrion to go to war againſt them, then their City is beſieged, till it is broken up; being broken up, many Courts of Judgement are ſet, and the guilty are brought to be judged, one after another, and that by witneſſes; and if they be found to be the leſſer number, they are ſtoned, and the reſt of the City ſpared; but if the greater, they are all deſtroyed, and their women and children, &c. Thus he; but this ſeemeth to me to be a way of proceeding too difficult; for where ſhall there in a City thus revolted be found witneſſes enough againſt every particular delinquent? Moreover, the guilty being thus ſingled out, it were injuſtice after this to deſtroy together with them the not guilty, being neither their wives nor children.

The more certain way, and more agreeable to the Divine Law, were, after certain knowledge had by publick ſigns and monuments of idolatry to proceed to the utter deſtroying of an idolatrous City. Moreover Maimony delivereth divers other rules to ſhew, what goods are to be deſtroyed in this caſe, and what not: Firſt, the goods to be deſtroyed are all even of the guiltleſſe inhabiting there. Secondly, of ſtrangers, if they have inhabited there thirty dayes, and have been likewiſe drawn away. But if they have not inhabited there ſo long, they are ſtoned, but their goods go to their heires. 2. The goods of the Citizens being kept in another City go likewiſe to their heires. Thirdly, things ſanctified for the uſe of the temple are firſt redeemed, then burnt. Fourthly, the ſecond tythes and the holy Scriptures, that are within the city, are laid up in ſtore, &c.

Calvin. If it ſhall ſeem too great ſeverity to deſtroy even little children, that have not offended. Calvin anſwereth well, that all are ſubject to the judgment of God, and therefore it being his Will, every man muſt reverence his proceedings, as the very Angels do, and not mutter againſt them.

But for little ones, it is to be held, that God never cauſeth any thus to be deſtroyed, but the reprobate onely, and if he doth appoint any ſuch in juſtice to the everlaſting torments of hell fire, it ought not to ſeem ſtrange unto us that he adjudgeth them together with their wicked parents to a bodily death, to ſhew his deteſtation of idolatry.

Of the beaſts thus killed it was unlawfull to make any uſe or profit, as of the oxe ſtoned to death. The houſes and ſtuffe and all the goods muſt be burnt for the Lord, that is, in zeal for him, who was ſo highly diſhonoured by idolatry; and when this is done, the Hebrews ſay, the ſacrifice Calil is offered, which averteth wrath and procureth mercy and bleſſing. Whereas it is ſaid, ſuch a City ſhall not be built again, but abide as a heap for ever, the Hebrews ſay, that only the building of it is forbidden, or uſing it for habitation, but not for gardens or orchards.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIV.

Part. 2.

Ordinance 1.

Verſ. 1.

HAving hitherto ſpoken of the firſt generall part touching idolaters forrein and domeſticall, now followeth the ſecond, viz. divers other ordinances about the ſervice of God, according to the deſtinction made, ch. 12. from hence to chap. 19 And firſt here is ordained a difference to be held betwixt the miniſters and people of God, and the heathen in their hair and food. In their hair and fleſh, Ye ſhall not cut your ſelves, nor make any baldneſſe between your eyes for the dead; of cutting themſelves, ſee Levit. 19. 28. and of making baldneſſe and cutting, Levit. 21. 5. Thus the heathen uſed to doe in ſorrowing, when a father or mother died; and there was ſome reaſon for it, ſaith Cazkuni, becauſe when his father died, he had no father left him but of wood, nor mother but of ſtone, as Jer. 2. 27. but the people of God are Gods children; and therefore although they loſe father or mother, yet they are not fatherleſſe, but have a father, who is great, living and permanent, even the holy bleſſed God. And this was one reaſon of this precept they ſhould not ſorrow, as the heathen, who are without hope, and another was that they ſhould not disfigure their bodies, which were more pretious then the heathens.

Cazkuni.

1 Theſ. 4. 13.

Verſ. 3.

Sol. Jarchi.

Baalhatturim.

In their food they muſt eat none abominable thing, but the oxe, the ſheep and the goat, &c. the abominable thing ſaith Sol. Jarchi, is that, which God hath made abominable by forbidding it; ſo that of it ſelf nothing is abominable but onely by virtue of Gods ordinance prohibiting the Jewes to eat hereof for a ſpirituall ſignification, which is, as Baal-hatturim hath it, to ſhew that they ſhould not be mixed with the wicked gentiles, who were like unto theſe beaſts. For of it ſelf every creature of God is good, 1 Tim. 4. 4. and nothing is unclean now under the goſpel, Rom. 14. 4. Here be ten kinds of clean beaſts: 1 The Oxe; 2 the Sheep; 3 the Goat; 4 the Hart, whoſe female is the Hind, of which ſee Iob 39. 1, 2. 1 Kings 4. 23. 5 the Roebuck called Tſebi, in Hebr. from beauty, and therefore a man is bidden concerning his wife, Let her be as the loving Hind, and the pleaſant Roe, 1 Kings 4. 23. 6 the fallow Deere, Hebr. Iachmur, Cald. & Arab. Iachmura. Græcè Βούβαλος, the Buffe, buffle or wild Oxe, all black and bigger then the common Oxe and fiercer: But our tranſlation following Iunius rendreth the 9 Bubalus the wilde Oxe, and he ſaith, that this is rendred Dama a Doe by R. Iehudah, the moſt ancient of the Rabbins, and of greateſt authority; 7 the wilde goat, the Septuagint render this tragelaphos, a Goat-Hart, in part like a Goat, and part like an Hart; Chytræus ſaith, it hath the hornes of an Hart, and the beard of a Goat. But the Hebrews render it wild Goat, or a rock Goat as Iunius alſo doth, becauſe it liveth upon the rocks; 8 the Pygarg, this alſo is reckoned by Pliny amongſt the kinds of Goats; for he reckoneth up rupicapras, ibices, oryges, damas, pygargos, & ſtrepſicernas. Iunius rendreth it ſtrepſicerotes, ſaying, that the Afri call the beaſt Aldaſſe by this name. It is a wilde beaſt ſaith Ainſworth, like a fallow Deere, or Roebuck; 9 the wilde Oxe, the Septuagint render it Oryx; that is, ſaith Chytræus, an Unicorn cloven footed of the bigneſſe of a Goat, bearded, but the beard is turned the contrary way, viz. to the head. But the Cald. the wild bull; 10 the Chamois, Septuagint render it Camelopardalis, Iunius Camelopardalides, a Camel and a Panthereſſe, as if it were a beaſt participating of two kindes. The Cald. Ditſa, a kind of Roe, the Chamois is a French name of a beaſt like a wilde Goat. There are none amongſt all the beaſts in the world, ſay the Rabbins hereupon lawfull to be eaten, but theſe ten kinds onely, as was ſhewed upon Levit. 11. and they put a difference betweeen theſe, calling the firſt three cattell, and the ſeven latter beaſts, ſaying, that the fat of the 7 may be eaten, and their bloud muſt be covered, but of the 3 the fat may

Prov. 5. 19.

Junius.

Plin. l. 8. c. 53.

Ainſworth.

Chytræus.

Maimony of forbidden meats, c. 1.

Verſ.6. may not be eaten, and there is no charge given to cover their bloud. The generall rule for clean beaſts is, if they divide the hoof and chew the cud, and the contrary for the unclean, of which before, Levit.11.3. &c. as alſo of fowles and fiſhes.

Verſ. 21. Thou ſhalt not eat of any thing that dieth of it ſelf, thou maiſt give it to the ſtranger, &c, or ſell it to an alien, &c.]This is repeated from Levit.17.15. Every ſoul that eateth that which died of it ſelf, &c. whether it be one of your own countrey or a ſtranger, he ſhall not waſh his clothes, &c. here ſeemeth to be a contradiction, but as I ſhewed there, by a ſtranger a proſelyte is to be underſtood, here a meere heathen. The ſame was made before, Levit. 11.39,40. Thou ſhalt not ſeethe a Kid in his mothers milk; this was twice ſet down before, Exod.23.19. and chap. 34.26. ſee the notes there.

Ordinance 2: The ſecond Ordinance repeated here, is touching the maintenance of Gods Miniſters.

Verſ. 22. 23. Thou ſhalt truely tithe all the increaſe, that the field bringeth forth year by year, and thou ſhalt eat before the Lord in the place which the Lord ſhall chooſe, &c.] As the tithe of corne, &c. which the field yieldeth, ſo the tithe of herds and flocks are mentioned, Levit. 27.32. And here it is not onely ſaid, that they ſhould eat their tithe of corn, wine and oyle there, but alſo the firſtlings of their herds and flocks; ſo likewiſe Deut. 12.17. But Numb. 18. the tithes and firſtlings, and firſt-fruits are given to the Levites for an inheritance, and the tenth of theſe was to be paid again by them to the high Prieſt; which being ſo, how is this libertie given to the owners to eat them? Touching tithes, it is commonly anſwered, v.22. it is not ſpoken of the firſt tithe, belonging to the Levites and Prieſts; but v. 23. of the ſecond to be taken out of the nine parts, after that the firſt was paid, this which muſt be eaten no where, but at Jeruſalem was in the owners power, not the firſt, ſee Levit. 27.30. But touching the firſtlings, I finde nothing ſpoken particularly by any Expoſitour, yet by the ſame reaſon that the tithes to be eaten there are expounded of a ſecond tithe, a ſecond ſort of firſtlings alſo muſt needs be meant, which when the firſt were taken out for the Levites, were the firſt remaining ſtill to the owners.

Cazkuni Theſe things they are appointed to eat before the Lord, that they might learn to fear him, that is, by reſorting from time to time upon theſe occaſions to the place where his fear and true religion was taught and practiced: ſo Cazkuni, that when thou goeſt up to eate the ſecond tithe, and ſhalt ſee the Prieſts in their ſervice, the Levites ſinging, the Iſraelites ſtanding, the Synedrion judging, and the Doctors teaching, thou maiſt learn to fear the Lord. They alſo learned to fear God, when in obedience to his command they came to his place with their tithes; thus thankfully acknowledging all their increaſe to come from his bleſſing: for who would not fear God, when he knoweth that he can injoy no good think for this life, but of his gift.

Verſ.24,25, 26,27. Here it is provided, if the way be farre, that the owner may turn his tithe into money, and therewith go up and buy what he deſireth for this holy feaſt, if Gods bleſſing be ſo great upon him that he is not able to carry his tithes in kinde. For redeeming tithes, it muſt be by adding a fifth part more, Levit.27.31. The Rabbins ſay, it muſt be redeemed with ſilver coyned, not uncoynd, and that to the worth, the tithe being firſt ſeparated, and if the price be a thing commonly known, one witneſſe muſt be taken, if uncertain, three chapmen muſt value it, and it muſt not be carried from place to place, before the redeeming, &c. The tithe being converted into money, this money muſt not be laid out to buy any beaſt withall, but at Jeruſalem ſaith the Rabbin, and it ſeemeth to be implied in the words; but whereas he ſaith, that they may not buy with the money ſalt or water towards the feaſt, but honey, egges, and milke, becauſe they came out of the ground, it is too reſtraining, ſeeing any thing that a man deſired to eat

Maimony in Maaſerſheni, c. 4.

is

is allowed to be brought herewith. And the Levite within thy gates; Septuagint and Cald. within thy Cities thus expressing the meaning, because the Levites dwelt in the Cities of the other Tribes. The Levites must not onely have the first tithes wholly, but also participate of the feast made with the other. Thou shalt not forsake him; so it is commanded, Deuteronomy 12. 19. such is the care of the Lord about his Ministers maintenance. And by tithes have they beene for the most part maintained under the Gospel. If any man now denieth to pay his tithes, the saying of Saint Augustine is most true. This is the most just custome of God, if thou wilt not give him tithe, thou shalt be brought to a tithe, thou shalt give to the wicked Souldier which thou wilt not give to the Priest.

Vers. 27.

Numb. 35.

Augustine. Hæc Dei iustif. consuetudo est, si tu illi decimam non dederis, tu ad decimam revocaris, dabis impio militi quod non vis dare sacerdoti.

At the end of three yeares thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same yeare, and shalt lay it up within thy gates, and the Levite, &c. shall come and eate, &c. Calvin, as the words sound, understandeth here all the tithe of the third yeare numbering from the seventh, which was the Sabbaticall yeare, rejecting that opinion that a second or third sort of tithes is here meant. He saith therefore that this is a correction or interpretation of the former Law touching tithes. The Levites should have them two yeares wholly to themselves, but lest they should over abound, the poore and strangers must have part with them the third yeare, as they had also every seventh yeare. But if no more sorts of tithes be admitted, but one onely, how shall that verse 23. be reconciled with Numb. 18. 24. Moreover, as Augustine reasoneth, this must needs be meant of another sort, because one sort must be carried up to Ierusalem from yeare to yeare, and the owner and his family might spend thereof: But this is to be laid up within their gates, and the owner might eate none of it, but give all to the Levite, &c. the poore, Deuteronomy 26. 12. Iunius therefore is for another sort, which he calleth the third tithe; the Rabbins for a second sort; for this three yeare, as in other years: the first sort is for the Levites, who must come and take it, and the second for the poore, who come and take that.

Verse 28.

Calvin.

August. qu. 20. in Gen.

Iunius.
Sol. Iarchi.
Cazkuni.

According to their doctrine then the second tithe set out of the nine parts was to bee used two yeares, as was said, verse 23. but the third yeare, it went all to the poore. See more, Leviticus 27. 30. It is to be held rather a third, then a second, because the second was carried up yearely to Ierusalem; but this not, so that if it were the same with the second, one yeare in three must be passed over without feasting before the Lord. And of this tithe it is not said, the Levite shall come and take his due, but shall come and eate in common, as the poore should come and eate, yet happily, as they say, neither did eate there, but had their portions set out and carried it away and ate thereof. For the owner, saith Maimony, giveth to every one of the poore so much, as may satisfie him out of this tithe, of Wheate halfe a Kab, of Barley a Kab, of Rie a Kab, of Figges 25 shekles weight, of Wine halfe a logge, of Oyle a quarter of a logge, and of other fruites not lesse, then may buy foode enough for two meales. If his tithes will not afford so much, then he setteth them before them, and they divide them part and part like.

Maimony in Mattanoth, Gnan. c. 6.

Chap. XV.

Ordinance. 3. THe third ordinance repeated here is touching the ſeventh year, thtt it ſhould be a year of releaſe, wherin debts muſt be remitted to the poor. Of the Sabbath of the ſeventh year it was ſpoken before, but not of releaſing debts that year, wherefore this is here ſet forth. But how it is to be underſtood ſee my expoſition, Exod. 23. 11.

Exod. 23. 11. Levit. 25. 4.

Verſ. 1, 2. At the end of ſeven years thou ſhalt make a releaſe. And this ſhall be the manner of the releaſe, &c.] I have already ſhewed, that theſe words are properly to be underſtood, at the end of the ſeventh year, not at the beginning or any other time of that year. And thus the Hebrews generally underſtand it, the ſeventh year releaſeth not debts of money, but at the end thereof, as the end of the year is punctually ſet down, Deut. 31. 10. to be at the feaſt of Tabernacles. Therefore the lender may require his debt at any time in that year, as in others, but onely when the ſun is ſet in the night of the new years day the debt is loſt, thus Maimony. And for this releaſe he hath certain diſtinctions, as firſt, If it be lent upon a Bill, it is now loſt, but not, if land be tyed for it. Secondly, if at the lending ten years were ſet, it is not releaſed at the end of the ſeventh. Thirdly, If it be lent upon pawn, it is not releaſed. Fourthly, If the judges have given ſentence before, and 5. If it be a mulct or a forfeit, it is not releaſed, &c. many of which ſeem to be nothing elſe, but illuſions of this Law, the ſcope of which is charity to every poor perſon in releaſing his debt unto him, but moſt probably not to the rich. According to this we are taught to pray forgive us our debts as we forgive our debters, and this releaſing of debts figured out Gods forgiving of the debts of ſin in Chriſt. Aben Ezra will have this releaſe of debts to be made at the beginning of the ſeventh year, alledging Jer. 34. 14. where theſe words at the end of ſeven years, let ye go every man his brother, are explained thus, when he hath ſerved thee ſix years. Here indeed the end of ſeven years, when ſervants are to be let go free is ſaid to be the ſeventh year, becauſe that is the laſt of the ſeven, and therefore it muſt needs be ſo underſtood as being thus explained alſo in the Law. But for ſo much as the releaſe of debts is ſet down in other terms, and no ſuch explanation hereof made, and not in the ſame terms with the releaſe of ſervants, it is clear, that the time for this is not ſo to be underſtood, as the time for that. For in ſpeaking of debts releaſing, he ſaith, at the end of ſeven years, but of ſervants, the ſeventh year thou ſhalt let him go free, verſ. 12. and for further explanation, when he hath ſerved thee ſix years.

Maimony in Miſn. of releaſe c. 9.

Aben Ezra.

Deut. 15. 12.

For every Creditour that lendeth ought] Heb. is every maſter of the lending of his hand, that lendeth ought, an Hebraiſme to expreſs a Creditour.

Verſ. 3. Of a forreinour thou mayeſt exact it, &c.] That is, of one of another Nation, the Cald. therfore hath it, of a ſon of the peoples. This charity of releaſing debts was to be exerciſed onely towards their brethren that came of the ſame father Iſrael, to maintain alwaies a remembrance of their brotherhood, that they might be knit together in the more love, and therefore men of other nations were excluded. But for as much as all Chriſtians of divers Nations now are brethren in Chriſt, their love ſhould be ſuch towards one another, as in the caſe of poverty to releaſe debts of money alſo.

Verſ. 4. Save when there ſhall be no poor among you, &c.] Theſe words ſeem to be an exception to the Law of making a releaſe to a brother, as if they ſhould not be bound hereby, when they ſhould all be ſo well to paſs, that there ſhould be no poor amongſt them: but verſ. 11. maketh againſt this, where it is ſaid, the poor ſhall never ceaſe out of the land. Wherefore theſe words are rendred by Junius thus, onely becauſe there ought not to be one needy with thee.

Junius.

thee. Ainſworth, onely that there be not in thee a needy man, and thus underſtood it ſetteth forth the end of this Law, viz. to keep men from extream poverty, into which many are brought by having their debts exacted. Calvin alſo mentioning divers Expoſitions of the words concludeth, that this is beſt, prorſus ne ſit mendicus, let there be no beggar at all, that is, through your default in exacting debts, that is, let none be brought to extream poverty, and if thou ſhalt think, that ſo thou mayeſt in time become poor thy ſelf, it is added, for the Lord ſhall greatly bleſs thee, &c. The word אפס aphes here uſed hath divers ſignifications, as not, nothing, beſides, unleſſe, but, and unto is joyned כי, becauſe, or when. The vulgar latin rendreth both together omnino, there ſhall not be at all a poor man amongſt you, as Calvin before. And to this do I ſubſcribe, holding, that the two words here uſed are not ſeverally to be reſpected in their ſignifications, but that כי is put to אפס as a particle without ſignification, and ſo it is being joyned with לא, not, here following, as if he had ſaid, there ſhall not at all be one poor with thee, that is, made miſerably poor by thy exacting of debts at hands. Calvin.

For the Lord thy God bleſſeth thee, &c.] That is, ſhall bleſſe thee, but it is ſpoken of as already done for the certainty thereof, thou ſhalt reign over many Nations; this is added to the former bleſſing, that they ſhould be lenders and not borrowers, becauſe the borrower is a ſervant to the lender, Prov. 22. verſe 7. but Iſrael brought other Nations into ſubjection alſo. Verſ. 6.

If there be a poor man one of thy brethren within any of thy gates, &c] After the Ordinance of releaſing debts, the Lord here provideth, that they ſhould not in this regard deny to lend to the poor, becauſe otherwiſe worldly men would have thought, that they would take order, that this Law of releaſing ſhould not prejudice them at all; for, if the caſe were ſo, they would not lend near that time for fear of loſing their money. Verſ. 7.

But the Lord chargeth, Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart, &c.] Heb. in thy heart of Belial, touching which word ſee before, Chap. 13. 13. ſo that to ſhift off giving to the poor in his need is a great wickedneſſe, Matth. 25. Verſ. 9.

And thine eye be evil againſt thy poor Brother] Where there is a wicked heart averſe from the relieving the poor, the evil eye doth declare it, and therefore this is alſo forbidden, ſee the like uſe of this phraſe of an evil eye, Prov. 23.6. and Matth. 20.15. and the contrary of a good eye, Prov. 22.9. Eccleſ. 35.8.

And to encourage to lend and give, the Lord promiſeth great bleſſings in all that they ſhould put their hands unto, ſo likewiſe, Eſay 58. verſ. 10,11. Verſ. 10.

For the poor ſhall never ceaſe out of thy land, &c] God could give enough to every one for the ſupply of his own wants, but he will not, that by the poor our charity may be tryed, and according to this it is ſaid, Mark. 14 7. the poor have ye always with you. Verſ. 11.

If thy Brother an Hebrew man or Woman be ſold unto thee, and ſerve thee ſix years, in the ſeventh thou ſhalt let him go free, &c. ſee Exod. 21.1,2,3. where this hath been already explained and the myſtery declared. Verſ. 12.

And this is the fourth Ordinance repeated alſo with ſome inlargement verſ. 13. Ordinance 4.

And when thou letteſt him go out free, thou ſhalt not ſend him away empty, &c. Maimony expoundeth this Law of ſending ſervants away free the ſeventh year, of ſuch as were ſold by the Magiſtrates, not ſuch as ſold themſelves, but this is a diſtinction without ground, and againſt that Jer. 34.9. and the Law, Exod. 21.2. ſee Levit. 25. 39. The quantity to be given to a ſervant, when he goeth out free, is not ſet down, but the maſter is commanded to furniſh him liberally, out of the flock, floor, and winepreſſe; Verſ. 13. Maimony. Treat. of ſervants, c. 3. Verſ. 14.

Maimony is bold to ſet down the quantity, not leſs then the worth of thirty ſhekles grounding upon Exod. 21.32. but there is no ground for it, wherefore it was to every mans own good will, ſo that he dealt liberally.

Verſ. 17. For the caſe next put, if the ſervant will not leave his maſter, he muſt bore his ear with an awl, and the reaſon of dealing liberally with the ſervant let go, he hath been worth a double hired ſervant, &c. ſee before upon Exod.21.2. Theſe words, thou ſhalt furniſh him liberally, verſ. 14. Heb. are furniſhing thou ſhalt furniſh him, the words being taken from a chain, becauſe ſome ſubſtance given him at his going away was a as chain of gold, an ornament unto him, whereas the want of ſubſtance diſgraced him, and he ſhould thus be as a vagabond, and ready to ſell himſelf again through need, to another maſter.

Ordinance 5. The fift Ordinance, verſ.19. is for ſanctifying the firſtlings of the herd and flock, of which ſee Exod. 13. & 22.30. & 34. 19. but here it is added which was not ſaid before, thou ſhalt do no work with the firſtling of thy bullock nor ſhear the firſtling of thy ſheep, thou ſhalt eat it before the Lord thy God, from year to year, &c. The meaning is, that they ſhould not make any benefit of hallowed things, but give them wholly to the Lord. But what is this, thou ſhalt eat it before the Lord, &c. for if it were the Lords, how could the owner eat it, ſith all the Lords dues were given to the Prieſts, Numb.18.15? Ainſworth ſaith that theſe words thou ſhalt eat it, are directed to the Prieſts, not to the owners, and likewiſe the next words, If there be any blemiſh in it, &c. thou ſhalt eat it within thy gates; and Junius calleth it an Apoſtrophe to the Prieſts. But foraſmuch as Chap. 10.23. and 12. 17,18. the eating of the firſtlings is allowed to the owners, another ſolution is to be ſought, as upon Chap. 14. 23. For the next clauſe, as the Roebuck and the Hart, and this, onely thou ſhalt not eat the blood, &c. ſee Ch. 12.23,24.

Qu. Ainſworth. Verſ.21,22. Junius.

Verſ.23.

Chap. XVI.

Ordinance 6. Verſ.2. The ſixth Ordinance here repeated is touching the Paſſeover. Thou ſhalt Sacrifice the Paſſeover to the Lord thy God, of the flock and the herd in the place which the Lord ſhall chooſe to put his name there.] This is repeated from, Exod. 12. and Chap. 13. where yet no mention is made of the herd, but onely of a Lamb or Kid to be eaten; and from Numb. 28.17,18. where ſacrifices out of the flock and herd are appointed, but no mention made of the place, where they ſhould he ſacrificed, or the Paſſeover eaten; wherefore to ſupply this defect, the place is here appointed to be that, which the Lord ſhould chooſe, of which ſee Deut.12.5. and all things touching the Paſſeover and the Sacrifices at that feaſt have been ſufficiently explained before. Onely whereas verſ. 7. it is rendred in our tranſlation, thou ſhalt eat it roſt, the Heb. hath it, thou ſhalt ſeeth and eat it, for it is בשלתה the ſame word, that is uſed for ſeething with water, Exod. 12. 9. where another word צלי is put for roſt, and thus both the Caldee and Septuagint render it here thou ſhalt ſeeth, but the Septuagint add thou ſhalt ſeeth and roſt, and this of ſeething is followed by Junius. Our Tranſlators happily conſidering, that the Paſſeover muſt not be eaten ſodden, but roſt, feared, if the word ſhould be rendred ſeeth, that there would be a contradiction here. But that which is here appointed to be ſodden is not the Paſcal Lamb, but parts of the Sacrifices at this time offered, as the diſtinction is plainly made, 2 Chron.35.13. For beſides the Lamb, which was eaten roſted, and the ſacrifices appointed for every of the ſeven dayes of the Paſſeover, Numb. 28. men might voluntarily offer many other peace-offerings, as Joſiah is ſaid to have given for the Paſſeover 30000. Lambs and Verſ.7.

Cald.

Iunius. Exod.12.9.

2 Chron. 35. 7,8,9.

and kids, and 3000 bullocks, and others a great number more, wherewith all Israel then feasted, and the flesh of these sacrifices is that, which is here appointed to be sodden, and not the pascal lamb.

Ordinance 7. Vers.9,10, 11.

The seventh Ordinance here repeated is about the feast of weeks, vers.9, 10,&c. touching which, see Lev.23.15. and Numb.28.17,31. But here a tribute of a free-will offering is commanded to be brought to feast withal, the Levite and poor being called unto it, which was not spoken of before; and this is left to every mans own good will for the quantum thereof. The word rendred tribute here, is Missah in Hebrew, of Mas, a tribute, it is put Deut. 15.8. for enough, so that it must be a sufficient quantity to feast withal. Upon this day, otherwise called the feast of Pentecost, the people of Israel came to Mount Sinai and kept their first feast there, Exod.19. and now the law was given, and afterwards the Spirit, Act.2. wherefore at this especially they were to feast and rejoyce before the Lord in remembrance of these things, and for the joy of them.

Ordinance 8. Ver. 13,14, 15,16,17.

The 8. Ordinance here repeated is about the feast of tabernacles, touching which enough, Lev.23.3. and of the three feasts here put together, at all which they must appear, so many as were males, but none empty, Exod. 23.14,15.

Ordinance 9. Vers. 18, 19, 20.

The 9. Ordinance is about the making of Judges and Officers in all their gates, who should judge with just judgment, vers.18,19, 20. and take no bribes. This was first the advice of Jethro to Moses, Exod.18.21. and afterwards God himself upon the complaint of Moses, that he could not alone bear the burthen of the people, appointed Judges and officers over them, Numb.11.16. How the Judges were distinguished, and in what order they proceeded in the choosing of them, see Numb.11.16. The officers are called Shetrim, and in Greek, γραμματεῖς, Scribes, their office was to speak and to proclaim to the people what they ought to do, Deut. 20.5,9. Josh.1.10,11. and to execute the sentence of the Judges. For they had staves and whips, saith Maimony, and stood before the Judges, and went about into streets and shops to look to right weights and measures, and to smite all that did wrong at the commandment of the Judges, and wheresoever they found any foul matter, they brought the offenders before the Judges into the judgment hall, where he was judged according to his wickednesse. The vulgar Latine for officers, hath masters, that is, saith Hugo Cardin. to instruct the ignorant; or by Judges and masters, he will have learned and wise Judges understood. The word שטרים cometh of שטר præesse, dominari, to rule, so that they were officers, that had rule under the Judges. Junius for officers hath moderators. And the Judges must be made in their gates, that is, must sit publickly to judge the people, one as well as another within and without the cities, see Prov.31.23. That Judges must judge justly, see also Deut.24.17. and not respect persons, Lev.19.15. Deut.1.17. Prov.24.23. nor take gifts, Exod.23.8.

Maimony in Sanedrim, c.1.

Hugo Cardinalis.

Ordinan. 10. Ver. 21,22.

Hugo Cardin.

Junius.

Maimony of Idolatry, c.6.

The 10. Ordinance, vers.21. Thou shalt not plant thee a grove of any trees near to the altar of the Lord, neither shalt thou set thee up any image, &c.] The Gentiles used to sacrifice in groves, and therefore to cut off all occasions of idolizing with them, this ordinance is made, see Exod.34.13. Junius by these words, near the altar, understandeth both in place and in esteem, accounting it next in excellency to the altar, or equal, or before it. How they sinned afterwards against this, see Jud.3.7. c.6.25. 1 King.14.23.c.16. 33. 2 King.21.3,7. 1 King.18.19. The Judges therefore streightly forbad the planting of any tree within the court of the sanctuary, upon pain of beating; of images or statutes here forbidden, see Levit.26.1.

CHAP. XVII.

Ordinance 11. Verſ. 1.

THe 11. Ordinance here repeated is, that no beaſt having a blemiſh, or being ill-favoured ſhould be offered to the Lord, verſ. 1. of this, ſee more Levit. 22. 22. For ill-favoured, Hebr. is, any evil word; in the Cald. any evil thing whatſoever; that is, if it be ſick or lame, &c. Mal. 1. 8. whereas oxe and ſheep are only named, all other beaſts fit for ſacrifice are to be underſtood hereby; and it is to be known, that שור rendred an ox, doth properly ſignifie a bull; and indeed bulls and not oxen were fit for ſacrifice, becauſe the oxe was imperfect, as being without his ſtones. By a blemiſh in an oxe, Hugo underſtandeth a wicked intention in the work; and by a blemiſh in a ſheep, fooliſhneſſe in ſimplicity, becauſe by the oxe is ſet forth labour, by the ſheep ſimplicity.

Hugo Card. The Myſtery.

Ordinan. 12. Verſ. 2,3,4, 5.

The 12. Ordinance here repeated, is againſt the worſhippers of the hoſt of heaven, againſt which it is provided, Deut. 4. 19. and here the penalty of ſuch offenders is ſet down to be ſtoning to death, as of thoſe, that ſeduce to idolatry, c. 13.

Note.

Here in putting the caſe of any worſhipping the hoſt of heaven, it is added, Which I have not commanded; to intimate, that the worſhip „ which God hath not commanded, is ſinful, although it be not expreſly forbidden, but only in general, as under that precept, thou ſhalt have none other gods but me; to worſhip the hoſt of heaven is forbidden, as likewiſe to worſhip Saints departed, or Angels.

Maimony in Sanedrin, c. 15. Gloſ. Ordin.

Verſ. 5. thou ſhalt bring forth unto thy gates that man or woman and ſtone him to death] That is, to the gates of that city where he ſerved other gods, and not where he was condemned to dye, ſo Maimony. But the Ordin. Gloſſe better, to the gates, where judgment is given, that he may not be put to death without being judged firſt. Of the manner of ſtoning, ſee Levit. 24. 23.

Hugo Cardin.

Verſ. 6. at the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall he be put to death, &c.] One witneſſe is not enough, but there muſt be two or three at the leaſt, as hath been already touched, ch. 13. 6. ſee alſo Deut. 19. 15. Becauſe it is ſaid, at the mouth, the Rabbins gather, that no teſtimony is to be taken by writing or otherwiſe, but the witneſſe being preſent to ſpeak with his own mouth. But in money matters the hand-writing of a witneſſe being dead may be taken. Thus, ſaith Hugo, by the witneſſe of the two Teſtaments, and of the three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, every wicked man ſhall be condemned at the laſt day, according to that, 1 Joh. 5. there be three that bear witneſſe in heaven, &c. and every preacher ought to condemn the wicked by three witneſſes, 1. Of the heart, which is when he is of ſufficient underſtanding in the word. 2. Of the mouth, when he hath the gift of utterance, and teacheth the law. 3. Of the work, when unto teaching well, he joyneth living well. And in the Word there be three that teſtifie againſt every wicked perſon, the Law, the Prophets, and the Goſpel.

Hugo Cardin. teſtimonio cordis, oris & operis.

Ordin. 13. Verſ. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.

The 13. Ordinance is, that if an hard caſe falleth out, they muſt go to the place, which the Lord ſhould chooſe, and propound it to the Prieſts and Levites, and the Judge there, who muſt declare, what the Law is, and to this muſt every one ſtand, and who ſo diſobeyeth the ſentence of the prieſt, or Judge, muſt be put to death.

If there riſe a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, plea and plea, ſtroake and ſtroake,] This is ſpoken to the Judge in any particular city. By bloud and bloud we may underſtand murther and manſlaughter, the ſhedding of bloud premeditated out of malice, or ſuddenly and unawares: for if the inferiour Judges cannot tell whether to judge it, and ſo whether the bloud-ſhedder may have the benefit of the city of refuge fuge or not, they muſt go to the ſuperiour Judges to know. By plea and plea, underſtand any matter of ſtrife; by ſtroake and ſtroake, the Cald. underſtandeth the plague of leproſie, of which the Prieſt is to judge, Lev. 13. and Chap. 14. but it is more probable, that a blow given to the hurting or wounding of any is meant.

Then thou ſhalt come to the Prieſts, the Levites, and the Judge, &c.] For the better underſtanding of this, it is to be known, that unto the Prieſts and Levites ſome Elders of the people were joyned to ſit in judgment: for ſo Jehoſhaphat conſtituted a Synedrion at Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. 19. 8. and bad them judge uprightly between blood and blood, law and commandement, ſtatutes and judgments, verſ. 10. and amongſt theſe, as the high prieſt was head over the Prieſts and Levites, and the judgment of Eccleſiaſtical cauſes properly belonged to him; ſo Zebadiah was over the lay Judges, and the judgment of all civil matters belonged to him, verſ. 11. But they muſt not judge of their own heads, but according to the ſentence of the law, verſ. 12. Ezech. 44. 24. And when the high Prieſt with his aſſiſtants ſet down any ſuch ſentence, or the chief Judge with his, it muſt be performed accordingly upon pain of death: and this death, ſaith Maimony, was by ſtrangling, and that at Jeruſalem, when it was a feaſtival time, that all might hear and fear to do the like. For their manner of proceeding according to this Ordinance Maimony ſaith, that firſt they, whoſe caſe was to be judged, came to the Synedrion of their own city, and if the Judges there could not tell what ſentence to give, then they with theſe Judges or their meſſengers went up to Jeruſalem to the Synedrion of the mountain of the temple, if they could not tell, then they went to the Synedrion at the door of the court of the temple, and if they could not tell, to the chamber of hewen ſtone and to the great Synedrion there. Maimony of Rebels, c. 1. And the ſentence given here muſt ſtand, but if afterwards, theſe Judges being dead and gone, by another Synedrion ſucceeding them their judgment be diſannulled, and another given, this muſt be ſtood to, becauſe it is ſaid, thou ſhalt come to the Prieſts, Levites and Judge, that ſhall be in thoſe dayes; within the danger of this law they brought all ſuch, as would not receive their traditions afterwards, except the Sadduces, who were trained up in their fathers opinions from their youth. But without all warrant from hence: for the ſentence which is according to the law onely, which was written muſt ſtand inviolable, and not traditions that were delivered by word of mouth only, as they hence pretend, that whatſoever the great Synedrion decreeth is to be obeyed. Mal. 2. 7. the Prieſts lips ſhall preſerve knowledge, and they ſhall enquire the law at his mouth; and not whatſoever he will be pleaſed to decree. The Scribes and Phariſees ſitting in Moſes his chair muſt be obeyed, but their works not imitated, that is, what they did by tradition, and not according to the Law of God, for by theſe they overthrew the law. Something like unto this ordinance was that Exod. 18. of bringing the harder matters to Moſes to be judged by him. Matth. 23. Matth. 15.

The 14 Ordinance is, if when they were come into the land of Canaan, they would ſet up a King, they muſt ſet up one of their brethren, not a ſtranger, and he muſt not multiply horſes, nor wives, nor treaſure much, but have the book of the law by him and read thereupon continually, and learn to fear God, and not to be proud and to lift up himſelf above his brethren. The Lord foreſaw what they would deſire to do afterwards, viz. to have a King over them, as other nations had, when being like to the idolatrous Gentiles in the manner of their government, there would be more danger of being perverted; wherefore paſſing over the time of Judges, as Calvin noteth, he pitcheth upon this time, giving inſtructions here aforehand for this caſe. Ordinan. 14. Ver. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. Calvin.

If it ſhall ſeem ſtrange, that after this ordinance the Lord was offended with them for deſiring a King. It is to be underſtood, as Hugo hath it, that 1 Sam. 8. 5. Hugo Cardin.

that it is onely permitted here and not ordained. But their offence was not ſimply in deſiring a King, but out of diffidence, that the Lord could not otherwiſe ſufficiently protect them againſt their enemies, as Chytræus hath it. Whileſt they were governed by judges, none being lifted up to ſo high dignitie as the regall, God himſelf was their King, and he did oft times in their diſtreſſe ſhew his Almighty power in delivering them by judges, whom he immediately ſtirred up and placed over them, as Gedeon moſt piouſly ſaid, I will not rule over you, neither ſhall my ſonne, but the Lord ſhall rule over you; which whileſt it was ſo, all mens eyes were towards God, and their truſt was in him, but now they changed their truſt in God into truſt in a King, for which the Lord was juſtly diſpleaſed, and gave them a King in his wrath, and tooke him away in his anger. But afterwards he gave them a King, even David, a man after his own heart, and then to have a King began to be a great glory to the common-wealth. They are charged, if they would make them a King not to ſet up a ſtranger, becauſe ſuch being idolaters would be ready by his power to oppreſſe the true religion, which it is every Kings duty to maintain, as Calvin noteth. And their King muſt not multiply horſes, nor cauſe his people to return into Egypt to multiply horſes, which charge is given, becauſe Egypt abounded with horſes; as Hugo hath it, and as we may gather, in that Pharaoh being drowned and all his hoſt, it is ſaid, The horſe and his rider hath he thrown into the Sea, Exod. 15.1. and in that ſo many goodly horſes were brought to Solomon out of Egypt, 2 Chron. 1.16, 17. ſee alſo Eſa. 31. 1. Becauſe Egypt was ſo wicked, they muſt not go thither, nor multiply horſes, which they could not well doe without having commerce with that countrey. Yet the Rabbins ſay, Hebrewes might dwell in any countrey in the world, ſaving in Egypt, but for commerce they might go thither. Another reaſon, why they might not multiply horſes was, becauſe horſes were the principall of worldly ſtrength, leſt they ſhould put confidence in them, Pſalm. 20. 8. Deut. 20. 1. Prov. 11. 31. Again, the King is charged not to multiply wives to himſelf, leſt his heart be turned away. God at the firſt joyned together but one man and one woman, of which alſo it is ſpoken, Mal. 2. 14. but for the multiplying of poſterity, Jacob afterwards had more wives, and David, &c. which is thought to have bin done by divine diſpenſation, ſo that the having of more wives then one, is not here forbidden to the King, but the having of many, and ſpecially of forreign Nations, whereby there is danger of having his heart turned away as was Solomons, 1 King. 11. 4. Laſtly, the King muſt not greatly multiply his ſilver and his gold, whereby is not meant that he ſhould not have any great treaſure by him; for David had ſilver and gold in abundance which he gave to the building of the Temple, and Solomon likewiſe which is commemorated as a thing wherein his great glory to which God raiſed him conſiſted. But it is ſaid, that he ſhould not multiply it to himſelf, that is, as covetous, and thinking it a great happineſs to be exceeding rich: for ſo there is danger in riches, Prov. 30. 8, 9. Matth. 6. 24. cap. 13. 22. 1. Tim. 6. 9. under theſe 3 myſtically ſaith Hugo are forbidden in horſes pride, in wives fleſhly pleaſure and luxury, and in gold and ſilver covetouſneſs. For the Kings reading continually in the book of the Law, that he might learn to fear God. Maimony ſaith, every King is to write the book of the Law for himſelf beſides that which was left him by his father; and if he had none left him, he muſt write two copies, one to leave in his houſe, and the other to carry with him whitherſoever he went, whether he went to warre or ſat in judgement. And it is ſaid, that this copie ſhould be written out of the book which is before the Prieſts, becauſe the originall copy of the Law was kept by them in the ſanctuarie, Deut. 31. 26. and therefore the writing made according to this was ſurely right. For herein ſaith the gloſſe, there was nothing perverted, nothing corrupted. The King muſt alwayes be Chytræus.

Judges 8.

Hoſ. 13.11.

Calvin.

Hugo Card.

Maimony of King. c. 5.

Verſ. 17.

Deut. 7.4.

Hugo Card. The Myſtery.

Verſ. 18.

Maimony of Kings c. 3.

Gloſ. ordin. Ubi nil fuſcatum nil corruptum.

be reading in the book of the Law, that knowing the will of God for the right governing of all in matters civil and eccleſiaſticall, he may have a care to rule accordingly, and not onely to puniſh murtherers, adulterers, &c. but to provide that ſound doctrine be taught and imbraced in the Church by all his ſubjects: So Chytræus, who alledgeth many examples of David, Solomon, Aſa, Jehoſhaphat, &c. Nebuchadnezzar, Evilmerodach, Darius, Cyrus, Conſtantin magnus, Valentinianus, Theodoſius, who profeſſed himſelf to be a Prince tied to the Lawes, and that his authoritie depended upon the authoritie of the Law, and Charles the great, who ſet over the people ſubdued by him godly Doctors, and adjoyned Colledges of teachers and learners of the true doctrine. Chytræus.

CHAP. XVIII.

THe 15. Ordinance is, that the Prieſts and Levites ſhould have no part nor inheritance in Canaan, but the offerings of the Lord and his inheritance, the ſhoulder, the two cheeks and the maw of ſacrifices, and the firſt fruits, and the firſt fleece of the ſheep. By part here the Rabbins underſtand part of the ſpoiles of the enemy, ſee Numb. 18. 20. yet of the ſpoiles of Midian the prieſts had a great part, being ſet out as a tribute to the Lord in acknowledgement, that the victory came from him, Numb. 31. 26. The Lord is ſaid to be their inheritance, that is, his part whatſoever he hath willed to be given unto him, which may be found, Numb. 18. to be 24 ſeverall things. The Lords part or inheritance, ſaith the gloſſe, are tithes, but not onely tithes, but things devoted, &c. are his. He is too covetous ſaith Jerom hereupon who is not ſatisfied with the Lord; for how can he want any thing that hath him, who hath all things. For the ſhoulder of ſacrifices, that and the beaſt was given to Aaron and his ſonnes, Exod. 29. 27, 28. and it was the right ſhoulder. For theſe words, From him that offereth a ſacrifice, Hebr. are זבחי זבח ſignifying either ſacrificing a ſacrifice, or ſlaying a ſlaughter. It is commonly taken by Expoſitours for ſacrificing in this place, but the Hebrews underſtand any clean beaſt killed any where or upon any occaſion, ſaying, that the ſhoulder, the two cheeks and the maw of them all are to be given to the Prieſts from time to time, both within the land of Canaan and without: and if there be no Prieſt nor Levite near, then the price is to be given, it muſt not be taken nor asked, but given with honour; ſo Maimony, and if it be thus underſtood, it is a new ordinance for other maintenance of the Prieſts and Levites not ſpoken of before; and this is moſt probable, becauſe not onely the ſhoulder is given them as in ſacrifices, but alſo the cheeks and maw. For theſe words, This ſhall be the Prieſts due, Hebr. is, this ſhall be the Prieſts judgement, ſo likewiſe the vulgar Latine, Junius the Prieſts right, the Cald. his due, and thus the word משפש is uſed Pſalm. 81. 5.

Ordinance 15 Verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

Gloſ. Ordin.

Hieron.

Maimony in Biccurim c. 9.

For the firſt fruits, ſee before, Exod. 22. 29. Numb. 18. 12. For the firſt fleece, it was not ſpoken of till now, but onely the tithe of the herd and of the flock, Levit. 27. 32. Touching this, the Rabbins determine it to be one of ſixty at the leaſt, as of other firſt fruits the ſixtieth part is the leaſt; if any man having many ſuch fleeces will give them to divers Prieſts, he muſt not give leſſe to any one then 5 ſhekles weight of white wooll, even enough to make a little coat. This Ordinance is an addition to the former lawes for the better maintaining of the Prieſts, they and the Levites muſt not onely have the tithe of wooll, but the firſt fruits alſo.

Maimony in Biccurim.

The 16 Ordinance is, that any Levite coming from his City with an hearty deſire to ſerve God at his Temple ſhall have a part amongſt his brethren, beſides that which cometh of the ſale of his patrimony, v. 6, 7, 8. For theſe words verſ. 8. They ſhall have like portions to eat beſides that which cometh

Ordinance 16 Verſ. 6, 7, 8.

cometh of the sale of his patrimony, Hebr. rendred word for word are these. They shall eate portion as portion, besides his sales by the fathers. The Cald. hath it besides the ward, which shall come on the Sabbath, as the fathers have appointed: the Septuagint beside the sale, which is according to the Family. Junius, besides the price of the things which any of them hath sold according to the families of their fathers, expounding it of their houses sold in the Cities where they dwelt, because it might be objected now, they had money to maintain them withall; therefore they needed not to eate of the offerings there; this is spoken by way of prevention, they shall have like portions to eate with their brethren, but according to the families of their fathers, the Kohathites amongst the Kohathites, and Gershonites amongst the Gershonites, and not confusedly. The scope of this Ordinance, say the Rabbins, is, that whereas the Priests were divided by Moses into eight wards or charges, and afterwards by Samuel and King David into foure and twenty, one head being set over every ward which went up to Jerusalem by course to serve every week at solemne Feasts, if any other Priests, whose course it was not to serve, that week should come up to serve, he should serve, and have a like portion with them; but this was onely in the offerings of that Feast, not in the offerings upon vow, or voluntary offerings, or daily sacrifices, which they onely offered, whose course it was to serve then. Wherefore they give this for the sense, as if it had bin said, they shall eate portion, like portion of the offerings of the Congregation, but not of other things, which the fathers have already apportioned them, appointing every ward his week. And they expound these words, If any Levite, of a Levite being a Priest, because the Priest onely, and not ordinary Levites might eate of the gifts of the Sanctuary.

Cald. Par.

Junius.

1 Chron. 24.

Maimony of the instruments of the Sanctuary, c. 4.

Saint Augustine whom Rabanus followeth, understandeth by the sales, the tithes and the first fruits sold by them that dwelt farre off, with the price of which they bought again at Jerusalem; of these the Levites should have their part, when they came up to serve, which belonged to the families of their fathers. Calvin holdeth that a provision is here made for the Levites, which lived not as other Levites in their Cities, but gave themselves wholly to serve God at his Temple, the other must have the tithes onely to live upon, but these both their parts in them and other maintenance also with the ordinary servitours there to feed upon, as they dedicated themselves wholly to the service of God, so God thus rewarding them with a double honour. This place is so obscure, that no exposition brought doth fully satisfie, except happily that of Junius. The exposition of the Rabbins, seemeth not to bee true, because although Priests were of the tribe of Levi, yet they are no where set forth by the name of Levites, but of Priests; and because of the sales here spoken of, they say nothing, and if they should mean the vow offerings, &c. these were not for sale, but for food to the Priests.

August' qu. 28. in Deut.

Calvin.

That of Augustine is overthrown because it is said of his sales, whereas not the Levite, but the owner selleth those tythes that are sold, and bringeth the price to Jerusalem. And lastly Calvins is too general, and determineth not, what their sales were. These sales therefore, I hold with Junius were of their houses in the Cities where they dwelt, of which it is said, if a Levite cometh from any of thy gates, where he sojourneth, they being called their gates, or Cities, as the Septuagint hath it, because they were given to the Levites out of every Tribe to dwell in, and they had none inheritance otherwise of their own, and so were but as sojourners there, and yet they might sell, Levit. 29. which if they did out of a desire to be rid of worldly incumbrances, that they might altogether attend upon the service of God, they should have their portions, as others had notwithstanding to live upon, but in order

The

The 17. Ordinance is that none ſhould make his childe to paſſe through the fire, or uſe divination, or obſerve times, or be an inchanter or witch, &c. neither ſhould they ſeek to ſuch, but to the Prophet, whom the Lord promiſed to raiſe up unto them. For the firſt of theſe cauſing their children to paſſe through the fire, ſee Levit. 18. 21. For uſing divination ſee Levit. 19. 26. But the word, whereupon I ſpake of divination there, is the ſame, that is uſed here in the third place מנחש an inchanter, and קסם-קסמם for a diviner of divinations. The Rabbins diſtinguiſh thus betwixt them, the diviner is one, that taketh upon him, as a Prophet to foretel what ſhall come, the means that he uſed being ſand, or ſtones, or lying down upon the ground, iron or a ſtaffe, which he leaneth upon, at which laſt it is glanced, Hoſ. 4. 12. The inchanter, or as one going upon the Etymology of the word נחש, turneth it, the obſerver of fortunes, for נחש is to ſearch and to find out by experience, Gen. 30. 27. whereupon they that look at ſigns of good or evil luck, as overcurioufly ſearching into events, are called מנחשם, thoſe I ſay, are ſet forth to be ſuch as ſay, becauſe my morſel fell out of mouth or my ſtaffe out of my hand, I will not go to ſuch a place, for if I go, this is a ſign of ill luck unto me, or becauſe a Fox paſſed by on my right hand, I will not go forth to day, leſt ſome deceitful perſon meet me, &c. They that addicted themſelves thus to the obſervation of ſigns of good and evil luck amongſt the Hebrews were beaten; of divining and inchantment ſee more, Levit. 19. 26. The ſame is too too common amongſt many Chriſtian people, and yet no fault thought to be herein, but let us remember this Law and fear to do the like. For obſervers of times, ſee alſo the ſame place, theſe are planetaries, that by the planets judge of good and evil dayes. This ſaith Maimony is unlawful, and therefore it ſhould be made known, that they are lyes, which fools imagine thus to be true, and to be the obſervations of the wiſe. Of witches ſee Levit. 20. 27. and Chap. 19. 31. Exod. 22. 18. a witch muſt not be ſuffered to live, and in this laſt place onely this word ſetting forth witches is uſed, in the other wizzards, which by and by followeth. The Rabbins diſtinguiſh betwixt them thus, a witch was a ſorcerer, or magician, of which ſort Exod. 7. and theſe were either ſuch as held the eyes, whom we call juglers, or ſuch as did miſchief by the help of the devil, theſe they ſay, were to be put to death, the other to be beaten. A wizzard was one that put a bone in his mouth of a bird called jadvangh, and burnt incenſe and did other things, and at length falling down uttered things to come, wherefore a wizzard called ידעוני and this word cometh from knowing; ſuch are alſo called cunning men, ſuch as well as witches muſt be put to death, Levit. 20. 6, 27. or a charmer, Heb. that charmeth a charm, or an inchanter. They are ſuch, ſay the Rabbins, that ſpeak words of a ſtrange Language and without ſence, and believe out of their fooliſhneſs, that theſe words are profitable, if they be ſaid to a ſerpent or ſcorpion to keep a man from being hurt by them, or over a wound to cure it, and likewiſe to read a verſe out of the Bible. Moreover they lay the book of the Law over a child, that it may not be frighted, &c. ſuch are not onely charmers, but denyers of the Law, becauſe they make it medicinable for the body, whereas it is not but for the ſoul onely, according to that Prov. 3. 22. they ſhall be life unto thy ſoul; ſo Maimony, or a conſulter with familiar ſpirits; of theſe and wizzards ſee Levit. 19. 31. this is called Act. 16. 16. the ſpirit of Python from Pythius Apollo, the chief oracle of the Heathen; and Apollo was thus called, becauſe he was feigned to have killed the ſerpent Python, ſee Iſa. 29. 4. For the manner of this conſulting, Maimony ſaith, it was by burning incenſe, and holding a rod of a myrtle tree in his hand, and waving it and, whiſpering certain words ſecretly, and the inquirer hear one ſpeak out of the earth with a low voice, or by taking a dead mans skull and burning incenſe thereto, till ſuch a voice was Ordinance 17 Verſ. 9, 10, 11. Verſ. 14, 15 16, &c.

Maimony of idolat. c. 11.

Ainſworth.

Maimony of Idolatry, c. 11 Iſa. 2. 6: 2 King. 21. 6

Maimony of Idolatry, c. 11

Maimony of Idolatry, c. 11.

Maimony of Idolat. c. 6.

was heard. Or a necromance, Heb. or a ſeeker to the dead. This is ſaid to have been done thus, the necromancer faſted, and lay amongſt the graves, that the dead might come unto him, and make known that which he asked. Or elſe he clad himſelf with clothes for that purpoſe, burnt incenſe and ſpake certain words, and ſlept by himſelf, that ſuch a dead perſon might come unto him and talk with him in a dream. All theſe are ſaid to be an abomination to Lord, and thus did the Nations, which were caſt out before them.

Maimony of Idolat.c.11. Iſa. 8.19. Ver. 13,14.

Verſ. 15. The Lord will raiſe up a Prophet unto thee in the midſt of thy brethren like unto me, to him ſhal ye hearken, &c.] Having ſhewed to whom they ſhould not hearken, now he ſheweth to whom they ſhould hearken, not to thoſe that ſpake by the devil, but to one ſpeaking the words of God. For if they ſhould not alwaies have had ſome to go unto, that by him they might be reſolved of their doubts and quæries, and to be informed of the will of their God, they might have thought themſelves worſe dealt withal then the Heathen, who had their diviners and wizzards, whom they held to be the Prophets of their gods, as Calvin noteth.

Calvin.

Touching the Prophet here ſpoken of, ſome, ſaith he, underſtand Joſhuah, who was like Moſes for doing wonders, and for directing the people, thus Maſius, who yet will have Chriſt underſtood alſo, as the Prophet principally meant here, and typified in Joſhuah; others, ſaith Calvin, underſtand Jeremiah, but he rejecteth both, becauſe a means for the governing and guiding of the Church for ſome ſhort time only is not here ſet up, but continually from age to age, until the coming of Chriſt the head of all Prophets.

And. Maſius

Again, the fathers, ſaith he, have held, that Chriſt and none but Chriſt is meant here, ſo Euſebius, who proveth that it cannot be applyed to any other, and both Peter expoundeth it of Chriſt, and Stephen likewiſe, and that it was by the Jews generally ſo underſtood, appeareth Joh.1.21. where they ſend to John the Baptiſt to know whether he were that Prophet, which he denyed, but would not ſo have done, if a Prophet meerly had been meant by that Prophet, for Chriſt teſtifieth of him, that he was a Prophet, and greater then a Prophet. Auguſtine alſo and Rabanus following him and Hugo Card. underſtand it of Chriſt only. But Calvin rejecteth this, becauſe ſo the people ſhould not have been ſatisfied in their deſire, which was as here followeth, that they might not hear God ſpeaking any more, but that Moſes might ſpeak unto them; for if they had tarryed till Chriſts coming in the fleſh, which was not till 2000. years after, how were they ſatisfied in the mean ſeaſon, or what means had they to be kept from ſeeking to wizzards, and necromancers in all that time? wherefore he reſolveth, that all the Prophets from Moſes untill Chriſt are meant, in whom, as the head of all and ſo chiefly intended here, there was a conſummation of all their propheſyings. He will therefore have the word Prophet a collective, Joſhuah and all other Prophets being meant hereby, but chiefly Chriſt Jeſus.

Euſeb lib.3.de præparat. Evang.c.2. Acts 3.22,26. Act.7.37. Matth.11.9. Auguſt. 16. contra Fauſt. c. 15. Raban. Hugo Cardin.

For the reaſons brought againſt this, he anſwereth; 1. Whereas it is objected, no prophet except Chriſt was like Moſes, for God himſelf diſtinguiſheth all others from him, Numb.12.6,7. and Deut.34.10. it is ſaid, there roſe not a Prophet more like Moſes, the meaning is, that none was every way alike excellent with Moſes, or indued with ſuch rare gifts, but they were like Moſes in that they were true Prophets of God, as he was, and from them the people heard the Lords Will, as they had done from Moſes, and as he, they were directours to them from time to time. Whereas it is objected, that Peter and Stephen expound it only of Chriſt; he anſwereth, that in thus doing they do not exclude other holy Prophets, that were before him, but hereby ſeek to move them to obey Chriſt, who principally was that Prophet, and not to ſuffer themſelves to be deprived of ſo great a benefit.

benefit. They had been long now without a Prophet, of which great complaint is made, Pſal.74.9. but they had a promiſe of Elias to come, Mal.4.4. that is, of a more happy time, then ever they had yet, when he ſhould come, who chiefly was meant by that Prophet. And to this of Calvin I cannot but incline, holding it unreaſonable, as he doth, that this promiſe of the Prophet, whom they ſhould hear, ſhould in no part be fulfilled, till 2000 years after. But ſpecially Chriſt was herein aimed at, as even the Samaritan woman knew, Joh.4.25. and he was moſt like to Moſes; 1. In his Mediatourſhip betwixt God and his people. 2. In his excellency, wherein he went beyond all other Prophets, ſpeaking with God mouth to mouth. 3. In ſigns and wonders which he did, Luk.24.19. Act. 2.22. 4. In faithfulneſſe in Gods houſe, Heb.3.2,5. And in all theſe he excelled Moſes: In the firſt, becauſe he was Mediatour of a better covenant, Heb.8.6. In the ſecond, becauſe he came out of the boſome of the Father, Joh.1.18. In the third, becauſe he did wonders, that none other had done, Joh.15.24. And in the fourth, becauſe Moſes was faithfull, as a ſervant, but he as a ſon, Heb.3.2,5,6.

To him ſhall ye hearken.] That is, both to Chriſt and his Miniſters, the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Preachers of the Goſpel; for to hear them, is to hear Chriſt, Luc. 10.16. But he in ſpeciall is to be heard, Matth. 17.5. Now this Prophet is promiſed unto them at their requeſt, when they feared to hear God ſpeak any more, Exod.20.19. Deut.4.24,28,&c. ſo that the law is hereby proved to be a Schoolmaſter to bring us unto Chriſt, Gal. 3.24.

I will put my words into his mouth,] According to this the Lord ſpeakes of the words given unto him, Joh. 17.8. and of his coming in the Fathers name, mentioned verſ. 19. Joh. 5.43. for the threatening againſt ſuch, as hearkened not to him, I will require it of him, the meaning is, as the Rabbins expound it, they ſhall be deſtroyed; ſo it was threatened to Jeruſalem, Luc. 19.44. and propheſied of, Dan. 9.26. Verſ. 18. Verſ. 19.

For prophets, that ſhould ſpeak in Gods name, when he ſent them not, or in the name of other gods, they muſt dye for it: this the Rabbins expound of ſtrangling, ſaying, that not only he who propheſied falſe things was to be ſtrangled, but alſo he that ſpake what came from anotther true Prophet without adding or diminiſhing, if he ſaid, that this word came to him, and ſo propheſieth. For ſpeaking in the name of other gods, this, they ſay was, when they ſaid ſuch an idol, or ſtar, ſaid unto me, that we ſhould do or not do ſuch a thing, although he ſaid, that was clean, which was clean; or unclean, which was unclean, yet he was to be ſtrangled; and if he ſhewed any ſign, it was not to be regarded. If it were doubted, when one ſpake in the name of the Lord, whether the Lord ſent him or not, it is reſolved, if the ſign given by him came not to paſſe, that he ſpake preſumptuouſly. But of this enough hath been ſaid upon Deut. 13 verſ. 2,3. Verſ. 20. Maimony of Idolatry, ch. 5. Ver. 21,22.

Chap. XIX.

Hitherto of the second thing in the further illustration of the ceremonial law to keep the worship and service of God uncorrupt; now followeth the third, the repetition of Judicial lawes, and a further explaining of them in this Chapter, and Chap. 20,21,22,23,24,25.

Judicial law 1. Verſ. 12.

The first is touching Cities of refuge for the shedder of blood unwittingly to flee unto, of which see Numb. 35. where this law is largely expounded, and the mystery propounded. For that clause verſ. 12. of adding three Cities of refuge more when God should inlarge their bounds, as he sware to their fathes, which he would do, if they kept his commandements; this was never yet fulfilled by reason of their sins, as the Rabbins confesse; but because no word of God is in vain, they say, it shall be fulfilled in the dayes of the Messiah, or the King Christ, and these shall be in the countries of the Kenizites, and Cadmonites mentioned to Abraham, Gen. 15.18. but indeed Christ fulfilling the law for us, which we cannot do through our weakneſse, Rom. 8.3. this are spiritually fulfilled the coasts of spiritual Israel, the Church, is inlarged now, and every where the way is prepared for us to flee to the throne of grace through him, Heb. 6.18.

Maimony of Kings, ch. 11. Maimony of Murther, c. 8. Sect. 4.

Judic. law 2. Verſ. 14. Numb. 26.

The second law, verſ. 14. Thou shalt not remove thy neighbours land mark which they of old time have set, &c. The land of Canaan was divided amongst the Israelites by lot, and therefore as against sacriledge this law is made against one mans incroaching upon the inheritance of another, although it were never so little, yea as the Rabbins say, although but an inch, holding it, if it were done by force, to be rapine; if secretly, theft, and therefore by thus doing, that two Commandements were broken, that general against theft, and this particular against removing the bounds. The greatneſse of this sin appeareth in that it is cursed, Deut. 27.17. and spoken against in other countries, Job 24.2. and again forbidden, Prov. 22. 28. Remove not the land marks, which thy fathers have set, and so the Sept. render it here, for Joshua and Eleazar and other fathers first constituted these bounds and set marks to know them, so that these words, which they of old time set, have reference to after times, in comparison of which, this time was old: Chytræus saith, that Numa Pompylius a Roman Emperour was so severe against any that transgreſsed herein, that he put them to death. And as the land mark, so is the true doctrine of the Church delivered by the Prophets and Apostles, it is a cursed thing to adde or to take any thing herefrom, for thus the mark of our spiritual posſession is removed, and the greatest sacriledge committed. Hugo Cardinalis applyeth it to the rules of life and determinations set down by the fathers that lived before us.

Maimony of theft, c. 7.

Chytræus.

Hugo Cardin. mystice terminos transferre est regulas vivendi, & definitiones patrum præcedentium transmutare.

The third law is touching witneſses, determining, that they shall in all matters be two at the least, of which see Chap. 17.6. and the Rabbins hereupon gather, that in matters of life and death, and in money matters also, one witneſse is of no force. The civil law alloweth of one witneſse beyond all exception, when by likely conjectures his testimony is also holpen, but rejecteth two or more witneſses, if they be any way infamous for hereſie, adultery, perjury, excommunication, or the manner of punishment suffered: and the testimony of parents for their children, of the wife for her husband, of brother for brother; and contrariwise also, domesticks, farmers, hired servants, and against ones deadly enemies. This of witneſses to be two or three, is again spoken of, Matth. 18. Joh. 8. 1 Tim. 5.2. 2 Cor. 13.

Judic. law 3.

Ver. 16,17.

Touching those, that come to give false testimony against any man, it is also here enacted, that they shall suffer the punishment, which should have been inflicted upon the accursed, if their testimony had been true against againſt him, that is, ſaith Maimony, if he ſhould have been ſtoned to death or ſtrangled, or paid money, they ſhall ſuffer the ſame. But they muſt firſt be convinced to be falſe witneſſes, which is not, when more witneſſes come to ſwear the contrary, for in this caſe the thing is left as uncertain; but when ſome ſwear, that ſuch a man, who is accuſed, was in their company in ſuch a place many miles off, when the evil, of which he is accuſed, is pretended to have been done, they are convinced to be falſe witneſſes, that accuſe him, although they be an hundred, and theſe be but two.

And they that remain, ſhall hear and fear, &c.] That all might hear of falſe witneſſes, Maimony ſaith, that when they were convinced and puniſhed, proclamation was made thereof by the Magiſtrates in all cities, ſuch men witneſſed ſo and ſo and were found falſe, and we killed them, or impoſed ſuch a mulct upon them. By this law it appeareth, how odious a falſe witneſſe is before God, he is even as a murtherer or a thief, for his puniſhment is the ſame. A thief, ſaith Eccleſiaſticus, is better, then he that is accuſtomed to lying; and Prov.6.19. the lier and falſe witneſſe are ſaid to be among the ſix things which the Lord hateth. He is a falſe witneſſe, ſaith Hugo, that faileth in his proof, that is, who layeth ſome foul crime to another mans charge, but when he cometh to prove it, faileth, and of ſuch an one ſpecially muſt this law needs be meant, becauſe the witneſſes that are brought by him, are not ſo eaſily convinced of falſhood. For the particular puniſhments, life for life, eye for eye, &c. ſee Exod.21. 22,23,24.

Verſ. 20.

Eccl. 20. 25.

CHAP. XX.

THe 4. Law is touching their going forth to battel againſt their enemies; when they ſee their preparations, they muſt not be afraid, but the Prieſt muſt ſpeak words of encouragement unto them, and officers muſt go about and ſpeak to ſuch as have built new houſes, and have not yet dedicated them, or planted vineyards, or betrothed wives, or that be timerous, that they return home again, and then they muſt make captains over them that go to battel. Touching wars the Rabbins ſay, that ſome were commanded to the children of Iſrael, and ſome permitted. The wars commanded were firſt againſt the ſeven Nations that were to be rooted out, Deut.2.24.c.7.1. 2. Againſt Amalek, Deut.25.17,19. 3. To help Iſrael out of the hand of the adverſary, that was come upon them, Judg.3.12,38. Wars permitted, were with other people that oppugned Iſrael, Judg. 11.4; 12,27. 2 Sam.10.2,6. and for going out to theſe order muſt firſt be given by the great Synedrion or Senate, but not for the other, the King might of himſelf go out in ſuch wars at any time, and compel the people to go with him. And they hold it as a general rule, that Iſrael muſt never begin firſt to war againſt other nations. That wars were lawful for the people of God, it hereby appeareth, and Numb.10,&c. and as then, ſo now under the New Teſtament juſt wars are lawful, Rom.13. the Magiſtrate beareth not the ſword in vain. Wherefore as David, Hezekiah, Jehoſhaphat and Abraham long before warred, ſo Chriſtian Emperours, Conſtantin. Magnus, Theodoſius, Charles the great, &c.

Judiciall Law 4. Verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

1.

2.

Maimony treatiſe of Kings, ch. 5.

Chytraus.

Lawful wars are firſt for defence againſt enemies invading, as Hezekiahs war againſt Sennacherib; Judas Macchab. againſt Antiochus; the Venetians in defence of Cyprus againſt the Turks.

Secondly, to recover things loſt, as Abraham warred, Gen. 14. Pepidas to recover Cadmæa. Thraſybulus, Athens from the Lacedemonians; Alexand. againſt Darius, to reſtore liberty to the cities of Aſia oppreſſed by him.

Thirdly, to punish rebels and robbers, as Rudolphus the Emperour warred in Turingia against robbers, and overthrew their Forts; and Maximilian against the Burgenses and Duke Rupertus. And Maximilian the second against Grumbachius, &c.

Matth. 5. Object. 1. The Anabaptists bring divers Arguments to prove it unlawful to make war in any case; as, 1. Because they must not resist evil, but suffer patiently the outrages of their enemies, as punishments by God inflicted upon them; and because he that smiteth with the sword shall perish with the sword. But hereby onely private revenge is forbidden, and not the Magistrates doing of his office in repelling evil, who is armed with the sword for this end. And for suffering Gods punishments, that is, by not murmuring against them, or falling from God, or by using unlawful means, but just and lawful means, which God hath ordained are to be used against enemies, such as war is.

Object. 2. 2. Because the Kingdome of Christ is described by the Prophets, as most peaceable: but hereby is meant only, that by the power of the Word without external violence men should be subjected to his Kingdom, and be kept in unity and peace by a consent in true doctrine, and not by politicall meanes, as other Kingdomes of this world. As a Christian, as Luther hath it, every one is to bear all injuries, and to love and help all men, but as he is a member of the Common-Wealth, he is to performe this civill office, as other duties of the Morall Law. Luther.

Object. 3. 3. Because war making is against love. But it is to be understood, that all things against love are so to be avoided, as that due order prescribed by God be kept, and every ones calling preserved, for otherwise to ensue love, were to neglect the love of God, for man, who is to be loved only so far forth, as agreeth with his lawes. Moreover, it is not against love to make just war; for what is love, but to keep Gods Commandements, which should not be kept, if these were not sometime made. Thus Chytræus in determining the point of war, and answering Anabaptists and Julian the apostata, who was wont to object the like to Christians. In war it is the duty of every one that goeth forth to it, not to fear, but to consider God present on their side, that make just Warres, and therefore to be confident in respect of his help, who fighteth for them. See 2 Chron. 13. 12. and 2 Chron. 32. 7, 8. Psal. 118. 6.

Vers. 2. Maimony of Kings, ch. 7. And when ye come nigh to the battle, the Priest shall approch and speak to the people, &c.] This Priest saith Maimony, was one anointed for the warre with the holy ointment, Exod. 30. 25. and he was called the anointed for the warre, and when they were set in aray, he standing upon an high place and all the companies before him uttereth these words, v. 3. 4. and another Priest proclaimeth them with a loud voice, then the anointed Priest saith, what man hath built an house, &c. as v. 5. 6, 7. and an officer proclaimeth it: then an officer saith, what man is fearfull, &c. as v. 8. and another officer proclaimeth it. The fearfull being returned, Captains are constituted, and Officers are set over every company, being couragious and strong with halberts in their hands to cut off the legges of those that would return. Touching the priest anointed for the warre he further saith, that his sonne succeeded him not in this dignity, but is as another priest, and he himself when he returneth to minister in the Sanctuary, useth 4 garments, as the other priests. Besides this priest to incourage them when they went to war, they had other priests also with them, who blew with the holy trumpets, that they might be remembred before the Lord. The glosse addeth, that the priest should first begin to fight also for himself and them: but he is appointed here onely to speak to their incouragement.

Numb. 10. 8, 9. 2 Chr. 13. 12. Glos. Ordin.

Vers. 5. And the officers shall speak to the people, saying, What man is there that hath built built a new houſe, &c.] What Officers were, ſee Deut. 16. 18. the vulgar Latine hath Captains and whereas v.9. it is ſaid, that they ſhall make Captains, the vulgar Latine hath it, they ſhall prepare their wedges cuneos, their companies of footmen in form of a wedge, but againſt the Hebr. verity, wherein it is שרי Princes or Captains. Here are 3 caſes put, wherein any might return home, if he had built a new houſe and not yet dedicated it. 2. If he had planted a vineyard, and not yet eaten of the fruit of it. 3. If he had betrothed a wife, but not yet taken her. For the firſt Maimony ſaith, that a man who hath purchaſed an houſe, or it be given him, or faln to him by inheritance is alike priviledged with one that buildeth, ſo that the houſe be new and never yet dedicated. For the dedicating of an houſe, it was a cuſtome in Iſrael, when a man began firſt to enter his new built-houſe to make uſe of it to dedicate it by a ſolemn meeting there, and feaſting and ſinging praiſes to God, as David when his houſe was dedicated, made Pſalm.30. Touching the ſecond Maimony expoundeth it not onely of a vineyard, but alſo of any ground planted with fruit bearing trees for food, if there be but five ſuch trees in it, he may return, but not for foure, and not onely for a vinyard planted, but purchaſed, faln or given to him, but not if he hath gotten it by rapine, or if two be partners in it. The word rendred, hath not eaten of it, Hebr. is, hath not made it common, or prophaned it, that is, by uſing the fruit of it for common food which he could not do till the fifth year, Levit. 19. 23,24,25. for the firſt 3 years it might not be eaten, the fourth year it was holy food, for it was the Lords, the fifth it was common food for the owner, or any whom he would communicate it to, to eat thereof. Touching the third, not onely he that hath eſpouſed a wife, ſaith Maimony, but if his brothers wife falleth to him according to the Law, Deut.25.5. may return, and ſuch as returned, were to prepare the way for thoſe in the army and water and victuals for them. In this Ordinance God ſeemed to have a care that they ſhould injoy theſe outward bleſſings, by which he led his people in thoſe times; and again, becauſe men would be apt to be troubled in any of theſe caſes, if they had bin compelled to go to warre, and through troubles and fears would have bin the more unapt for this ſervice, this licenſe of returning was given to ſuch. Three things much like theſe are reckoned up, Matth. 22. as hindring from the ſupper, whereupon that diſtick goeth, Maimony of Kings ch. 7.

Luc. 14. 16.

Villa, boves, uxor cœnam clauſere vocatis
Mundus, cura, caro cœlum clauſere renatis.

And the Officers ſhall ſay, What man is fearfull and faint hearted, let him return to his houſe, &c.] Thus Gedeon afterwards proclaimed, Judges 7. 3. and of 32000. 22000. returned. They then that goe forth to warre muſt be couragious through faith in God, that they may prevail, as 1 Chron. 5. 20. 2 Chron. 12.12. 2 Chron.20. And who ſo is not ſaith Maimony, ſinneth againſt this precept, verſ. 1. Ye ſhall not be afraid of them, and verſ. 3. Let not your heart be faint. Yea, he is guiltie of all the bloud that is ſhed through timerouſneſſe giving advantage to the enemy, becauſe through him, his brethrens hearts are made faint. But who ſo is couragious and fighteth without fear, ſhall have a ſure houſe built him in Iſrael. 1 Sam. 25.18. and therefore all thoughts of wife and children, houſe and land, ought by ſouldiers to be put out of their mind, that they may be wholly bent to fight for the name of the Lord.

Verſ.8.

Maimony of Kings c. 5.

The fifth Law is touching the manner of their proceeding in their wars, to peoples that dwelt farre off, they muſt firſt offer peace, &c. verſ.10.unto verſ.16. but to the Canaanites and the reſt of the ſeven Nations not, verſ. 16. 17, 18. and in the time of their beſieging any Citie, the fruit bearing trees, muſt be ſpared and not cut down, verſ. 19. 20. For the firſt of theſe, Indic. Law 5. Verſ.10.11, 12,13.

Hebr. it is, Thou ſhalt call unto it for peace, the Hebrewes hereupon hold, that they muſt make no warre either permitted or commanded with any Nation in the world till they have proclaimed peace unto it, if they yield and receive the ſeven commandments, which were given to the ſonnes of Noah, they muſt kill none of them, but receive them for tributaries. Theſe ſeven commandments were 1. againſt idolatry. 2. Againſt blaſpheming the name of God. 3. Againſt unjuſt carnall copulations, of which they reckon ſix ſorts: 1. With a mans own mother. 2. With his fathers wife. 3. With his neighbours wife. 4. With his ſiſter by the mothers ſide. 5. Of man with man. 6. With beaſts, grounding upon Gen. 2. 24. and Gen. 20. 12. the 4. Againſt ſhedding of the bloud of man. 5. Againſt rapine or robberie. 6. That there ſhould be puniſhments for malefactours. 7. Againſt eating bloud, or any member cut off the creature whileſt it is alive, becauſe the bloud is in it. Moreover, touching the tribute to which it is ſaid they ſhould put them; the Hebrewes hold that it was not onely tribute of their goods, but ſervitude of their bodies, as the task or tribute maſters in Egypt afflicted the Hebrewes with their burthens, and Solomon raiſed a tribute of 30000. men: for it is not onely ſaid, that they ſhould be tributaries, but alſo ſhall ſerve thee. So that if they ſhould yield to a tribute of their goods onely, and not to ſervitude, this was not to be accepted, and of their goods and lands; they ſay the King might take half, or the moveables onely, and leave them the lands, or the lands, and leave them the moveables, as he ſhould make his conditions, they muſt agree to ſerve the King with their bodies and goods in building his walls, fortifying munitions, building his palaces, &c. as 1 King. 9. 15. and to be bondmen to him, as v. 21. 22.. and to be baſe and vile, and not to lift up the head in Iſrael, or to be reckoned with him in any matter of the world. This rule of offering peace was followed even by the heathen, and of ſparing ſuch as craved mercy. Pompey ſaved Otenis a Captain and his people, when being ſubdued he pleaded for the people, as fighting onely at his perſwaſion, and offered himſelf alone to ſuffer; the ſaying of the Oracle is μηδ' ἱκέτας ἀδικεῖν ἱκέται ἱεροὶ τε καὶ ἄγιοι.

Maimonie of Kings c. 6.

Seven Commandements given to all the world.

Exod. 1. 11. 1 Kings 5. 13.

Verſ. 11.

If it will make no peace, but warre againſt thee, thou ſhalt beſiege it: and when the Lord hath delivered it into thy hands, thou ſhalt ſmite every male with the edge of the ſword, but the women, the little ones and the cattle, &c. This ſeemeth, ſaith Hugo to be contrary to that, Numb. 31. where they are reproved by Moſes for ſparing the women and children of the Midianites, and commanded to kill all the women that had lien by men, and all the little ones males. But he anſwereth, the caſe differeth from that, for their women had deceived the Iſraelites, theſe committed no ſuch fault, but onely were, of them that would not open their gates to Iſrael; what other reaſon may be rendred of killing the male children, ſee upon Numb. 31. And hitherto of the firſt, the ſecond now followeth, v. 16.

Verſ. 12. 13, 14.

Hugo Card.

But of the Cities of theſe people which the Lord giveth thee, thou ſhalt ſave nothing alive, thou ſhalt utterly deſtroy them, &c.] This is by the Hebrewes underſtood, if they refuſed to make peace; the women and little ones of other Nations muſt be ſpared in this caſe: but of theſe 7 Nations not one, but all muſt be deſtroyed together, when God had given them the victory over them. And this is grounded upon that Joſ. 11. 19, 20. There was not a Citie that made peace with the ſonnes of Iſrael, ſaving the Hivites of Gibeon, all others they tooke in battle, for it was of the Lord to harden their hearts, that they ſhould come againſt Iſrael in battle, that he might deſtroy them utterly; wherefore that ordinance of offering peace firſt, v. 10. is to be underſtood to all Cities farre off or near, and this exception of the inhabitants of this land, v. 17. hath reference onely to the caſe ſet down, v. 12. 13. And accordingly the Hebrewes ſay, that Joſhua ſent three writings unto them before he came into the land. 1. Who ſo will flie, let him flie.

Verſ. 16. 17.

Maimonie, of Kings c. 6.

2. Who

2. Who ſo will make peace, let him make it. 3. Who ſo will make warre, let him make it. If againſt this it be objected, the Gibeonites diſſembled themſelves to be farre dwellers that they might have peace, which they would not have done, if Joſhua had offered peace to all that would, it is anſwered, that peace being at the firſt offered in generall, they refuſed it, but afterwards through feare they ſought it in this diſguiſed manner, becauſe by their firſt refuſall they had made themſelves uncapable of it, if they had beene knowne; alſo they ſay, they knew not the judgement, nor manner of Iſrael, and therefore did thus:

When thou beſiegeſt a citie, thou ſhalt not cut down the trees thereof, for thou mayeſt eate of them, &c. Trees that are not for meate, may be cut down, and engines of warre made thereof, but not any fruit-bearing trees. For theſe words, Thou ſhalt not cut down the trees, Hebrew is, Thou ſhalt not corrupt a tree לא תשחית the Septuagint Thouſhalt not cut down trees, and it is plain by ſpeaking in the ſingular number, that he meaneth none of the trees. But by corrupting the Hebrewes underſtand, as cutting down with axes, ſo withholding the water courſes from them, whereby they may be made to wither, or any other way marring them. And not onely in time of warre, but in any place; if any man corrupteth a tree, he is to be beaten. Ver. 19.20. Maimony of Kings c. 6.

Yet they have theſe exceptions, if they hurt other trees, or hurt the field, they may be cut down, or if they bear but little fruit, ſo that they are not worth the labour about them, but a Date tree or Olive, that yieldeth a Kab, is not to be cut down; that is, as much as a logge, or halfe a pint. And by the equity of this Law they condemne breaking of veſſels, rending of garments, pulling down of buildings, ſtopping of wells, or deſtroying meats, &c. Touching other trees that beare no fruit, they hold that they may be cut down, although they have no need of them. For the tree of the field is mans life to imploy them in the ſiege. For theſe words, Hebr. are theſe כי האדם עץ השדה לבא מפניך במצור rendred by ſome: For is the tree of the field a man to flie from before thee into a bulwark? and ſo they being rendred interrogatively word for word doe ſignifie. Calvin. Some render it thus: For the trees of the field are expoſed to any man to goe before thee for a bulwarke, that is, thou maiſt finde fruitleſſe trees enough to make bulwarkes of for the ſiege. Junius. The vulgar Latine, becauſe it is wood, and not a man to increaſe the number of thoſe that fight againſt thee. The Cald. and Septuagint favour the firſt, The tree of the field is not a man to goe, &c.] rendring it by the negative, for an interrogative, according to the meaning. As if he had ſaid, as Calvin hath it, becauſe it were an unreaſonable thing to rage againſt the trees, which offend thee not, nor ohce move againſt thee. This is added to repreſſe the furie of Souldiers in the field, who are wont to waſte and to make havocke of all chings, where they come, according to that of one in Livy cited hereupon by Chytræus, it is not lawfull in warre, to doe as to ſuffer, to burne up the Corne, to beate downe houſes, to cut downe fruite-bearing trees, &c. Chytræus.

The diſcipline of Cyrus in his warres was otherwiſe, for he gave a charge to ſpare husbandmen, that the tilling of the ground might not bee hindered, and Belliſarius the Captaine of Juſtinian provided in Africa, and other places, where hee warred, that husbandmen might bee ſafe: And of Fredericke the victorious Prince Palatine, it is remembered, that when hee heard, that the Corne was burnt downe by his Souldiers, hee was ſo moved at it, that hee would not eate his ſupper. If any liſt to take the words, as in our new Tranſlation, they will alſo beare it, but that of Calvin is moſt genuine. Xenoph. παιδ. ε. Procopius.

For

Rabanus. For the myſtery of all this about putting away fear in war, the proclamations to be made, and the manner of proceeding. Rabanus ſaith, we muſt not fear in our ſpiritual warfare, but be couragious, putting our truſt in God; yet we muſt not be idle, but cooperate with his grace, and then he will fight with us. And by the caſes put of building an houſe, &c. it is ſhewed, that he, who will fight the Lords battels, muſt not be entangled in his mind with worldly things, otherwiſe he cannot ſerve in this warfare, or if he be fearful in reſpect of worldly things. By the offering of peace firſt was figured out the proceedings of the Preachers of the Goſpel, who muſt firſt ſpeak peace to every city and houſe of the worldly, and if they yield, then they ſhall have peace and become Gods ſervants, paying the tribute of their devotion to him, if not, all vitious perſons muſt be fought againſt, and their males, that is, the vigour of vice cut off by the ſpiritual ſword of the Word: but ſuch as yield, ſet forth by women and little ones, come to be the poſſeſſion of the Church to their own ſalvation. And as for our own vices ſet forth by theſe ſeven Nations, we muſt mortifie them all, leſt forſaking God through them, the enemies of virtue be Gal. 6. 1. made to rejoyce. Laſtly, ſuch as do ſhew an aptneſſe to be drawn to good, ſet forth by fruit-bearing trees, muſt be handled gently, but the inordinate muſt have another courſe taken with them, viz. he given over to Satan, that they may repent, 1 Cor. 5. as fruitleſſe trees might be cut down to make bulwarks.

Chap. XXI.

Judic. Law 16. Verſ. 1, 2. THe ſixth Law is touching a dead body ſlain and found in the field, the murtherer not being known, the Elders and Judges ſhall come forth and meaſure to the Cities round about, &c. This is to be done, when there are no witneſſes, but if any one woman, or ſlave teſtifieth, ſaying, I ſaw the murtherer, this is counted no hidden, but an open murther, &c. and therefore they proceed not according to this Law, but if againſt this one witneſs another cometh and ſaith, thou didſt not ſee him, it is hidden; ſo Maimony. But becauſe it is ſaid ſlain, and in the field, he ſaith Maimony of mutther, cap. 9 he which is found hanging, or broken, or in the water is not counted to be within the compaſs of this Law. Then thy Elders, &c. ſhall come forth; that is, ſome of the great Synedrion at Jeruſalem. Maimony ſaith, five of them, and not the Elders of any City near, becauſe it is not ſaid, the Elders of that City, and they muſt meaſure to find out, which City is neareſt to the ſlain, not to any village or town, but to Cities about, wherein there is a councel of 23. and they meaſure from the noſe of the ſlain, and for meaſuring they are ſo ſtrict, that although the ſlain be found under any Verſ. 3. Cities walls, yet they meaſure. The next City being thus found, the El-Verſ. 4. ders of that City muſt come and bring an heifer, and cut off the head in a rough valley, that hath neither been ared or ſown, &c. The Elders, that came from Jeruſalem, after the next City found out, bury the ſlain in his place, and return home, then the Elders of the next City come all of them and cut off the head of the heifer to expiate this blood ſhed, firſt bringing it to a valley where water runneth, the words rendred a rough valley, are in Heb. נחל-איתן a ſtrong ſtream, or a ſtrong valley, Amoſ. 5. 24. it is put for a mighty ſtream, and ſo Maimony ſaith, it ſignifyeth, and there the heifer was buryed, and after it was unlawful to plough or dig it, or to have any profit of it for ever.

Verſ. 6, 7, 8. The heifer being killed, all the Elders muſt waſh their hands over it and profeſſe their innocency from that blood, and pray to God for mercy. And it is ſaid v. 5. that the Prieſts ſhould be preſent, whom God had choſen to bleſſe in his name, what they ſhould do is not ſaid, but the Hebrews ſay that the Elders ſpake the firſt words, verſ. 7. Our hands have not ſhed

this

this blood, nor our eyes seen it, and the Priests the next, vers. 8. Be merciful (O Lord) and lay not innocent blood to thy people Israels charge; the Cald. hath it for further explanation the Priests shall answer, make expiation O Lord, &c.

Touching these words [all the Elders] Maimony saith, that hereby are meant all the Judges and Elders, although they be a hundred, which must needs be understood then of all Magistrates, that have born office also, though now they do not, whereas vers. 1. it is said, if one be found slain in the Land, which the Lord giveth thee, Maimony noteth, that this holdeth not in other Lands, but in the Land of Israel onely. For these words, lay not innocent blood to the charge of thy people. Heb. is, give not innocent blood to thy people; the Cald. give not the guilt of innocent blood to thy people. Some by [give] understand [suffer] as Gen.29.6. i.e. suffer it not to go undiscovered, who shed it, or unpunished, and thus taken it is a prayer, that the murtherer may be revealed, and if he be after the expiation before spoken of, he shall notwithstanding be put to death. This Law saith Calvin, sheweth in how great account God hath the life of a man, and that by murther not onely the murtherer, but the Land about is polluted, and others endangered, as by the sin of Achan the whole host of Israel. When the murtherer therefore is not known, an heifer, that never was yoaked, must be taken (the Hebrews say, it must be one of the second year, for if it were a day above two years old it was unlawful) and if there lay more murthered together, onely one heifer was taken for them all, an heifer that never was yoaked, must be taken to represent the better the recompence for the mans blood shed, and it must be killed in a place inculr, to shew the taking away of this defilement from tilled fields, and that by doing this in a remote and horrid place, cruelty might be made the more horrible.

Ainsworth.

Calvin.

Maimony of murther, c.6.

The beast thus slain was no sacrifice, but came near to the nature of one, because sin was thus done away, and Priests were used. The Elders must wash their hands to excite them not to testifie their innoceny rashly, but with considering God, before whom they came against the dead man, as it were to clear themselves: but yet they must entreat pardon, because haply this murther was committed through their incury, or howsoever some guiltiness hereby extended to them and their City.

Lastly, it is said the blood shall be forgiven them, not as if they had now paid a price sufficient, but because they had thus according to Gods Ordinance humbly sought unto him for reconciliation, and provided the more to prevent murthers for time to come, to this effect Calvin. The rite of washing the hands to clear a mans self from murther was taken up amongst the Heathen, as we may see in Pilat, and Virgil bringeth in Æneas speaking of purging himself with water, and Sophocles saith, that they were wont to wash off the defilement of blood with water. All this is by Rabanus turned into an Allegory of Christ slain, the devil, who did it, being unknown, and the Elders who passed over the heifer, he would have to be the Apostles and other ministers of the gospel, who are guiltlesse of this blood and pray for others, that it may not be imputed to them, &c. but with so little sense, that it is not worth the naming.

Virgil. Æneid. 2.
Sophocles.
Rabanus.

The seventh law is touching a woman taken captive in the war, he that desireth to have her to wife, must bring her to his house, where her head must be shaven, and her nailes pared, and the garment of her captivity must be put off, and shee must remain a full moneth bewailing her father and mother, and then he may take her to wife, and after that if she pleaseth him not, he must let her go, but not sell her, because he hath humbled her. Because men in the times of war having brought any City under their power are wont to let loose the reines to their inordinate lusts, and to abuse the women where they have conquered at their pleasure, the Lord

Judic. Law, 7. Vers. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Lord would have his people to ſhew more piety at ſuch times, as they were called to be more holy then others, and therefore he made this Law, permitting them ſome uſe of ſuch women, to whom they had a deſire, but not till after a moneth expired, in which time ſhe was by theſe ceremonies ſeparated from the Heathen and taken into the body of his own people. And this was permitted, becauſe they could not be altogether reſtrained, but whoſo would have ſuch a woman, he muſt not inordinately lye with her, but take her to wife after this expiation made. This was for far dwellers, but for the women of thaſe nations, where they dwelt, it was utterly unlawful for an Hebrew to take one of them to wife; to this effect Calvin. Maimony ſaith, that the ſhaving of her head and doing off her nailes, for ſo the Hebrew word ſignifieth, which he expoundeth the letting of them grow, was to make her the more deformed and loathſome in his eyes, that ſo his affection might be eſtranged from her, and in this moneths time, he was daily to perſwade her, if ſtill his deſire were to her, to forſake her former ſuperſtition, and to become a Proſelyte, which if ſhe did and received the faith, ſhe was at the moneths end baptized, and yet remained two moneths more, and then he married her; but if yet ſhe would not turn, ſhe remained 12 monethes, in all which time they perſwaded her, and if then ſhe would not turn, but yet receive the ſeven commandments given to Noahs ſons, he let her go whither ſhe would and married her not, but if ſhe would not receive them, and put away her Idolatry, ſhe was then put to death, as all others in this caſe ſubdued by the Hebrews were. As for his lying with her, he alſo ſaith, that when the Hebrews came into the enemies countrey, they might for hunger eat ſwines fleſh, if they could get none other, and if their concupiſcence urged them to it, they might lye with heathen women, but whoſo did thus, muſt not lye with more then one, nor more then once, not when he had lyen with her, leave her, but take her home to him, as was before ſaid. If afterwards ſhe proved not fit for him to have her to wife, but by the firſt lying with her, ſhe proved with child, this was not counted his for any matter, but was as a ſtranger, becauſe of an heathen mother.

Maimony of Kings, ch.8,

Ainſworth.

And his lying with her, before he put her away, is proved, ſaith Ainſworth, to be meant not after marriage, but before, becauſe the phraſe of humbling her is uſed verſ. 14. which is not uſed, but out of the married eſtate, Gen.34.2. Deut.22.24,29. Judg.19.24. 2 Sam.13.12. Ezek.22.10. after marriage then he might not put her away, but after his lying with her before marriage, if in the moneth ſpoken of, his affection were alienated from her. Whereas unto the moneth ſpoken of in the text, Maimony addeth two moneths more, that is, in the whole 90 dayes, this, he ſaith, was, becauſe in that time it might appear, whether ſhe were with child by him in her heathen eſtate or not, that ſo the heathen ſeed might be known from the holy, and if a man and his wife being heathen became proſelytes, they were ſeparated 90 dayes, that their ſeed before their converſion might be diſtinguiſht from that after, and no woman after divorce or her husbands death might marry again, till 90 dayes expired, that the ſeed of one man might be diſtinguiſhed from another. But theſe were not gods, but the Hebrews own ordinances, yet for the child of an heathen mother being reckoned to her, and not to the father, an Hebrew, the Scripture is plain, Ezra 10.3,44. This liberty of taking a wife of the heathens is not given, but only in the time of war, and victory gotten, ſo that they might not take ſuch by rapine, or having bought them, although they ſhould uſe the expiation here preſcribed. For the reaſons before brought of the ceremonies of ſhaving the hair, &c. about the woman taken captive, I do not think with the Rabbin, that it was to deform her, but with Calvin and Chytræus, to purifie her and to change her from an heathen to one of Gods people, that ſo ſhe might be a fit wife for an Hebrew, becauſe

ſhe

ſhe was put into another habit, ſuch as the Hebrew women uſed, ſhewing, that ſhe ſhould be another from that ſhe was before. Whereas the doing of her nayles, by the Cald. rendred nouriſhing of them, ſeemeth to make for the other expoſition; the Sept. render it, pare her nailes, and the word will bear this, ſee 2 Sam.19.24.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

For the myſtery, Rabanus, who is only for a myſtical and no literal expoſition here, will have by this beautiful woman, the ſoul underſtood, as God firſt created it, but degenerated through ſin, and corrupted: by the war, in which this woman is taken, the ſpiritual warfare by preaching, he that will joyn her being thus taken to the body of Chriſt, muſt cauſe her to cut off her hair and nailes by the raſour of the Word, making her to put away all her ſins both in underſtanding, and ſenſe and act, and ſhe muſt change her apparel, putting on the garments of mourning through true repentance, bewailing father and mother, that is, all the memorial of the world, and of the tempting vanities thereof, and this muſt be done 30 dayes, to expreſſe the faith of the Trinity, and the ten Commandements imbraced for all time to come. And ſome, he ſaith, by this beautifull woman underſtand humane learning found amongſt the heathen, the corruptions mixt with which muſt be cut away, and ſo it may profitably be uſed.

Judicial law 8. Ver. 15,16.

The eighth Law, verſ. 15. If a man hath two Wives, one beloved and another hated and they have born him children,&c.] Here it is provided, that a mans firſt born ſon, although by a wife whom he hateth, ſhall have a double portion to the reſt of his brethren and be his heir, this being his birthright, which may not go to a younger ſon, although of a wife beloved. By hated, underſtand leſſe loved. In dividing according to this law, the Hebrews, if any had but two ſons, gave a third part to the younger, and two to the eldeſt, if more, as five or nine, he parted it into ſix or ten parts, and the eldeſt had two, the reſt every one a ſingle part.

Touching this double portion of the eldeſt they ſay moreover, that if he ſelleth it, before it be allotted out unto him, the ſale is firm in law, as Eſau's birthright was by his ſale before confirmed to Jacob, and if the eldeſt ſon dyeth before his father, leaving only a daughter, and the next dyeth alſo leaving a ſon, the daughter of the eldeſt ſhall have the double portion, and the ſon of the younger only a ſingle portion. Alſo if a man hath ſons, that dye young, the eldeſt living ſhall be counted his eldeſt, and if he hath ſons by an heathen woman or bond-ſervant, none of them is called his firſt born, but one that is born to him after of an Iſraelitiſh woman. The reaſon, why the firſt born muſt have a double portion, is, becauſe he is the beginning of his ſtrength, a reaſon in nature; and becauſe the right of the firſt born is his, a reaſon in law, ſeeing God by his law preferreth the firſt born to ſomething above their brethren.

The right of the firſt born of old was not only in reſpect of worldly goods, but alſo of dominion in temporals, and of the Prieſthood in ſpirituals. Wherefore then Jacob put down Reuben from being his firſt born, he gave all theſe from him, the double portion to Joſeph, the prieſthood to Levi, and the kingdom to Judah. Gen. 49.

The Myſtery. Heb.12.23.

But this is not all that is aymed at in this Ordinance, but myſtically to figure out the eſtate of the faithful, who are Gods firſt born, & his heirs, Rom. 8.17. Tit.3.7. Gal.4.28,29,&c. all ſuch have a double portion, one in this world and another in heaven, for godlineſſe hath the promiſe of this life, and of that which is to come; whereas all others have only a ſingle portion of worldly things, and are at the laſt caſt out with Iſhmael. Rabanus allegorizing upon all, ſaith, that by a man having iſſue by two wives, one hated and another beloved, Chriſt is to be underſtood, who hath ſonnes of the Jews, and ſons of the Gentiles, the Jewiſh Synagogue, from whence they come, being counted the hated for perſecuting and killing the Pro-

1 Tim. 4.8.

Rabanus.

phets,

phets, and the Son of God himſelf; and the Church of the Gentiles the beloved, yet thoſe ſons, viz. the Prophets and Apoſtles, and other believers which were firſt, have a double portion, and not that of the Gentiles; for the oracles of God were committed to them, and of the Jewes came Chriſt according to the fleſh. And he hath another allegory from the ſoul, which becauſe it is long and much forced, I ſpare to ſet down. Chytræus will have Chriſt myſtically ſet forth here, who was the firſt born amongſt many brethren, and was anointed with the oyl of gladneſſe above his fellowes. Hugo ſaith, that beſides a double portion, the firſt born ſon had his fathers beſt garment, and that, wherein he bleſſed at his death, and moving a queſtion, whether they ſin not, that do not according to this law at this day, he anſwereth, this is diverſly to be determined according to the cuſtom of the place, where he liveth, if it be the cuſtome thus to divide the inheritance, he ſinneth if he doth not ſo, otherwiſe not. And as for the having of more wives here implyed, he ſaith, this was never ſimply lawful, but diſpenced withal for a time, for the multiplying of the holy ſeed, but now it is rightly held (this reaſon ceaſing) by the Jews themſelves, that it is unlawful, and hath been ſo ever ſince the dayes of Judas Macchabbeus.

Chytræus. Col. 2. Pſal. 45. Hugo Cardin.

Judiciall Law 9. Verſ. 18.

The ninth law is, verſ. 18. If a man hath a rebellious ſon, that will not obey the voyce of his father, or of his mother, and when they have chaſtened him, will not hearken to them, &c.] In this caſe they may bring him before the Judges, and he ſhall be ſtoned to death. Maimony in explaining this law ſaith, that none is put to death for diſobedience to parents, but with theſe cautions: 1. He muſt be a glutton and a drunkard, theſe onely are the vices, that obſtinately perſiſting in he muſt dye for, according to verſ. 20. 2. This gluttony muſt be with fleſh, and drunkenneſſe with wine, wherefore the Cald. hath it, a riotous eater of fleſh, and a riotous drinker of wine, and thus it is expounded, Prov. 23. 20, 21. 3. That muſt be ſtolne from father and mother, wherewith he buyeth this fleſh and wine, and two witneſſes muſt be brought to prove it. 4. He muſt be firſt complained of to the leſſer court of three Judges, and by their appointment be beaten, and after this ſin again. 5. Both father and mother and not one of them muſt bring him forth to be judged. 6. They proceed not thus againſt a daughter, but a ſon onely. 7. Not againſt a ſon, that is a child under 12 yeares of age, nor a married ſon, whoſe wife is with child, nor one, who is from under his fathers government. 8. Neither father nor mother muſt be lame, or dumb, or deaf, or blind, becauſe if ſo, they cannot bring him, and ſay, as is here appointed. 9. If he fleeth away and be taken afterwards, when he is a man grown, he ſhall not be put to death, unleſſe he were condemned by the Judges, before his fleeing. 10. His parents after his condemnation may, if they pleaſe, take compaſſion on him and ſave his life. 11. When any were executed for diſobedience to parents, it was publiſhed in every city, that others might be made to fear to do the like. Thus alſo the Talmud Babyl. in Sanedrim, c. 8. But theſe were many of them devices to elude the Law of God, which was, that rebellion againſt parents ſhould be puniſhed with death: for ſimply to be a glutton, or a drunkard, maketh not ſubject to be cut off by a bodily death, by any law of God, but to be rebellious againſt parents. * And therefore Calvin ſaith well, that gluttony and drunkenneſſe are inſtanced in, to ſhew, that if the rebellious could be accuſed of none other crime worthy of death, yet there was cauſe enough to condemn him, for one of theſe, as proving him to be of moſt lewd manners, who by his parents admonitions would not be reclaimed herefrom. This law for the backing of the fifth Commandement is ſtill obſerved in ſome places. Chytræus ſaith, that he was preſent at Tygur, when he ſaw a diſobedient ſon, that curſed his mother, and threatned blowes unto her, beheaded therefore in December, anno 1550. Amongſt the Romans, Parents had Maimony of Rebels.

* Calvin. ut oſtendat, quam vis nullum crimen capitale proferatur in medium, ſufficere tamen diſſolutam Luxuriem, ſi corrigi à parentibus nequeat, quia perditis moribus eum eſſe certum eſt; qui verecundiam cum modeſtia ſic abjecit, ut paternæ admonitiones nihil proſint.

had the power of life and death over their children, it being supposed, that none would be so unnatural, as to destroy them without just cause, but forsomuch as some parents are unnatural, their children are not left here to their own will, but must be judged by the Judges sitting in the gate of the city, before they dye, that having liberty to plead their own cause, there might be none but just proceedings against them. Note, that disobedience and contumacy against parents is no small, but a most horrible sinne, and therefore let all, who love their soules, flee therefrom. Note.

The tenth law, vers.22. If a man hath sinned a sin worthy of death, and he be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree, his body shall not hang all night, &c.] Here by hanging upon a tree, saith Maimony, is not to be understood the hanging of any man to make him dye there, or upon a growing tree, or a tree rooted in the ground, but the hanging of one dead before by stoning for some foul offence, and upon a tree after the cutting down set up for this purpose: for when any were stoned to death, the Hebrews used to hang them towards the setting of the sun, and eftsoons to cut them down again and bury them, and generally all malefactours put to death, they held themselves bound by this law to bury the same day, and the tree, whereupon a sinner was hanged, they took, after the body taken down, and buried it with him, and so did they deal by the sword, wherewith one was killed, and by the napkin wherewith he was strangled, and the stones wherewith he was stoned, they were all buried, that there might be no memorial of his wickedness left. Of hanging after death, it seemeth to be spoken, 2 Sam. 4.12. Josh.8.29. & 10.26. Num. 25.4. This hanging after killing otherwise was for a double punishment, as Achans family with himself was stoned, and then burned in greater detestation of his wickedness. But afterwards malefactors were made to die by hanging, and amongst the Romans to be hanged up alive to pine away and die, as our Lord was hanged upon the Crosse. The reason, why he that is hanged, must be taken down at the sunsetting is, because he that is hanged upon a tree is accursed, and therefore by him the land would otherwise be defiled, the sin, for which death is to be inflicted, is so odious to God, saith Chytræus, that he would have their bodies, who are thus put to death, as abominable spectacles, and infecting the ayr, taken away and soon buried out of sight. From these words it is, that the Apostle saith, Christ was made a curse for us to deliver us from the curse of the Law, when he was hanged upon a tree. The curse, saith Rabanus, is either sin, or the punishment born for sin; the first way Christ was not made a curse, for he was without all sin, but the second, and yet the punishment is called sin, 2 Cor.5.21. He was made sin for us, that knew no sin, &c. The taking down of the party hanged the same day figured out Christs taking down from the crosse the same day, and his burying out of sight, the burying of our sins with Christ, out of Gods sight, that they might never come in remembrance again. Whereas it is added, that thy land be not defiled, we may note, that sin is so defiling, that the very monument of the curse coming thereby defileth the land. Rabanus also draweth all this to an allegory, saying, he that sinneth after baptisme, is adjudged to death, when he is sharply reproved therefore, and if after this he defereth his repentance, he hangeth all night upon the tree, and so the pollution extendeth further, wherefore he must be taken down and buried by speedy repentance, which is the same day. Whereas some malefactors are now suffered to hang many daies, it is to be understood, saith Hugo Card. that this is done, because the malice of men is increased, so 2 Sam. 21. the Gibeonites hanged up seven of the posterity of Saul many daies; and Prov.6. the punishment of theft is made greater for the same reason; see Exod.22. the morals of discipline then may be changed, but not the morals of nature.

Judicial law 10. Ver. 22,23.

Maimony in Sanedrim, ch. 15.

Josh. 7. 26.

Chytræus.

Gal. 3. 13.

Rabanus.

Chap. XXII.

Judicial Law 11.

Verſ. 1. THe 11. Law, verſ. 1. Thou ſhalt not ſee thy brothers oxe or his ſheep go aſtray, and hide thy ſelf, thou ſhalt in any caſe bring them again to thy brother.] This is to be underſtood of a brother, although he be an enemy to thee, Exod. 23.4. To hide ones ſelf, is to wink at it, or to neglect it, as the Sept. rendreth it. Here are two charges, 1. Not to neglect the beaſt ſtraying. 2. To reſtore it, that is, either by putting it into the place, from whence it ſtrayed, or bringing it to the owner, and this, ſaith Maimony, is to be done not once or twice, but 100 times, if need be, and thus it muſt be done by the beaſt of the wicked as well as of the godly.

Maimony of robbery, c. 11.

Verſ. 2. If thy brother be far from thee, or thou knoweſt him not, thou ſhalt bring it to thine houſe, &c.] The meaning is, that it muſt be kept ſafely, and, as Maimony ſaith. cryed three times, and ſeven dayes after a fourth time, and if the owner cometh not to require it in that time, then the finder may work it and feed it, if it be a working beaſt, or let it out for hire, and at the years end the Magiſtrates ſhall ſell it and give the price to the owner, and cauſe the finder to pay him the over-plus, that the beaſts work was worth more then his food. If in the firſt ſeven dayes it be loſt or ſtolne away from the finder, except it were by violence, he muſt make it good to the owner, becauſe he was charged to keep it ſafely, and likewiſe if it periſheth for want of food.

Maimony of robbery, ch. 13,

Verſ. 3. And the like is to be done touching an aſſe, or any loſt thing. But if a man will wittingly loſe his beaſt or his purſe, by putting it, where it may ſtray, or leaving this in ſtreet or high-way, another is not bound to reſtore it; yet he may not take a thing thus neglected. To this law of not hiding thy ſelf, it is excepted, if a prieſt ſee a loſt thing in a grave, he may not take it to reſtore it, becauſe ſo he ſhould defile himſelf, which is to prieſts forbidden, and yet a ſon, to whom his father ſaith, reſtore it not, muſt reſtore the thing found, although it be againſt that command, honour father and mother, becauſe parents muſt not be obeyed againſt the Lord, but in and for him; thus almoſt Maimony.

Verſ. 4. thou ſhalt not ſee thy brothers aſſe or oxe fall down by the way, and hide thy ſelf, &c.] Of this alſo, ſee Exod. 23.4,5. but there it is only ſaid, thou ſhalt help with him; here, lifting thou ſhalt lift him up; whereby Maimony ſaith, are ſet forth two ſeveral duties; 1. To help him unlooſe and take off the burthen. 2. When the beaſt is raiſed to help him lay it on again, and if need be, to go with him a mile, and to help him an hundred times. The firſt of theſe is commanded there, the ſecond in this place. Theſe are duties, to which in nature we are bound, and by that general law, as ye would that men ſhould do unto you, ſo do to them; and the ſame is to be done in all other like caſes. Moſt memorable for this is the example of Alphonſus King of Neapolis, related by Chytræus, he being upon the way in Campania with his attendants riding before him, and ſeeing a malefactour, that had his aſſe falne in the deep mire, and him unable to raiſe it up again, but neglected by the courtiers riding before, to whom he cryed for help, alighted and holp him with his own hands.

Matth. 7. 12.

Chytræus.

The Myſtery. This by the conſent of all is myſtically to be applyed to men falne by ſining, every one muſt be ready to help up ſuch again, Gal. 6. 1. and if any erre thus out of the right way, to bring him back, Jam. 5.19. For by ſin we are wandring ſheep, 1 Pet. 2. 25. Luc. 15. and as ſhepherds ſpecially ought to ſeek up ſuch and to bring them home, Ezech. 34. 4, 5, 6. ſo all other Chriſtians, Matth. 18. muſt tell their brethren of their ſins, Levit. 19. 17. wherefore rightly ſaith Hugo, this pertaineth to all ex debito charitatis, and to biſhops, ex officio & debito dignitatis. Rabanus more particularly ſaith, Chriſt is our brother, the Chriſtian ſeduced by errour is his oxe

Hugo Cardin. Rabanus.

or

or ſheep, and ſuch an one is brought home and kept for him, till he cometh to ſeek him, when he is brought to the Church by being reduced to the unity of the right faith, and held in it, till Chriſt cometh to judgement at the laſt day; wheras the like is commanded touching his Aſſe, hereby the ſeduced amongſt the gentiles are to be underſtood, and by garments their outward works, which are reſtored, when of evil we endeavour to make the good.

The twelfth Law is verſ. 5. the Woman ſhall not wear that, Which pertaineth to the man, &c. Heb. כלי גבר the veſſels, inſtruments, or ornaments of a man ſhall not be upon a woman, Pagninus alſo rendreth it garments, the Cald. the armour. It is a moſt general word ſignifying all theſe things, and houſholdſtuff alſo: but on the contrary ſide the word שמלת which a man is forbidden to put on, ſignifieth a garment onely. Themeaning is, that as God hath made a diſtinction of ſexes, ſo in their apparel they ſhouldnot be confounded together, or in any kind of attiring of the body. Maimony explaineth it thus, a woman may not wear a mitre, helmet, or harbergeon, or any other ornament of the man, neither poll her head like a man, and the man may not wear coloured garments like a woman, nor golden jewels in ſuch places, as women onely uſe to wear them, according to the cuſtom of the countrey, where they live, if a man putteth on any womans attire, he is to be beaten, and the woman for putting on the mans. The ground of this Law ſeemeth to be to keep men from being effeminate, and women from being manlike, which was a fault amongſt the Egyptians, for their women, ſaith Herodotus, went abroad and uſed merchandiſe, and their men kept the houſe and weaved, and therefore they are threatned that they ſhall be as women, Iſa 19. 16. and if there were no difference in the apparrel of men and women, it would be a foundation of diſhoneſty and of many evils.

Judicial Law 12. Verſ. 5.

Maimony of Idolatry, c. 12.

Herodot. in Euterp.

The gloſſe ſaith, it is againſt nature for a man to habit himſelf like a woman, to curl and to pleat his hair, &c. ſee 1 Cor. 11. Apparel, laughing and the manner of going, ſaith Syracides, do ſhew the diſpoſition of a man, Atque viro veſtis magnùm decus addit honeſta, Chytræus hath it, referring the reader to ſee more touching apparrel in Ambroſe his 15. Epiſtle. In caſe of neceſſity yet he alloweth diſguiſing of ſexes, as of the wives of the Minyari, who by putting on their husbands apparel and giving them theirs, ſaved them from the danger of the priſon and of death; and when Sparta was beſieged by Epaminondas, the women bare arms like men. Out of ſuch caſes in effeminateneſſe or vanity to put on ſuch apparel is abominable to the Lord, although not all but any part of the mans attire be affected by the woman, or of the womans by the man, which ſharply taxeth the manners of the gentry in theſe times.

Gloſ. Ordin.

Chytræus.

Herodotus in Melpomene.

Myſtically the man putteth on the womans apparel, when he is of an effeminate mind, being delicate, nice and timerous and of no courage for the truth, and the woman putteth on the mans, when ſhe uſurpeth the office of teaching in the Church, 1 Cor. 14. 34. 1 Tim. 2. 12. thus almoſt Hugo and Rabanus.

The Myſtery.

Hugo Card. Rabanus.

The 13. Law, verſ. 6. 7. If a birds neſt chance to be before thee in any tree or on the ground, &c.] This is by the Hebrews counted the leaſt of all the Commandments in Moſes his Law, and yet is guarded with a promiſe, that it may go well with thee, and that thou mayeſt prolong thy dayes, as that, which by them is counted one of the greateſt Commandments, Honour father and mother: So that we may ſee, that even the leaſt of Gods Commandments is not to be ſleighted, but carefully obſerved. It is meant, that whereſoever a man findeth a birds neſt, the ground and the tree being put for inſtance, becauſe moſt commoly, they build upon one of theſe. Maimony by the dam to be ſpared, underſtandeth preciſely the female and not the male, and but of clean birds onely, and he ſaith, that he who taketh her,

Judicial Law 13. Verſ. 6, 7.

Maimony in Shechitah, c. 13

her, muſt not give her to another to be ſent away, but ſend her away himſelf, and he muſt not firſt clip her wings, and if he doth, he muſt keep her till they be grown again, and if he transgreſſeth herein, he is to be beaten. This, ſaith R. Menahem, is to lead us to mercy and to take cruelty out of our hearts; for the intent of the command is not to ſhew compaſſion to birds but to men. And ſo is that precept of not muzling the mouth of the oxe applyed, 1 Cor. 9. 9. ſee a precept ſomewhat like this Levit. 22.28.

R. Menahem. in Deut. 25.

Rabanus is onely for a Myſtical ſenſe, the tree, where a birds neſt is found, is paſſage of Scripture touching contemplation, the ground a paſſage touching practiſe, the neſt with eggs a paſſage more obſcurely intimating a myſtery, the neſt with young more plainly, in theſe caſes we muſt take the young and let the dam go, that is, take the ſpiritual ſenſe to feed our ſouls upon, and not the literal, which in ſome places may be an offence unto us; as where the Hebrews are ſaid to have robbed the Egyptians.

Rabanus. The myſtery

The 14. Law, verſ. 8. when thou buildeſt an houſe thou ſhalt make battlements upon the roofe, &c.] The Iſraelites houſes were flat upon the top, ſo that men might walk thereupon, and therefore to prevent the danger of falling, it is ordained, that they ſhould be fenced round about, and theſe battlements muſt not be leſs, ſaith Maimony, then ten hands bredth and ſtrong, that is above a cubit and a half, for ſix hand bredths make a cubit. From hence it is, that the Lord ſpeaketh of preaching upon the houſe top, Matth. 10.27. for men uſed to walk and to ſpeak from thence. And from the equity of this command, he ſaith, it is to be underſtood, that wells and pits and all other dangerous places were to be fenced, and thoſe that were not, carefully to be given warning of. But this precept extendeth not to all buildings, as to barns, ſtables, &c. but to dwelling houſes onely. Hereby it appeareth, how careful God would have every one to preſerve his neighbours life; and if he, through whoſe incury bloud is ſhed, ſhall be guilty of blood, how much more the wilful murtherer?

Judiciall Law 14. Verſ. 8.

Maimony of murther, c. 11.

Calvin. Exod. 21. 33. dangers to the beaſts life muſt be prevented.

Myſtically, we are warned here to teach ſo, as that our doctrine may not be an occaſion of ſcandal or ruine to any, and the like care is to be had of the examples of our lives, ſo Chytreus. Rabanus will have humilty meant by the battlement, wherein we muſt both teach and live virtuouſly: for, as a wiſe man ſaith, he carrieth duſt into the wind, that preacheth or gathereth together virtues without humility.

The myſtery. Chytræus. Rabanus. Quaſi in ventum pulverem portat, qui virtutes ſine humilitate congregat.

The 15. Law, verſ. 9.10,11. thou ſhalt not ſowe thy vineyard with divers ſeeds, &c.] Here are three Ordinanances alike put together, againſt ſowing divers ſeeds, againſt ploughing with an oxe and an aſſe, and againſt making a garment of linſie woolſie; of all theſe ſee ſomewhat before upon Levit. 19.19. But here is a reaſon rendred, why divers ſeeds might not be ſown in the ſame vineyard or field, Leſt the fruit of thy ſeed and the fruit of thy vineyard be defiled. Junius, leſt the full ripe fruit thereof be holy, the ſeed, and the revenue of thy vineyard. And the Vulgar Latin, ne & ſementis quam ſemiſti, & quæ naſcuntur ex vinea ſanctificentur. That of Junius is word for word according to the Hebrew, but Maimony rendreth תבואת proventus, revenue, ſaying, that there are five kinds of ſeeds, the increaſe whereof is called revenue; wheat, rye, barly, fox-ear-barly, and oates; thus they are called, when they are eared, when they are threſhed and winnowed, they are called dagan, corn, when then they are ground and baked, path, bread. And from theſe kinds he diſtinguiſheth five others, called Ketarmith pulſe, as beans, peaſe, lintels, millet, rice; and laſtly, he hath a third kind of garden ſeeds, which are not to be eaten, but the fruit that cometh of them, as onyon ſeed, &c. and he ſaith, that the firſt and the laſt of theſe kinds are here meant by divers kinds, and not any other.

Judicial Law 15. Verſ. 9,10, 11.

Junius. & proventus vineæ.

Maimony of bleſſings, c. 3.

Touching

Touching the word rendred polluted, but by ſome ſanctified, it is תקרש, of קרש, to ſanctifie, and they, which ſo take it, underſtand this to be the meaning, leſt it become holy, and ſo be for the prieſts, and not for thy uſe. But the Caldee and other Hebrews generally render it defiled, as Barac to bleſſe, is ſometime uſed in a contrary ſenſe, to curſe, 1 King. 21, 10,13. and Cheſed piety, for impiety, Levit.20. 17. and therefore they ſay, both the ſeeds thus ſown, and the grapes in ſuch a vineyard are made abominable and unlawful to be put to any uſe or profit, they muſt be burnt. They hold it alſo unlawful to ſow corn or herbs by vines, or to plant vines by them, therefore they muſt be burnt, and it is unlawfull to heat an oven or cauldron in the burning of them. But theſe are Rabbinicall niceties, for mingled ſeeds are onely forbidden, and thoſe of all ſorts. Touching an Oxe and Aſſe their Expoſition is right, and not onely plowing with them together, but drawing in a cart, &c. is unlawfull, and not onely with an Oxe and an Aſſe, but with any clean and unclean beaſt, although the clean beaſt be unfit for ſacrifice.

Maimonie, of forbidden meats, c.10.

For myſteries, ſee Levit. 19. 19. Ainſworth applieth the laſt againſt garments of linſy-woolſy to juſtification by Chriſt, and by the merits of a mans own works; for he that thus ſeeketh to be juſtified is unclean and abominable before God.

Ainſworth. Rom.11.6. Gal. 3.10.

The 16. Law, verſ. 12. Thou ſhalt make thee fringes upon the foure quarters of thy veſture, &c.] Of this Law, ſee Numb. 15. 38. but the word here put for fingers is גדלים, rendred wreaths, 1 King.7. 17. Exod. 28. 24. and ropes or cords, Judg.16.11,12. but Numb. 15. 38. it is ציצת a lock of hair, like to which a fringe is, they both ſignifie the ſame thing, and therefore the Cald.rendreth them both by the ſame word Cruſpedin,from the Greek Craſpeda, which is uſed Matth. 23.5.

Judic. Law 16. Verſ. 12.

The 17. Law, verſ.13. If any man take a wife, and goe in unto her, and hate her, and giveth occaſion of ſpeech againſt her, &c.] By taking a wife here is meant marrying her that was before eſpouſed, for before marriage if he went in unto her, he was to be chaſtiſed with ſtripes; ſo Maimony, who alſo delivereth this to be the manner of their proceeding in marriage; firſt, there were bleſſings or thankſgivings made unto God in an aſſembly of ten men at the leaſt, and a dowre bill was made by a ſcrivener, and paid for by the bridegroome,whereby ſhe was endowed with 200 dinars, that is, 50. ſhekles if ſhe were a maide, and with 100. if ſhe were a widdow, that is, 25. ſhekles, leſſe none might give, but more who ſo would, and to this witneſſes were taken, after that he went with her into the Privie-chamber or cloſet ſpoken of Joel 2.16. and he that married a Virgin was to rejoyce by eating and drinking, and making merry 7 dayes, and to do no work,and if he married a widdow,3 dayes.A wife being thus taken for a maide, if ſhe were defamed by her husband, ſaying, I found her not a maide, muſt juſtifie her ſelf by her fathers and mothers bringing forth a cloath, whereupon the tokens of her Virginitie may appear, which if they can doe, the husband ſhall be chaſticed, that is, with 40. ſtripes, and be amerced 100. ſhekles of ſilver to be paid to her father, and it ſhall never be lawfull for him to put her away, that is, by bill of divorce. But if the accuſation be true, ſhe ſhall be ſtoned to death. The tokens of her virginitie were the marks upon the linnen, wherein her husband lay with her the firſt night; but theſe ſaith Maimony muſt not onely be ſhewed, but witneſſes thereof produced: But in caſe, that no tokens could be ſhewed, ſhe was not alwayes hereupon condemned, but the judges examined, whether ſhe did not want her flowers, or her progenitours before her, or had not had ſome great ſickneſſe, whereby her flowers might fail: for ſhe might be a true maide and yet want thoſe tokens; wherefore witneſſes muſt be brought of her incontinency, becauſe it is ſaid, verſ.20. If the thing be true, and the tokens doe not appeare, &c.] The Elders before whom the triall muſt be made,

Judic. Law 17. Verſ.13.14. Maimonie of wives, cap. 10.

Maimony in Nagn. Bethulab, c.3.

were the Councell of 23. If her father bringeth witneſſes againſt her huſbands witneſſes whereby they are diſproved, then thoſe witneſſes are ſtoned to death, but if her husband bringeth witneſſes to diſprove them, then they muſt be ſtoned together with her. He ſaith moreover, that her being deflowred, for which ſhe is to die, muſt be proved to have been after her eſpouſall to her husband, not before. From this Law they except her, whom they call a childe, viz. one under 12. yeares of age, and an old maide that hath paſſed the flowre of her Virginity, and will have her onely meant whom they call Naguarah according to the word here uſed for a Damoſell, that is one above 12. or Bogereth one 6 moneths older, but not above, which are no better then illuſions of this Law, ſeeing the ſcope of it is, that incontinency in any ſhould be puniſhed with ſtoning to death; ſo much did the Lord abhor fleſhly uncleanneſſe in the eſpouſed or married, v. 22.23 what a ſhekle is ſee before, Gen. 23. 15. Chaſticing of the huſband is by Junius expounded chaſticing him in words, but that of the Hebrewes expounding it by beating him is more probable. Myſtically, ſaith Rabanus, by this husband is to be underſtood a Paſtour of any particular Church, if he being lead by covetouſneſſe ſpeaketh ill of his people, that he may remove to a better benefice; the caſe muſt be pleaded before the governours of the Church, and if the people be juſtified, he muſt be ſharpily reproved, and be compelled to abide in that Church ſtill, and to teach perfect doctrine ſet forth by 100 ſhekles amercement; but if the accuſation be found true, the people muſt be ſtoned, as it were, with anathema: for a Paſtor muſt not remove from one Church to another without the conſent of a Synod.

Junius.

The Myſterie.

Rabanus.

Verſ. 22,23. Here are two caſes more put, wherein both the wife deflowred, and the deflowrer were to be put to death, viz. if a man lay with a married woman, of which ſee Levit. 20.10. Or if with one eſpouſed in a Citie where there were people to hear her if ſhe had cried out, this is by Maimony limited, unleſſe ſhe had witneſſes that he threatned to kill her with a ſword drawn if ſhe cried out.

Maimony of wives c. 3. A woman eſpouſed is a wife as well as one married, and eſpouſing ſaith Maimony was three wayes. 1. By giving a piece of money, although but a farthing before witneſſes, ſaying, by this be thou mine eſpouſed wife. 2. By bill, wherein he wrot, be thou mine eſpouſed wife, and gave it her before witneſſes. 3. By copulation before witneſſes, ſaying thou ſhalt be betrothed to me by this copulation. But this laſt, as it was wicked, ſo it was by the wiſe forbidden, and who ſo did thus was to be beaten, yet a contract being made ſo, was firm. Before betrothing they bleſſed God. And hitherto of a wife defiled by conſent; now if ſhe were forced, the caſe is put; if a man finding her in the field force her and lie with her, he alone ſhall be put to death: And who ſo cannot bring witneſſes that ſhe conſented, is alwayes judged to have forced her, with whom he lay in the field or any place remote from company.

Verſ. 25.26, 27. Maimony in Nagnarah, c. 1.

Verſ. 28.29. Laſtly, touching a Virgin not eſpouſed, he that forceth her, muſt give to her father 50 ſhekles of ſilver, and take her to wife, and never put her away. For ſuch a man, as intiſeth a maide and lieth with her, it is provided, Exod. 22,17. that he ſhall onely marry her, and give her the dowry of Virgins, that is, 50 ſhekles, and in caſe that he marrieth her not, becauſe her father refuſeth to give her, he muſt pay this penſion to him. But who ſo forceth a maide muſt pay it, and marry her alſo. Maimony ſaith that he muſt not onely pay this ſumme, but moreover for her pain, her ſhame and her blot, as the judges ſhall determine; and in caſe that he lay with her by conſent, for her ſhame and her blot. Happily men growing more bold to commit this wickedneſſe, the Hebrew magiſtrates increaſed the puniſhment as was meet, and ſince any rape hath bin puniſhed with death. Paulus. lib. 1. F. de extr. criminibus, l. 47. It was alſo lawfull, ſaith Chytræus, Maimony in Nagnarah Bethulah, c. 2.

Chytræus, for the father of the maide raviſhed, to kill the raviſher being found in the act: and Pauſanias telleth of Mars in Areopagus, who killed Haliarotaus the ſonne of Neptune for deflouring his daughter Alcippa, and he was abſolved for it. Chytræus. Pauſanias in Atticis.

Myſtically by the eſpouſed being raviſhed, Rabanus underſtandeth ſuch as are eſpouſed unto Chriſt and taken into the boſome of the Church, if any Jew or Heretick, or Pagan ſecretly corrupt ſuch, they muſt both die for it: but by the Virgin not eſpouſed, one yet out of the Church, having onely imbraced the faith, and being inſtructed in the Catechiſme, if ſuch an one be corrupted, he ſhall not die, but be reduced to the right faith, and ſo be eſpouſed to Chriſt, and the corrupter anathematized. The Myſterie. Rabanus.

Hugo putteth two caſes here. 1. What if the maide be noble and rich, and he that forced her vile, ſhall he marry her, and if ſo, is not this to give occaſion to wicked men of offering this wrong for an advantage? Anſw. Her father if he will may deny her to him, Exod. 22. 17. 2. What if he be ſo poore, that he cannot pay this ſumme? Anſw. He muſt then be ſold as one that hath ſtolne, that it may be paid, Exod. 22. But another caſe may alſo be put; what if ſhe hath no father? Anſw. Then the money is to be paid to her, and it is in her power to deny marrying with him. Maimony to this Law excepteth, if the High Prieſt lie with a maide he cannot marry her, becauſe ſhe is now no maide, and he may not marry but with a maide, Levit. 21. 13. alſo if a Prieſt hath married ſuch an one, and againſt this Law put her away, he cannot take her again, becauſe he may not marry one divorced, Levit. 21. 7. A law is repeated againſt marrying his fathers wife, of which ſee Levit. 18. 20. Deut. 27. 20. 1 Cor. 5. Hugo Card. Verſ. 30.

Chap. XXIII.

THe 18 Law, verſ. 1. He that is wounded in his ſtones, or hath his privie member cut off ſhall not enter into the congregation, &c.] Broken ſtones in Prieſts are made unlawfull before Levit. 21. 20. But here ſuch of the common people, as were bruiſed or broken in theſe parts, &c. are forbidden to enter into the congregation, that is, not to be of the Church and company of Gods people, for any heathen, that would turn and imbrace the faith might be thus admitted, but ſuch might not bear any office in Iſrael, or marry a daughter of Iſrael, or be reckoned for any thing in this world as an Iſraelite: for thus the word entering or going in is uſed, 1 Chron. 14. 29. 2 Chron. 1. 10. 1 King. 11. 1. as Ainſworth noteth, alledging Maimony, who ſaith, that who ſo being ſuch marrieth a daughter of Iſrael is to be beaten, yea a Prieſt being ſuch may not marry her, but ſome other woman a ſervant. And by wounded in the ſtones, he underſtandeth one either ſo wounded, or any ſinew of his ſtones being cut, by the member cut off, the ſtones, or one of them cut off, and that by the hand of man, dog, or thorn, or ſome like thing: for if it be by the hand of God, he being ſo born, or by ſickneſſe brought to any decay here, he is allowable. And it is not onely unlawfull to geld a man, but alſo any beaſt or fowle, and he that doth it is to be beaten, although he doth but part of it, and another another part, both are to be beaten. Judic. Law 18. Verſ. 1. 2. Exod. 12. 48. Numb. 15. 14. Ainſworth. Maimonie in Iſſurabiah, c. 16.

Thus he, Junius underſtandeth his entring into the congregation onely to bear office in Iſrael, and rejecteth that of marriage, becauſe even Ruth a Moabiteſſe was married to Boaz; and he yieldeth this as a reaſon, why ſuch ſhould not bear an office, becauſe they were commonly of a broken and ſloathfull mind and without courage which is required, Deut. 1. 17. Calvin rejecteth both the expoſitions of entring into the congregation before going, ſaying, that the coming and partaking of the holy things of the Lord onely is here forbidden to ſuch at their meetings at holy feaſts, they Junius. Calvin.

they might not be as one herein with the holy Congregation. And indeed againſt that of bearing office, or ruling he yieldeth a good reaſon, why it cannot be meant, becauſe verſ. 3. an Edomite, or Egyptian are forbidden to enter until the tenth generation, who, no man doubteth, were for ever debarred from bearing rule amongſt the people of God.

Hugo Cardinalis.

But Hugo expoundeth this of entring beſt, ſaying that in the Temple there were more Courts, one of which was onely for the Jews, that were clean to come into to pray, and of coming into this Court together with them, it is meant: for neither the wounded in their privities, nor baſtards, nor Ammonites, &c. might come into this Court; but in ſpeaking of baſtards, verſ. 2. he expoundeth entring into the Congregation of marrying an Iſraeliteſſe alſo, whereas 1 Kings 6. 36. mention is made but of one Court called the inner Court, 2 Chron. 8. 9. mention is made of two, the Court of the Prieſts and the greateſt Court. And Hugo ſaith there were four Courts of the Temple, into which they came for devotion. 1. For the Prieſts neareſt to the Temple. 2. For the Jewiſh men, that were clean. 3. For the Jewiſh women, that were clean. 4. For the Heathen and the unclean, and this was greateſt of all, into this any might come, but from that of the clean Jews, theſe here ſpoken of were debarred. And of four porches or Courts, Joſephus writeth lib. 2. contra Appion. and ſometime of three built, not by Solomon, for he made but two, but by Herod ſixteen years before the birth of Chriſt, for he added the third for the Heathen to come into: but it is to be underſtood, that the Court called Solomons porch was parted with a wall, and ſo made two, the one for men, the other for women, and if beſides theſe we reckon two Courts more, here will be the full number of four; of the porch ſee 2 Chron. 13. 4. and it was called Solomons porch of the ſeparation of Eunuchs, ſee Iſa. 56. 3, 4, &c. where both ſtrangers and they complain hereof and are comforted. The Lord by forbidding the broken in their ſtones and baſtards, verſ. 2. to come into the Congregation, gave the people of Iſrael to underſtand, ſaith Calvin, how excellent and holy a people in Gods eſteem they were, in that baſe and blemiſhed people were not permitted to come amongſt them to worſhip before him, which was not done to puffe them up with pride, but to make them ſtudy to walk the more worthy this dignity.

Hugo Card. in 3. Reg. 6. 36.

Joſeph. lib. 21. antiq. c. 14.

H. Bunting Patriarks travailes.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

Myſtically ſaith Rabanus, it is hereby taught, that all, who live daintily like women, and put not themſelves like men into the ſpiritual warfare, ſhall be ſhut out of the Kingdom of heaven, which is not taken but by violence, Matth. 11. Chytræus, that they who have not the ſeed of the word abiding in them, and are unfruitful in good works, ſuch as hypocrites are, ſhall be excluded for ever. Hitherto in this Law of debarring ſome from coming to with the holy Congregation of Gods people before him; now followeth another branch of this Law.

Verſ. 2.

Verſ. 2. A baſtard ſhall not enter, &c. to the tenth generation, Heb. Mamzer is put for a Baſtard, it ſignifieth one born of a ſtranger, that is, of any woman, not a Lawful wife. For they, ſaith Maimony, are bahards, not onely which are begotten of a whore, but in any copulation prohibited, Levit 18. except in the caſe of a womans uncleanneſſe, and a baſtard to whomſoever he marryeth, begetteth a baſtard, and the childe born by her, that is a baſtard, is counted a baſtard alſo, wherefore an Iſraelite may not marry a baſtard.

Maimony in Iſſure biah, c. 15.

This clauſe till the tenth generation he alſo interpreteth for ever, as that of Ammonites, verſ. 3. holding that this race beareth the blot of baſtardy for ever. Hugo ſaith, that Mamzer is properly one born by a whore, ſpurius of a concubine, and Nothus of adultereſſe; the word ſpurius cometh from ſpurcitia to ſhew the filthineſſe of incontinency, and nothus from febris nothaq, which ſeemeth to be a quartan or the like, but is not, as ſuch an an one ſeemeth to be his child, whoſe he is not. And haply he ſaith, that all baſtards were not excluded from the Congregation, but the Mamzer onely, yet at this day the Church admitteth not a baſtard to holy orders.

And to the tenth generation] He ſaith, is, till by long continuance of time this blot is worn away. Calvin alſo ſaith in that they are excluded, but till the tenth generation, God would not put ſuch miſerable people out of all hope of being one day received in. And he by the Mamzer alſo underſtandeth baſtards coming of common whores, whoſe fathers are unknown. And this is the more probable, becauſe a word properly ſignifying ſuch is uſed to ſet them forth, and why the tenth generation ſhould be named, as the term of their excluſion, I cannot ſee; if it were meant, as Maimony would have it that they ſhould never enter. But the Hebrew is not, till the tenth generation, but even the tenth generation ſhall not enter, and ſo it is rendred by Junius, which maketh it plain on the Rabbins ſide. Calvin.

According to this Law, ſaith Chytræus, baſtards were infamous amongſt the Athenians, and therefore might not come into the Palæſtra or place of exerciſe with others, but had one appointed by themſelves before the gate of the City. Chytræus.

The end of this Law was firſt to make marriage and chaſtity in the more reverend eſteem, and to beat down incontinency, as abominable. Secondly, to preſerve ſuch as were in Authority from contempt, which that order ſhould have been expoſed to, if thoſe that were ſo baſe by birth, might have entred; for it is ſeldom ſeen that a baſtard is good, but notorious for ſome wickedneſſe: yet, as the ſame Author hath it, howſoever a political difference were thus put, this was nothing to hinder any of what condition ſoever from the grace of God, but even Eunuchs and baſtards that fear him, are accepted by him. Iſa. 56 5. Jer. 39. 16. Judg. 11.

Myſtically, ſaith Rabanus, all ſuch as degenerate in ſenſe and manners are here to be underſtood, they are not to be received, till that by imbracing the ten Commandments they have worn this blot away: for if thou wilt enter into life, ſaith Chriſt, keep the Commandments. The Myſtery. Rabanus.

A third branch of this Law, verſ. 3. An Ammonite or Moabite ſhall not enter into the Congregation, till the tenth generation for ever] That is, never, for Heb. it is even the tenth generation ſhall not enter, and for ever is added for further expreſſion, that it is meant they ſhould never enter, and the reaſon is rendred, becauſe they hired Balaam to curſe Iſrael, Numb. 22. they were the worſt of all their enemies, they endeavoured to overthrow them both body and ſoul for ever. Wherfore when as any other Heathens becoming Proſelytes were forthwith counted with Iſraelites and might marry Iſraelites, theſe although they were Proſelytes might never. But by the Ammonite and Moabite Maimony underſtandeth the males, not the females, for Boaz married Ruth a Moabiteſſe, and ſo might any other Iſraelite do, if ſhe were a Proſelyte, for they were not the women, but the men that conſulted ſo peſtilently againſt Iſrael. And upon this St. Auguſtine toucheth alſo, having firſt gone another way to clear the doubt touching Boaz his marriage, ſaying that haply this of the tenth generation was myſtical, becauſe from Abraham in whoſe time Lot lived, of whom came Ammon and Moab, to Boaz were ten generations. Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Judas, Pharez, Eſrom, Amram, Amminadab, Naaſſon, Salmon, and if ſo, the clauſe added [for ever] is to be underſtood, that never after any Ammonite or Moabite ſhould enter. But he finally leaveth this, and cloſeth with the Rabbin, the firſt being indeed repugnant to the text, ſeeing it is not ſaid the tenth generation ſhal enter, but ſhall not enter. And that it is not meant, of women, but of men onely, he proveth from, Numb. 31. 18. where they are bidden to keep the females, that were Virgins alive for themſelves. And by the tenth generation he underſtandeth a kind of univerſality Verſ. 3. Maimony Hugo Card. Calvin, &c.

Aug. qu. 35. in Deut.

universality, and that these words for ever, are added to expresse so much.

The Mystery. Rabanus. Chytræus.

Mystically, Hereticks, that would bring Gods curse for ever upon the souls of Gods people by seducing them, are hereby censured never to minister in the Church of God, no not upon their recantation.

Vers. 7, 8.

A fourth branch of this Law, vers. 7,8. An Edomite or an Egyptian might enter in the third generation; he, because he was a brother; this, because they sojourned in his land. Although the Egyptians used them cruelly, and Esau, of whom the Edomites came, hated Jacob their father, and sought his life, and the King of Edom dealt hardly with Israel in their travel; yet they must not be excluded for ever, and although they must be separated longer, then others, that turn proselytes of other nations, for they were received in immediately upon their turning, yet in the third generation, if they turned, they might enter. This distinction of Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, &c. hath long since ceased, saith Maimony, when Nebuchadnezzar carried captive and confounded all these peoples, so that now if any of what nation soever turneth proselyte, he is immediately received in.

Numb. 20. 14, 15.

Maimony in Issure biah, ch. 12.

The Mystery. Rabanus.

Mystically by an Edomite, or Egyptian, Rabanus understandeth worldly men, who if they come to believe in the Trinity, and have these three graces, faith, hope and charity, are joyned to the best Saints of God, which is setforth by the entring in of these in the third generation.

Judicial law 19. Vers. 9, 10.

The 19 Law, vers. 9. When the camp goeth forth against thine enemies, thou shalt keep thee from every evil thing. If there be any unclean by uncleanesse that chanceth to him by night, &c.] As Numb. 5. an order was taken to remove the unclean out of the camp; so here, if any particular Army were sent out, it is provided, that it should be kept pure and clean by the removal of such out of it, but onely one case is here put, there uncleanesse by leprosie, by issues, and by the dead are named, but this only is here spoken of not to exclude the other, but because men being forth in the wars from their wives are most apt to be polluted by this kind of uncleanesse. Tents are called Castra, saith Hugo, because men lying in tents in time of war should be, as it were, Castrati. Of this kind of pollution, see Levit. 15. 16. All fleshly lusts are by this law condemned, saith Chytræus, and to keep our bodies holy and pure, as temples of the Holy Ghost commended: for if unvoluntary issues of seed pollute, how much more impure are whoremongers and adulterers, which is a thing common amongst souldiers.

Hugo Cardin.

Chytræus.

The Mystery. Rabanus.

Mystically temptations in secret, saith Rabanus, are hereby condemned, whereby a man in the darkenesse of his understanding cometh to have evil cogitations in his mind, although he never bringeth them forth into act. He must go out of the camp by acknowledging himself unworthy of the society of the Saints of God, but in the evening he must wash and return, that is, when the heat of temptation is over, and he hath repented him, he may by a good confidence be joyned to that holy society again.

Ver. 12, 13.

Another point of keeping the Army clean, vers. 12, 13. Thou shalt also have a place without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad; thou shalt also have a paddle upon thy weapon, &c.] For place, Hebr. is, an hand; but both by the Sept. and Cald. it is rendred a place appointed, that is, saith Maimony, not in the open fields, but publickly appointed. A paddle, so called from the Greek, σκάλαθρον, an iron instrument to dig withal; upon thy weapon, Sept. upon thy girdle; for these words, when thou wilt ease thy self, is, when thou sittest down.

Vers. 14.

for the Lord walketh in the midst of thy camp, &c. that he see no unclean thing and turn away from thee.] By the Lord, Hugo understandeth the angel of the Lord, by whom the Lord spake unto them, and compareth with the covering of their excrements here commanded, Moses his covering of the Egyptian whom he slew in the sand, and Rachels hiding of Labans idols

Hugo Cardin.

Exod. 2.

Gen. 31.

in

in the litter, and Jacobs hiding of idols under an oake, saying, that hereby was shewed the hiding of the filthinesse of sin, that God may not see it, and be offended, which is done by compunction, confession, and satisfaction, he should have said, by burying it, which is, when the heart is turned therefrom, not to live any longer therein. And if the outwardly unclean were put out of the camp, how much more the wicked from the Sacraments, to which Christ and his Angels are present? Chytræus by the camp understandeth the heart of the faithful, where God is to defend him from his spiritual enemies; but if any uncleanesse be there through voluntary sinning, evil lusts being harboured, he being offended, goeth away, and leaveth such an one to the power of Satan, and to eternal damnation, unlesse he turn again and cover it by repentance.

Gen. 35.

Rom. 6.

The mystery. Chytræus.

The 20 Law, vers. 15, 16. Thou shalt not deliver up a servant to his master, that is escaped from him, unto thee, he shall dwell with thee, &c.] This, saith Augustine, is to be understood not of a servant of an Israelite fleeing to an Ishmaelite; but of one fleeing from another countrey to Israel, in this case humanity was to be used by the Israelites towards him, and they were to suffer him to abide amongst them, where he would, but this by Hugo is limited, till his masters wrath be pacified towards him, as Paul kept Onesimus with him, till that Philemon, his master, from whom he fled unto him, was pacified, and then he sent him home again. This is somewhat otherwise expounded by the Hebrews, who say, that such an one fleeing to Israel for religion, as being weary of the heathen idolatry, under which he before lived, is courteously to be received, and his master to be dealt withal to give him a bill of manumission, he giving therefore to his master a bill of debt for his freedom to be paid so soon as he shall be able. Calvin thinketh, that it is to be understood, if such an one fled to Israel, his case should be tryed, and it being found that he did not flee for any wickednesse which he had done, but to escape the hands of a tyrannical master, they should let him quietly dwell amongst them, and become a proselyte. For if any servants fleeing from their Masters were to be dealt thus withal, the Church of God would soon have been filled with the scum and basest of all people, and for patronizing such, have been most scandalous in all Nations. And to this of Calvin, as best explaining this law, do I subscribe, if we adde hereto that of the Rabbin, touching his compounding with his master, as equity requireth for his freedom.

Judicial law 20. Ver. 15, 16. August.

Hugo.

Maimony of servants, c. 3. Calvin.

Mystically such as have been servants of sin, but are now converted, are not by their Pastour to be redelivered, by being driven to despair, but their faith is to be confirmed more and more, that they may for ever abide in the Church of God, and be inthralled no more. The King of Gath, according to this law, let David dwell in his countrey, when he fled unto him; and Augustus saved the servant of Apedius Pollia fleeing unto him, when his master would have put him to death for breaking a christal glasse.

The Mystery. Rabanus.

1 Sam. 21.

Chytræus.

The 21 law, vers. 17. There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a Sodomite of the sons of Israel, &c.] The word rendred whore, is קדשה, sanctified or consecrated, and she is so called, because she is one, not that hath once only sinned by whoredom, but maketh a common trade of it, having dedicated, and set her self apart, as it were, hereunto. The word rendred Sodomite, is קדש, which may by the like reason be rather rendred an whoremonger, or one that setteth himself, as it were apart, to be at the will of lewd and incontinent women, or a Gannimede, that prostituteth himself to males Sodomitically. Before this Law, saith Maimony, when a man met with an whore abroad, if they two consented, he might lye with her, & so pay her her hire; but after this it was beating. The Cald. rendreth these words thus, There shall no woman of the daughters of Israel be a wife to one a servant, neither shall any man of the sons of Israel

Judicial law 21. Vers. 17.

Maimony in Issure biah, c. 18. Cald. Par.

Iſrael take her, that is a ſervant. But this is altogether from the purpoſe, as adultery was forbidden expreſly before, Exod. 20. ſo here all copulations out of the married eſtate, and therefore the word muſt not be taken ſtrictly only for a common whore, but alſo for every fornicatrix, to expreſſe which the Sept. hath it, there ſhall not be an whore of the daughters of Iſrael, nor a fornicator of the ſons of Iſrael.] Single fornication hath been held by the heathen to be no ſin, but it hath alwayes been abominable before God, ſuch have their name from קדש, holineſſe, per antiphraſin, to ſhew that they were moſt unholy and unclean, as Barac is uſed for curſing, which properly ſignifieth bleſſing, and many like words the Hebrewes have. How as unclean ſuch ſhall be ſhut out of the Kingdom of heaven, ſee Gal. 5. 21. 1 Cor. 6. 18. Heb. 13. 4. 1 Cor. 5. 10, 15. wherefore ſuch as tolerate ſtewes in any place are againſt God and his lawes, and muſt certainly look to anſwer for it.

Chytræus. Hugo Cardin.

The myſtery. Rabanus.

Myſtically hereby is forbidden to have communion with idolaters, who are ſpiritual fornicators, which is expreſſed, 2 Cor. 6. 16. or with any heretick, 2 Joh. verſ. 10.

Verſ. 18.

Thou ſhalt not bring the price of a dog, or the hire of a whore into the Lords houſe for any vow, &c.] That is, if any againſt the former law committed fornication and gave the whore, with whom an hire for it, this, as well as whoredom was abomination to the Lord, and muſt in no caſe be taken, although it were offered into the treaſury of the ſanctuary for reparation of the temple, or for ſacrifice. The word ſignifying whore is זונה, to ſhew, that by the word קרשה before uſed, all manner of whores are meant, and not the common whore onely. The hire of an whore, as the price of a dog, is by the Hebrews ſo ſtrictly taken, that they ſay, onely a clean beaſt, a lamb or the like being given for hire is unlawful; but if it be wheat or grapes, &c. and they be turned into flowr, and wine, or a ſacrifice be therewith bought, it is lawful, and likewiſe a beaſt taken in exchange for a dog is unlawful, but not the thing bought with that beaſt. But forſomuch as it is ſtill the thing coming by the whores hire, I cannot ſee, but that it muſt needs be alike abominable; and this was but a device to bring gain in to the prieſts, as that of ſaying Corban, Matth. 15.

Maimony in Iſſure Miſbeach c. 4.

Ainſworth.

By a dog, ſome, ſaith Ainſworth, underſtand a whoremonger, becauſe the wicked are called dogs, Matth. 7. 6. but the literal ſenſe is generally followed both by the Hebrews and others. And there was good reaſon, ſaith Calvin, why the price of a dog is forbidden, becauſe the dog is not only unclean, but the moſt contemptible amongſt beaſts, that are unclean, ſo that it were againſt the reverence due to the ſanctuary, Levit. 19. 30. to bring ſuch a thing into it; the price of a ſon is not forbidden, thus he; but Rabanus following Auguſtine, makes a quære, whether under this one named, all unclean beaſts be not meant: but whereas the firſt born of other unclean beaſts are appointed to be redeemed, the dog is not, and therefore it is plain, that the price of a ſon might be brought. The moral of this, ſaith he, is to teach, that goods gotten by rapacity and robbery, if they be given to the Lord, are not accepted, nor yet the ſervice of ſuch, Jerem. 7. 9. And the reaſon of forbidding the hire of the whore to be brought, ſaith he, was, leſt after ſuch wickedneſſe committed, it ſhould be thought, that whoredome might thus again be expiated, to waxe the bolder to commit this abominable ſin. Hugo by the price of a dog, underſtandeth the price of coupling with a bitch, and likewiſe of any unclean beaſts, but this is adjoyned to that of an whore, to make that the more odious. But he objecteth about the hire of a whore, although it be wicked gain, it is her proper goods, why then may it not be brought? and anſwereth, it may privately, but not publickly for the ſcandal; but how ſound this is, let the Reader judge. God forbiddeth the price of a dog, which is moſt contemptible, to be brought, ſaith Chytræus, leſt he ſhould ſeem thus to be deſpiſed, rather then honoured.

Calvin.

Rabanus.

Exod. 13. 13.

Prov. 15. 8.

Hugo Cardinalis.

Chytræus.

The

The 22: Law, verſ.19. Thou ſhalt not lend to thy brother upon uſury, &c.] Of this Law ſee, Exod.22.25. and of ſtrangers, Levit. 25.35,36. either to a brother or to a ſtranger, that is of the ſame faith, it is forbidden to be an uſurer, but not to infidels, ſee the notes there. Judic. Law 22. Verſ.19.20.

When thou ſhalt vow a vow unto the Lord, thou ſhalt not ſlack to pay it, &c.] This is the 33. Law repeated from Numb. 30. where a man is charged to perform his vowes, here not to defer the performance of them: of vowing, ſee Levit. 27.7.17. In charging them not to defer their vowes paying, he meaneth, that they ſhould be paid with all ſpeed leſt death prevent them, ſith this life is uncertain. The place where was the ſanctuary, Deut. 12.5, 6,7. and becauſe their eating and rejoycing before the Lord, when they brought their vowes is ſpoken of, Maimony gathereth that the time was the feaſt, that came next, whether the Paſſeover, Pentecoſt or the feaſt of Tabernacles, Deut. 16. 16. He that did not at the next feaſt bring his vowes, tranſgreſſed this commandement againſt deferring, and if not at the feaſt following he ſinned again. But he ſaith, money vowed to the poore is to be given out of hand if any poore be preſent, if not, it is to be ſeparated for them and laid up, till he find ſome poore. Judiciall Law 23. Verſ.21. Maimonie of offering ſacrifices, c.14.

If thou forbear to vow, it ſhall be no ſinne in thee, &c.] Hereupon it is ſaid, Eccleſ.5 5. Better it is not to vow, then to vow and not perform. But forſomuch as Pſalm. 77. 11. it is commanded, vow and pay to the Lord, it may be demanded, how he that voweth not, is ſaid to be without ſinne herein? Anſw. It is meant, if thou voweſt not raſhly or lightly, thou ſhalt not be guilty of ſinne, which is ſpoken to ſtay men from abuſing his holy Ordinance by being over haſty in vowing: but in way of thankfulneſſe for ſome great benefit not to vow or to ſuppreſſe evill concupiſcence, wherein vowing may be an help unto us, is to incurre the ſinne of neglect of our ſpirituall good, and of ingratitude towards God. Yet Maimony ſaith, if we never ſanctifie or devote, there is no ſinne in it, which he proveth by this paſſage. Ainſworth expoundeth it thus, If thou forbear to vow, it ſhall be ſuch ſinne, as in thoſe that vow and perform not; ſee the like phraſe, John 9. 41. Joh.15.22,24. Jam.4.17. Verſ. 22. Maimonie, of devoted things cap. 8.

The 24. Law. When thou comeſt into thy neighbours vineyard, thou maiſt eat grapes thy fill, but thou ſhalt put none into thy veſſell, &c. This is by the Hebrews underſtood onely of ſuch as come to labour in the vineyard, &c. they being ſet to work there by the owner, may eat, as the mouth of the Oxe, that treadeth out the corn, muſt not be muzzeled, which ſeemeth to be ſpoken in this ſence, becauſe, 1 Cor. 9.7,8,9. they are all put together as tending to the ſame. And here they have certain expreſſions further to illuſtrate this Law; as firſt, he that laboureth about growing things onely, may eat of them, not of the butter which he churneth, or the cheeſe that he maketh. 2. If he that laboureth be a Nazarite, ſo that he may not eat of the fruit of the vine, he may not give what he ſhould eat to others, as wife and children, or if he hath no mind to eat any himſelf. 3. If he agreeth with the owner not to eat, he may not, becauſe voluntarily he hath departed from his right. But it ſeemeth that ſuch as came into a corne field occaſionally and not to work, might pluck and eate of the ears of corn, becauſe our Lord coming thus with his Diſciples, they did ſo, Matth. 12.1. And therefore it is thus alſo underſtood by Chriſtian Expoſitours. Hugo inquiring whether if a man cometh to an heap of corn, or grapes gathered by the owner, or to his bread, might alſo do this, Anſwereth no; becauſe whileſt theſe are yet unreaped they have no reall owner, but are the Lords; and therefore any of his people having need may take and eat of them, but yet without any great dammage to the owner, whoſe ſubſtance it is to live upon, when he hath gathered it in; but this being once done, he is in reall poſſeſſion, and it is unlawfull now without his leave to take and eat theref. By the vineyard and corn field the Hebrewes underſtand alſo Olives and other fruit. Judiciall Law 24. Verſ. 24. Maimony in treat. of hired things, cap. 12. Deut. 25.4. Hugo Card. Ainſworth.

The Myſtery. Rabanus. Exod. 12.

Myſtically the neighbours vineyard ſaith Rabanus is the Scripture of Chriſt, upon this we may eat in the Church; the vineyard, by reading, preaching and meditating, but not carry it out of the Church, as none of the paſchall Lamb might be carried out of the houſe. The corn field alſo is the Church with the ſtanding corn of the word in it, this may be plucked and rubbed to find out the ſpirituall ſenſe in myſticall places, but a ſickle muſt not be put in by raſhly perverting the ſenſe, leſt thou be in danger of being judged for hurting this corn. And this is done by thoſe that take nothing literally, but turn all places into allegories: for of ſome the literall ſenſe onely is to be followed, and it is to edification, of ſome the morall, and of ſome the myſticall: thus he; but it is to be known, that of every place the literall ſenſe is firſt to be intended, becauſe it is true according to the letter and edifying, then if need be, the morall, or myſticall.

CHAP. XXIV.

Judiciall Law 15. Verſ. 1.2,3.

THe 25. Law, verſ. 1. When a man hath taken a wife, &c. and ſhe finde no favour in his eyes, becauſe he hath found ſome uncleanneſſe in her, let him write her bill of divorcement, &c. For theſe words and married her, after thoſe when a man hath taken a wife, Hebr. is, רבעלה and is her husband, the Septuagint, dwelt together with her, the meaning is, hath done to her the dutie of an husband; for theſe words ſome uncleanneſſe, Hebr. is ערית דבר ſome nakedneſſe, whereby is not meant adultery, but ſome other outward uncleanneſſe, as the word is uſed, Deut. 23. 14. for he ſhall write, Hebr. is, and he write; for here is no precept to do thus, but onely a permiſſion if he write her a bill of divorce, then ſhe may be wife to another man. For the form of a bill of divorcement ſee my expoſition, Matth. 5. Text. 28. The Maimony of divorces, c. 10.

The Hebrews, who erre about divorcements ſtill to this day, ſay, that touching a wife of evill conditions that is, not modeſt, as the honeſt daughters of Iſrael, it is commanded to put her away, viz. if ſhe be a ſecond wife, but not the firſt. But to this 10 things muſt concur. 1. He muſt do it of his own will. 2. By a writing. 3. The matter of the writing muſt be to divorce her. 4. The cauſe muſt be between him and her. 5. It muſt be written by her name. 6. It muſt be a perfect bill. 7. It muſt be given to her. 8. Before witneſſes. 9. By him or his deputie. 10. According to the law of divorces. And they adde moreover, that if when he hath given his bill to his deputy he repenteth and ſaith, I will that this bill be fruſtrate, before it cometh to her hands it is no divorce, but if after, it is of force, and many other niceties they have more, which I ſpare to ſet down, of putting a mans wife away by a bill of divorce: the Lord ſaith, it was alwayes a ſinne, but permitted to the Jewes for the hardneſſe of their hearts, Matth. 5. 32. chap. 10. 7. Mal. 2. 16. And for this it is to be noted, that all things here are put conditionally, if he write her a bill of divorce, and ſhe marry another man, &c. v. 1,2,3. and nothing is poſitively preſcribed, till v. 4. againſt taking her again.

The Myſterie. Rabanus.

Myſtically ſaith Rabanus, the wife that findeth no favour in her husbands eyes, is the Jewiſh Synagogue, with which Chriſt is diſpleaſed, and therefore he putteth her out of his houſe, the Church, the other man that taketh her, and upon diſlike putteth her away, were the Apoſtles, who indeavoured much to convert them, but they rejecting their teaching have the duſt of their feet ſhaken off againſt them, and ſo they remain untaken again by the Lord to this day. But becauſe the Jewes ſhall one day be received to grace, Rom. 9. 2 Cor. 3. this allegory cannot ſtand. His tropology is better, when a man is wedded to any courſe of life, which is unclean, and his eyes be opened to ſee it, he muſt put it away, and if another, after he hath left it, be wedded to the ſame evill, but after a while putteth

Acts 13.

it

it away again, he may never take it up after that he is once ſeparated from it, leſt he be counted like a dog, that returneth to his vomit, &c. 2 Pet.2.20. Touching divorces for adultery or for deſertion, ſee Chytræus, who upon this place diſputeth of them both at large, and for marrying again, my expoſitions upon Matth. 5.32.

Next unto this about divorces, another Law much like to that Deut.20. is repeated, touching a man that had eſpouſed a wife, that he ſhould return from the wars: for it is ſaid, VVhen a man hath taken a new wife, he ſhall not goe out to warre, nor be charged with any buſineſſe, &c. And the time of liberty now given him is an whole yeare to rejoyce with his wife. The Hebrewes extend this Law upon the former ground, Deut. 20. to builders of houſes, and planters of vineyards alſo: and whereas it is ſaid, that ſuch ſhould not be charged with any buſineſſe they ſay, it is meant of preparing the wayes and providing victuals for the Army, which they that tarried at home were tied unto, but ſo were none of theſe for that yeare. Others underſtand it onely of the new married, which is moſt agreeable to the Text: but herein again they differ, that ſome will have this Law ſo made, becauſe the Jewes when they were newly married, were ſo addicted to their wives, that if they were taken to the warres, or to any other publick buſineſſe, there would have beene great danger of their doing more hurt, then good; and becauſe at the firſt they were moſt intent to get neceſſaries about them. And they ſay, that this was an indulgence of ſloth, for which cauſe the like is not now permitted. But others better, that it was given in honour of marriage, and to ſettle the affections of the married one towards another, that the husband not being preſently taken from his ſpouſe, ſhe might be bept from the love of other men, and he likewiſe from the love of other women, whereunto ſo ſudden a ſeparation might have been a great temptation. Myſtically ſaith Rabanus, the carnall are here forbidden to be ſet over the Church of God, becauſe he that goeth on warfare, intangleth not himſelfe with worldly things.

Verſ. 5.

Maimony of Kings c. 7.

Hugo Card.

Calvin.
Ainſworth.

The Myſterie.
Rabanus.
2 Tim. 2. 4.

The 26. Law. No man ſhall take the upper or nether milſtone to pledge, for he taketh a mans life to pledge. The word Rechaim rendred nether milſtone, is put ſometime for the mill, Exod. 11. 5. For theſe words, for he taketh a mans life to pledge, Hebr. For that pledge is the ſoul, the Cald. for by them is made ready meate for every ſoul. By the ſoul then is to be underſtood the life of man; it is meant, he is thus deprived of a neceſſary inſtrument to prepare that which is the ſtaffe of mans life, as bread is called, Pſalm. 104. And hereby not onely milſtones are meant, but every inſtrument which ſerveth to prepare mans foode, as the butchers knife to kill it, the pot to boyle it in, &c. So Maimony in Paleſtina, ſaith Hugo, where they had no ſtreams, each man had a mill in his houſe with the hand to grinde his corne. ſo that it was of daily neceſſarie uſe: wherefore either of the ſtones hereof are forbidden to be taken to pledge. Chytræus ſaith, that he had ſeene many in Denmarke that had ſuch ſmall mills, and by grinding got their living. And myſtically both he and Rabanus by the upper milſtone underſtand hope, by the nether, feare in a ſinner, with whom the Confeſſour dealeth, he muſt not by flattering any take away the nether milſtone of feare, nor the the upper one of hope, by threatning him with judgement, when he is humbled: For as one of the milſtones being taken away: The other is altogether unprofitable, ſo if either feare or hope bee taken away from a ſinner, hee ſhall ſtand unmoveable, and having but feare alone, or hope alone, looſe his ſoule.

Verſ.6. Judic. Law 26.

Cald. Par.

Maimony of lender and borrower, c. 3.
Hugo Card.

The Myſterie.
Hugo Card.
Rabanus.

The 27. Law v.7. If any man be found ſtealing any of his brethren of the children of Iſrael, and maketh merchandiſe of him he ſhall dye, &c.] See this Law before Exod.21.16. againſt the ſtealing of a man, the puniſhment appointed being death. The Hebrews are nice in diſtinguiſhing here, ſaying, that Verſ. 7. Judiciall Law 27.

ſtealing ſimply is not death, nor ſtealing and ſelling, unleſs, having ſtoln he firſt ſerveth himſelf with him, and then ſelleth him, becauſe it is ſaid maketh gain of him, or ſerveth himſelf of him, and ſelleth him as the Hebrews words will bear, the Septuagint render it bringing him under his power ſelleth him, according to the words uſed, Exod. 21. 16.

Again, they ſay, it muſt be an Hebrew or a Proſelyte, that is thus uſed, or elſe it is not death to ſteal and ſell any other, but reſtitution, but both theſe are plainly overthrown by the words, Exod. 21. where ſtealing of any man is thus cenſured, and it is not onely ſaid, if he ſelleth him, but alſo, or if he be found in his hand, he ſhall dye. For theſe words if a man be found ſtealing, the vulg. Latin hath it, if he be found ſolliciting any of his brethren, to ſhew the manner how one uſed to ſteal another, viz. by enticing him to ſell himſelf, he having before agreed with the buyer to have part of the price given for him, or by enticing him into another countrey and there ſelling him, ſo Hugo.

Hugo Card. Judicial Law 28. Verſ. 8.

The 28. Law verſ. 8. Take thou heed in the plague of Leproſie, to obſerve diligently and to do according to all, that the Prieſts the Levites ſhall teach you, &c.] The ſcope of this Law, ſaith Hugo, is, that they ſhould not reſiſt, but diligently obey the Prieſts directing them, as God commanded, Levit. 13. and Chap. 14. for Miriam, whoſe example is here commemorated, contended with Moſes and ſo was ſmitten with this plague. And hereby is intimated, that for oppoſing them the leproſie is often ſent, as to Uzziah King of Judah, and therefore whoſoever was thus puniſhed, muſt take great heed not to ſeek to hide it, or by himſelf to cure it or contemptuouſly to remain in the Camp, when the Prieſts direct him to go out, leaſt he add ſin to ſin: for even Miriam, a Propheteſs and ſiſter to Moſes, and ſo as great as any of them, ſubmitted her ſelf to go out of the Camp, and to ſtay there, till ſhe was cleanſed. This plague then muſt be taken heed unto, as coming from Gods immediate hand for ſin, and therfore cureable onely by him, who muſt therefore be duly attended herein. The Hebrews upon this ſay, that whoſoever plucketh off the ſigns of uncleanneſſe either all or ſome of them, or ſeareth any of the raw fleſh, or cutteth a ſoar out of his fleſh, out of a garment or an houſe, before the Prieſt ſeeth it, or whilſt he is ſhut up or after, transgreſſeth againſt this Ordinance of the Lord.

Numb. 12. 2 Chron. 26.

Maimony of Leproſie, c. 10.

Judiciall Law 29. Verſ. 10, 11, 12, 13.

The 29. Law, Verſ. 10, 11. when thou lendeſt thy neighbour the lending of any thing, thou ſhalt not go into his houſe to fetch his pawn, but ſhalt ſtand without, &c.] Here are two things in this Law, 1. As is already expreſſed. 2. If he be a poor man, his pawn muſt be reſtored when the ſun goeth down.

Touching the firſt, the Hebrews ſay, that no man may take a pawn but by an officer ſent from the Synedrion, and he muſt ſtand without, till it be brought out unto him by the owner, but then the officer may take it by force, but the creditor may not, and this is the order for borrowers, whether rich or poor.

Maimony of Lender and Borrower, c. 3.

For the ſecond, ſee Exod. 22. 26. where a reaſon is alſo rendred, why the creditor muſt not go into the houſe to take a pawn, and ſome reſolution is given, what benefit it will be to the creditour to take a pawn, when as he muſt the ſame day reſtore it again. But Maimony ſaith, by this means the debt is not releaſed in the ſeventh year, as otherwiſe they muſt be Deut. 15. 1, 2, 3. and if the borrower dye, payment is made by the pawn, which goeth not now, as his other moveables to his children. Rabanus ſaith, haply the pawn was taken, that it might be remembred to be the Creditours, till the debt was paid, which if it had not been carryed away, might have been forgotten, but by this means when the Creditour in mercy reſtored it again, the greater tye was put upon the poor man to make haſt in thankfulneſſe to pay him his debt. Thus alſo Hugo alleadging

Rabanus. Hugo Cardin.

Auguſtine

Auguſtine for the ſame, and that the end of this Law of not going into the poor mans houſe to fetch out a pawn was to prevent violence and a ſtirre, that might be made about it, and that mercy might be ſhewed, and therefore the borrower is injoyned to bring it out. But he maketh another quære, what if the borrower had another covering to ſleep in? and anſwereth that in this caſe it was not to be reſtored, ſee Exod.22.26. and accordingly it is to be held of the garment of the widow, verſ. 17. of this Chapter.

Theſe words when thou lendeſt the lending of any thing to thy neighbour, (for ſo Junius rendreth it, going word for word according to the Hebrew) may alſo be rendred, when thou exacteſt the exaction of any thing, ſo Ainſworth, and the vulgar Latin accordingly, when thou requireſt any thing of thy neighbour, which he oweth thee.

Verſ. 14. Judicial Law 30.

Thou ſhalt not fraudulently oppreſſe an hired ſervant, that is poor and needy &c. in his day thou ſhalt give him his hire, &c.] See this Law before Levit. 19. 13. The Hebrews expound this not onely of the hire of a poor man, but alſo of his beaſt, or any other thing of his, that is hired. And they diſtinguiſh thus betwixt this and that Lev.19.13 he that is hired by the day, his hire is due to him all the night, and therefore it is there ſaid, it ſhall not abide with thee all night, and he that is hired for the night, his hire is due to him all the day, and therefore it is here ſaid, in his day thou ſhalt reſtore it to him. If he be hired for a moneth, for a year, or for ſeven years, if his term endeth in the day, or in the night, it is then due to him. For unto it he lifteth up his ſoul, the vulg. Latin, by it he ſuſtaineth his life; ſo that to keep back his hire is as it were to take away his life, and is a moſt grievous ſin. Maimony maketh it a fourfold transgreſſion. 1. Againſt the Law forbidding oppreſſion. 2. Againſt that forbidding robbing. 3. Againſt that, the ſun ſhall not go down upon it. 4. Againſt that, it ſhall not abide with thee all night. And although he, to whom hire is due, ſaith nothing, this very ſin cryeth unto God, as Cains ſin, Gen.4. and the Sodomites, Gen.18.

Maimony of hiring, cap. 11.

Verſ.16: Judicial Law 31. Cald. Par.

The 31. Law verſ. 16. The father ſhall not be put to death for the children, and the children ſhall not be put to death for the fathers, &c.] The Cald. the fathers ſhall not be put to death by the mouth of the children, &c. and accordingly the Hebrews take it to be againſt putting the father to death upon the teſtimony of the children, and contrariwiſe, and againſt putting any to death upon the the teſtimony of ſuch as be near a kin to him. But this is both contrary to the Hebrew, verity and to the practiſe noted 2 King.14.5,6. and 2 Chron.25.4. ſee the ſame Ezech.18.20.

Maimony of witneſſes, c.13.

Ob. God threateneth Exod.20. to viſit the ſins of the fathers upon the children.

Auguſt. in Deut. qu. 42.

Sol. This is to be underſtood onely of ſuch as hate him, as their fathers did, or of children yet unborn, when their fathers ſinned, or of the guilt, that cometh by Adams ſin to all his poſterity, unleſſe they be renewed by grace, for ſuch, although they ſuffer for their fathers ſins temporally, yet they ſhall not eternally. But why then is not the firſt or ſecond generation named, but onely to the third and fourth generation? Anſ. Becauſe three and four makes ſeven, which is the number of perfection, and therefore an univerſality is hereby meant, as Amos 2. and 3. by three and four tranſgreſſions all tranſgreſſions are meant; thus Auguſtine, and after him Rabanus and Hugo. This is a Law given to Judges, and ſo is that following, verſ. 17. againſt wreſting the judgement of the ſtranger or fatherleſſe, or taking the widows raiment to pledge; for the Synedrion, ſaith Maimony, cannot ſend to take a pledge of her, whether ſhe be poor or rich, and if it be taken, it muſt by force be taken and reſtored again. For theſe words, [thou ſhalt not wreſt the judgement of the ſtranger or fatherleſſe] Heb. it is, ſtranger, fatherleſſe, but or is to be ſupplyed, as alſo it is in the the Sept. where to theſe two, the widow is added, and Deut.27. 19. they are all three named, ſhewing that the widow is to be underſtood; ſee the like defective paſſages, 2 King. 9.32. 1 Sam.20.12. Eſay 38.14. Againſt perverting the judgment of any, ſee Exod.23.2. Deut.16.19. of the judgement of the poor, Exod.23.6. but here of the judgment of the fatherleſſe and ſtranger in ſpecial. God taketh the part of thoſe that are moſt helpleſſe in ſpecial, and therefore to wrong ſuch is the greater ſin. Maimony maketh it a tranſgreſſing againſt two prohibitions, to wrong a ſtranger; and againſt three, to wrong the fatherleſſe.

Maimony of Lender and Borrower, c.3.

Judicial law 32. Ver. 19,20, 21, 22. Maimony.

The 32 Law, verſ.19. When thou reapeſt thy harveſt in the field, and haſt forgotten a ſheaf in the field, thou ſhalt not return to take it, &c.] A corner of of the field and gleanings were appointed to be left for the poor, Levit.19. 9. but here the forgotten ſheaf alſo, that is, ſay the Hebrews, one ſheaf or two being left ſo far off through forgetfulneſſe, that he cannot ſtretch out his hand to take them, but if three be left or more, they are not counted, as the forgotten ſheaf, and the like they ſay of olive trees, or other fruit trees, in time of gathering, if one or two be left through forgetfulneſſe, they muſt not come again to gather them, intimated, verſ. 20. thou ſhalt not go over the boughs after thee, and likewiſe touching the vine, verſ.21. thou ſhalt not gather the ſingle grapes after thee; but of the ſingle grapes, ſee Levit. 19. 10.

CHAP. XXV.

Judicial law 33. Verſ.1,2,3.

THe 33. Law, verſ.1,2,3. If there be a controverſie between men, and they come near to judgment, they ſhall juſtifie the juſt, &c. And if the wicked be worthy to be beaten, &c. fourty ſtripes he may give him, &c.] This law concerned every court of Juſtice, both the great one of 71. that of 23, and that of three men; for although theſe laſt might put none to death, yet they might adjudge offenders to be beaten. To juſtifie the juſt, as Chytæus noteth, is contrary to condemn the wicked, which followeth, and therefore, as that is to pronounce him guilty, that he may be puniſhed, ſo this is to pronounce, or declare him to be innocent; and thus juſtifying is often ſpoken of by the Apoſtle Paul, and James, Gods acquitting of one of ſin being meant, or his being declared to be juſt through his grace, no ſin being imputed unto him. For beating the guilty, the Hebrewes ſet down many rules to determine, who is worthy of beating, and who not; for, worthy to be beaten, Hebr. is, a ſon of beating: ſo he that is worthy of hell, is called the ſon of hell, Matth.23.15. he that is worthy of death, the ſon of death, 1 Sam.20.31. he that is worthy of peace, the ſon of peace, Luc. 10.6. Matth.10.18. The firſt rule is, Whoſo tranſgreſſeth againſt a prohibition, the contrary to which he ought to do, and being admoniſhed thereof tranſgreſſeth again, he is to be beaten therefore. 2. He that tranſgreſſeth in a thing threatned with cutting off, but is not puniſhable with death by the Judges; as by eating fat or blood, &c. But if it be puniſhable by death, he is not to be beaten, but to be ſlain. 3. He that tranſgreſſeth a prohibition in act, but if in word only, he is not to be beaten, as if he goeth about, as a tale-bearer, &c. 4. He that tranſgreſſeth in a thing to be ſatisfied for, is not to to be beaten. 5. Neither for doing againſt a particular duty implyed in a general, unleſſe it be in ſome place expreſſed, and that is, when divers things are together forbidden, but theſe words, thou ſhalt not, are not repeated to each one of them. And they number the prohibitions of acts, for not cutting off, nor death is due, but beating to be 168. thoſe for which cutting off is due, 21. thoſe for which death by the hand of God, 18. altogether 207. which are to be chaſtiſed with beating. For the manner of beating, it was with a ſcourge made of a bull a bull hide, upon the bare skin, the offender being faſt tyed down, that he might ſtand leaning, and with this ſcourge the executioner laid on with all his might, and three Judges ſtanding by, one read all the while, Deut. 28.58,&c. the ſecond bad every time ſmite, and the third counted the number of ſtripes given: whereas 40 ſtripes are the ſtint for the greateſt offender, they gave none ſo many by one, that they might ſhew ſome mercy; whereupon St. Paul ſaith, that five times he received 40 ſtripes ſave one. 2 Cor. 11. And hence we may gather, both what grievous things he ſuffered, and how he for pieties ſake was counted amongſt the vileſt offenders, in that every time ſtill he had the greateſt puniſhment of beating inflicted upon him: for of putting to death the Jews then had no power permitted them by the Romans; ſo Chytræus. Chytræus. Now although the greateſt number was but 40, every one had not ſo many ſtripes given him, but ſome 9. ſome 12, more or fewer; and he that was judged to have 40 ſtripes, if the Judges whileſt he was under correction ſaw, that his ſtrength was not ſufficient to bear ſo many, he had fewer; and likewiſe if being judged to have 12. he was not able to bear them, ſome were remitted: but if he were as ſtrong as Sampſon, and had been judged to bear but 12. the number might not be encreaſed. Laſtly, he that was worthy of cutting off, and ſo was beaten, if he offended the ſecond time, he was the ſecond time beaten; if the third, he was put into little eaſe, and fed with bread and water, till his guts ſhrunk, and then with barley, till his belly burſt, ſo Maimony, who alſo ſaith, that no man was beaten, but upon due proof by witneſſes. Maimony in Sanedrin, c. 17. And touching the number of 40 ſaving one before ſpoken of, it is to be underſtood, that they took the commandement, by a number, fourty ſtripes he may give him; as if it had been ſaid, by the next number to 40. that is, 39. but this is both a ſtrange conſtruction and confoundeth the verſes, which are to be diſtinguiſhed. Talmud Babyl. For counting the number of ſtripes, that was done by reckoning three to every ſtroke, becauſe the ſtrings of the whip were three, ſo that 13 made 39. and if they ſhould have given one more, it would have made 42, according to this account, wherefore they muſt needs come one under 40, or elſe exceed the number preſcribed; thus Maimony, who alſo ſaith, that if any man dyed under the ſcourge, the beater was guiltleſſe, but if he received but one ſtripe more, and ſo dyed, he was to be baniſhed. Maimonie in Sanedrin, c. 17. The number of 40 ſtripes muſt not be exceeded, ſaith Moſes, leſt thy brother ſhould ſeem vile unto thee; ſo that the ſin, and not the perſon ſinning, is to be hated. Hereupon Maimony ſaith, when a man hath been beaten, he is to return to his dignity, which he had before, all but one of the Synedrion, who returneth not.

Chytræus.

Maimony in Sanedrin, c. 18.

Thou ſhalt not muzzel the ox that treadeth out the corn.] This is the 34 law, and is placed next to that againſt inhumanity towards men, to ſhew, that even to the beaſt that muſt be done, which is juſt and equal. Verſ. 14. Judicial law 34. By oxe, the Hebrews underſtand alſo the aſſe or any other beaſt labouring about that which is food growing out of the ground, the oxe being named for an inſtance, and they ſay, that the beaſt muſt be permitted to eat not only of the corn which he is treading out, but alſo of it growing, and of the burthen which he carrieth, &c. and by muzzeling, they underſtand alſo reſtraining him any way from feeding, by terrifying him with the voyce, giving him no water, or placing a bullocks calf ſo, as that by the blaring thereof to her ſhe is hindred from feeding, or the like, and whoſo did thus, if it were to an hired beaſt, tranſgreſſed, and if he muzzeled it, was to be beaten, and to pay to the owner four cabs for a bullock, and three for an aſſe. Maimony of hired things, c. 13. For the treading out of the corn, it is to be underſtood, that this was one way of threſhing uſed amongſt the Hebrews, ſee Hoſ. 10.11. another was with a cart wheel, Eſay 28. 27, 28. where alſo beating with a ſtaffe, or a rod, and treading with horſes is ſpoken of. This law bound not other peoples, but the Hebrews only, as they teach, for if an Hebrew worketh the beaſt of of an heathen in his corn, he muſt not muzzel him, but if an heathen worketh the beaſt of an Hebrew, he may muzzel, ſo Maimony.

The Myſtery. 1 Cor. 9. 9. 1 Tim. 5. Chytræus.

The myſtery of this is ſhewed by the Apoſtle, the Miniſter of the Goſpel muſt not have his means of maintenance kept from him, but live of his labour in preaching, that he may be free to ſtudy, pray, and preach; and Chytræus extendeth it further, even to all that teach the liberal arts, they muſt have maintenance allowed them therefore.

Judicial Law 35. Verſ. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

The 35 Law is, that a brother ſhould take a brothers wife, he being dead without iſſue, and in caſe that he refuſed, ſhe muſt pluck off his ſhoe before the Elders, and ſpit in his face, thus putting him to ignominy in Iſrael. To take a brothers wife is forbidden, Levit.18.16. but in this caſe that law holdeth not; for now it is not onely not unlawful, but an inhumane and moſt unkind part not to take her. This was practiſed long before, as we may ſee in the two ſons of Judah, Er and Onan, and the end of it may be partly for the comfort of the widow in this deſolate eſtate, and partly that families might be upheld and not extinguiſht in Iſrael, being types of a better inheritance to come.

Gen. 38. 7.

When brethren dwell together,] This ſeemeth to imply a ſingle eſtate in the ſurvivers living either in their fathers houſe together, or in their brothers ſo dying. If one of them, that is, the firſt, as the word is often uſed, that is, the eldeſt dye, &c. but the Hebrews underſtand it of any of theſe brethren which are by the fathers ſide, but not by the mothers, becauſe he is not in this caſe, or for inheriting counted a brother, that is only by the mothers ſide. And they ſay, the brother, that muſt take his brothers wife, is the eldeſt living, and together with her he is to have his brothers inheritance; if the eldeſt living be out of the countrey, the next muſt take her, having firſt ſtayed 90 dayes to ſee whether ſhe be with child by the dead brother, for none might marry after their husbands deceaſe in a ſhorter time. If ſhe proved with child, he muſt tarry till the birth thereof, and if it were ſtill born, he muſt take her, as if ſhe had had no child by his brother; but if it were born alive, he was free from marrying her. For theſe words, having no child, Hebr. it is, having no ſon; but the meaning is, without iſſue, ſon or daughter, and thus the Sept render it, having no ſeed, and ſo it is alledged Mat.22.24. and Luk.20.28. and thus Maimony expoundeth it, having no ſon or ſons ſeed, or daughter, or daughters ſeed, and that either by his wife or by another woman, for if he hath a baſtard, this law holdeth not, unleſſe it be by a bond-woman, or an heathen woman, for if the ſeed coming by ſuch are ſervants and infidels. For the ceremony to be uſed of putting off his his ſhoe before the elders, and ſpitting, it was thus, a new ſhoe of leather with an heel was brought into the court, which he having put upon his right foot and tyed, ſhe unlooſed, plucked off and caſt it upon the ground, and then ſtanding up ſpat before him in the ſight of the Judges, uſing the words ſet down, verſ. 9. and all that ſate in the court anſwered her three times, he that had his ſhoe pulled off: for theſe words, ſpit in his face, may alſo be rendred, before his face; and thus the phraſe is uſed, Deut.4.37. and c.11.25. the putting off of the ſhoe was done in ſign of giving over his right to her; as Ruth 4. 7. it is ſaid to have been done for a teſtimony in Iſrael of a mans giving over his right in any poſſeſſion: and ſometime it was, as ſpitting, a ſign of ignominy, as Eſay 20. 2,4. and thus it was done in this caſe, this refuſal in the brother was a ſtain to him and his family after him. After all this done, the Judges gave her a teſtimonial of what had paſſed, ſubſcribed with their names, and then ſhe was free to be married to any other man. And it is to be noted, that a kinſman amongſt the Hebrews was a brother, as appeareth in the caſe of Boaz taking Ruth, his kinſmans wife. For the heathen, although they be proſelytes, ſaith Maimony, this law holdeth not, ſo that it is altogether unlawful for a brother in any caſe to take his brothers wife.

Maimony of taking the brothers wife, c. 1.

Exod. 21.4. Deut. 7. 4.

wife. If the woman refuſed to have her husbands brother, here is nothing ſet down that ſhould be done to her, but the Hebrews ſay, ſhe was judged rebellious againſt her husband, and ſo was put away without a dowry, yea although ſhe would have one of is brethren, if ſhe refuſed the eldeſt. For the talk which the Elders had with the brother, refuſing to take his brothers wife, they ſay that they perſwaded him, if ſhe were fit for him to take her, but if not, as if ſhe were old and he young, or contrariwiſe, to let his ſhoe be pulled off.

In that the firſt ſonne born to a brother taking her brothers wife was counted his dead brothers; we may gather how ſome that have had no children, are yet ſaid to have begotten ſuch or ſuch a ſonne, and ſo how the husband of the Virgin Mary is ſaid by Matthew to be the ſonne of one man, but by Luke of another; all their Progenitors alſo from Salathiel being divers. So Rabanus upon this Law, that a brother ſhould take his brothers wife, he dying without iſſue, ſome have been allowed amongſt Chriſtian Kings ſo to do; As Henry the Eight King of England took Katharine the wife of Arthur his brother, being allowed by Julius the Second, and concluded after much diſputation to be lawfull by many learned Divines, and when he was after many yeares again divorced; the former marriage was ratified by Clement the Eight, and that divorcement condemned. Amongſt the Romans, Craſſus married his brothers wife, but he was an infidell.

Chytræus diſputing upon this uſeth divers arguments to prove it unlawfull, eſpecially if the dead brother had iſſue, the principall of which is becauſe it is forbidden, Levit. 18.16, & 20.21. where it is pronounced to be a wickedneſſe, and they that marry ſo are threatned, that they ſhall die childleſſe; and it is ſaid, that the heathen did after all theſe abominations, intimating that even they, to whom the judiciall Lawes of Moſes were not given, did abominably when they made ſuch marriages, and incurred the wrath of God: whereas a caſe is put here, that may ſeem to be an exception for all: He anſwereth it was ſingularly for the Hebrewes, not for other people, as they were ſingularly allowed to rob the Egyptians, wherein others may not follow them. In all which he ſaith well, for the reaſon of this Law alledged is, that his brother might have a name raiſed up unto him in Iſrael, wherein many things were appointed to be done contrary to the generall lawes for a myſtery, not that other people and Nations might do the like; and what the myſtery of this was ſhall be ſhewed by and by. But whereas coming to ſpeak of the marrying of the brothers wife, in caſe that he died childleſſe, he ſaith, that in ſuch a caſe a divorce ought not to be made, becauſe it may be excuſed by this Law of Moſes and tollerated, he fruſtrateth all his owne argumentation, which if it be to prove onely that a man may not marry his brothers wife that had iſſue; he doth but beat the aire, and labour about that which is not amongſt Chriſtians oppugned. For Johns denouncing to Herod, that is, was unlawfull for him to have his brothers wife, ſtoppeth all mouthes at once for the generall to ſay nothing, that to argue about that belongeth not to this place, but to Levit. 18.16. As the Law of God, ſo the Canons of councels annd imperiall conſtitutions doe abſolutely condemn all ſuch marriages in any caſe amongſt Chriſtians, as Concil. Aurelianenſe, neither let thy brother ſurviving go up into the dead brothers bed, nor let a man take the ſiſter of his wife departed, and who ſo doth thus, let him be accurſed, and in the ſame councell 32. qu. 7. two Canons more of other ancient counſells are alledged to the ſame effect. For the imperiall Law, c. de inceſtis & inutil. nuptiis; we do altogether take away the liberty of marrying the brothers wife; and again, whereas ſome amongſt the Egyptians have married their dead brothers wives, holding them to be Virgins, if they had no iſſue, and ſo that there was no marriage paſt indeed, we determine, that ſuch con-

Chytræus.

Marc. 6. 18.

Concil. Aurel. Can. 22.

Fratris uxorem ducendi licentiam penitus ſubmovemus.

contracts and contract-makers be subject to the tenour of the old lawes. Whereas it is said, That his name be not put out in Israel; It is to be understood, saith Hugo, that the seed coming by a brother did not beare the name of the dead brother, but onely was called his sonne, and thus his name continued in Israel.

Hugo Cardinalis.

August. qu. 46. in Deut.

So Joseph the husband of the Virgin Mary, is said by one Evangelist to be the sonne of Heli, by another the sonne of Jacob, because Iacob begat him of his brother Heli his wife, he being dead without issue. For the Mystery, Augustine and Gregory say, that the dead brother is Christ Iesus, who died, before that he had fulfilled the number of his Elect, the brother raising up seed unto him is every Preacher, whose indeavour it ought continually to be to beget children unto him, and these are to be called not after their own, but his name: if any neglect thus to do, he is basely to be accounted of in the Church, his shooe is pulled off, because he is not shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace, and the Church spitteth in his face, when she objecteth to him his abuse of his gifts, and censureth him as unworthy of them.

August. lib. 32. contra Faustum.

The Mystery.

1 Cor. 3.
Eph. 6.

Judicial law 36. Ver. 11,12.

The 36. Law, vers. 11.12. When two men strive together, and the wife of the one in rescue of her husband taketh hold of the other by his secrets, her hand must be cut off therefore. This saith Maimony, is to be understood of her doing so purposely, not by chance, it is a punishment for her immodesty; whereas this Law may seem to contradict that, Levit. 24. of punishing with the like. It is to be understood, saith Hugo, in case that the offender cannot be punished in the like, the punishment must be inflicted in another kind, and here because the hand is the instrument of sinning, it must be cut off, to shew that wherein one sinneth therein he shall be punished.

Maimony in Chobel, cap. 1. Hugo Card.

The mystery. Rabanus.

Mystically by the two men striving together, saith Rabanus, we may understand a Catholicke and an Hereticke, and by the wife one seduced, and by her taking hold of him by his secrets, the Hereticks shaming of him by laying upon him reprochfull imputations, this llander by all means is to be cut off.

Chytræus.

But Chytræus understandeth faith and work striving in the court of justification, by the wife hypocrisie and superstition, the wife of work, the hand whereof layeth hold upon the secrets of faith, when by seeking to establish justification by works, faith whereby children are begotten to God is hindred; this therefore is to be cut off, according to that, If thy right hand offend thee cut it off; and this is by condemning and rejecting utterly such an error.

Iudiciall Law 37. Vers. 13, 14, 15.

The 37. Law. vers. 13.14,15. Against having divers stones or weights and measures, whereof see Levit. 19. 35,36. Prov. 20. 10. and 20. 23. Ezech. 45. 16. Amos. 8. 5. Mich. 6. 11. They that are deceitfull have a greater weight to buy by, and a lesser to sell by, and likewise for measures, but this is an abomination to the Lord, and nothing is more pernicious in humane societies.

The mystery. Hugo Cardin.

The Mystery, we must not make the Law of God more strict in our teaching, and more remisse in our living, which is taxed; Matth. 23. as a laying of heavy burthens upon others, but not touch them with one of our fingers.

Ainsworth.

The golden reed of the Word, saith Ainsworth, hereupon is the onely measure to measure the Ordinances of God by.

Vers. 17, 18, 19.

Lastly, they are again put in mind here to destroy Amalek utterly, of which see before, Exod. 17. 14. and for the mystery. This was the cause, why Saul was so severely punished for not destroying all, 1 Sam. 15. when as so strict a charge was given for this so long before, and in the dayes of Hezekiah, the Simeonites were stirred up to smite the rest of the Amalekites, that had escaped, 1 Chron. 4. 42,43. See somewhat also touching Amalek, Numb. 24.20. The cause why God would have Amalek utterly destroyed was, because he cut off the faint and weary of the people of Israel in in the wildernesse, which was a most inhumane part to cut off those whom he should have relieved and feared not God; when as all people, hearing of the wonders that he had wrought for his people, feared, Exod. 15. 15. But this must be done, till that they had rest from all their enemies round about, because God would not have them overmuch wearied with more warres together. Note that the vilest sinners are not presently cut off, but after a long time, to shew Gods patience towards the wicked; therefore let none hope for impunitie, because their judgement is deferred. Note.

CHAP. XXVI.

AND hitherto of the judiciall Lawes repeated and added from the beginning of Chap. 19. hitherto, which Chytreus distinguisheth into certain ranks, and referreth them to the six latter Commandements in order. 1. Those chap. 19. 20, 21, and 22. unto vers. 13. to Com. 6. 2. Those, chap. 22. from vers. 13. chap. 23. and 24. to vers. 6. to Com. 7. 3. from chap. 24. vers. 6. &c. to commandment 8. &c. but the Reader may see, that this reference in most of them holdeth not, for here is no such order followed, but onely in some particulars. That which is here added at the end of the Lawes both ceremoniall and judiciall, is a form of prayer and confession to be used, when they brought their first fruits, and had distributed the tithes of the third yeare, according to the partition made, ch. 12. 1. And first touching their fruits. Chytraus.

Vers. 1. And it shall be, when thou comest into the land which the Lord giveth thee, &c. Thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, &c. and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt goe to the place which the Lord shall choose, &c.] Of the first fruits see before, Numb. 18. 13. By the first are meant the chief and the best; what kinds of fruits these first fruits were, see Exod. 22. 29. and also for the quantitie: But for bringing them in a basket, and the form of confession to be used then, because it was not prescribed before; in this repetition it is set down, and to what place they should bring them. The Hebrewes have many rules more about first fruits. 1. They bring not of the Dates that grow on mountains, or of other fruits that grow in valleyes, but contrariwise, because Dates growing in valleyes are best, and other fruits that grow on mountains best. 2. They bring no liquors, but of Olives and grapes onely. 3. None that grow out of the land, but in the land onely. 4. By the word rendred basket, they understand any vessell, wherein the first fruits must be brought; either of mettall, osier, or rushes; and if they were brought in a vessell of mettall, the Priest must restore the vessell again, but if of osier, &c. 5. The divers fruits must be brought in divers vessels, or if all in one, there must be a cloth or somewhat laid between, that one grain or fruit might not be mingled with another. 6. The first fruits were brought together at the feast of Pentecost, not at any other time. 7. They were brought with great solemnitie, an whole Countie first meeting at the chief Citie thereof, where they lodged in the streets all night for fear of any pollution, and in the morning the Governour of the City called unto them, saying, Let us goe up to Sion, the Citie of the Lord our God; then a Bull was led before them with a garland of Olive branches upon his head, and his horns covered with gold, and one piped all the way with a pipe, till they came near to Ierusalem, and they went singing, Ps. 122. then messengers were sent to the Citie to tell of their coming, and the Captains and Governours came out to meet them, and when they were come within Ierusalem gates, they sang, Our feet have stood in thy gates, O Ierusalem, Psalm. 122. then all the chief Artificers met them, and said, welcome brethren, the men of such a place. Then they proceeded through the midst of the City, their piper playing before them upon his pipe, till they came came to the mountain of the houſe of God, and there they took every man his basket upon his ſhoulder, ſaying, Hallelujah, praiſe God in this Sanctuarie &c. Pſalm. 150. Thus thhey came to the Court, and then the Levites ſang, Pſalm. 30, to this it ſeemeth to be alluded, Eſ. 30. 29. 8. Each one bringeth his own basket to the Prieſt, their ſervants or others may bring them for them, till they come to the mountain of Gods houſe, but then every one muſt take his own upon his arm and carry it, yea though he be a King; and when he cometh at the courtyard he maketh his profeſſion, every one ſeverally, I profeſs this day to the Lord thy God, and ſo he let down the basket, and the Prieſt put his hand under it and waved it, and he ſaid, A Syrian ready to periſh, &c. then leaving his basket by the Altar at the ſouth-weſt horn he bowed himſelf and went out. 9. If a man bringeth more baskets, he doth not every time make this profeſſion, but once onely. 10. If his fruit be loſt, which were the firſt, and he bringeth other in ſtead thereof, he maketh not this profeſſion, &c. for the mentioning of theſe may ſuffice to give ſome light into this whole paſſage, unto verſe 11. Hugo ſaith, that the firſt fruits here ſpoken of were not the ſame with thoſe, Exod.22.29. and Numb.18.13. but other firſt fruits of a leſſer quantity, and this is not improbable, becauſe all their firſt fruits, if they paid the 60,50, or 40. part of their increaſe, could not poſſibly be brought in a basket. And he maketh a quære, why firſt fruits ſhould not now be paid as well as under the Law, alledging the gloſſe that ſaith, it is an impious thing, that they, which enter into the Church of God ſhould not offer their firſt fruits now unto the Prieſts, ſeeing God hath given the increaſe by making his ſun to ſhine, and his rain to fall. But he anſwereth, as ſecond tythes be not paid, becauſe the Law of paying them is not confirmed under the goſpel, ſo is it with firſt fruits; and ſome, he ſaith, hold, that this coming with the basket of firſt fruits was to be done but once onely, at their firſt poſſeſſing of that Land; but Joſephus ſaith, it was done once every year. Our firſt fruits, that we muſt continually offer, are thankſgivings to God and alms to the poor. To ſhew that the faithful were typified by the basket of firſt fruits, who are moſt holy to the Lord, according to the myſtery ſhewed upon Exod.22.29. a basket of figs is ſet before the temple, of the beſt and firſt ripe, to ſet forth the believing Jews, Jer. 24. 1, 2,&c.

Vers. 1, 2, 3, 4. &c

Maimony in Biccurim, c. 2.

Hugo Card.

Verſ.12,13, 14,15.

For theſe words, verſ. 5. a Syrian ready to periſh was my father, the Vulg. Latin hath it, a Syrian perſecuted my father, the Cald. Laban the Syrian ſought to deſtroy my father; the Septuagint my father left Syria. Hebr. An Aramite periſhing my father, or was about to deſtroy my father, or it may be rendred the other way, as in our tranſlation. If ſo, Jacob is called an Aramite or Syrian, for they are both one, becauſe he dwelt in Aram twenty years with Laban, ſo the Iſraelites are ſaid to have come of an Amorite their father, and an Hittite their mother, Ezech.16.3. and Jether an Iſhmaelite, 1 Chron. 2. 17. is ſaid to be an Iſraelite, 2 Sam.17. 25. But I prefer the other reading, becauſe the ſcope of this confeſſion was to ſhew the great dangers, which they had through Gods ſingular mercy eſcaped, both in Syria and Egypt, that they might be more affected, and the more willingly come thus once a year, and bring their coſt to the Lord.

Verſ. 11.

Whereas verſ. 11. it is ſaid, thou ſhalt rejoyce in every good thing, which the Lord giveth thee, and thy houſe, the Levite, the fatherleſſe, &c.] it is not to be underſtood, that they ſhould make merry with their firſt fruits, which they brought, for thoſe were left with the Prieſts, and were theirs, Numb. 18. but with other free gifts which they ſhould bring at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, as is expreſſed, Deut.16.10,11. Maimony ſaith, that none returned the ſame day, but ſtayed at Jeruſalem all night and feaſted, and then returned in the morning following, applying for this purpoſe, that which is ſaid touching their return after the Paſſeover, Deut.16.7. and thou ſhalt return in the morning, &c.

Now

Now concerning their tythes it lolloweth thus, verſ. 12, 13, 14. When thou haſt made an end of tything all the tythes of thine encreaſe, the third year, which is the year of tything and haſt given it to the Levite, the ſtranger, &c.] Of the tythe of the third year, ſee before, Chap. 14. 28. and of yearly, tythe verſ. 22. Verſ. 12, 13, 14, 15.

This confeſſion, or profeſſion, the Hebrews ſay, the was made laſt good day of the Paſſeover every fourth year, for by that time, they had time to bring forth the tythes of their fruites gathered and layd up at the end of the year before, viz. in September. This profeſſion I have brought forth the hallowed things out of mine houſe] is not to be underſtood onely of the third years tythe, but of the firſt alſo, which was due to the Levites every year, and of the firſt fruits, which were the Prieſts, and of all other holy things. And accordingly, ſaith Maimony, the evening before the day of making this profeſſion every one, if any of the heave-offering remained ſtill with him, he gave it to the Prieſts, if any of the firſt tythes, to the Levites, if any of the ſecond, to the poor. If there remained any of the ſecond tythe of confeſſion, any fruits of the fourth year, or their redemption money, they caſt them into the ſea, or burnt them. Laſtly, if any of the firſt fruits, which he was to feaſt withal, remained, he put them away in like manner, and then and not otherwiſe might come and make this profeſſion. Moreover in theſe words, I have brought the hallowed things out of my houſe, he underſtandeth the cake which was to be given to the Prieſts, Numb. 15. 20. in theſe I have given them the Levite, he underſtandeth both the firſt tythe for the Levites, and the heave-offering for the Prieſts, and laſtly, to the ſtranger, the fatherleſſe, &c. the ſecond tythes of the third year, the gleanings, and the corner of the field, and forgotten ſheaf belonging to the poor. In ſaying, I have done according to all thy commandments: he ſaith, not onely the thing commanded is meant, but the order of doing, as in paying the firſt tythe before the ſecond, and the paying of hallowed things truly, not an old for a new, or a bad for a good. By all his commandments; underſtand the charges given about theſe things for otherwiſe there is no man, that can ſay, he hath done according to all Gods Commandments, Pſal. 19. 12. Eccleſ. 7. 20. This was to be ſpoken ſaith Hugo, not by way of boaſting, but to ſhew, that he was not ungrateful unto God for his benefits. And for theſe titles of the third year he ſaith, that the Jews paid every third year three ſorts of tythes, one to the Levites, another to the poor, and the third they feaſted withal before the Lord, at ſuch times as they went up to the ſolemn Aſſemblies three times in the year. But theſe two laſt were rather one and the ſame ſort haply divided into two, for theſe two uſes. Verſ. 13. Maimony in Maaſer ſheni, cap. 11. Hugo Cardin.

I have not eaten thereof in my mourning] By mourning here underſtand mourning for the dead, and to eat in his mourning is to ſpend of the tythes, which ſhould be brought up to Jeruſalem to make merry withal before the Lord, at the funerals of parents or other friends. For the manner hath alwaies been at the times of funerals to make feaſts, but to do this in any part out of their tythes was impious, and yet through covetouſneſſe ſome would do ſo. Moreover the bread eaten in mourning is unclean, Hoſ. 9. 4. they that mourn for the dead are ſaid to defile themſelves for the dead, Levit. 21. and therefore the tythes, that were holy things muſt by no means be thus polluted. Other expoſitions Hugo alſo hath, as I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, that is, as grieved at the charge 3 Eſdræ ult. or, alone, not communicating part to others, Job 31. or with ſinners, or laſtly by rapine and violence, having gotten it, but I reſt in the firſt. Verſ. 14. Ezech. 24. 17. Jer. 16. 7.

I have not taken ought thereof for any unclean uſe, or in uncleanneſſe] The Sept. for the unclean, that is, to give it to any unclean perſon to eat thereof. The Hebrews underſtand it of eating thereof in any other uncleanneſſe neſſe beſides that by the dead, and the uncircumciſed are as the unclean.

Nor have give ought thereof for the dead,] That is, as Maimony hath it, to buy coffins or ſhrowds for the dead, or to other mourners. Hebr. nor have given ought thereof to the dead, by Ainſworth expounded, to idols, becauſe ſacrifices done to idols are ſacrifices of the dead, Pſal. 106. 28. But I ſee no reaſon here to go from the proper ſignification of the word dead. The meaning ſeemeth rather to be, as Calvin hath it, becauſe the burying of the dead was a work of piety, in which regard there might be ſome colour to diſpend ſome of their holy things about this, every man muſt therefore profeſſe, that he had not done thus with any of his hallowed goods; and who ſo did thus might be ſaid to give it to the dead, becauſe it was ſpent about them.

Ainſworth.

Calvin.

But whereas theſe words before going, I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, are expounded by him in my greateſt ſtreights, or neceſſity, whereby men are tempted to ſteal, for in want a man is in his mourning, I cannot aſſent, becauſe, becauſe this is not called a mourning by the law, but for friends departed, and yet he ſaith, this is commonly followed. And theſe words, I have not taken ought thereof in uncleanneſſe, or for any unclean uſe, he expoundeth adverbially, I have not taken it impurely: for the miſ-ſpending of any of the holy things any way, is to the defiling of him that doth it. But becauſe the law forbiddeth to eat of hallowed things in uncleanneſſe, I rather take this to be meant accordingly. Others, he ſaith, render the words thus, I have not loſt or marred any thing by uncleanneſſe, but this ſeemeth too ſtrict, forſomuch as many uncleanneſſes were accidental, and happened ſometimes to holy things againſt the owners will. Laſtly, every man, when he had made profeſſion of his innocency, concluded with a prayer for a bleſſing upon Iſrael, and their land, thus referring themſelves to Gods judgment to be approved before him, with whom there is no diſſembling, and who will not bleſſe ſuch as diſſemble innocency, but ſuch as do according to all his ordinances indeed. There was no vain glory then in this profeſſion, but forſomuch as it was to be made before God, who knoweth all ſecrets, it ſerved to ſtirre up every one to be the more careful to flée all ſacriledge, whereby not man, but God is wronged and robbed, Mal. 3. 8.

Jam. 1. 25.

Verſ. 16.

This day the Lord thy God hath commanded thee to do theſe ſtatutes and judgements, &c.] From hence to the end of the Chapter is the concluſion of all this tract begun Chap. 4. For as it was begun with exhortations and arguments to perſwade to the obedience of Gods holy lawes, ſo after the recital of all theſe laws both moral, ceremonial, and judicial, it is concluded. And to expreſſe all theſe, three words are uſed, ſtatutes for ordinances about ceremonies in the worſhip of God; commandements, for the moral laws; and judgments, for judicial lawes.

Verſ. 18.

The Arguments uſed are firſt from their avouching God to be their God, and to walk in his wayes, and this was when they made this covenant, Exod. 19. and ch. 24. and Deut. 5. 27. Secondly, from Gods avouching them to be his people peculiarly, which he did by making them famous through the great miracles wrought for them, whereby they came to have a name and to be praiſed in other countries round about them, and in all this the only end was, that they ſhould be holy and obedient to his laws, as Rom. 6. 22.

Verſ. 19.

Chap. XXVII.

And hitherto of the Exhortations made by Moſes himſelf alone. Now follow thoſe, which he together with the Elders made unto them, Chap. 27. & 28. 29. 30.

And Moſes with the elders of Iſrael commanded the people, ſaying, Keep all theſe Commandements which I command you this day, &c.] And in theſe four Chapters there are four diſtinct things: firſt, Chap. 27. the Commandements and lawes of the Lord are appointed to be written upon ſtones, and curſes to be pronounced againſt tranſgreſſours. Secondly, Chap. 28. that it may appear, that the curſings and bleſſings pronounced by Gods appointment are not vain, it is ſhewed how greatly they ſhall be bleſſed, that keep Gods Commandements, and how greatly the tranſgreſſours ſhall be accurſed. Thirdly, Chap. 29. certain favours of God paſt towards them are commemorated, and they are warned not to ſleight Gods threatnings againſt ſin. Fourthly, Chap. 30. upon their repentance and returning to God again they are comforted. Verſ. 1.

Touching the firſt, when they ſhould be come over Jordan, they muſt ſet up great ſtones and plaiſter them with plaiſter, and write upon them all the words of the law, &c. Whereas it is ſaid, on the day that thou paſſeſt over Jordan, thou ſhalt ſet up, &c. this is not to be underſtood of that very day, but more largely of that time: for theſe ſtones were not ſet up, nor this altar built, nor the words of the law written upon the ſtones, till Joſh. 8. 30. whereas they paſſed over Jordan, Joſh. 4. except the ſtones be thoſe 12 named, Joſ. 4. where the two mounts ſtood, mount Ebal and Gerizim, ſee before, Chap. 11. 30. and how they proceeded in bleſſing and curſing. Thus Exod. 24. 4. twelve pillers were ſet up according to the number of the 12 Tribes, but here ſtones or pillers are likewiſe appointed to be ſet up and plaiſtered with plaiſter, but the number is not expreſſed, yet from thence, and Joſh. 4. where 12 ſtones are ſet up for a remembrance of their paſſing over Jordan, it may be gathered, that theſe were twelve alſo, and they muſt needs be ſo many, becauſe upon them being plaiſtered for the purpoſe, and ſo made white and ſmooth, all the words of the law muſt be written, which could not be, but in a very large room. Hugo Cardin. ſaith, that ſome hold the 12 ſtones ſet up Joſh. 4. to have been the ſtones meant here, which is not improbable, if we conſider that Joſh. 8. no mention is made of other ſtones ſet up. Some by all theſe words, underſtand only the ten Commandements, or the words of this Chapter; ſome, all the laws hitherto recited in Deuteronomy; and ſome, all the five Books of Moſes, which is moſt improbable, becauſe they could not contain ſo much, thus Ainſworth. But I rather aſſent to Hugo, who is for all the Laws ſet forth in Deuteronomy; for if the ſum of all only, viz. the ten Commandements had been written, they would not have ſupplyed ſo much room. That of Calvin ſaying, that God would have his lawes written, where every one might ſee them at the very entrance of Canaan, to intimate, that all, who came in thither might be the more excited, by ſeeing them, to obedience, implyeth, that the ſtones upon which they were written, were thoſe twelve, Joſh. 4. The writing of them upon the poſts of their houſes, ſerved to put them in mind, ſaith he, that their houſes were ſanctuaries, and this writing of them at the entrance of the land, that the whole land was holy, that they might not defile it by ſinning. 1 Particular. Verſ. 2, 3. Ainſworth. Hugo cardin. Calvin.

And theſe words muſt be written very plainly, ſo Habac. 2. 2. that every one paſſing by might eaſily read them. Here alſo muſt be an altar built of unhewen ſtones, verſ. 5, 6, 7. the Altar repreſented God, as the 12 ſtones, the 12 Tribes making a covenant with him, ſo Exod. 24. 4 there was an altar and 12 pillars; why the altar muſt be made of unhewen ſtones, ſee Verſ. 8.

before Exod.20.25. and the perfection of Chriſt is ſet forth hereby, who though before men he was rugged and unſeemly, as a rough ſtone, yet before God he was moſt pretious; for he is both called a ſtone cut out without hands, Dan.2.34. and ſaid to be without form or beauty, Eſay 53.

The Myſtery. 1 Pet. 2. 5. Rabanus.

By writing the law in ſtones, the writing of the Law in the hearts of the faithful by the Spirit was ſet forth, ſaith Rabanus: for the faithful are living ſtones, and the law written in them is Deuteronomy, the ſecond law given by Chriſt, which is the precepts of the Goſpel,&c.

Verſ. 12. Theſe ſhall ſtand upon Mount Gerizim to bleſſe, Simeon and Levi, Judah, Iſſachar, Joſeph and Benjamin.] Theſe were all ſons of the free women, Jacobs wives, but the other ſix ſet to curſe were 4 of them ſons of the bondwomen, and Reuben, that was infamous for going up to his fathers bed with them, and Zabulun the laſt of Leahs ſons, to ſhew, ſaith Hugo, both in what account they are, that are lawfully begotten in marriage, and how baſely others are eſteemed of, and alſo what a baſe thing it is to curſe, but to bleſſe honourable, ſeeing the moſt honourable of the Tribes were appointed to bleſſe, but the baſeſt to curſe.

Hugo Card.

Rom. 12. 14.

Ainſworth noteth, that Ebal, where they ſtood that ſaid Amen to the curſing, was northward, but Gerizim ſouthward, which was counted the right ſide; and ſo our Lord may ſeem to have alluded to this, when he ſhewed, that to thoſe on the right hand it ſhould be ſaid at the laſt day, come ye bleſſed, &c. Again, becauſe in ſpeaking of the bleſſing he ſaith, theſe ſhall ſtand to bleſſe the people, but of the curſe, theſe ſhall ſtand to curſe, this word, the people being left out, he noteth, that God doth, as it were, unwillingly curſe any. Laſtly, becauſe howſoever bleſſing as well as curſing is mentioned, yet when a form cometh to be preſcribed, none is ſet down for bleſſing, but only for curſing; the myſtery of this was to ſhew, that the law leaveth all men under the curſe, and bleſſeth none; this being the part of another, that was to come, even Chriſt Jeſus, Joh. 1.17. Act.3. 26. Gal.3.10. Calvin ſaith, that hereby was intimated their unworthineſſe of bleſſings, for which they were paſſed over in ſilence.

Ainſworth.

Matth. 25.

Verſ. 14. And the Levites ſhall ſpeak and ſay with a loud voyce to all the men of Iſrael, &c.] The manner, ſaith the Talmud Babyl. was this, the ark, the prieſts about the ark, and the Levites about them ſtood in the midſt, and the Tribes on either ſide upon the Mountains, and the ſtrangers, then the Levites read the bleſſings turning their faces to mount Gerizim, and ſaying, Bleſſed be he that maketh no graven image, &c. and all the people as well on the one ſide, as on the other ſaid Amen; then turning them to mount Ebal, the like was done for curſing, and then they went and brought ſtones and made an Altar. But Joſh.8.30. the altar was made firſt, and then the bleſſings and curſings pronounced. Touching the firſt table of the law, idolatry only is mentioned, and curſed, but hereby all the ſins againſt any of the laws of that table are to be underſtood alſo.

Verſ. 14. Talmud Babyl. in Sotah, c.7.

Calvin.

Verſ. 15. and putteth it in a ſecret place] Hereby not only open idolaters but ſecret and in heart are taxed, ſee Ezech. 8.12. Pſal. 44.20. To ſay Amen to the curſing was as curſing, and likewiſe to the bleſſing, ſo that the wicked curſed themſelves, when they thus anſwered; and this curſing being according to Gods ordinance, was no verbal, but real. Rabanus by the maker of the graven image, underſtandeth not only Idolaters, but Hereticks, which are as the craftsmen, and charmers. The Levites being appointed to ſpeak with a loud voyce, intimateth both that the Miniſters of Gods Word ought both to bleſſe and to curſe, and not to be remiſſe, but earneſt in propounding the curſes of the wicked.

Maimony of bleſſings, c. 1.

Rabanus.

The Myſtery. Myſtically alſo he ſaith, that the ſix Tribes ſet to bleſſe on mount Gerizim, figure out ſuch, as for the love of virtue ſeek ſalvation, and thoſe on mount Ebal ſet to curſe, ſuch as are carried only with the fear of puniſhment. Againſt making images, ſee before, Exod.20.23.

Curſed

Curſed be he, that ſetteth light by his father and mother.] The Sept. and vulg. Latine, that honoureth not father and mother; and the word מקלה here uſed is oppoſed to honouring; this concerneth the fifth Commandement, being the firſt of the ſecond Table, ſee alſo Levit. 20. 9. againſt curſing father and mother. Verſ. 16.

Curſed be he that removeth his neighbours land mark.] See for this, Deut. 19 14. Prov.22. Verſ. 17.

Curſed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way,] See Levit. 19. 14. for they that ſee ought to be eyes to the blind, Job 29.15. Verſ. 18.

Curſed be he that perverteth the judgment, &c.] Againſt this, ſee Deut.24. 17. & Levit.19.15. Verſ. 19.

Curſed be he that lyeth with his fathers wife.] This and other fleſhly uncleanneſſes are forbidden, Levit.18. & Levit.4.20. this ſin, and that of lying with a beaſt were death, Lev.20. and ſo was lying with a ſiſter, Lev. 20.17. and of lying with the mother-in law, ſee Levit. 20. 14. for by a mother in law here, the wives mother is meant. Verſ.20, 21,22, 23.

Myſtically, ſaith Hugo, he lyeth with a beaſt, that is carried away with fleſhly pleaſures; and he lyeth with his ſiſter, which is the wiſdome of the fleſh, that is delighted in the exquiſite variety of meats and drinks, and the father of this ſiſter is the world; and the mother, concupiſcence. The Myſtery. Hugo Cardin.

Curſed is he that ſmiteth his neighbour ſecretly,] It is ſtrange, ſaith Rabanus, that only he who ſmiteth ſecretly ſhould be accurſed, and not every one that ſmiteth and killeth his neighbour: but by ſmiting ſecretly we may underſtand hating in the heart, Lev.19.17. this is murther, 1 Joh.3.12. and therefore under this the actual murtherer is much more accurſed. Smiting is noted by Ainſworth to be taken diverſly, ſometime for killing, as Deut.1.4. ch.13.15. ſometime for wounding, Zach.13.6. or chaſtiſing, Deut.28.27. or for ſmiting with the fiſt, Eſay 58.4. or with the tongue, Jer. 18. 18. But by ſmiting here Calvin beſt underſtandeth killing in ſecret, which is not ſo readily vindicated by the Magiſtrate, becauſe it is kept from his knowledg. And it is to be noted, to ſatisfie ſuch, as enquire, why no more ſorts of wickedneſſes are accurſed, as ſinful ſwearing, blaſphemy, &c. that onely ſuch ſins are mentioned here, as are done in ſecret, and ſo eſcape often times the cenſure of the Judges, for ſuch is lying with a beaſt, with a fathers wife, &c. but who ſo tranſgreſſeth in any thing is alſo accurſed, verſ. 26. Verſ. 24. Rabanus. Ainſworth. Calvin.

Curſed be he, that taketh a reward to ſlay the innocent.] Againſt taking bribes in Judges, ſee Deut. 16. 19. It is complained of in theſe termes, Ezech.22.12. Hebr. it is, to ſmite the ſoul of innocent blood. Such Princes are complained of, Eſay 1.15. as having their hands full of blood, and this is not only by condemning to death unjuſtly, but to the wronging of the poor in that, whereby the life is ſuſtained. He alſo, that for hire killeth another, is hereby accurſed. Verſ. 25.

Curſed be he that confirmeth not all the Words of this Law to do them.] Every tranſgreſſour in any thing againſt the laws of God is hereby accurſed, and not only he, that tranſgreſſeth in the premiſes. And hereby all men, yea even the Law-giver himſelf, as Rabanus noteth, become guilty, ſeeing there is no man that liveth and ſinneth not. Wherefore the law leaving all men under the curſe, forceth all to flee to Chriſt for a bleſſing, who to deliver us from the curſe, was made a curſe for us, Gal. 3.13. ſo that the Law is rightly ſaid to be a School-maſter to bring us unto Chriſt. To confirm the words of the law, is to continue in obedience to it alwayes, as it is expounded Gal.3.10. and as the next words here, to do them, added for explanation, do declare. Wherefore it is ſaid, that a righteous man turning from his righteouſneſſe ſhall dye. Verſ. 26. Rabanus. Eccl. 7. 20. Gal. 3. 20. Ezech. 18.24.

The accurſed, as Chytreus noteth, is ſet forth by divers words amongſt the Chytraus.

Accurſed, what

1 Cor.16.

1 Cor. 4.

Luc. 16.

the Greeks, which are very ſignificant. 1. ἐναικαλάρατος, as here and Gal. 3. execrated, and ſubject to horrible puniſhments and death from Gods hand. 2. ἀνάθεμα from ἀνα τιθημι to ſet up, becauſe the excommunicated and accurſed, are ſet up upon the doors of Churches publickly. 3. κάθαρμα, of κατα αἴρω to take away, as excrements or other filthy things, to ſhew the baſeneſſe of the accurſed. 4. περιψημα of περι ψάω to ſcoure and pare away. 5. βδέλυγμα abomination. 6. μαίρος contaminated, and contaminating others. 7. ἀλώστωρ not to be touched for filthineſſe. 8 ἀλίπριος one for whom prayers are to be made. 9. κηλις a blot of mankind. 10. ἀντιπροσωπαῖος, one whoſe deſtruction turneth away judgements from the publick ſtate.

Chap. XXVIII.

2. Particular

THe ſecond particular here followeth, viz. It is ſhewed, that the bleſſings and curſes pronounced and ſaid Amen to by the people ſhall not be in vain; for who ſo keepeth theſe Lawes ſhall be bleſſed abundantly, but the tranſgreſſours accurſed in every thing. And firſt it is ſhewed how many wayes they ſhall be bleſſed in obeying, v. 1. 2, 3. &c. to v. 15. and then how many wayes accurſed in tranſgreſſing, v. 15. 16, 17. &c. to the end of the chapter, wherein he proceedeth much like, as Levit. 26. where alſo the bleſſings are thus ſet forth more briefly, and then the curſes more largely.

Verſ. 1.2.

Touching the bleſſings. The Lord thy God will ſet thee on high above all the Nations of the earth: And all theſe bleſſings ſhall come on thee, and overtake thee. In ſpeaking of the bleſſings he ſetteth them forth. 1. Generally, and then particularly. Generally he ſaith, they ſhould be the moſt mighty of all Nations, and moſt abounding in all worldly bleſſings, and ſo be ſet on high above them. Ainſworth by their being ſet on high underſtandeth heavenly bleſſings, and dignity, as the heavenly calling of the faithfull is ſaid to be an high calling, and herein indeed their greateſt dignitie ſtood, ſee Deut. 4.7,8. and cap. 26.19. but becauſe herein they were already exalted above all others, and the highneſſe here ſpoken of was that which ſhould be, if they obeyed, it is rather to bee held to be the highneſſe, that ſtandeth in being bleſſed as here followeth, viz. in outward things the eſtabliſhing in that high calling not being excluded; becauſe v. 9. It is one of the bleſſings promiſed: whereas he ſaith, All theſe bleſſings ſhall overtake thee, he meaneth as Hugo noteth, although they ſhould not ſeek for them, yet as the ſhadow followeth the body ſo they ſhould follow them; as to them that firſt ſeek the kingdome of God and the righteouſneſſe thereof, it is ſaid, all other things ſhall be caſt upon them. So that there is nothing elſe, which the faithfull neede to care for but to obey his Lawes: for then he will care for them to ſend them all manner of bleſſings. Touching the particulars, the firſt is upon a mans perſon, Bleſſed ſhalt thou be in the citie and in the field; that is, in all places where thou comeſt, theſe two being put for all.

Ainſworth.

Phil. 3. 14: Heb. 3.1:

Hugo Card.

Matth. 6.33.

Note.

1 Pet. 5.7.

The bleſſings.

Verſ. 3.

Verſ.4.5.

The ſecond upon his children and poſſeſſions, v. 4. 5. Bleſſed ſhalt thou be in the fruit of thy body, and of thy ground and cattel, &c. Bleſſed in thy basket, and in thy ſtore. The Septuagint hath In thy barns and remainders. The basket was that whereinto they put their fruits, when they had gathered them, Deut. 26. for ſtore, Hebr. is dough-trough; ſo that by theſe two all veſſels and places where they put their fruits were meant.

Verſ.6.

The third upon his affaires and adminiſtrations, v. 6. Bleſſed ſhalt thou be when thou comeſt in, and when thou goeſt out, thus the phraſe is uſed, 2 Chr. 1.10. Act. 1.29. Gen. 39.11. Pſalm. 104.23. 2 Sam. 3.25. Acts 9.28.

Verſ. 7.

The fourth bleſſing is victory over their enemies, v. 7. The Lord ſhall cauſe thine enemies that riſe up againſt thee to be ſmitten before thy face, they ſhall come come out againſt thee one way, and flie before thee ſeven wayes; here ſeven waies is put for many wayes, the meaning is, that they ſhould make a full conqueſt over them of their prevailings againſt their enemies, ſee alſo Leviticus 26.7,8.

The Lord ſhall command a bleſſing upon thy ſtore houſe, &c. This is the fifth bleſſing upon their corn and fruits, when they had gathered and laid them up, they ſhould be preſerved from corruption and fire, and all evill caſualties, and the fulneſſe hereof is implied, ſee Prov. 3.10. and Levit. 26.10. And in all that thou ſetteſt thine hand unto, &c. this is added for explanation of that v.6. VVhen thou comeſt in and goeſt out. Verſ. 8.

The ſixth bleſſing is in ſpirituall things, v. 9. He ſhall eſtabliſh thee an holy people unto himſelfe. Thus it is ſaid, John 1.16. VVe have received grace for grace; and thus we make our election ſure, 2 Pet. 1.10. And thus ſaith Calvin, he meaneth, that their adoption and ſanctification ſhould be eſtabliſhed, and this is interlaced amongſt many outward bleſſings, to ſhew that when they were full and wanted nothing, they ſhould not think that their happineſſe conſiſted in this, but from hence look higher to grace and the glory to come, of which the outward bleſſings were figures. The 7 bleſſing is in making them known to be thus bleſſed of God amongſt other Nations to the ſtriking of a reverence into them towards them. Verſ. 9. Calvin.

And all the people of the earth ſhall ſee, that thou art called by the name of the Lord, and ſhall be afraid of thee. That is, they ſhall ſee that ye are Gods children and his peculiar whom he ſtandeth for, and therefore he repeateth again, as this ſpirituall bleſſing; ſo the temporalls of being plenteous in the fruit of the body, cattell and ground, and of being bleſſed in all the works of their hands, v.12. meaning, that the fame of theſe bleſſings upon them ſhould be ſpread into other Countreyes about for their greater glory. Verſ. 10. Verſ. 11.

The 8. bleſſing is, the opening of the treaſures of rain upon their land to make it ſo fruitfull. v, 12. And the Lord ſhall open his good treaſure the heaven, to give rain upon thy land in due ſeaſon, ſo Levit. 26.4. Deut. 11.14. Not onely the rain, but the ſnow and the hail and wind, are ſaid to be his treaſures, Job 38.22. Pſ. 135.7. Verſ. 12.

The 9. and laſt bleſſing is overabundance, ſo that they ſhould not onely have for the ſupplying of their own neceſſities, but alſo to lend the people of other Countries, And thou ſhalt lend to other Nations, and ſhalt not borrow. Verſ. 12.

And the Lord ſhall make thee head, and not the taile, &c. Of which ſee before Deut. 15.6. where lending and having ſoveraigntie are ſpoken of together, and ſo they are put together in this place by the Septuagint: Thou ſhalt lend unto many Nations, and ſhalt not borrow, and thou ſhalt rule over many Nations, and they ſhall not rule over thee, Prov. 22.7. The borrower is ſervant to the lender; of this phraſe of head and taile, ſee Eſay 9.14.15. Verſ. 13.

If theſe bleſſings ſhall ſeem to have been promiſed in vain, becauſe the godly injoy them not, but oftentimes ſuffer much miſery in this world: Calvin anſwereth well, firſt that in the time, when theſe promiſes were made, when the heavenly glory to come was not ſo plainly diſcovered; God ſeldome failed thus to bleſſe his ſervants, thus both drawing them, and giving them ſome taſte, as it were of the happineſſe to come, to which they were to be holpen hereby to look up for the greater comfort, whereof theſe were types and figures. But now under the Goſpel, heavenly comforts being more frequent and manifeſt, the godly ſuffer moſt, and are oft-times moſt miſerable here, the ſpirituall comforts being ſufficient to ſupport them in the midſt of all worldly miſeries, and the conſideration of our Lord Chriſt in his ſufferings for us to whom we are thus conformed, that we may be conformed to him in glory. 2. None do ſo perfectly keep Gods Lawes, but they ſinne in many things, and therefore the bleſſings Object. Calvin. 1 Cor. 15. 19. Rom. 16. James 4. 2.

ſings promiſed to ſuch as keep all Gods Commandments diligently are due to none, ſo that it is of grace in Chriſt, who hath fulfilled the Law for us that we injoy any bleſſings temporall or ſpirituall, and therefore God doth not deal fundamentally with his in promiſing much and performing little, but is better than his word, in that when we come ſo much ſhort of our duty, yet he bleſſeth us with ſpirituall bleſſings; joy in the Holy Ghoſt, and heavenly comfort in believing, which are farre more then all worldly bleſſings. Again, to be deprived of worldly bleſſings is oft-times a means of more ſpirituall good, and godlineſſe with contentation is great gain, although we have but food and rayment, yea although we want theſe, Phil.4.11.

1 Tim.6 6.

The Curſes Verſ.16.17, 18,19.

Touching the curſes, they are contrary to the bleſſings hitherto named, as is apparant for the three former, v. 16, 17, 18, 19. but for the reſt, that order is not kept, for the next particular curſe in ſhutting up heaven from raining, v.23. if contrary to the 8. bleſſing, v.12. The threatning of curſing, vexation and rebuke in all that they ſhould ſet their hands unto going before this. v.20. is an amplification of the third curſe in their coming in and going out. For curſing, vexation and rebuke the Septuagint hath penury, famine and conſumption, but the word rendred vexation, implyeth not onely famine, but warres alſo, and other plagues upon the body, Zach. 14.13. 1 Sam.14.20. and 5.9.

Verſ. 20.

Verſ.21.22. Other curſes contrary to the bleſſings upon their perſons and poſſeſſions, and to that of victory over their enemies are laid down in brief, but more largely expreſſed in the words following.

Verſ. 21.22.

The Lord ſhall make the peſtilence to cleave unto thee, &c. and ſhall ſmite thee with a conſumption, a feaver, an inflammation, and with extream burning, and with the ſword, with blaſting and mildew, &c. Touching the peſtilence and ſword, ſee Levit. 26.25. and Amos 4. 10. and theſe two judgements are mentioned, Exod.5.3. of the fever and conſumption, Levit. 26. 16. the inflammation and hot burning are ſymptuoms of a fever. Blaſting is a drineſs as the word ſignifieth brought upon the corn by the Eaſt wind to the exinaniting there of the mildew is by too much moiſture making the corn to fade, before it is ripe, ſee Jer. 30. 6. Amos 4.9 Hag. 2. 17

Verſ. 23.

Verſ. 24.

Now for the fourth curſe, verſ. 23. oppoſed to the 8 bleſſing, verſ. 12. The heaven over thee ſhall be braſſe and the earth under the iron. And the Lord ſhall make the rain of thy land powder and duſt, &c. Of this, ſee Levit. 26 19. and duſt was that from which one of the plagues of Egypt came, Exod.9. 9. powder and duſt driven about by the wind are cauſed by long continued droughts to the great annoyance of men, ſee the like phraſe, Eſay 5. 24. and 29.5. Ezech. 26 10. Nahum 1.3. Luc. 9. 5.

Verſ.25 26.

The fifth curſe is oppoſed to the 4 bleſſing, v. 7. The Lord ſhall cauſe thee to be ſmitten before thine enemies, &c. and this is not all, but he addeth, thou ſhalt be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth; the Septuagint, thou ſhalt be diſperſed, this is ſpoken of, as in part fulfilled, Jer. 15.4. and 29. 18. and 34. 17. and 2 Chron.29.8. but after their bloudy crucifying of our Lord more fully: for ever ſince the overthrow of their Citie by Titus and Veſpaſian, they have been as a ſcattered and deſpiſed people in all Nations. And therefore Jam. 1.1. it is ſaid, to the 12 tribes in diſperſion: And thy carkaſſe ſhall be meat to the fowles of the aire, and to the beaſts of the field, &c. Their miſery ſhould hereby be aggravated, in that they ſhould have no buriall, ſee Jer.7.33. and 16.4. and 34.20. Pſ.79.1.2, 3.

From hence to verſ.43. thoſe curſes going before, verſ. 16. 17, 18. upon their perſons and poſſeſſions and children are further amplified, as alſo that v.19, upon that which they put their hands unto. And firſt in their perſons,

Verſ. 27. 28.

v.27,28. And the Lord wil ſmite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the Emrods and the ſcab, &c. of that botch ſee Exod.9.9,10. of the emrods, 1 Sam. 5.9 Pſ.78.66. for the ſcab the Cald. hath the dry ſcab which is incurable. Theſe it

ſeemeth

ſeemeth were the diſeaſes wherewith the Egyptians were ſmitten in judgement, Exod.15.26. ſo that he meaneth that they ſhould be accounted and dealt withal as a moſt profane Nation.

And the Lord ſhall ſmite thee with madneſſe, and blindneſſe and aſtoniſhment of heart.] This is a judgment yet far greater, then any of the former, when the mind is blinded, and inſenſated in reſpect of good and evil, and ſo a man as mad is carried headlong to his own deſtruction. It is the ſame, as Chytræus noteth, that is ſpoken of Rom. 1. to be given over to a reprobate ſenſe, and to do things contrary to all reaſon for their own overthrow here, as king Aſtyages, when he had made Harpagus to eat of his own ſon, whom he had ſlain, was through a juſt judgement of God ſo mad and blind, that he made Harpagus captain of all his forces againſt Cyrus to his own deſtruction. And Pompey began a civil war, which was to his overthrow, and Antonius brought the like upon himſelf by making war againſt Auguſtus Eſa. 42.19. Jer. 4.9, &c. for groping at noon day, as the blind do verſ. 29. it is again ſpoken of Job 5.14. and 12.25. Chytræus.

Secondly, in their undertakings, verſ. 29 and thou ſhalt not proſper in thy wayes, but be oppreſſed and ſpoiled evermore, &c. to verſ. 35. The particulars wherein they ſhould be oppreſſed and ſpoiled, are firſt, in a wife, houſe, and vineyard. Verſ.29.

Verſ. 30. thou ſhalt betreth a wife and another man ſhall lye with her, build an houſe and not dwell in it, &c.] Three things of ſuch conſequence, that when they went to war, either of them priviledged any man from going leſt theſe evils ſhould befall them, being counted the greateſt eclipſe of their happineſs that could be. Verſ.30. Deut.20.5.

2. In Oxen, Aſſes, and Sheep, verſ. 31. thine oxe ſhall be ſlain before thine eyes, and thou ſhalt not eat thereof, thine aſſe ſhall be violently taken away, &c.] The godly as well as the wicked do ſometimes ſuffer both thus and in botches and biles, &c. as Job, but as Calvin ſaith, though they bear the enſigns of the wicked thus for a time, yet there is a great difference, to them they are exerciſes of patience onely, but to theſe juſt rewards of wickedneſſe out of the curſe of God. Verſ.31. Calvin. Prodigioſis ulceribus cum Job percuſſus ſæpe tetet viſus eſt ad tempus reprobi ferre inſignia; verum quod in ſancto, viro patientiæ exercitium fuit legis transgreſſor: eſt iuſta ſcelerum merces ex dei maledictione.

3. In their children, verſ. 32. thy ſons and thy daughters ſhall be given to another people, &c.] So that although they had the fruit of the womb, yet they ſhould not be bleſſed, but curſed herein, for their eyes ſhould look and fail with longing for them all the day.

4. In all the fruit of their land, and not of their vineyards onely, verſ. 33. the fruit of thy land and all thy labours ſhall a nation, which thou knoweſt not, eat up, &c.] Of this ſee Eſa.1.7. Jer. 5. 17. and 8. 16. and this, he ſaith, ſhould make them mad to ſee it, verſ. 34. they having no ſenſe of Gods favour, and ſo being full of ſorrow and impatience, and this is contray to the fift bleſſing, verſ.8. being the ſixth curſe. And hitherto of the ſecond curſe amplified upon their undertakings. 3. He returneth to their perſons again, explaining more fully the botches, wherewith they ſhould be ſmitten, verſ 35.

Verſ. 35. The Lord ſhall ſmite thee in the knees and legs with a ſore botch, that cannot be healed, &c.] And adding ſomething more of their captivity into the land of their enemies. Verſ.35.

Verſ. 36. The Lord ſhall bring thee and thy king, &c. to a nation, which neither thou nor thy fathers haveknown, he calleth their king the king, which they ſhould ſet over them, to intimate prophetically, what they did, 1 Sam. 8. this was fulfilled when Nebuchadnezzar and Salmanaſar carryed their kings and them away captive to Babylon, and there thou ſhalt ſerve other gods wood and ſtone, the Cald. thou ſhalt ſerve them, that ſerve other gods; but it is meant, that being urged with miſery, they would yield to do any thing, even to commit horrible idolatries, and this is ſpoken, as a juſt and fit puniſhment for ſerving Idols in their own countrey, Jer. 2.27. and becauſe they Verſ.36. 2 Kings 17.6. & 25.1.

Calvin. they would not ſerve God in their own land, the Lord ſaith Calvin, gave them over to be ſlaves to ſtocks and ſtones, and this is contrary to the ſixth bleſſing of being an holy people, verſ. 9. and ſo may be accounted the ſeventh curſe.

Verſ. 37. Laſtly, touching their perſon, verſ. 37. thou ſhalt become an aſtoniſhment a proverb, and byword among all nations, &c.] Hereby their miſery ſhould be aggravated, in that they ſhould be mocked at and derided every where, ſee the ſame threatned again, Jer.24.9. 1 King. 9.7. Pſal. 44. 14, 15. this is contrary to fame in all nations, and ſo may well be reckoned for the 8. curſe oppoſed to the ſeventh bleſſing, verſ.10. 4 He amplifieth the curſe upon their poſſeſſions and children by other means, beſides the enemies making a prey of them, before ſpoken of, verſ 31.32, 33. viz. by locuſts, worms and blaſting.

Verſ.38,33. Verſ. 38. Thou ſhalt carry much ſeed into the field and gather but little in, for the Locuſt ſhall conſume it, verſ.39. Thou ſhalt plant vineyards and dreſs them, &c. the worms ſhall eat them, &c.] ſee this fulfilled Joel 1.4. Amos 4. 9. and Chap. 7. 1,2. Hag. 1. 6, 11. Hereby we may ſee, as Calvin noteth, that God hath other armies even of the ſmalleſt creatures to bring againſt the wicked to deſtroy them, beſides the armies of men.

Verſ.41. That of their ſons and daughters going into captivity, verſ. 41. is not the ſame with their being given into their enemies hand, verſ.32. for there the carrying of them away by force is meant, here their wandring into other places being driven through the want of food at home.

And hitherto of the amplification of the curſes upon them, their children and poſſeſſions, now followeth the ninth curſe.

Verſ.43.44. Verſ. 43. The ſtranger that is within thee, ſhall get up above thee very high and thou ſhalt come down very low, he ſhall lend to thee, &c.] And this oppoſed to the ninth bleſſing, verſ 13. and may be underſtood thereby. From hence to verſ. 58. that judgement, by the enemies ſubduing them, is further amplyfied, becauſe it ſhould be the moſt grievous of all others.

Verſ.48. Verſ. 48. Therefore thou ſhalt ſerve thine enemies, which the Lord ſhall ſend againſt thee in hunger and thirſt, &c. and he ſhall put a yoak of iron upon thy neck] By this phraſe is ſet forth a moſt hard ſervitude, as Jer.28.13,14. for to be a ſervant is to be under the yoak.

1 Tim.6.1.

Verſ.49. The Lord ſhall bring a nation againſt thee from far, as the eagle fleeth, &c.] This was fulfilled in Nebuchadnezzar, who came from Babylon againſt them, which was a far of, by reaſon of which they feared him not, and therefore Dan. 7. 4. the Babylonian kingdom is ſet forth under the figure of a Lion with Eagles wings, ſo Ezech.17.3,12. And it is added, a nation whoſe tongue thou ſhalt not underſtand; to aggravate their miſery, becauſe when the enemy underſtandeth the ſpeech of thoſe, whom he hath ſubdued, and they underſtand his ſpeech, he may by their prayers be moved to ſome pitty, but in this caſe not.

Verſ.50. A Nation of fierce countenance, &c.] Such that cruel tyrant Antiochus is ſaid to be Dan.8.23.

Verſ.51. He ſhall eat the fruit of thy cattel, and the fruit of thy land, &c.] This was fulfilled, Iſa.1.7.

Verſ.52. And he ſhall beſiege thee in all thy gates, &c.] That is, in all thy ſtrong cities, &c. the like threatening, and of being brought to eat their own children, ſee before Levit.26.29. Jer.19.9. and it was fulfilled, Lament.4.10. 2 King. 6.29. ſee alſo Baruc.2.3. and again this curſe took effect at the deſtruction and ſiege of Jeruſalem by the Romans. Of which Joſephus writeth thus. In the time of this ſiege, if there were any food found in any place, wars were preſently made therefore between parents and children, and deareſt friends, whileſt they ſtrove to pluck it out not onely of the hands, but even of the jawes of one another, and the very dead were ſearched, to

Verſ.53.

Joſeph. lib. 5, 6,7. de Bell. Jud.

ſee

ſee if happily they had any food about them. And men ran up and down as if they were mad, to ſeek food, and they ate that, which the very dumb creatures uſe not to eat, as thongs and skins and leather of ſhoes. There was one Mary the daughter of Eleazar a noble woman who came to Jeruſalem with her goods, but being by theſe Harpyes ſpoyled of all, and preſſed with hunger killed her own ſucking child, and made ready and ate the fleſh thereof, which they ſmelling, ruſhed in upon her, but were ſo amazed at the ſight hereof, that they went away aſhamed, leaving her that food onely to ſuſtain her life withal. Verſ. 57. for theſe words, her young one, that cometh out between her feet, Hebr. is after birth, or ſecundines, as Calvin hath it, with her little one in it, which is yet more horrible to feed upon, yet it is ſaid ſhe ſhould eat it in ſecret; the Cald. rendreth it, the leaſt of her children: verſ. 59,60,61,62,63. the curſe in grievous ſickneſſes and diſeaſes is further amplified, hereby he threateneth, that they ſhould be deſtroyed and brought to a few in number. Whereas verſ. 63. it is ſaid, as the Lord rejoyced over them to do them good, ſo he will rejoyce over them to bring them to nought, this is not contrary to that in other places, where the Lord is ſaid to be unwilling with the death of him that dyeth; for his rejoycing, ſaith Calvin, is ſo in juſtice executed, that he had rather in mercy pardon the wicked, if their malice would ſuffer it. Of rejoycing at deſtruction, ſee alſo Prov.1.Rev.18.20.Pſal.58.11.Jer. 51.48. Prov.11.10.

Verſ. 59, 60, &c.

Ezech. 18. Calvin.

Laſtly, that of being carried away by their enemies, and ſubjected unto them is further amplified, verſ. 64,65,&c. to the end of the Chapter.

And the Lord ſhall ſcatter thee among all people from one end of the earth to the other, &c. ſee before, verſ. 25. Hebr. it is, from the end of the earth, and to the end of the earth; this is again repeated, becauſe he had more to ſay of their miſery in this their unparallel'd diſperſion.

Verſ. 64

and among thoſe nations thou ſhalt find no eaſe, but the Lord ſhall give thee a trembling heart, &c.] Levit. 26.36. and verſ.16.

Verſ. 65

For the laſt words, verſ. 68. The Lord ſhall bring thee again to Egypt by ſtripes, &c. they were brought from thence through the Red Sea upon dry land, in the greateſt mercy that could be; but he ſaith, they ſhould return in ſhips, and yet addeth, by the way, &c. becauſe although part of the paſſage was by water, yet the greateſt part was by the wilderneſſe. But God had ſaid, that they ſhould go that way no more, is he then contrary to himſelf? Anſw. he had ſaid ſo in mercy, if they obeyed, but ſin breaketh all covenants. Of their return into Egypt, ſee alſo Hoſ.9.3. And there he ſaith, they ſhould be ſold to their enemies for bond-men and bond-women, and there ſhould be none to buy them, they ſhould for the ſmall price ſet upon them be counted ſo vile. Hugo ſaith, that by Egypt may be underſtood Alexandria, to which they go by ſhips, whither Titus and Veſpaſian ſold the Jews, 30 for a penny, as Judas had ſold Chriſt for 30. pence. Theſe be the curſes for ſin, yet not for all, but for horrible and obſtinate ſinning, intimated in that he ſaith, if thou wilt not hearken, verſ.15. becauſe otherwiſe they could never have been free from them, ſo doth ſin cleave to every man. It is to be noted both here, and Levit.26. that he is much larger in pronouncing curſes, then bleſſings, which was moſt probably, becauſe he ſaw, into what rebellion and wickedneſſe they would break, for which ſuch ſtrong bulwarks of curſes had need to be oppoſed againſt them. And herein an example is given to us to inculcate judgments again and again againſt theſe wicked times, and to preach mercy more ſparingly, leſt if we do contrarywiſe, men be brought to preſume upon mercy, and ſo to ſin the more licentiouſly.

Verſ. 68.

Calvin.

Hugo Cardinalis.

Myſtically, ſaith Rabanus, the famine threatned, is the famine of the Word, Amos 8. the ague is the coldneſſe of infidelity; the burning heat, the fire of evil concupiſcence; a corrupt ayr is given, when an impure life

The myſtery. Rabanus.

is

is led; the heaven is braſſe, when the Doctours of the Church ſpeak no comfort, but hard things; and the earth iron, when their hearts are hardened in ſin. The duſt and powder or aſhes are ſterility in good works, and the fire of eternal deſtruction following after. The enemies purſuing, are infernal ſpirits; the fowles and beaſts eating their carkaſſes, the ſame ſpirits tormenting them in hell diverſly. The botch of Egypt is the malice of this world; the emrods pride, and the itch, fury, &c. all which it were too long to repeat, eſpecially being ſo forced, as many of the particulars here are.

CHAP. XXIX.

3 Particular. And hitherto of the ſecond particular; Now followeth the third, viz. a warning not to ſleight theſe threatenings. And here firſt they are moved to obey, from the conſideration of Gods favours towards them commemorated, from verſ.1,2,3. unto verſ.10. Secondly, they are warned againſt the ſleighting of theſe threatenings, verſ.10,11,&c. to verſ. 20. Thirdly, they are threatned anew, if they ſleighted them, verſ.20,21, &c. to the end of the Chapter.

Part 1. For the commemoration of benefits paſt, It is begun with ſhewing, that this was another covenant made with them; the brief whereof is ſet down in this Chapter, and Chap.30.

Verſ. 1. Theſe are the words of the covenant, which the Lord commanded Moſes to make with the children of Iſrael, in the Land of Moab, beſide the Covenant which he made with them in Horeb.] By the words of this Covenant he meaneth, as Hugo hath it, all the words of this book hitherto, and in theſe two Chapters, for they were ſpoken in the land of Moab, c.1.1,5. And the ſame, which is called a covenant here, Chap.31. is called a law, theſe are the words of this law, and it is written in a book and given to the Levites to be kept in the ſide of the ark, chap.31.26. Whereas it is ſaid, Theſe are the words of the covenant, &c. beſide the covenant, &c. It is not meant, that it was another teſtament beſides that made Exod.19.&c. for then there ſhould have been divers teſtaments beſides the new, when as there is but one, beſides it only, commonly called in the Church, the old Teſtament; for almoſt all things herein were ſet forth before, but for the repeating and explaining of all things ſo largely, and ſome new additions made, it is called a covenant beſide that given in Horeb. Moreover the old generation, to which that was given, was now worn away and dead, as we may ſee, Deut.1. after that they had broken it, wherefore being in theſe words renewed again for them now living, and all their generations to come, it is thus intituled. And to purchaſe the more authority unto it, he ſaith, theſe are the words of the covenant which the Lord commanded Moſes to make, &c. ſo that all the laws added, and all the exhortations and amplifications came not from Moſes, but from the Lord dictating them unto him. Of the covenant in Horeb, ſee Exod.19.20,21,22,23,24.

Hugo Card.

Auguſt. qu. 49. in Deut.

Verſ. 2. Ye have ſeen all that the Lord did before your eyes unto Pharaoh in the Land of Egypt, &c.] See the ſame before, Chap.7.19.

Verſ. 4. yet the Lord hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to ſee, &c.] He ſaid before that they did ſee, how then ſaith he here, that God gave them not eyes to ſee? S. Auguſtine moveth and anſwereth this, they ſaw with their bodily eyes, but not with ſpiritual to make any good uſe of their ſeeing, and thus ſeeing a man may ſee and not perceive, Matth.13.12. 2 Cor. 3.15. And in ſaying thus he intimateth, that all ſpiritual ſight cometh from the grace of God, neither have we it of our ſelves, for man underſtandeth not the things of God, but when he giveth him the gift.

Auguſt. qu.50. in Deut.

Verſ. 5. I have lead you fourty years in the wilderneſſe, &c.] See for this, Ch.8.3,4.

thou

thou haſt not eaten bread] That is, ſaith the Interlinear gloſſe, not the bread of men, but of Angels, that is, Manna. Gloſ. Interlin.

nor drunk wine nor ſtrong drink.] Auguſtine comparing this with Exod.32. 6. they ſate down to eat and drink, which he underſtandeth of drinking wine, becauſe it was in feaſting, moveth a queſtion, how theſe two places can be made to agree? and anſwereth, that they then drank wine, which they brought with them out of Egypt, which laſted till they came at Horeb. But Joſephus ſaith, that the proviſion brought with them out of Egypt laſted but 30 dayes, and to Horeb they came not, till after 45 dayes, Exod.19.1. viz. the firſt of the third moneth. But Hugo to clear this, ſaith, that Joſephus by their proviſion underſtandeth not wine, but bread only, but if ſo, and it be granted, that they drank wine then, the queſtion ſtill remaineth, becauſe here it is ſaid, they drank no wine. It is better then to hold, that they drank no wine then, for no ſuch thing is expreſſed, and ſo there will be no difference, or if they had a little, which ſome of the chief drank ſometime, as it is ſuppoſed, that Nadab and Abihu did, from Levit. 10.9. Yet becauſe the congregation generally drank no wine, but water, it might well be ſaid, that they drank no wine 40 years. Auguſt. Hugo Cardinalis.

And when ye came to this place, Sihon, King of the Amorites, &c.] Of this, ſee before Chap.2.32, &c. and before that, Numb.21. & Numb.32. Verſ.7.

And hitherto of the firſt part of this Chapter, viz. the commemoration of mercies paſt; now followeth the ſecond againſt the ſleighting of the threatenings before going. Part 2.

Ye ſtand this day all of you before the Lord your God; your captains and tribes &c.] Here they are reckoned up, who entred into covenant with the Lord, from their captains and elders to the ſtrangers amongſt them, and to the hewers of wood and drawers of water, that is, the moſt baſe and ſervile ſort, as we may ſee by the Gibeonites, Joſh.9. who were condemned to this for ever. And he addeth, verſ.15. not only him that is, but that is not here this day, that is, every generation of theirs to the world end, ſo Targum Jonathan. Then he remembreth their coming out of Egypt, and through many nations in the midſt of many dangers to ſtirre them up the more to obedience, and to deteſt idols, which they ſaw them ſerve, who were therefore overthrown before them. But if any contrariwiſe inſtead of deteſting them, ſhould ſerve them, having a root bearing gall and wormwood, that is, an heart, which yet lyeth hid, but manifeſted in time by the bitter fruits of ſin, ſo Act.8.23. Simon is ſaid to be in the gall of bitterneſſe; and Heb.12.15. Leſt any root of bitterneſſe ſpring up amongſt you, &c. ſee Deut.32.32. Amos 6.12. and ſometime gall and wormwood are put for the bitter puniſhments of ſin, as Jer.9.15. & 23.15. Lament.3.15. Verſ.10,11, 12, &c. Verſ. 15. Targum Jonathan. Verſ.16,17. Verſ. 18.

And when he heareth the words of this curſe ſhall bleſſe himſelf, &c.] That is, be ſecure and without fear, as if theſe threatenings were only an empty ſound beating the ayr; to adde drunkenneſſe to thirſt, the Cald. that I may adde to him the ſins of ignorance to thoſe of preſumption; the Sept. that the ſinner deſtroy not alſo him that is without ſin. But the word הרוה here uſed, ſignifieth drunkenneſſe, and הצמאה thirſt, but ספות rendred to adde, is either to adde or to deſtroy, Pſal.40.15. the vulg. latine, et aſſumat ebria ſitientem, by Hugo expounded by that, Hab.2.15. Wo to him that giveth his neighbour drink. Rabanus with better ſenſe, that he which is drunken in malice ſhould ſeduce him to errour, who deſireth to know and to hold the truth: but the beſt is, to take it according to our tranſlation, or as Calvin hath it, to adde the drunken to the thirſty, that is, to adde to the inexpleble deſire of doing wickedly, audacious licentiouſeſſe to commit any wickedneſſe: for the deſire of doing evil in the wicked is like a dropſie, making a man alwayes thirſty and never ſatisfied with drinking, and they that with an unbridled liberty commit ſin, do ſtupifie themſelves by a cuſtome of ſinning, like drunkards, thus coming to have no ſenſe of good and evil. Verſ. 19. Hugo Card. Calvin.

evil. The Apoſtle calleth ſuch ἀπαλγητότας, paſt feeling, Eph.4.19. wherefore it is a proverbial ſpeech like that of adding oyl to the fire. Chytræus underſtandeth it of falſe teachers, aſſumat ebria ſitientem, that is, ſo let ſuch as corrupt the truth with falſe opinions like drunken Doctours periſh with their diſciples, that greedily drink in their errours, Jer.5. Jer.6.8. Eſay 19. Ezech.28. He mentioneth alſo and rejecteth another reading and expoſition, to prefer the drunken before the thirſty, that is, the ſoul drunken in concupiſcences before that which abſtaineth herefrom.

Verſ. 20. Part 3. The Lord will not ſpare him, but then the anger of the Lord and his jealouſie ſhall ſmoke againſt that man, &c.] Here followeth the third part of the Chapter, viz. the renewing of the threatnings. For theſe words, the Lord will not ſpare, Hebr. is, the Lord will not be pleaſed to ſpare, this being ſpoken by way of oppoſition to his pleaſing himſelf in his wicked way, ſo Calvin, and he ſaith, of all wickedneſſes this is the moſt provocative, and ſhutteth up the gate of mercy, and bringeth to moſt certain and horrible miſery, therefore Eſay 23.13,14. when they ſaid by way of mockage, to morrow we ſhall dye, the Lord threatneth, that this wickedneſſe ſhould not be purged, till they dyed, ſee Pſal.59.6. the phraſe of jealouſie ſmoking, or burning againſt ſuch is alſo uſed, Pſal.74.1.

Verſ. 21. And the Lord ſhall ſeparate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Iſrael, &c.] That is, from the communion of the Church, out of which there is no ſalvation, Act.2.47. ſo the falſe prophets are threatened, Ezech.13.9. they ſhall not be in the ſecret of my people, neither ſhall they be written in the writing of the houſe of Iſrael, verſ.22,23, &c. this is amplified further by ſhewing, that the generation to come of them and all nations ſhould ſee theſe curſes, and that the whole land is brimſtone and ſalt and burning, neither is it ſown, nor beareth, &c.] This was never fulfilled according to the letter, but according to the ſenſe at this day, it is obſerved by travellers, that many miles about Jeruſalem the ground is moſt barren, and beareth neither corn, graſſe, nor tree, which is doubtleſſe an effect of this curſe, for ſaltneſſe is put for barrenneſſe, Pſal.107.34. and to ſow with ſalt, is to make barren, Judg.9.45. Jer.17.6. Ezech.47.11. And becauſe Sodom and the cities about it were deſtroyed with brimſtone and fire, and the earth is all ſalt; theſe are here put together to expreſſe the ſtupendious barrenneſſe of this land much like unto that.

Verſ.22,23.

Ver. 24,25. And they ſhall ſay, why hath the Lord done thus to this land, &c. And men ſhall anſwer, becauſe they have forſaken the covenant of the Lord God of their fathers, &c.] Thus alſo it is ſaid men ſhould ſpeak, 1 King.9.8,9. 2 Chron. 7.22. Jer.22.8.

Verſ. 26. Calvin. Cald. Junius. And they went and ſerved other gods, whom they knew not, neither had he given them to them.] For theſe laſt words Calvin hath, which have beſtowed nothing upon them; the Cald. and they had not done good unto them; the Sept. neither had he diſtributed to them. Jnnius, and God had not imparted to them; and this, he ſaith, hath reference to Deut.4.19. where it is ſaid, that God had imparted the Sun, Moon and Stars to all nations, and they are charged not to worſhip them; but here, if the words be thus rendred, their worſhipping of other gods, the works of mens hands is taxed, for theſe gods imparted to none, but were meerly mens inventions. The vulgar latine, To whom they were not given, that is, ſaith Hugo, that they ſhould ſerve them. I prefer that of Calvin and the Caldee, none of theſe idol gods, whom they ſerved had given or done any good to them, and ſo their לא־חלק is oppoſed to gods, חלק, Deut.4.19. their not imparting to them to Gods imparting of good to all, whereby all were obliged to ſerve him.

Hugo Cardin.

Verſ. 28. Baal-Hatturim. and caſt them into another land] The word וישלך, caſt, is written with a very great ך to denote, as Baal-Hatturim hath it, the greateſt caſting away that ever was, for there was none like to that of the ten tribes, 2 King.

17. wherefore the letter ו ſtanding for ten, is alſo here wanting.

Verſ. 29.

The ſecret things belong to the Lord, but the revealed to us and to our children, &c.] Over the word ſignifying ſecret things are two pricks, and over that ſignifying revealed two, and two over theſe words, to us and to our children, to ſhew, that this ſentence is greatly to be marked. It ſeemeth to have no coherence with the former words, and therefore is ſaid by Hugo to be a little Chapter, or a piece of a little Chapter, by it ſelf, and yet he maketh it two wayes to cohere with the words before going: 1. thus, the ſecrets of the Lord, or thoſe things which are hidden with the Lord, are manifeſted to us and to our children, that we ſhould do them, that is, his Will ſet forth in theſe lawes. 2. thus, the curſes brought upon the land for ſin were hidden with the Lord before even from eternity, but are manifeſted to us and our children, that they ſhall be brought upon tranſgreſſours, that we might be moved hereby to keep his Commandements alwayes, and this he ſaith, ſeemeth to be moſt agreeable to the meaning of Moſes, becauſe he had now revealed them unto them. Thus alſo Andreas, the curſes againſt tranſgreſſours, and the benefits to ſuch as obey, which are ſecret and hidden with the Lord from other nations, are manifeſted unto you, that ye ſhould keep his covenant alwayes. Some Hebrews, as Cazkuni and Jonathan by ſecret things underſtand ſecret ſins, and ſo the word is uſed, Pſal. 19.13. Theſe, they ſay, are with the Lord, and known to him, who will puniſh them in his due time, but ſins open and manifeſt belong to us and to our children to puniſh. Chytræus reading it, the things hidden by the Lord, which are manifeſt to us and to our children, expoundeth it of the myſteries of the Goſpel, which were ſecrets in times paſt, but now are manifeſted and revealed to us by the Spirit, Rom. 16. Eph. 3. Calvin rejecting that of the Hebrews, and this of Chytræus, and his tranſlation, becauſe theſe words are not one continued ſentence, but one thing is here oppoſed to another, by ſecrets underſtandeth ſuch ſecrets of the Lord, as it concerneth not us to know, and if we did we ſhould be never the better therefore, from prying into theſe out of vain curioſity we are therefore here forewarned: by things revealed, the lawes and ordinances of the Lord, and generally his holy Word, to learn and to exerciſe our ſelves in which we are here taught, that it is our duty continually, becauſe it is ſaid, belong to us and to our children for ever; ſo Deut. 4.9. whereupon Maimony obſerveth, that every one is bound to learn the law night and day, be he rich or poor all the dayes of his life, for when he ceaſeth to learn, he forgetteth. But this learning muſt be, that we may do all the words of this law; for if a man heareth the Word only and doth it not, he deceiveth his own ſoul. Thus I have ſhewed the divers expoſitions upon theſe words, any of which the reader may follow, as ſeemeth beſt unto him. But I prefer that, which referreth ſecrets to judgments and curſes before ſpoken of, as if he had ſaid, the time when and how long, and the judging ſpiritually of the people of Iſrael for their wickedneſſe by giving them over to infidelity, are ſecrets with God, neither doth any man know them, but things revealed, that is, the law and will of God ſet forth therein belong to us, and are alwayes to be taken heed unto, and meditated upon, that we may with all care and diligence live accordingly. Thus the rejection of the Jews for a time is called a ſecret or myſtery, Rom. 11. 25. And as this, ſo it is meant, that all ſecrets, as when the day of judgment ſhall be, the times and ſeaſons of all things, &c. are with the Lord onely, neither ought we to tire our ſelves in ſearching into them, but into that, which more concerneth us, and will be more profitable for us to know: how the revealed things are with us, is further ſhewed, Chap. 30.14.

Hugo Card.

Andreas.

Cazkuni.
Targum Jonathan.

Chytræus.

Calvin.

Maimony in Talmud Torah, c. 1.

Jam. 1. 22.

Matth. 12.
Act. 1. 6.

Chap. XXX.

1 Particular. And hitherto of the third particular; the fourth here followeth, viz. the comforts promiſed upon their repentance, after being judged for their ſins.

Verſ. 1. And When all theſe things are come upon thee, the bleſſings and the curſes, and thou ſhalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the Lord hath driven thee, &c.] The bleſſings, ſaith Hugo, upon the obedient, and the curſes upon the diſobedient, and being under the curſes thou ſhalt conſider to turn: for this is the beginning of grace to call to mind, that we are under Gods judgments for our ſins, ſee the like ſpeech, Deut.4.39. 1 King. 8.46. Eſay 46.8. Lament.3.21.

Hugo Card.

Verſ. 2. And ſhalt return to the Lord thy God, &c.] Here is the ſecond degree of repentance, to turn by humiliation before God, and faith, Lament. 3.40. for as a man cannot turn to Chriſt, unleſſe he believeth in him, for he cometh to him, that believeth, Joh. 6. 35. ſo there is no turning to God without faith, and the third degree here ſet down, and ſhalt obey his voyce, is an effect of faith, which purifieth the heart, Act. 15.9: wherefore, as Hugo and others well note, the mercy promiſed here to them that turn, is to be underſtood, as promiſed to the Iſraelites, when at the laſt they ſhall believe the Goſpel, which is here propheſied of, as alſo Rom. 11.25, 26. and 2 Cor. 3. and to intimate this, it is ſaid, verſ. 5. I will multiply thee above thy fathers, verſe 5. And theſe comforts belong to all, that by true repentance and faith turn unto Chriſt. And he hath ſummed them up to be four; 1. Reducing again into the land of promiſe. 2. The circumciſion of the heart. 3. The abundance of all good things. 4. The joy of the heart; ſee the like promiſe, Jer. 32.36. and Jer. 18. Jer.25. Baruch 2.3,4. of their gathering together from all nations, Verſ. 3. where they had been ſcattered, verſ. 3. it is often ſpoken, Pſal.107.1,2,3. & 147.1,2. & 106.47.

Verſ. 4. For their being driven to the utmoſt parts of heaven, verſ. 4. hereby are meant the utmoſt parts of the world, ſo called, becauſe they ſeem to be bounded about by the heavens, this promiſe is made uſe of, Nehem. 1.8, 9. and Jonathan ſaith, it ſhall be performed in the dayes of Elias ſpoken of, Mal. 4. and of the King Chriſt.

Jonathan Targum.

Verſ. 6. And the Lord will circumciſe thine heart, and the heart of thy ſeed, to love the Lord, &c.] This alſo the Rabbins ſay, ſhall be done by Chriſt; of this, ſee Col.2.11,12. Rom.2.29. Deut. 10.16. It is, when by his Spirit he cutteth away all evil from the heart, and maketh it pliant unto good, which is implyed in theſe words, to love the Lord, for this is the foundation of all goodneſſe, Jer.32.39. Ezech.11.19.

Verſ. 7. And the Lord will put all theſe curſes upon thine enemies, &c.] Beſides the ſpiritual bleſſings ſpoken of before, here are temporal promiſed, when they ſhould be replanted in their own land. This of curſing their enemies is further amplified Lament.3. 64, 65. But the ground of all bleſſings Verſ. 8, 9. both of this and being plenteous, is obedience to God, verſ. 8, 9. as is ſaid, 1 Tim.4.8. godlineſſe hath the promiſe of this life, and of that which is to come.

Verſ.11,12, 13. For this Commandement which I command thee this day, is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off, &c.] After the condition of obeying, that they might be bleſſed in every thing, this is added, to meet with an objection, if they ſhould ſay, but how ſhould we know all theſe lawes, and be able to do them? Sol. it is very nigh, in thy mouth, and in thy heart to do it; which is not ſpoken, as meaning that they had power to do all things without ſinning, but prophetically, that by faith in Jeſus Chriſt they ſhould come to be juſtified and ſanctified from the curſe of the law, fulfilling all things in him, as it is expounded, Rom. 10.6. ſee my expoſitions there.

ſhould

For as Hugo noteth, many of theſe lawes literally underſtood, were ſuch a burthen, that they were not able to bear them, but ſpiritually underſtood they were eaſie, the ſcope of them being to drive unto Chriſt, who ſaith, my yoke is eaſie, and my burthen light. He ſaith, in thy mouth, becauſe with the mouth confeſſion is made; and in thy heart, becauſe with the heart man believeth, Rom. 10.9. Hugo Card. Act. 15. 10. Gal. 3. 24. Matth. 11. 28.

By this Commandement or word then, the word of faith is to be underſtood, myſtically meant in the law: for by the works of the law no man is or ever was juſtified and bleſſed, but by faith in Chriſt. Wherefore ſo often preſſing to keep theſe lawes, is myſtically a preſſing to believe, whereby alone all is fulfilled; yet this muſt alwayes ſo be underſtood, as that occaſion be not hereupon taken to live ſecurely in ſin, for who ſo thus believeth, hath only a dead faith, that will not profit him, but we muſt hereby be encouraged to keep the Commandements the more diligently, becauſe we doing our beſt endeavour, all our imperfections are covered in ſo many of us, as believe, and we are accepted for perfectly righteous and holy. Rom. 3. Jam. 2.

The Jeruſal. Targum upon theſe words, who ſhall go up to heaven, paraphraſeth thus, O that we had one like Moſes, that might go up; and upon theſe, who ſhall go beyond the ſea? O that we had one like Jonah, that went down to the bottom of the Sea, how theſe words are varied by the Apoſtle, ſee Rom. 10.6,7,8. Targum Hieruſol.

See, I have ſet before thee this day life and good, death and evil, &c.] That is, as the Targum Hieruſolym. hath it, the law of life which is good, and the Law of death which is evil; the Targum Jonathan, the way of life, for which a good reward ſhall be given, and the way of death, for which an evill. Or the meaning is, I have propounded, what thou ſhouldſt do to enjoy life and good and proſperity, and ſhewed by what doing thou ſhalt be indangered in reſpect of death, miſery, and deſtruction. And this is further explained to be the meaning, verſ. 16,17,18. Verſ. 15. Targum Hieruſol.

I call heaven and earth to record againſt you this day, that I have ſet before you life and death, bleſſing and curſing, &c.] See the like obteſtation, Deut. 4. 26. Life and death is ſet before us, when as the gracious promiſes to thoſe that obey God, and the threatenings to the diſobedient are propounded. Verſ. 19.

therefore chooſe life] That is to obey, to which life is promiſed, as is explained, verſ. 20. that thou mayſt love the Lord thy God, and obey his voyce, &c. for he is thy life and length of thy dayes, &c. that is, if thou obeyeſt him, he will prolong and preſerve thy life, which, ſaith Chytræus, would be conſidered, that ſeeing it is God that prolongeth our lives, we may uſe them to his glory, by inſtructing and training up others in his fear, Pſalm 9. 92. 118. Verſ. 20. Chytræus.

Chap. XXXI.

HItherto the exhortations, promiſes and threatnings uttered by Moſes, together with the propoſall of the Lawes and Ordinances of the Lord. Now followeth that part of the book, in which the death of Moſes is ſpoken of, and Joſhua is appointed to ſucceed him, according to the diſtribution made, chap. 4. And here again is firſt the exhortation of Moſes upon occaſion of his death ſhewed unto them to be at hand unto verſ. 9. 2. His writing of the Law and appointing it to be read publickly in their aſſemblies, unto v. 14. 3. Joſhua appeareth with Moſes in the Tabernacle before the Lord, where the peoples revolting after other gods is foretold, and a propheticall ſong touching this revolt to come is appointed to be written unto v. 22. 4. Moſes writeth it, and the Lord giveth a charge unto Joſhua, v. 22.23. 5. The book of the Law is appointed to be put in the ſide of the ark to be kept there, v. 24,25,26,27. 6. The elders and officers are gathered together to hear the words of the ſong, verſ. 28, 29. 7 Moſes ſpeaketh of the words of that ſong, v. 30. and chap. 32. to verſ. 44. 8. An exhortation is again made hereupon unto v. 48. 9. Moſes is ſummoned to goe up to Mount Nebo to die there, v. 48, 49. &c. to the end of the chapter. 10. He bleſſeth all the tribes ſeverally, chap. 33. 11. He goeth up to the mount, and dieth, and is buried and commended, Chapter, 34.

Part 1. Verſ. 1,2. Touching the firſt, v. 1. And Moſes went and ſpake all theſe words to all Iſrael, and ſaid, I am 120. yeares old, &c. The age of Moſes was not the cauſe why he could no longer goe in and out before the people, but the ordinance of God, that he ſhould now depart out of this life, and therefore he addeth, Alſo the Lord hath ſaid unto me, thou ſhalt not goe over this Iordan: for he was ſtill of ſtrength ſufficient, Deut. 34. 7. He mentioneth his great age therefore to intimate the long time that they had injoyed his miniſtery, even 40. yeares, from 80. to 120. that they might be the more excited to profit hereby.

Verſ. 3. The Lord thy God, he will goe over before thee, and deſtroy theſe Nations: Thus he ſpake before, Deut. 9.3. and here repeateth it again, that although he died, they might not fear, but be of good comfort; and Joſhua he ſaith, ſhould go before them in his ſtead, ſee Numb. 27.18.

Verſ. 5. And ye ſhall doe unto them according to all that I have commanded you, that is, deſtroy and root them out, Deut. 20.16, 17.

Verſ. 6. He exhorteth them to be ſtrong and couragious, promiſing that the Lord ſhould goe with them, and not leave nor forſake them. And v. 7, 8. he uſeth the ſame words to Joſhua, ſee Deut. 20. 1,2, 3. Thus David incouraged Solomon, Chron 28.20.

Verſ. 7. 8. Part. 2. Verſ. 9. 10. Touching the 2. particular, v. 9, 10. &c. And Moſes wrot this Law, and delivered it to the Prieſts, &c. And commanded ſaying, at the end of 7 yeares in the ſolemnitie of the yeare of releaſe, in the feaſt of Tabernacles, &c. The Law here ſaid to be written was this book of Deuteronomy, ſee chap. 29. 1. It was delivered to the Prieſts and elders, becauſe they by teaching, theſe by their authoritie ſhould ſee to the keeping of this Law. Mal. 2.7. Mich. 3. 1. 2 Chron. 19.6,8,9. At the end of 7 yeares, that is, every 7 yeare of the year of releaſe, ſee Deut. 15. 1, 2. At this time it muſt be read, becauſe being freed from worldly cares, they were the more fit to attend to heavenly inſtructions. Myſtically hereby was figured out the yeare of releaſe by Chriſt, when a ſecond Law or Deuteronomy ſhould be read, viz. the glad tidings of ſalvation ſhould be preached in the place, which the Lord ſhould chooſe, that is, in the Church, and at the feaſt of boothes or tabernacles, that is, whilſt this mortal life laſteth, ſet forth hereby.

The Myſterie. Luc. 4.18. Rabanus.

For

For the manner of this reading, Maimony ſaith, It was commanded to Joſhuah to read, and therefore conſequently to the chief man amongſt them, and when they had a king, to the king. He therefore came into the court of the women, which was the outward Court, and there having a pulpit of wood prepared for him, he went up, that he might be heard of all, then the trumpets were blown throughout all Jeruſalem to aſſemble the people, and the miniſter of the Synagogue, ſuch as is ſpoken of Luk. 4. 17. took the book and gave it to the maſter of the Synagogue, of whom it is ſpoken, Luk. 13. 14. and he gave it to the Sagan, or ſecond chief Prieſt, who is called the captain of the Temple, Act. 5. 24. and the Sagan, to the high Prieſt, and the high Prieſt to the king, for the more honour; then the king ſtood or ſat down, if he pleaſed and all the people gathered round about him, and he firſt bleſſing God, as Nehem. 8. 5, 6. read from the beginning of Deuteronomy to the end of Chap. 30. and when he had done reading, he foulded up the book and bleſſed God again. And all the time of his reading every one was bound reverently to attend, yea the wiſe men, that knew all the Law perfectly. In the want of a king, when Ezra was the chief he ſuplyed this office of a reader. And to this reading all were bound to come, even women and children, who were not bound to come up to other feaſts, Exod. 23. 17. yet to this all muſt come, that could underſtand Nehem. 8. 3. except the unclean.

Maimony in cagigah, cap. 3. Sect. 3.

Nehem. 8. 1, 2, 3.

Verſ. 12.

Touching the third particular verſ. 14. And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, behold the dayes approach, that thou muſt dye, call Joſhuah and preſent your ſelves in the Tabernacle, that I may give him a charge, &c.] This was done both to aſſure Joſhuah the more of Gods calling him to this office, and to procure him authority amongſt the people when they ſhould ſee a viſible ſign of Gods preſence to eſtabliſh him for their ruler, as for this end, Moſes before put ſome of his honour upon him, Numb. 27. 18, 19. They being in the Tabernacle the Lord appeared in a piller of a cloud, &c. ſo he appeared, Exod. 33. 9.

Part 3. Verſ. 14.

Verſ. 15.

Then he told Moſes, that he ſhould ſleep with his fathers, and that the people would go a whoring after other gods, &c. when the death of Abraham was ſpoken of before, Gen. 25. 8. it is ſaid, that he was gathered to his fathers, and likewiſe of Jacob, Gen. 50. and of Aaron, Numb. 20. and of Moſes himſelf, Numb. 31. 1. here his death is ſet forth by ſleeping, as Act. 7. 60. 1 Theſ. 4. 13. Becauſe it might appear to all generations to come, that the Lord knew before their revolting, and had given them the greateſt warning againſt it, that might be, he appointed a ſong to be ſet forth, as a witneſſe againſt them of his juſt proceedings in executing ſuch judgements upon them, and this ſong is that following in Chap. 32. and theſe things were ſet forth in a ſong, that being drawn with delight they might the better be brought to learn it, and their affections might be the more moved by it.

Verſ. 16.

Verſ. 17, 18, 19, 20.

Touching the fourth particulars, verſ. 22. Moſes therefore wrot this ſong the ſame day and taught it the children of Iſrael. And he gave Joſhuah the ſon of Nun a charge, &c.] This charge ſeemeth to be given by Moſes, and therefore the Septuagint underſtanding it ſo, render the next words, thou ſhalt bring the children into the Land, which I ſware, and I will be with thee, in the third perſon, he ſware and he will be with thee. But the Vulgar Latin better, for he gave Joſhuah a charge, hath the Lord gave Joſhuah a charge, and ſo that, which followeth in the firſt perſon doth moſt aptly agree. And this underſtanding, he gave a charge of the Lord doth beſt anſwer to verſ. 14. I will give him a charge which he had not done hitherto, and therefore this muſt be the charge, which he there meant:

Part 4. Verſ. 22, 23.

Again Moſes had given him a charge, verſ. 7, 8. and therefore it is not likelie, that he would ſo ſoon repeat the ſame again. Laſtly, when Moſes ſpeaketh in the name of the Lord, he doth it alwayes in the third perſon ſon and not in the firſt, as in this place, wherefore the Lord ſpeaketh here.

Part 5. Verſ.24,25, 26. Touching the fift particular, verſ. 24, 25. And Moſes commanded the Levites to put the book of the Law which he had written, in the ſide of the Ark to be there for a witneſſe againſt the people, Verſe 8, 9. it was written and delivered to the Prieſts the ſons of Levi, and to the Elders; and the Prieſts are here to be underſtood by Levites, for they were the ſons of Levi, and ſometimes bare the Ark, as Joſ.3.6,17. and Joſh. 6. 12. although moſt commonly the Levites bare it, Numb.3.31. Chap. 4. 15. and 10.21.

Part 6. Verſ.28. Touching the ſixth particular, verſ. 28. And Moſes ſaid, gather to me all the Elders of your Tribes and officers, that I may ſpeak theſe words in their ears, &c.] And here he inculcateth again the third time their Apoſtaſie and miſery to come in the latter dayes, meaning doubtleſs this which they now ſuffer, ſince their rejecting and crucifying of our Lord, who was ſent amongſt them.

CHAP. XXXII.

Part 7. Verſ.1. Hugo Card. Touching the ſeventh particular, it is the word of the ſong. Give ear (O ye heavens) and I will ſpeak, and hear, O earth the words of my mouth: my doctrine ſhall drop as the rain, &c.] Hugo obſerveth out of Joſephus, that this was written in Elegiack Hebrew verſes, Hexameters and Pentameters, becauſe it treateth of the mercies of God. The ſong is contained in 43 verſes, and may be divided into four parts. Firſt, a proeme, or exordium to ſtir up to attention, Verſe 1, 2, 3. Secondly, the mercies of God towards them are ſet forth, verſe 4,5,&c. Thirdly, the peoples ingratitude and wickedneſſe, verſe 15, 16, 17, 18. Fourthly, their puniſhments, v.19,20,&c.

Part 1. Ferus. Hugo Card. For the firſt. He calleth to the heavens and earth to hear, ſaith Ferus, as ſecretly taxing the people of Iſrael, who he knew, would not hear, ſo Eſa. 1. and hereby he ſheweth, that they ſhould be witneſſes to convince the hard hearted Jews, and, as Hugo hath it, he ſpeaketh not to them, as if they could underſtand his words, but becauſe God by his almighty power ſhould make the heavens and earth witneſſes againſt them, as he did when upon their crucifying of our Lord, the ſun was darkned and the earth ſhaked and opened. Or by the heavens, he ſaith, we may underſtand the angels, by the earth, men, or by the heavens, ſpiritual men, by the earth, the carnal; or by the heavens, as Auguſtine hath it, the contemplative, by the earth, the laborious, as if he had, hear both with the interiour and exteriour ear: but theſe are allegories. Ainſworth. For his calling heaven and earth to witneſſe, ſee before Deut.30.19. Chap.31.28. the more to affect the hearts of the people, for they ſhall teſtifie againſt the rebellious, Joſ. 24.27. and they dye not as men, but continue to be witneſſes for ever, Pſal.119.89, 90. Eccleſ. 1:4. Calvin. Calvin calleth this a magnifical exordium, ſhewing, that he was not about to ſpeak of trivial things, but great and weighty, and ſo worthy the attention of all men.

Verſ.2. My words, my doctrine ſhall drop as the rain] For doctrine, Heb. is לקחי received, becauſe the miniſter receiveth that from the Lord, which he delivereth to the people, 1 Cor.11.23. and their doctrine is Gods doctrine, 1 Theſ. 2. 13. Hugo and Ferus and others generally expound this, as a wiſh, let it drop, but Calvin ſaith, that it is a declaration of the nature of heavenly doctrine, it is as the rain, which maketh good ground fruitful, but hard and ſtony ground remaineth ſtill barren, although never ſo great ſtore of rain falleth upon it, ſo that hereby he taxeth his hearers, if they were not bettered by this doctrine, as being themſelves onely in the fault and and this doth moſt arride me; of this compariſon ſee more Eſa. 55.10. Mich.5.7. Chap.2.6. Ezech.20.46. Chap.21.2. contrariwiſe corrupt teachers are as clouds without rain, Jude verſ. 12. Prov. 25.14. Here are two things, to which doctrine is compared, rain, and dew; it is like the firſt, ſaith Hugo, when it terrifieth, like the ſecond, when it comforteth, like rain, when it is open and eaſie, like dew when it is hidden and hard. And as the dew falleth in the night, cooleth and nouriſheth the tender corn, and therefore is ſweet unto it, ſo this doctrine ſerveth to enlighten in the night of this world, is ſweeter then the honey and nouriſheth grace in the heart, but then it muſt be not hard but tender, as the green herbs, upon which the dew falleth. Hugo Cardin.

I will publiſh the name of the Lord, aſcribe ye greatneſſe unto our God] The Vulg. Latin, I will call upon the name of the Lord, the Cald. I will pray in the name of the Lord, and in Hebrew it is, אקרא שם I will call or proclaim the name of the Lord, the meaning is, I will ſet forth the mighty and gracious acts of the Lord towards his people, for which I exhort, that all aſcribe greatneſs and majeſty to him, 1 Chron.29. verſ. 11. Verſ. 3.

For the ſecond part, verſ. 4, 5, &c. to verſ.15. He is the rock, his work is perfect, all his waies are judgement, &c.] Here are firſt the praiſes of God ſet forth in general, and the people of Iſrael are expoſtulated with for their ingratitude, and then the particular geſts of the Lord towards them are related, verſ.7,8.9,&c. God is called the rock both here and verſ.18. & 30, 37. 1 Sam.2.2. & 2 Sam.22.2.32. becauſe he is a ſure, moſt ſtable and unmoveable ſtay to his faithful people. His work; that is, every work, that he hath wrought, that is, both of Creation, Redemption, and of doing for his people and againſt his enemies: for, as Hugo ſaith, in ſix daies he perfected all his works, and theſe are the cauſes why greatneſs is to be aſcribed to the Lord. All his waies are judgement, that is, his lawes are moſt diſcreetly and judiouſly made. Part 2. Verſ.4,5. Hugo.

They have corrupted themſelves, their ſpot is not the ſpot of his children, &c.] Becauſe heavy things were to befall the people of Iſrael for their ſins, of which it is propheſied in this ſong, he having juſtified God, as dealing moſt juſtly herein, v. 3, 4. now declareth the evil deſerts of the people of Iſrael. And he ſaith, their ſpot is not as the ſpot of Gods children, becauſe they ſinned maliciouſly, ſo Ferus, and not out of infirmity, by and by confeſſing it; the Cald. They have corrupted themſelves and not him, ſons that have ſerved idols. Verſ.5. Ferus.

Do ye thus requite the Lord, &c.] He calleth them a perverſe generation, v. 5. and here he ſheweth the reaſon, for they requited evil for good unto the Lord. For to render evil for good is a point of perverſneſs, to render evil for evil is a point of frailty, to render good for good a point of equity, to render good for evil, a point of perfect charity. O ye fooliſh people and unwiſe, he is fooliſh that doth not ſee evil before and ſhun it, and he is unwiſe that foreſeeth it, but ſhunneth it not, or to be fooliſh is in reſpect of the underſtanding, to be unwiſe in reſpect of the affection. Ferus ſaith, he calleth them fooliſh, becauſe they took not heed of the evil known, and unwiſe, becauſe they would not know the good. He meaneth, that they were ſuch as faded in their underſtanding, and ſo became moſt vile, as Pſ.14.1. Rom.1.21. Verſ. 6. Hugo Card. Malum reddere pro bono perverſitatis eſt, malum pro malo fragilitatis, bonum pro bono æquitatis, ut bonum reddere pro malo perfectæ charitatis eſt.

Is not he thy father that bought thee, hath not he made thee, and ſtabliſhed thee? the Vulgar Latin, that poſſeſſed, made and created thee, that is, ſaith Hugo, created thee of nothing, made thee into an excellent form, and poſſeſſed thee to hold, rule, and govern thee, that thou mighteſt not decay, he being for the firſt a father, for the ſecond a maſter, and for the third a Lord, and ſo worthy of all love, and honour, Mal.1. and he inverteth the order, naming the firſt laſt; to ſhew their inordinacy, and ſpeaketh not by Hugo Cardin.

Ferus. by affirmation, but by interrogation to convince them the more. Ferus following the ſame reading, is not he thy father, doth he not appear to be ſo by making thee in reſpect of thy body, and creating thee in reſpect of thy ſoul? and he hateth nothing that he hath made, Pſalme 145. but is gracious to all his works, verſe 9. hath he not poſſeſſed thee by chooſing thee for a peculiar people to himſelf? The word rendred bought thee, may be rendred indifferently, either purchaſer or poſſeſſour, or owner of thee. But Calvin. Calvin rejecteth this laſt, although I can ſee no reaſon why he ſhould ſo do, his expoſition made hereupon being the ſame with that of Ferus, but for making, he more rightly expoundeth it of making anew by regeneration, but beceuſe they were not ſpiritually made anew, he diſtinguiſheth Gods making into two, the generall by outward vocation, which belongeth to all the Church, and the inward which is of the elect onely. For the laſt word ſtabliſhed thee, he hath prepared thee, as a workman maketh his work more neat.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth by making underſtandeth advancing to dignitie, as they that are redeemed and taken to be Gods peculiar people, and have many ſingular favours done to them are advanced to honour above others. So it is ſaid, that he made Moſes and Aaron, 1 Sam. 12. 6. Eſay 43. 7. Chriſt made Marc. 12. 3. 14. when he raiſed them to greater dignity. And he eſtabliſhed them, by ſettling them in this honour to continue. I hold that by making is not ſimply meant his giving them a being, as to other men, but the making of them high and excellent, whereby they were the more obliged unto him. And ſo it aptly followeth poſſeſſing them, or redeeming them by Chriſt, and ſerveth to ſet forth the excellency of this condition, ſuch are made, and eſtabliſhed, Rom. 11. 29.

Verſ. 7. Remember the dayes of old, &c. aske thy father and he will ſhew thee, thy elders and they will tell thee. This is added to prove the great goodneſſe of God towards them, and their ſtock, for Abraham, Iſaack and Jacob were of old ſingularly favoured by him, for which they were bound to be thankfull, as we are for Gods mercies towards our Progenitours, ſee Pſalm. 77. 6. 119. 52. 143. 5. Eſay 46. 9. Conſider the yeares of many generations, Hebr. of generation and generation, that is, to every generation ſince, which is added, leſt

Verſ. 8. they ſhould ſay in time to come, the Lord was good to our forefathers, but what hath he done ſince for us? it is anſwered here, there was no generation ſince, but hath alſo taſted of his mercy. Aske thy father, that is, every father that hath ſeen the workes of the Lord, and thy elders with whom is wiſdome, as it is ſaid, Job 12. for they will not teſtifie againſt thee

Deut. 4. 32. partially, but for thee: ſo Pſalm. 44. 1. We have heard with our eares, and our fathers have told us, &c, and Judges 6. 13. When the moſt high divided to the Nations their inheritance, &c. Having ſent them to their fathers and to times of old in generall to learn how gratious God had been to their Nation, here he proceedeth to particulars, ſaying, that when he ſeparated the ſonnes of Adam, he ſet bounds unto the people according to the number of the children of Iſrael, that is, when as there were innumerable peoples in the world, Iſrael and all that came of him being counted by the perſon, when they came down into Egypt were no more then the Nations of the world, viz. but 70. and into ſo many were the Nations divided, Geneſis 10. For the ſonnes of Shem, Ham and Japhet, and their ſonnes, who were heads of ſo many Nations are reckoned 70 or 72 and into ſo many languages it is held, that they were divided upon their building of the tower of Babel, Geneſis 11. but all theſe being neglected and diſperſed, as vile in compariſon of Iſrael, God choſe Iſrael, being ſo few in number for his peculiar people; which was a wonderfull great favour, and therefore it ought greatly to affect their hearts, ſee the like reaſons, Deut. 7. 7.

Ainſworth. Ainſworth by the bounds ſet to the people ſaith, that the land of Canaan alſo may be more particularly underſtood, being proportioned for the the twelve tribes of Iſrael, to inherit after the ſonnes of Canaan, who were 11. Geneſis 10. 15, 18. But Hugo, Ferus, Gloſ. interlin. and others reſt in the former expoſition, as I alſo do, their injoying of that good land not being yet ſpoken of, till verſe 13. 14. of the diviſion by inheritances to the the Edomites, and Moabites, ſee Deut. 2. 5. 9. and to all people, Amos 9. 7. Acts 17. 26, 27. The Septuagint for the ſonnes of Iſrael hath the Angels of God, whereof they ſuppoſe 70 to be ſet over the 70 Nations as preſidents, ſo R. Menahem on Geneſis 46. And Michael was ſet over the Iſraelitiſh Nation, ſaith Hugo, as appeareth Dan. 10. But at the firſt God himſelf was their keeper, till they worſhipped the golden calf, and from thence Michael untill the paſſion of Chriſt, after which he was removed and ſet over Chriſtians, for which cauſe every Church dedicated to an Angel is to Michael. Thus he, but we muſt take heed that we goe not too farre in things that are unknown unto us, Col. 2. 18. The Septuagint in rendring Angels of God for ſonnes of Iſrael are thought to have done ſo to avoid the envie of the Gentiles, which might have been ſtirred up if they ſhould have equalized themſelves to all other Nations. Calvin by theſe words underſtandeth a reſpect had to the Iſraelites, who were few in compariſon, in diſtributing the Nations ſo, as might be for their beſt good.

R. Menahem

Hugo Card.

For the Lords portion is his people, that is, the portion which he hath divided to himſelf, ſee Jer. 10. 16. 51. 19, Iacob is the line of his inheritance, or the lot which is falne to him, Pſalm, 16. 6, 7. being by line as it were meaſured out for his lot, of Jacob ſeeking his face, ſee Pſalm. 24. 6. And this ſeemeth to be a reaſon, why according to Calvins expoſition he had ſo great reſpect unto Iſrael above all other people.

Verſ. 9.

He found him in a deſert land, and in the waſt howling wilderneſſe, &c. Ferus by this deſert underſtandeth the deſert of Caldæa, where he found Abraham, and Egypt, where he found Iſrael, and the eſtate of corruption and ſinne, wherein he findeth us, ſo that of his grace and for no merit of ours we are elected and ſaved. But as Calvin and others have it, the Lord omitting their mercies paſt, in this place haſteneth to one more freſh in mind by which they were bound, as by 100. bands to perpetuall thankfulneſſe, viz. his ſuſtaining of them in the barren and drie wilderneſſe 40 yeares. For ſo the word מצא is uſed, Numb. 11. 22. and by the Septuagint is rendred, for he found him, he ſufficed him, and by the Cald. he ſufficed their neceſſities. He found him then in as much as he found him, that is, Iſrael with victuall and proviſion: for he came not thither by accident, as going aſtray, but was brought thither by the Lords direction, and there where all means failed he fed them ſufficiently, Deut. 8. 15, 16. The word rendred wilderneſſe is ישמון Ieſhimon, ſignifying a wilderneſſe, or being the name of one ſo called in particular, Numb. 21. 20. Here it is put for a wilderneſſe in generall, and of it there be 3 Epithites; deſert, becauſe there was a want of all good things; waſt, becauſe there was a want of all comfort; and howling, becauſe it was full of horrour for the wild and ſavage beaſts. So Hugo, ſaying, that in theſe three ſtandeth perfect miſery, ſo that they might ſee, how greatly they were bound to love and ſerve the Lord who provided for them and preſerved them here. And morally this wilderneſſe ſetteth forth the ſtate of a ſinner; his heart is deſert for the want of grace; waſte for the corruption of nature, and howling for the habitation of devils there, he led him about and inſtructed him: Some underſtand this of his inſtructing him by teaching him his Lawes, ſome of experimentall inſtruction by mercies, and by judgements, we may underſtand it of both: For theſe words he led him about the Septuagint have, he compaſſed him, the Cald. he placed them round about his divine Majeſtie as if their encamping round about the tabernacle were meant. But his leading them about fourtie yeares in the wilderneſſe ſeemeth plainly to be meant.

Verſ. 10.

Ferus.

Calvin.

Hugo Cardin.

and

and kept him as the apple of his eye] That is, with the moſt tender and greateſt care. So the phraſe is uſed, Pſal.17.8. and Zechar.2.8.

Verſ. 11. As an eagle ſtirreth up her neſt, fluttereth over her young, &c.] See the like ſpeech, Exod. 19. 4. and the expoſition. It is another compariſon uſed to ſet forth Gods tender care over them, and his miraculous carrying of them through all dangers.

Verſ. 12. So the Lord alone did lead him, there was no ſtrange god with him; the Sept. there was no ſtrange god with them; the Cald. there ſhall no ſervice of idols be eſtabliſhed before him. This is added, to aggravate their ſin the more in ſerving ſtrange gods, verſ.16. and the meaning is plain, that no other god did help in the leading of them, but the Lord alone, ſo that it were groſſe ingratitude to ſerve any other god.

Verſ. 13. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increaſe of the fields, &c.] By the high places the land of Canaan is meant, which was full of high mountains, and of high walled cities. Whereas Egypt was low and plain for the over-flowing of the waters: and to ride upon them is to conquer and poſſeſſe them, as the phraſe is uſed, Pſal.45.4. and 66.12. Rev.6.2. & 19.11,14. Eſay 58.14.

The encreaſe of the fields was the corn growing plenteouſly there, honey out of the rock was that which the bees gathered thither into the holes thereof, the fruits alſo ſweet like honey growing on date trees and palm trees may be meant, for they grew on rocky places, as alſo did the olive tree, and the rock is mentioned, becauſe it was ſomewhat miraculous, that a barren rock ſhould be made to yeeld ſuch fruits unto them, as ſometime the rock yielded them water in the wilderneſſe.

Exod. 17. Numb. 20. 11.

Verſ. 14. Butter of kine with milk of ſheep, and fat of lambs, &c.] He proceedeth here to reckon up all manner of earthly bleſſings, wherewith that land abounded; ſo butter and milk are ſpoken of, as ſigns of a fruitfull land, Eſay 7.21,22. and the milk of ſheep, Prov.27.27.

Numb.32.1,2. of the rams of Baſhan] Which was a place of ſingular note for fatting cattel; with the fat of the kidneys of wheat, that is, the fineſt flowr of the wheat kernel, when it is full ripe, for then it looketh like kidneys.

and thou didſt drink the pure bloud of the grape.] Hereby is meant red wine, which was the beſt in that land. And by all theſe myſtically are ſet forth the ſpiritual bleſſings of the Church under the Goſpel; for the Church is ſet upon high & heavenly places, feedeth upon the fruits of the fields of the holy Scriptures, ſucketh honey of comfort from the Rock Chriſt, eateth butter of the examples of the ancient fathers, and milk of Chriſts doctrine, the fat of the wheat of the holy Sacrament, and the bloud of the cup there; ſo Ferus. But Rabanus by the honey underſtandeth the miracles of Chriſt; and by the oyl, the Holy Ghoſt, which he ſent upon them at Pentecoſt; and by the fat of rams, the examples of the Apoſtles, who as rams went before the flock; and by goats, repentance; in other things he agreeth with Ferus.

The Myſtery. Ferus. Rabanus ex Gregor.

Verſ. 15. Part 3. But Jeſhurun waxed fat and kicked, &c.] Having ſpoken hitherto upon the ſecond part, now followeth the third, viz. the peoples ingratitude, from hence to verſ.19. For Jeſhurun, the Cald. hath Iſrael, and the Sept. beloved. It ſignifieth righteouſneſſe, by which name Iſrael is called, becauſe an holy people by calling. Shor alſo ſignifieth a bullock, from which Jeſhurun may be derived, and then there may be an alluſion in the word to a bullock, unto which in waxing fat and unruly, Iſrael is compared. Shor alſo ſignifieth to ſee, from whence Iſrael may have the name, becauſe at the giving of the law they ſaw the glory of God. So Ainſworth, the ſame word is alſo uſed to ſet forth Iſrael, Chap. 33.5, 26. and Eſay 44. 2. ישר, of which Jeſhurun cometh, ſignifieth to be right, or to pleaſe, according to which laſt the Sept. and vulgar Latine render it dilectus beloved, or with whom God was well pleaſed. I hold with Junius, that Iſrael is thus thus called here from rectitude, a virtue sometime in Israel, but now Moses foresaw by the Spirit of prophesie, that they would go altogether from the rule of righteousnesse, when they should once waxe fat with Gods benefits, and this served to aggravate their sin, as a bullock being kept in the best pasture, that it may be the more able and fit for labour, when it kicketh up the heeles, and becometh the more unruly. And there may also be an allusion in the word Jeshurun, to Shor a bullock, as the comparison is made, Jer.31.18.

Ainſworth.

The sin in particular, with which they are charged, is, that they sacrificed to strange gods, to devils, and forgat God that made them. The word translated, to devils, is לשדים, to destroyers, because the devil, that is served in idols, destroyeth mens souls, and it is opposed to the rock of their salvation, which God is said to be. Ver. 16,17, 18.

neither did their fathers fear,] For fear, Hebr. is שערום, signifying a fear with horrour, lest they should be hurt by them; for they can do neither good nor evil. Jer. 10. 5.

And hitherto the third part of this song, now followeth the fourth, viz. Gods judgments executed upon them, vers.19, 20, &c. When the Lord saw it, he abhorred them because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters,&c.] They are called his sons and daughters for his grace towards them, whereby he chose them to himself, although their spot was not the spot of his children, vers.5. Part 4. Ver. 19,20.

I will hide my face from them] So Jer.18.17. the hiding of his face is the withdrawing of his favour, and therefore it is prayed against, Psal. 27. 9. & 102.2. Exod.33.15,16.

They have moved me to jealousie with that which is not God, &c. and I will move them to jealousie with those, that are not a people &c.] This is a Propheſie of the rejection of the Jews, and of the vocation of the Gentiles, as it is applyed, Rom.10.19. 1 Pet.2.10. and the like propheſie is Hos.1.10. For the Gentiles were no people of God, and had not the knowledge of his lawes, and so were a foolish people, as they are here called, but they being received to grace, the Jewish nation was moved to jealousie and anger against those that instructed them in the faith, in every place stirring up persecution against them. Vers. 21. Hugo Card.

The Hebrews expound this of the Caldeans, which carried them away captive, because they are said to have been no people, Esay 23. 13. and Rabanus and Ferus, of the Gentiles, that gat the dominion over the Jews and divers times afflicted them, as is shewed in the book of Judges. But because the Caldeans and those nations were not taken in the room of them to be a people, that application doth no way agree, seeing the things opposed here are their provoking God to jealousie, by taking other gods unto them, which were no gods, and his taking anothe people to be his people, which were no people. And by this the Jews are noted to have been greatly provoked, Rom.11. 14. 1 Thess.2. 15, 16. and of the foolishnesse of the Gentiles in times past, see Rom.1.21,22. Jer.10.8. 1 Cor.12.2.

For a fire is kindled in my anger, and shall burn to the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her encrease, &c.] Ferus and Calvin understand the next verses, I will heap mischiefs upon them, and spend mine arrowes upon them, they shall be burnt with hunger, &c. as an explication of the fire here spoken of. And Hugo by earth, which, he saith, the fire shall destroy, understandeth wicked and earthly men; and by the increase, their works; and by the fires burning to the lowest hell, their eternal destruction with fire; and by the foundations of the mountains, the hopes and counsels of the proud, to which they trust. It is plainly a metaphorical speech, the great judgments of God upon their land being meant, which should wast, and brought to destruction in the fruitfulnesse thereof, as if it were fire burning all, as when Sodom was destroyed by fire and made waste for ever. By Vers. 22. Ferus. Calvin. Hugo Card.

the loweſt hell, the inner parts of the earth are meant, as the word Sheol is ſometime taken, wherefore in ſpeaking hereof a moſt piercing and hot burning judgment is meant. And this of deſtroying their land, as by fire, was long ago fulfilled, when that fruitful ſoyl was made ſo barren, as I have before noted upon Deut.28. and ſo it continueth to this day. And the allegory made by Hugo hereupon is very good.

Verſ. 23. I will heap miſchiefs upon them, I will ſpend mine arrowes upon them, &c.] After the judgments threatened upon their land, now follow judgments upon their perſons: for I like beſt this diſtinction of this verſe, from verſ. 22. By miſchiefs, are meant all ſorts of evils, and theſe are alſo called arrowes, both plagues, Zach.9.14. and peſtilence, Pſal. 91.5. and other ſickneſſes, Pſal.38.2. Job 6.4. of famine, Ezech.50.16. of wars, Jer. 50. 14. and Homer calleth the peſtilence an evil arrow. Iliad. 1. There be ſeven arrowes, ſaith Bernard, wherewith God woundeth here, hunger, thirſt, heat, cold, wearineſſe, infirmities, and the neceſſity of dying, and they that make a good uſe of the ſix former, ſhall not need to fear the ſeventh, according to which Job ſaith, In ſix tribulations he will deliver thee, and in the ſeventh he ſhall not touch thee. Of theſe David ſaith, thine arrowes ſtick faſt in me. Allegorically, Gods arrowes, ſaith Hugo, are his revenges ſhot from the bow of his Word by ſhooters, the Prophets and Apoſtles; of which it is ſaid, the arrowes of the Almighty are ſharp, ſo that they pierce the ſoul, that is, the menaces of his Word againſt the wicked. Thus they, but what theſe arrowes are, this ſong telleth us beſt, verſ.24,25. viz. theſe ſeven the burning with hunger, devouring with burning heat; bitter deſtruction, the teeth of beaſts; the poiſon of ſerpents, the ſword without, and terrour within. The 1. rendred, burn, is מזי, a word no where elſe uſed, but this word in Cald. ſignifieth to burn, and unto burning by famin it is alluded, when Lament.4.8. it is ſaid, their viſages were as black as a coale. The Cald. rendreth it blown up, or ſwoln with famine. This anſwereth to their waxing fat, and kicking, verſ. 15. and thus they were judged, as Hugo noteth, in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, whereof ſee Lam. 2. For devouring with burning heat, the Sept. Cald. and vulgar Latine have, devouring by fowles, for the word רשף reſheph, here uſed ſignifieth an hot diſeaſe, or fowles, or a fiery coal, Hab.3.5. it is joyned with the peſtilence, and rendred hot burning coales. That of Pſal.78. 48. he gave their cattel alſo to hail, and their flocks to hot thunderbolts; in ſpeaking of the plagues of Egypt, ſeemeth to be a ſetting forth of the like judgment. But if we take it with the Sept. and Cald. for devouring by fowles, it will better anſwer to the teeth of beaſts, and the biting of ſerpents by and by alſo ſpoken of. For of this the Pſalmiſt complaineth, the dead bodies of thy Saints have they given to the deuouring of the beaſts of the field, and to the fowles of the ayr. And this is followed by Hugo, who by the fowles, beaſts, and ſerpents, myſtically underſtandeth devils; and upon theſe words, with bitter deſtruction, or bitter biting, he ſaith, the biting of the devil is bitter in the committing of ſin, more bitter in the ſeparation of the ſoul, and moſt bitter in the reſumption of the body again. Calvin for hot burning, hath, an hot diſeaſe, which he joyneth with bitter deſtruction, expounding both together of the peſtilence, and the judgments here threatened, he ſaith, are three, famine, peſtilence, and the ſword. The word קטב, rendred deſtruction, ſignifieth a cutting off, which may either be by the peſtilence, a corrupted ayr, or by an evil ſpirit, ſaith Pagninus, ſee the ſame, Pſal.91.6. the Caldee is for deſtruction by evil ſpirits, the Septuag. for a ſtinging plague called opiſthotonos, which as Celſus ſaith, is a vehement diſeaſe in the neck, ſtraining it backward to the ſhoulder, and killeth within four dayes. I take this biting exciſion to be ſome mortal ſtriking by it ſelf, diſtinguiſht from all the reſt, but with more tormenting pain, becauſe it is called bitter deſtruction: but if that we follow that tranſlation of devouring

Bernard.

Job 5.
Pſal. 38. 2.
Hugo Cardin.

Pſal. 127.

Ver. 24,25,

Pſal. 79. 2.

Hugo Card.

Calvin.

Pagninus.

Cornel. Celſus, l. 4. c. 3.

vouring by fowles, this is nothing elſe but their bitter biting to death. For the teeth of beaſts, ſee Levit. 26. 22. and unto the lion and bear is joyned, the ſerpent biting. Amos 5. 19. of the famine, peſtilence, noiſome beaſts, and the ſword joyned altogether, ſee Ezech. 14. 21. of inward terrors, Deut. 28. 65.

I ſaid, I would ſcatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to ceaſe from amongſt men,] The vulgar latine, And I ſaid, Where are they, I will ſcatter them, &c. but in Hebrew there is no ſuch interrogation; only the Lord profeſſeth here to moderate his anger, and not utterly to deſtroy them, when he was moſt provoked out of his infinite mercy, leſt the heathen, their enemies, ſhould inſult, and aſcribe their prevailings againſt them to their own might. Verſ. 26.

Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, leſt they ſhould behave themſelves ſtrangely, and ſay, Our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this. Here God putteth upon himſelf the perſon of a man, for properly he feareth not the wrath of any, but he ſheweth by ſaying thus, that he would not utterly deſtroy them; not for that they deſerved it not, but to keep the enemy from blaſpheming, as if in ſpight of the God of Iſrael, he had thus extinguiſht the name of Iſrael; as hereby Moſes ſometime ſought to move the Lord on their behalf, Numb. 14. 15, 16. And if the enemy ſhould upon their extinction have done thus, it had been a behaving of themſelves ſtrangely. Verſ. 27. Exod. 32.

If it be ſaid, the Lord hath done thus by the Jews, they are ſcattered, as all know, and their name is in a manner extinct, how then is this propounded, as only ſpoken of, but that ſhould not come to paſſe? Object.

I anſwer, it is meant only, that he would not ſuddenly do this, neither did he it, till after a long time, to keep them in diſperſion, as at this day, nor hath he now done it ſo, as that the Gentiles take occaſion to inſult, but by their example, not to be high minded, but to fear. Neither is their name yet put out ſo, but that there is ſtill an election amongſt them. Sol. Rom. 11.

For they are a nation void of counſel] Some apply this to the Gentiles, their enemies, but it is plainly a reaſon, why the Lord was moved to ſo great indignation againſt them, to have made an utter end of them: To be wicked, and to perſiſt in ſin againſt all threatenings of judgments and promiſes of mercies, is hereby ſhewed to be without underſtanding, and void of counſel, as alſo verſ. 6. Verſ. 28.

How ſhould one chaſe a thouſand, and two put ten thouſand to flight, except their rock had ſold them, &c. Levit. 26. 7, 8. it is promiſed to them, if they obeyed, that one ſhould chaſe 1000, &c. but now through their wickedneſſe contrariwiſe the heathen dealt by them, a few confounding a great many, for though the nations were many more in number, yet through power of God working with the Iſraelites, one of them was as a thouſand in military proweſs, and ſo although the number overcoming them were far greater, yet it was but as one to a thouſand, if there were 1000 enemies to one of them. But this was alſo fulfilled by the Roman Army at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, whom the Jews far exceeded in number, and yet were deſtroyed before them in one year by the ſword, famine and peſtilence, to the number of 1100000, as Joſephus writeth. Gods ſelling of them, is his delivering them over into their hands, and ſo is his ſhutting of them up, Pſal. 44. Eſay 52. 3. Pſal. 31. 9. & 78. 62. Verſ. 30.

For their rock is not as our rock, even our enemies themſelves being Judges, &c.] By rock, underſtand God, as verſ. 4. and ſo the Sept. to make it plainer, their gods are not as our God. Here Moſes bringeth in the people of Iſrael, as ſpeaking with himſelf, and acknowledging, that their enemies could not have ſo prevailed, had not God delivered them into their hands, becauſe although their gods be unable to do any thing, yet he is moſt mighty, and could, if it had pleaſed him, ever have preſerved his people Verſ. 31.

from deſtruction. And the enemies themſelves were judges hereof, that is, were forced to confeſſe thus much, Numb. 23. 8, 12, 19, 20, &c. Exod. 14. 25. 1 Sam. 4. 8.

Verſ. 32. For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah, &c.] This is the reaſon why God delivered them up into the hands of their enemies, to a vine the houſe of Iſrael is compared, Eſay 5. 1. but like Sodom vines, which bear none but grapes of gall and bitter, ſince the deſtruction of that place by fire. Ezech. 16. 45. Iſrael is compared to Sodom, and Eſay 1. 10. the bitter grapes here are evil works; but the Cald. hath it, their vengeance is like the vengeance of Sodom, and ſuch is both their ſin and puniſhment ſaid to be, Lament. 4. 6. For the fields of Gomorrah, Hebr. are theſe words, משרמות עמורה, which may be rendred either of the fields of Gomorrah, for ſo the word is uſed, Eſay 16. 8. or of the blaſted of Gomorrah, as it is uſed Eſay 37. 27. we may take both together, and render

Hugo Card. it of the blaſted or ſmitten fields of Gomorrah. Sodom, ſaith Hugo, ſignifieth dumb, and Gomorrah rough, and with theſe vices were they infected, for they were mute, as touching the praiſe of God, and rough towards their neighbour in his neceſſity. Their grapes of gall both he and Rabanus. Rabanus apply to their bitter malice againſt Chriſt, expreſſed by the gall and vineger given unto him, hanging upon the Croſſe. And in them were

Verſ. 33. figured out Hereticks with their corrupt doctrine not only like gall, but the poiſon of ſerpents, according to that which is added, verſ. 33. their wine is the poyſon of dragons, &c. for as poyſon killeth the body, ſo corrupt doctrine killeth the ſoul; and as the poyſon of ſerpents lyeth hid, ſo this corruption is hidden under the colour of true Catholick doctrine, and thus it doth aptly more particularly denote antichriſt, and the myſtery of iniquity, as Ainſworth applyeth it, and the poyſon of aſpes is noted to be incurable, wherefore it aptly ſetteth forth their maliciouſneſſe to be incurable.

Verſ. 34. Is not this laid up in ſtore with me, and ſealed up amongſt my treaſures?] That is, this thy wickedneſſe like that of Sodom, although thou thinkeſt it ſhall be forgotten and paſſed over, yet it ſhall not, for it is laid up in my remembrance and kept ſure there, as under a ſeal in my treaſuries of wiſdom and knowledge, to take a time to repay thee with juſt puniſhments; thus the word ſealed is uſed, Job 14. 17. and Gods treaſures are ſpoken of, Job 38. 22. and Col. 2. 3. Note, that ſins which go yet unpuniſhed, ſhall not alwayes do ſo, but there are certain judgments coming therefore upon all the wicked, but God only knoweth what and when.

Verſ. 35. To me belongeth vengeance and recompence, their foot ſhall ſlide in due time, &c.] Of this ſaying uſe is made, Rom. 12. 19. and Heb. 10. 30. that we may therefore fear to ſin. The Cald. for this, their foot ſhall ſlide, hath it, they ſhall go into captivity:

the day of their calamity is at hand] For calamity, Hebr. is a word ſignifying either calamity, or a vapour, which maketh the ayr dark, and ſo is fit to ſet forth a day of judgment: the Sept. the day of their perdition is at hand; ſo 2 Pet. 3. 7.

Verſ. 36. For the Lord ſhall judge his people, and repent himſelf for his ſervants, &c.] Rabanus. By judging here, ſaith Rabanus, is to be underſtood diſcerning or ſeparating, as Matth. 25. that the wicked may be condemned, and the godly received to mercy; for ſo both he and Hugo and others generally following the Vulgar Latine reade the words, He will judge his people, and have mercy upon his ſervants.

Ferus. And theſe two words ſaith Ferus, are to be obſerved, as ſetting forth his divers proceedings at the laſt day; he will judge, that is, condemn ſome and have mercy upon, that is, ſave others. But here ſeemeth rather to be pointed out ſome time before the laſt day, when God will notwithſtanding all their provocations paſt return in mercy to his people Iſrael. For judging judging is ſometime put for defending, and puniſhing the adverſaries of his people, as Heb. 10. 30,31. and Pſalm. 43. 1. And this ſence is given by Calvin and others, yet the particle for, ſheweth rather, that is a reaſon of the miſeries before threatned, verſe 35. and then the word judging may be taken properly for puniſhing, and although he jndgeth them, yet he will repent him in mercy for his ſervants, and this is alſo followed by Calvin, the vulgar Latine, will have mercy upon his ſervants, reſpecteth rather the ſenſe, then the rendring of the word properly. And this Expoſition of judging for puniſhing, I think, is rather to be preferred, unleſſe we ſhall render כי tranſlated for by this word although as it alſo ſignifieth, or notwithſtanding, and then the other ſenſe will follow well, I will iudge, that is, revenge upon the heathen my people, into whoſe hands I have delivered them, and this ſhall be when they repent them of their wickedneſſe, as they ſhall do at the laſt. For God repenteth not for any, neither turneth to them, but when they turn unto him. When he ſeeth, that their power is gone, and there is none ſhut up and left, that is, when they are brought to extreme miſery; a like phraſe is uſed, 1 Kings 14. 10. 1 Kings 21. 21. the meaning is, when none are ſhut up or left untaken by the enemy, ſo that all things ſeeme deſperate. Calvin.

And this as Calvin noteth, is a great comfort to thoſe that are humbled in their miſeries, that they yet deſpair not, becauſe the Lord uſeth to deal thus with his, that have ſinned againſt him, he maketh their condition moſt miſerable and deſperate, and then that his mercy and power may ſhine the more he worketh their deliverance. Note.

And he will ſay, Where are their gods, their rock whom they truſted? They that underſtand the finall deſtruction of the wicked by judgeing, v. 36. take this for a bitter exprobation of their idolatries and worldly things, to which they truſted. And ſome for the exprobration of the heathen, when they were brought to ſo low an eb of miſery by their prevailings over them. Calvin will have it to be the ſpeech of Iſrael at length delivered, and triumphing over the heathen, and thus deriding them; wherefore theſe words, and he will ſay, he ſaith, are as if it had been ſaid, and it ſhall be ſaid, viz. by Gods ſervants. Verſ. 37. Ferus. Hugo Card. Calvin.

Ainſworth will have it to be a check given by God to his people being received to grace again after their miſery for their former ſerving of idols; and this I take to be beſt, for the Lord ſhall make them ſee upon their converſion how vain and fooliſh they were in ſerving falſe gods, as if they would have been a rock of defence unto them, when as they ſhall then know and acknowledge that they can do nothing, but that God onely is able to do all things, to deſtroy and ſave, to kill and to make alive, as it followeth, verſe 39. For thus, Jer. 2. 28. Iſrael is alſo checked. And ſo theſe words, he will ſay, are to be referred to the Lord, as the Sept. expreſly refer them. Ainſworth.

Which did eat the fat of their ſacrifices, &c.] This is not to be underſtood as ſpoken of men, as Calvin taketh it, being hereby moved to think, that the Jewes were not herein checked, ſeeing they ate not the fat at any time, much leſſe in ſacrifices: but as ſpoken of the falſe gods which the Jewes ſet up unto themſelves: for they are ſaid to eat the fat of ſacrifices, when it was offered to them, as when they were offered to God they are ſaid to be his bread, Levit. 21. 6. Yet Hugo alſo taketh it to be meant of mens eating; that is, of the Jewes contrary to the Law, but let the reader conſider and he ſhall ſee that theſe words which did eate have reference not to them, but to their gods, by whom they are upbraided. And in this phraſe God is brought in ſpeaking, Pſalm. 50. Doſt thou thinke that I will eate buls fleſh, or drinke the bloud of goats, when as he meaneth, doeſt thou think that offering carnall ſacrifices doth ſo highly pleaſe me. Verſ. 38.

See now that I even I am he, and there is no God with me, I kill and make alive, Ver. 39.

live, &c.] Having checked them, by their falſe gods formerly ſerved, which could do nothing towards the ſaving of them, or delivering them out of miſery, now he draweth them to himſelf, as being of all might. Jonathan to make it the plainer hath this preamble; when the word of the Lord ſhall be revealed for to redeem his people, he will ſay to all people, ſee now, &c. This word I is doubled, and then it is added, there is no God with me, to imply the myſterie of the Trinitie. Ionathan, I that am, that was, and I that ſhall be: ſee the like ſpeech, Eſay 45.5. and of killing and making alive, 1 Sam. 2 7. Job 5.18. Hoſ. 6. 1. Eſay 43. 13.

Ionathan. in Targum.

Verſ. 40. 41. Hugo Card. Calvin.

For I lift up my hand to heaven and ſay, I live for ever: If I whet my glittering ſword, &c. The horrible ſlaughter and deſtruction of the enemies of Gods people being now to be ſpoken of, that it might more certainly be expected, the Lord ſweareth that it ſhall come, for this is the form of an oath with him, Gen. 14.22. Exod. 6,8. Numb. 14 30. The Septuagint therefore have it, I lift up my hand to heaven, and ſwear by my right hand; yet ſome will have it ſpoken in way of further declaring his Almightie power to puniſh the wicked, and to reward the godly. For according to the letter, ſaith Hugo, this is a declaration of his excellent power above all things, for the higher, he lifteth up his hand the more heavie is his ſtroke, when it cometh: but he followeth the former, which indeed is to be preferred. Jonathan, as I live, ſo will I not break mine oath for ever. If I whet my glittering ſword: Here if ſaith Hugo is an affirmative, and Calvin likewiſe, when I ſhall whet; for he meant certainly to do it The Septuagint, If I whet my ſword like lightning, Zach. 9.14. His arrow ſhall goe forth like lightning, that is, ſuddenly and unreſiſtibly. The Lord ſpeaketh here after the manner of men, that kill with ſwords and arrowes, not as if at any time he were diſarmed, and had not his weapons ready, and judgement with him ready to be executed upon the wicked; but becauſe when he ſtriketh not, he ſeemeth to have laid his weapons aſide.

Ionathan in Targum Hugo Card. Calvin.

Verſ. 42. I will make mine arrowes drunk with the blood of the ſlain, &c.] A phraſe to ſet forth the ſlaughter of infinite multitudes; ſomewhat like this is that Jer. 12.12. Pſalm. 68. 23. from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy. Hebr. מרוש from the head of revenges; and ſo the Septuagint render it, meaning from the chief, or Captains of the oppreſſions of his people by the enemy; whom the Lord will chiefly deſtroy. Calvin, from the head in revenges of the enemy, that is, in taking revenge having no mercy upon any of them. If we read it from the beginning the meaning muſt be, they ſhall be deſtroyed and puniſhed according to all the wrongs that they have done from the beginning: So Junius, I will leave nothing unpuniſht that they have done againſt me from the beginning. And this ſeemeth to me to agree beſt. But againſt whom are all theſe judgements threatned? Hugo will have it to be againſt the wicked of the Jewes, of whom it was ſaid before, he will iudge his people, and have mercy upon his ſervants, verſ. 36. of their miſeries to come by the Cald. and Romans, and of their laſt deſtruction in hell, when as the Gentiles converted and his true people, that is, the faithfull indeed ſhall rejoyce and praiſe God together, and give glory to his juſtice for this execution, as verſe 33. But others better againſt the heathen, the infeſt enemies in times paſt of Iſrael, becauſe comfort is ſpoken to the Iewes, v. 36. and in calling upon all Nations to rejoyce for this judgement, he addeth verſ. 43. He will be merciſull to his land and to his people; that which cometh between, being nothing elſe but a checking of them after their converſion for their wickedneſſes paſt, the more to humble them. Wherefore it is not probable, that being now upon the concluſion, he would adde a threatning of utter deſtruction, and then profeſſe mercy.

Calvin. Junius. Hugo Cardin. Ainſworth.

Verſ. 43. For that invitation of the Gentiles to rejoyce, v. 43. together with his people, it is propheticall, ſhewing that the Gentiles ſhould under the Goſpel partake of his grace; and althogh his people were for a long time hardened dened, yet they ſhould at laſt be converted, and ſo together with the Gentiles make one Church of God, and thus it is applied, Rom. 15. 9. 10. Hebr. it is, Rejoyce ye Gentiles, his people; but by the Sept. it is rendred with his people, and by Paul following them, Rom. 15 9,10. ſhewing, that with, is to be underſtood.

For he will avenge the blood of his ſervants, &c.] That is, as judgements ſhould be executed for oppreſſions and cruelties towards the Jewes before the Goſpel, ſo under it, the blood of the martyrs, that was ſhed, ſhall be avenged upon all perſecutors, whereof the faithful ſhall finally rejoyce, as Rev. 19. 1,2.

and he will be merciful to his land, and to his people] Hebr. he will make atonement or be propitious, the word being uſed, which is Levit. 16. upon the atonement day. That is, after this, they ſhould bear no more puniſhments for their ſinnes by being perſecuted or given into their enemies hands, but dwell ſafely in their own land for ever.

Then Moſes came and recited all the words of this ſong in the eares of the people, he and Ioſhuah the ſonne of Nun, the Septuagint, he came to the people, the Cald. he came from the tabernacle, the houſe of Doctrine, and he doth not onely recite, but preſs it unto them, verſ. 46.47. to the end, ſhewing his moſt earneſt deſire of their good, and this is the eighth particular according to the diſtinction before going. ch. 31.1. Verſ. 44. 8 Particular.

The 9. particular is Gods ſummoning of Moſes to die, v. 28. And the Lord ſaid to Moſes the ſelf ſame day, goe up into this mount of Abarim, mount Nebo, &c.] God would have Moſes ſee the land of Canaan, although he ſhould not come into it for his infidelity at the waters of Meribah; but of theſe words ſee Numb. 27. 12,13,14. For they are there likewiſe uſed. 9 Particular. Ver. 48.

Chap. XXXIII.

And this is the bleſsing wherewith Moſes the man of God bleſſed the ſonnes of Iſrael, &c.] This is the 10. particular, and after the ſong that ſpake ſo terribly againſt them, ſaith Calvin, it cometh aptly in to comfort them. Iacob had before bleſſed every of his ſonnes, Gen 49. and now Moſes, as another father of the Nation bleſſeth them the ſecond time for further confirmation, and to eſtabliſh the memory of theſe bleſſings, that they might never be forgotten. Verſ. 1 10 Particular. Calvin.

And he ſaid, the Lord came from Sinai, and roſe up from Seir unto them, and ſhined forth from mount Pharan, and he came with ten thouſands of his Saints: In ſetting forth theſe bleſſings, he uſeth firſt a Preface, vers 2.3,4,5. 2. Bleſſeth each tribe, v 6. &c, laſtly, a concluſion, v 26,27, &c. Verſ. 2.

For the firſt, he pointeth at the moſt remarkable places, wherein the Lord had manifeſted himſelf unto them, that they might never forget what was done in each of them, but think upon it, and be affected accordingly, that ſo they might be bleſſed indeed. The firſt place was mount Sinai. The Septuagint hath it unto Sinai, and ſo Ainſworth noteth, that the word min, properly ſignifying from, is ſometime uſed, Eſa. 59. 20. the deliverer ſhall come to Sion, Rom. 11.26. from or out of Sion. Theſe words from Baal of Iudah, 2 Sam. 6. 2. are likewiſe rendred to Baalah, 1 Chron. 13. 6. from heaven, 2 Chron. 6. 21. to heaven, 1 King. 8. 30. But we may well follow the proper interpretation, he came from Sinai, becauſe he manifeſted himſelf from thence by thunder and lightning, a thick cloud, an earth-quake and fire, in uttering all the words of the Law, and in propounding all his Ordinances there by Moſes. Calvin rejecting that reading to Sinai, as unapt, confirmeth this, and addeth that theſe apparitions ſtriking great terrour into them are here mentioned, to intimate that the bleſſings now to be propounded were with as great reverence to be received, as the Law 1 The Preface. Ainſworth. Exod. 19.20. Calvin.

Law then, becauſe they came from the ſame God, although he was the inſtrument to utter them by the propheticall ſpirit which he had.

The ſecond place was mount Seir, And roſe up from Seir unto them; This was the mount of Edom, Deuteronomy 2. 4, 5. the thing for which it is remembered, was becauſe when Iſrael compaſſed this place, they were ſtung with fiery Serpents for their murmuring, and then a braſen ſerpent, a figure of Chriſt was ſet up to heale them: ſo that this place was remarkable for the figure of Chriſts paſſion here given them for our redemption, The word roſe up, is properly uſed in ſpeaking of the riſing of the Sunne, and accordingly Chriſt, that was here typified, is ſaid to riſe up, and that by the name of the Sunne, Mal. 4.2. The Cald. the brightneſſe of his glory from Seir appeared unto us.

Numb. 21. 9.

The third place is Pharan, and ſhined forth from mount Pharan: In the wilderneſſe of Pharan, ſaith Ferus, they were fed with Quailes, and the Spirit came upon the ſeventy. For to this wilderneſſe they came, Numbers 10. 12. and in it they made eighteen of their manſions, as is there noted, and ſo ſpent almoſt all the fourtie yeares of their peregrination.

Numb. 11.

And therefore, this place might well be named in particular, as moſt famous for the things done there; and ſo Gods glory might be ſaid to ſhine there: So Hab. 3. 3. And neare Pharan the Law was repeated and explained, Deuteronomy 1. 2. Mount Sinai here ſetteth forth the Law, and Seir, whereabout the braſen ſerpent was ſet up the paſſion of our Lord, and Pharan, whereabout the Law was inculcated and illuſtrated the ſecond time, a more clear light of knowledge in the myſteries of ſalvation: Wherefore myſtically in naming theſe three, it is intimated, that they, who are terrified by the Law, God hereby comming home to their conſciences, are forced to flie to Chriſts paſſion, and then hee riſeth up unto them to their comfort; and being in this eſtate, they are inlightned more and more, till they come to ſee all things clearly in the reſurrection.

Ainſworth. R. Solomon. R. Eliezer Jonathan.

To this effect, Ainſworth, who yet ſaith, that the Rabbins apply it thus, he roſe up to the ſonnes of Eſau, but they would not; then hee came to the ſonnes of Iſmael, but they refuſed: Laſtly, hee came to the ſonnes of Iſrael. But if by Sinai Iſrael be meant, he came firſt to them, and not laſt, and ſo this conceit falleth.

Targum Jonathan. Calvin.

And he came with tenne thouſand of Saints, Hebr. with tenne thouſand of Sanctitie; that is, ſpirits of Sanctitie, holy Angels: So Jonathan expoundeth it, and Calvin, ſaying, that the Cherubims placed about the mercy ſeate ſerved to ſhew the attendance of Angels about him; ſee alſo Eſa. 6. and Dan. 7. 10.

Acts 7. 53.

Hence it is that Stephen ſaith, the Law was given by the diſpenſation of Angels, and Paul likewiſe, Gal. 3. 19. Some are for the people of Iſrael, as here meant, with whom the Lord went from Sinai. Rabanus will have the great number converted after Chriſts paſſion to bee meant inſiſting onely upon the myſtery, but I with Calvin reſt in the firſt, and the Septuagint have it, angels with him.

Ferus.

From his right hand went a fiery Law for them. In the middeſt of ſo many glorious Saints, as witneſſeth the Law was given out of flaming fire for Iſrael, Hebr. למו for him myſtically, a fiery Law, or Law of fire, becauſe by moſt ardent love onely it is fulfilled, and if not, fiery judgements attend the tranſgreſſours to ſeiſe upon them, ſo Ferus. The Cald. His right hand wrote out the middeſt of the fire, Rab. Sol. and R. Moſes Gerundenſ. ſay, that the Law appeared written with black fire upon white fire. Rabanus by his right hand from whence this fiery Law went, underſtandeth either the elect, that are not frigidly but fervently ſet upon the doing of his will; for in their hearts this Law is written, or Chriſt Jeſus, from whence the ſpirit like fire came and filled the faithfull Act. 2.

R. Solom. R. Moſes Gerundenſ.

But

But that of Calvin for the right hand is rather to be preferred, the fiery law is ſaid to be in his right hand, as his ſcepter whereby he governeth and exerciſeth his power, and ruleth in the hearts of his people; and yet his writing of the Law with his own right hand, is not to be excluded, but may be held to be pointed at here alſo. Calvin.

Yea he loved the people, all his Saints are in thy hand, and they ſate down at thy feet, every one ſhall receive of thy words.] For people, Hebr. is, peoples, which is to be noted, becauſe either the Gentiles imbracing the faith are meant, as well as the Jews, according to Rabanus, or becauſe Iſrael being divided into tribes, and each tribe being, as it were, a people by it ſelf, might well be called peoples, according to Calvin, ſo Judg.5.14. Act.4.27. but hereby he would ſhew, that although they were now diſtinguiſhed into many peoples, yet his love was not divided from any tribe, but he loved them all, as the ſame holy ſeed of Abraham, the word Chobab here uſed, ſignifieth to imbrace with love; the Cald. hath it, he loved them for tribes. I prefer that of Calvin. Theſe words are added, to ſhew, that he did not onely give the Iſraelites a ſight of his glory, when he delivered the Law, and did many miracles before them, but alſo that he loved them peculiarly, that they might be the more excited to obedience, and ſo expect his bleſſings. Yet myſtically alſo that of Rabanus may have place here, in that the plural number is uſed, peoples. Verſ. 3. Rabanus. Calvin.

all his Saints are in thy hand] Here by Saints, are meant the ſaints in Iſrael, which are by theſe words ſhewed to be under Gods power and protection in a ſpecial manner; wherefore he ſaith, his ſaints, and not all theſe peoples, as before, to diſtinguiſh betwixt the godly and all others in the Church, for all are not Iſrael, that are of Iſrael, and it is Iſrael only that he hath graven upon his right hand. Rom. 9. 6. Eſay 49. 16.

and they ſate down at thy feet,] That is, hereby his ſaints are known, and this is their true deſcription, to ſet themſelves as Gods ſchollars to hear and learn his Will and Word, that they may do it. Their being at the foot of Mount Sinai to hear haply is alluded to; or it is a phraſe amongſt the Hebrews, Paul was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel; ſo to ſit at Gods feet, is to learn of him in his Ordinances, ſo Mary ſate at Jeſus his feet, Luc.10.39. This is a place to be noted for the diligent and carefull hearer, and againſt the negligent and ſlothful, theſe are none of his ſaints, but the other onely. Note.

Moſes commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.] Here the people are brought in ſpeaking of Moſes, and his law, extolling both him and it, that for the excellency of either by them acknowledged all generations to come might the more highly eſteem thereof. For Moſes ſought not herein his own glory, but the more credit to his Miniſtry, when he bringeth them in as ſetting him forth for a King, that is, having the higheſt authority upon earth amongſt them, not only which then lived, but which were afterwards to come from generation to generation: for he was ſtill to be reſpected, as their King and only Lawgiver, and all other Judges and Kings were to obey him, and to have a care of the execution of his lawes. And accordingly the common title given him by the Jewes, great and ſmall to this day, is this, Moſes our maſter, as by Maimony, Moſes our maſter was a King. Although the law was given by God, yet becauſe by his miniſtry it is ſaid, Moſes gave us a law, ſo alſo it is called, the Law of Moſes, 2 King. 14. 6. Luc. 24.44. Joh.7.23. 1 Cor.9.9. And this law is called their inheritance, to ſet forth the worth and the perpetuity thereof, as David, Pſal.119.111. thy teſtimonies have I taken, as my heritage for ever. Wherefore let every true Iſraelite accordingly make account of it, and make it the joy of his heart to know and obey it. Verſ. 4. Maimony in Beth habchirah, c. 6. Note.

He was a King in Jeſhurun, &c.] Of Iſrael called Jeſhurun, ſee before, Chap.32.15.

when the heads and the tribes were gathered together.] This hath reference to his giving them the Law, for then they were aſſembled to hear it. And hitherto the preface, the bleſſings now follow.

Exod. 19.7.

Verſ. 6. Let Reuben live and not dye, and let his men not be few.] Leſt this tribe ſhould have deſpaired for the ſin of their father ſo ſharply cenſured, Gen. 49.4. in Jacobs bleſſings, it is comforted by the promiſe of life, and multiplying into great numbers in the bleſſings of Moſes. The Caldee, let Reuben live to life eternal, and not dye the ſecond death, and likewiſe Jonathan, let Reuben live in this world, and not dye with the death, wherewith the wicked periſh in the world to come. The phraſe of dying and not living, is often uſed, to ſhew the greater importance, as Numb. 4. 14. Pſal.118.17. Gen.43.8. The bleſſing of Reuben then is, that he ſhould not be extinct from being a tribe amongſt the people of God, but together with the reſt of Iſrael injoy life here and hereafter.

Jonathan in Targum.

For theſe words, Let not his men be few, Hebr. is, let his men be a number, מתי־מספר, methi miſpa, which phraſe is uſed to ſet forth a few, let men be few, as Deut.4.17. Gen. 34. 10. Eſay 10.19. and a few are called men of number, becauſe they are ſoon numbred. The Sept. Let his men be many in number; but then many, is underſtood: the Cald. let his ſons receive their inheritance by their number. And even he, that expoundeth the words thus, let his men be few, will have not, underſtood, as being to be repeated from the words, inſtancing in the like, Numb. 4. 15. but there is no ſuch thing to be found. Calvin preferreth this, Let his men be few, without interpoſing not, the meaning being, that although he ſhould live, and ſomewhat ſhould be mitigated of his former puniſhment by Jacob, yet he ſhould bear a mark of his levity alwayes, in that his men ſhould be fewer, then thoſe of many other tribes, as we may ſee they were, Num. 26. yet they lived and are noted to have been valiant, and to have gone over Jordan armed together with Gad, and half Manaſſeh before their brethren, Joſh.1. as was appointed Numb.32. to which therefore he might have reſpect in this bleſſing, ſpeaking thus, Reuben ſhall live and not dye, to encourage them in that ſervice. It is to be noted, that Hon, one of the rebellious with Chorah, was of this tribe, intimating, that Reuben was deep in that rebellion, whereby he came to be ſo few in number.

Cald. Par. Ainſworth. Calvin.

Verſ.7. Hear, Lord, the voyce of Judah, and bring him unto his people, let his hands be ſufficient for him, and be thou an help unto him againſt his enemies.] Here Simeon is omitted and Levi, that was the elder brother of Judah, being put off to the next place, he is bleſſed in the ſecond place. For Simeon, ſome will have him underſtood together with Judah, as Jonathan, who coupleth him with Judah, becauſe he went with Judah forth to battel, Judg. 1. 3. and his inheritance is ſaid to have been in the midſt of Judah, Joſh. 19.1. But ſome old Greek copies, ſaith Ainſworth, couple him with Reuben thus; Let Reuben live and not dye, and let Simeon be many in number. It is not without ſome note of diſgrace, that he omitteth Simeon, as Gen. 49. 5. & 5.7. he is ſaid to have been a tribe together with Levi, that ſhould be ſcattered in Iſrael, ſee my Notes there, and becauſe he was for his ſin to have no ſuch diſtinct inheritance, as the reſt, he is not named here, although Levi, becauſe he grew famous ſince for his zeal and office is named with honour, as it followeth in his bleſſing. The curſe of Jacob took effect alſo in this tribe, in regard of the great diminiſhing thereof, for being Numb. 1. 59300, Numb.26.14. he was but 22200. and therefore it is to be thought, that this tribe was moſt guilty of the ſin with the Midianitiſh women, Numb. 25. ſeeing Zimri then ſlain was a Prince of the tribe of Simeon, and ſo thouſands of them then periſhed. Ainſworth alſo noteth, that whereas there were Judges or Kings of all other tribes, of this there was never one.

Jonathan in Targum. Ainſworth. Gen. 34.

Touching

Touching Judah, this tribe is thus preferred for the honour of the Kingdome appointed unto it, and of the everlaſting King Chriſt, who was to come of Judah, and he marcheth firſt of all the tribes, Numb. 10.14. whereas Jacob ſpake of his dominion, here Moſes intimateth, that he ſhould not come unto it without trouble, making him to call upon God for ayd, as it happened to David, the firſt King that ſprung of this tribe, and afterwards to Abijah, 2 Chron. 13. 14. and Aſa, 2 Chron. 14. 11. and to Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. 20. 5. and to Hezekiah, 2 Chron. 32. 20. for they all were in ſtreights and called upon the Lord, who heard and delivered them according to this propheſie. And David ſaith, God taught his hands to war, according to this, Let his hands be ſufficient for him, and he returned to his people and Kingdom, 2 Sam. 19. 11. and this tribe returned, after the 70 years captivity in Babylon, Ezra, Nehem. Myſtically the return of Chriſt is pointed at, for he ſhall return unto his people, the Jews, Rom. 11. 26, 31. and the fathers alwayes heard him, Joh. 11. 42. Heb. 5. 7. and all the faithful, who as Rabanus hath it, are alſo ſet forth by Judah, who alwayes confeſſe and call upon his name, and are heard in their prayers.

Gen. 49. 10. Calvin. Pſal. 144. 1. Rabanus.

And of Levi he ſaid, thy Thummim and thy Urim with the man, thy merciful man, whom thou tempteſt in Maſſah, &c.] That is, let thy perfections and lights ever contiue in this tribe, as the words Thummim and Urim ſignifie, and therefore Calvin readeth, thy perfections and thy ſplendours. Of the Thummim and Urim put in the high prieſts breſt-plate, ſee Exod. 28. 30. but the graces myſtically ſet forth thereby are here meant, and the office of the high prieſthood, which is hereby propheſied to be perpetual in that tribe, till the coming of Chriſt. The word rendred merciful, is by ſome rendred ſaint, or holy one, and it may be read either, the man, thy holy one, or the man of thy holy one; and if ſo, it is meant the man of God: but Aaron the high Prieſt is called a ſaint, Pſal. 106. 16. Tremellius, with the man whom thou proſecuteſt, with mercy, and this ſeemeth to be beſt; the man of thy mercy, he is called, for the mercy ſhewed to this tribe, in turning the curſe of Jacob into a bleſſing, in that their ſcattering was for great good to all, and honour to themſelves.

Verſ. 8. Calvin.

Whom thou didſt prove at Maſſah, and with whom thou didſt ſtrive, &c.] It is ſaid Exod. 17. that when the people were in Rephidim, they chod with Moſes for the want of water, and that place was hereupon called Maſſah, or Meribah, and Numb. 20. they murmuring another time for want of water, and this is ſaid to have been in Meribah, verſ. 13. and then they roſe up both againſt Moſes and Aaron, and they are ſaid to have ſtriven with the Lord, who was ſanctified in them: but in the former place, there is no mention made of any chiding or ſtriving with Aaron, but onely at Meribah, wherefore Tremellius rendreth Maſſah, as an appellative here, thou provedſt him with temptation. But becauſe Aaron together with Moſes ſinned there, how is this ſpoken of in his commendation? Calvin thinketh, that it is mentioned the more to ſet forth the Lords mercy towards him, notwithſtanding his weakneſſe there ſhewed, or elſe, that his zeal for the Lord, from whence his errour then proceeded, is hereby commended: for this made him impatient to ſee the people to tumultuate againſt God, or that by an apoſtrophe Moſes turneth his ſpeech here to Iſrael, thou (O Iſrael) didſt tempt and ſtrive with him. But he preferreth the former, for that although he brake out into impatience, yet he ſhewed great piety, and ceaſed not ſtoutly to do his office. Ainſworth referreth this tempting of Aaron to the Lords reproving of him for his ſin at this place, or to the Lords tempting of him with the other Iſraelites at Maſſah: for neither he, nor the reſt of the Levites murmured then, ſaith Sol. Jarchi, for which he is commended, Mal. 2. 5. and Pſal. 99. 7. or laſtly, to Jeſus Chriſt, as if it had been ſaid, Thy Urim and Thummim, O Levi, is with Chriſt, thy holy one,

Calvin. Ainſworth. Sol. Jarchi.

Whom

Cald. Septuag. whom thou temptedſt, &c. The Cald. whom thou temptedſt with temptation and he was perfect, and provedſt him at the waters of contention and he was found faithful: the Sept. Whom they tempted in tentation and reviled at the waters of contradiction. Of all theſe Expoſitions, I prefer that of the peoples tempting him and ſtriving with him; for we read not, that the Lord ſtrove with him at any time, wherefore I underſtand, thou temptedſt him, thus, thou didſt permit him to be tempted with a temptation indeed, when all the people ſtrove with him, and murmured at Meribah, becauſe he joyned with Moſes againſt them, ſeeking doubtleſſe with all earneſtneſſe to ſuppreſſe that ſin, and ſo I take Maſſah with Tremellius for temptation, and not for the proper name of a place mentioned Exod.17. where there was no ſtriving with Aaron, but with Moſes onely. And this is mentioned here in the commendation of Aaron, as being one famous act of his zeal for the Lord, his ſin, that he then by infirmity fell into, being paſſed over, and next unto this he commemorateth the execution done by his tribe upon the Iſraelites that had ſinned with the golden calf. It is then, as if he had ſaid, when he called him the man of his mercy, this mercy was not ſhewed him in vain in conferring the Prieſthood upon him, for Aaron one of this tribe and the high prieſt was tempted, and ſuffered much for the Lords ſake, and the whole tribe ſhewed great zeal for him againſt the idolaters, Exod.32.

Verſ. 9. Who ſaid to his father and his mother, I have not ſeen him, neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children, &c.] Herein the praiſes of the whole tribe of Levi are ſet forth, they were ſo intent to ſerve the Lord in the office to which they were appointed, that no natural affection to thoſe, that were moſt near or dear unto them could hinder them herein, but they did, as men wholly intent to the execution thereof, thus Calvin, Junius, and Rabanus, &c. And more particularly in ſaying thus, reſpect was had to that, Exod. 32.26,27. where Moſes biddeth them to kill every one his brother and his companion, and they did accordingly: and to the laws made for the prieſts, they might not mourn for father or mother dying, or for their brethren or children, for Aaron is forbidden to uncover his head, for his ſons Nadab and Abihu that dyed before the Lord, and ſo are Eleazar and Ithamar, their brethren, leſt they ſhould be defiled and made unfit to execute the Prieſts office.

Calvin. Junius. Rabanus. Levit.21.11. Levit. 10.6.

Note. Matth.10.37. Morally we are taught hereby, that nothing ſhould hinder us in that way, which God hath appointed us to walk in, if father or mother, or brother or ſiſter or children ſhould ſtand to hinder us from following Chriſt, they muſt be neglected. It is alſo meant, in judgment he knew them not, according to the Cald. he had no compaſſion on his father and mother, when they were guilty of judgment, and accepted not the faces of his brother, or of his ſonne: for theſe words, I have not ſeen him, are as much as, I have not reſpected him to be moved with partiality.

Cald. Par. for they have obſerved thy word, and kept thy covenant.] This ſheweth, that the praiſe given to Levi before was of all that tribe, and not of the high prieſt ſingularly, as that of being tempted before going, and it confirmeth the Expoſition ſet down, Levi went according to the Word of God in killing the idolaters, and thenceforth in paſſing over the funerals of their deareſt friends without mourning for reverence to the Lords ſanctuary, as they were bound by his covenant.

Verſ.10. They ſhall teach Iacob thy judgments, and Iſrael thy lawes, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, &c.] This was another part of the office of this tribe, as is ſhewed, Levit.10.9,10. Deut.17.9,10. Chap. 24.8. Ezech. 44. 23,24. Mal.2. 6,7. in all which places his teaching of them and his knowledge is ſpoken of, and celebrated. For his putting incenſe before him, ſee Exod. 30.7. and for his offering all kinds of ſacrifices, meant by whole burnt-offerings, Levit.6.&c. Jacob and Iſrael are both named here, ſaith Ainſworth, to ſet forth the weak and the ſtrong, for the Church is called

2 Chron. 26. 18.

Ainſworth:

Jacob,

Jacob for the weakneſſe, Amos 7.2,5,8. and Iſrael for the ſtrength of his faith. For theſe words, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, Hebr. it is, in thy noſthril, or anger, becauſe Gods anger is pacified hereby, Numb. 16.46. And in this the high Prieſt figured out Chriſt, Rev.8.3,5. and the Levites teaching the weak and ſtrong, his care to have his lambs fed as well as his ſheep, Joh. 21.15,16.

Verſ. 11. Calvin.

Bleſſe (Lord) his ſubſtance, and accept the work of his hands, ſmite through the loines of them that riſe up againſt him, &c.] This, ſaith Calvin, is added for the comfort of the Levites in reſpect of worldly things, becauſe they had none inheritance amongſt their brethren, they might have feared, leſt they ſhould want ſuſtenance, therefore that they might cheerfully intend the ſervice committed unto them, and not care and toyl for the world after the manner of other men, he bleſſeth their ſubſtance, hereby putting them in hope, that they ſhould never want, but be abundantly ſupplyed out of the tythes and offerings of the Lord.

and accept the work of his hands] This, he ſaith, may be underſtood generally of that labour, which is about getting food, and of the work of their miniſtry about the tabernacle, that it might be as fruitful to them to bring in neceſſaries for this life, as the labours of others in tilling the ground. And becauſe the miniſters of God executing their office faithfully, ſhall alwayes have enemies of the wicked, that cannot abide the light, or to have their ſins impugned, he terrifieth them with ſtriking through their loines, and caſting them down ſo, that they never riſe up again. So Jeremiah is promiſed, they ſhall fight againſt thee, but ſhall not prevail. This was proved true in Chorah and his company, and it is a great comfort to all Gods faithful Miniſters, and a terrour to thoſe that hate them. The word חולו rendred, his ſubſtance, ſignifieth either power or ſubſtance, the firſt is followed by the Sept. and this word is put for an army, Ezech.37.10. and Maimony ſaith, the Levites wage not war, like other Iſraelites, but they are the power or army of God, as it is written, bleſſe, Lord, his power, and they are called an army or hoſt, Numb.4.3. the other of ſubſtance is followed by the Caldee; we may may take it for both, for they that ſerve God at his altar ſhall not only be liberally provided for, that they may not ſeek worldly lucre, but alſo be found to have great power through God againſt the enemy aſſaulting his people, and in all dangers, and againſt all that hate them, and thus the laſt clauſe anſwereth well to this firſt.

Jer. 1.19. Numb. 16.

Note.

Maimony treatiſe of releaſe, c. 13.

Rabanus rendring it, Bleſſe, Lord, his fortitude, applyeth it myſtically to the Martyrs of God, who are here propheſied of, that they ſhould be of invincible courage in the midſt of all their torments, and the backs of their perſecutors are threatened with ſtriking through, which is, when unawares, they not foreſeeing it, horrible judgments come, as it were upon their backs, when, as it is in the book of wiſdom, they ſhall repent with over-late and unfruitful repentance, ſaying, theſe are they, whom we had in deriſion, and taunted at them, we ſenſleſſe men thought their life a madneſſe, and their end without honour, how are they now counted amongſt the ſaints of God, and their lot is amongſt his ſons?

Rabanus. The Myſtery.

Verſ. 12.

And of Benjamin he ſaid, the beloved of the Lord ſhall dwell in ſafety by him, and the Lord ſhall cover him, &c.] Benjamin was the youngeſt of all Jacobs children, and yet he is here put next unto Judah and Levi, becauſe his lot was by Judah, between him and Joſeph, Joſ.18.11. and he calleth him the beloved of the Lord, becauſe Jeruſalem, which was in this tribe, was choſen by the Lord to place his name there, Joſh.18.28. wherefore he ſaith, he ſhall dwell in ſafety by the Lord, and under the covert of his wings, as Pſal.91. and by dwelling, is meant his continuance in the truth, and adhering to the choſen Kingdom of Judah, when others fell away, 2 Chron. 11.1,2,3,12,13.

Cald. Septuag.

whom thou temptedſt, &c. The Cald. whom thou temptedſt with temptation and he was perfect, and provedſt him at the waters of contention and he was found faithful: the Sept. Whom they tempted in tentation and reviled at the waters of contradiction. Of all theſe Expoſitions, I prefer that of the peoples tempting him and ſtriving with him; for we read not, that the Lord ſtrove with him at any time, wherefore I underſtand, thou temptedſt him, thus, thou didſt permit him to be tempted with a temptation indeed, when all the people ſtrove with him, and murmured at Meribah, becauſe he joyned with Moſes againſt them, ſeeking doubtleſſe with all earneſtneſſe to ſuppreſſe that ſin, and ſo I take Maſſah with Tremellius for temptation, and not for the proper name of a place mentioned Exod.17. where there was no ſtriving with Aaron, but with Moſes onely. And this is mentioned here in the commendation of Aaron, as being one famous act of his zeal for the Lord, his ſin, that he then by infirmity fell into, being paſſed over, and next unto this he commemorateth the execution done by his tribe upon the Iſraelites that had ſinned with the golden calf. It is then, called him the man of his mercy, this mercy was in conferring the Prieſthood upon him, for Aaro high prieſt was tempted, and ſuffered much for whole tribe ſhewed great zeal for him againſt the

Verſ. 9.

Who ſaid to his father and his mother, I have not knowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children, &c the whole tribe of Levi are ſet forth, they were in the office to which they were appointed, th thoſe, that were moſt near or dear unto them c but they did, as men wholly intent to the execut

Calvin. Junius. Rabanus.

Junius, and Rabanus, &c. And more particular was had to that, Exod. 32.26,27. where Moſes one his brother and his companion, and they di Levit.21.11. Levit. 10.6.

laws made for the prieſts, they might not mour ing, or for their brethren or children, for Aaron head, for his ſons Nadab and Abihu that dyed b Eleazar and Ithamar, their brethren, leſt they ſ unfit to execute the Prieſts office.

Note.

Morally we are taught hereby, that nothing way, which God hath appointed us to walk in, ther or ſiſter or children ſhould ſtand to hinder they muſt be neglected. It is alſo meant, in juc

Matth.10.37.

Cald. Par.

according to the Cald. he had no compaſſion on his were guilty of judgment, and accepted not the faces o for theſe words, I have not ſeen him, are as much him to be moved with partiality.

for they have obſerved thy word, and kept thy cov the praiſe given to Levi before was of all that t prieſt ſingularly, as that of being tempted befor the Expoſition ſet down, Levi went according killing the idolaters, and thenceforth in paſſing over the funerals of their deareſt friends without mourning for reverence to the Lords ſanctuary, as they were bound by his covenant.

Verſ.10.

They ſhall teach Iacob thy judgments, and Iſrael thy lawes, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, &c.] This was another part of the office of this tribe, as is ſhewed, Levit.10.9,10. Deut.17.9,10. Chap. 24.8. Ezech. 44. 23,24. Mal.2. 6,7. in all which places his teaching of them and his knowledge is ſpoken of, and celebrated. For his putting incenſe before him, ſee Exod. 30.7. and for his offering all kinds of ſacrifices, meant by whole burnt-offerings, Levit.6.&c. Jacob and Iſrael are both named here, ſaith Ainſworth, to ſet forth the weak and the ſtrong, for the Church is called

2 Chron. 26. 18.

Ainſworth:

Jacob,

Jacob for the weakneſſe, Amos 7.2,5,8. and Iſrael for the ſtrength of his faith. For theſe words, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, Hebr. it is, in thy noſthril, or anger, becauſe Gods anger is pacified hereby, Numb. 16.46. And in this the high Prieſt figured out Chriſt, Rev.8.3,5. and the Levites teaching the weak and ſtrong, his care to have his lambs fed as well as his ſheep, Joh. 21.15,16.

Bleſſe (Lord) his ſubſtance, and accept the work of his hands, ſmite through the loines of them that riſe up againſt him, &c.] This, ſaith Calvin, is added for the comfort of the Levites in reſpect of worldly things, becauſe they had none inheritance amongſt their brethren, they might have feared, leſt they ſhould want ſuſtenance, therefore that they might cheerfully intend the ſervice committed unto them, and not care and toyl for the world after the manner of other men, he bleſſeth their ſubſtance, hereby putting them in hope, that they ſhould never want, but be abundantly ſupplyed out of the tythes and offerings of the Lord. Verſ. 11. Calvin.

od gef their bring round.
, ſhall or to their
So Je-
This ort to
The ce, the ch.37.
telites,
d, his f ſubr they
, that power ngers, ell to

IRREGULAR PAGINATION

Jer. 1. 19. Numb. 16. Note.

Maimony treatiſe of releaſe, c. 13.

ally to be of cks of en un-upon it with we had a madnongſt

Rabanus. The Myſtery.

the ſaints of God, and their lot is amongſt his ſons?

And of Benjamin he ſaid, the beloved of the Lord ſhall dwell in ſafety by him, and the Lord ſhall cover him, &c.] Benjamin was the youngeſt of all Jacobs children, and yet he is here put next unto Judah and Levi, becauſe his lot was by Judah, between him and Joſeph, Joſ.18.11. and he calleth him the beloved of the Lord, becauſe Jeruſalem, which was in this tribe, was choſen by the Lord to place his name there, Joſh.18. 28. wherefore he ſaith, he ſhall dwell in ſafety by the Lord, and under the covert of his wings, as Pſal.91. and by dwelling, is meant his continuance in the truth, and adhering to the choſen Kingdom of Judah, when others fell away, 2 Chron. 11.1,2,3,12,13. Verſ. 12.

Cald. Septuag. whom thou temptedſt, &c. The Cald. whom thou temptedſt with temptation and he was perfect, and provedſt him at the waters of contention and he was found faithful: the Sept. Whom they tempted in tentation and reviled at the waters of contradiction. Of all theſe Expoſitions, I prefer that of the peoples tempting him and ſtriving with him; for we read not, that the Lord ſtrove with him at any time, wherefore I underſtand, thou temptedſt him, thus, thou didſt permit him to be tempted with a temptation indeed, when all the people ſtrove with him, and murmured at Meribah, becauſe he joyned with Moſes againſt them, ſeeking doubtleſſe with all earneſtneſſe to ſuppreſſe that ſin, and ſo I take Maſſah with Tremellius for temptation, and not for the proper name of a place mentioned Exod.17. where there was no ſtriving with Aaron, but with Moſes onely. And this is mentioned here in the commendation of Aaron, as being one famous act of his zeal for the Lord, his ſin, that he then by infirmity fell into, being paſſed over, and next unto this he commemorateth the execution done by his tribe upon the Iſraelites that had ſinned with the golden calf. It is then, as if he had ſaid, when he called him the man of his mercy, this mercy was not ſhewed him in vain in conferring the Prieſthood upon him, for Aaron one of this tribe and the high prieſt was tempted, and ſuffered much for the Lords ſake, and the whole tribe ſhewed great zeal for him againſt the idolaters, Exod.32.

Verſ. 9. Who ſaid to his father and his mother, I have not ſeen him, neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children, &c.] Herein the praiſes of the whole tribe of Levi are ſet forth, they were ſo intent to ſerve the Lord in the office to which they were appointed, that no natural affection to thoſe, that were moſt near or dear unto them could hinder them herein, but they did, as men wholly intent to the execution thereof, thus Calvin, Junius, and Rabanus, &c. And more particularly in ſaying thus, reſpect was had to that, Exod.32.26,27. where Moſes biddeth them to kill every one his brother and his companion, and they did accordingly: and to the laws made for the prieſts, they might not mourn for father or mother dying, or for their brethren or children, for Aaron is forbidden to uncover his head, for his ſons Nadab and Abihu that dyed before the Lord, and ſo are Eleazar and Ithamar, their brethren, leſt they ſhould be defiled and made unfit to execute the Prieſts office.

Calvin. Junius. Rabanus. Levit.21.11. Levit. 10.6.

Note. Morally we are taught hereby, that nothing ſhould hinder us in that way, which God hath appointed us to walk in, if father or mother, or brother or ſiſter or children ſhould ſtand to hinder us from following Chriſt, they muſt be neglected. It is alſo meant, in judgment he knew them not, according to the Cald. he had no compaſſion on his father and mother, when they were guilty of judgment, and accepted not the faces of his brother, or of his ſonne: for theſe words, I have not ſeen him, are as much as, I have not reſpected him to be moved with partiality.

Matth.10.37. Cald. Par.

for they have obſerved thy word, and kept thy covenant.] This ſheweth, that the praiſe given to Levi before was of all that tribe, and not of the high prieſt ſingularly, as that of being tempted before going, and it confirmeth the Expoſition ſet down, Levi went according to the Word of God in killing the idolaters, and thenceforth in paſſing over the funerals of their deareſt friends without mourning for reverence to the Lords ſanctuary, as they were bound by his covenant.

Verſ.10. They ſhall teach Iacob thy judgments, and Iſrael thy lawes, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, &c.] This was another part of the office of this tribe, as is ſhewed, Levit.10.9,10. Deut.17.9,10. Chap. 24.8. Ezech. 44. 23,24. Mal.2. 6,7. in all which places his teaching of them and his knowledge is ſpoken of, and celebrated. For his putting incenſe before him, ſee Exod. 30.7. and for his offering all kinds of ſacrifices, meant by whole burnt-offerings, Levit.6.&c. Jacob and Iſrael are both named here, ſaith Ainſworth, to ſet forth the weak and the ſtrong, for the Church is called Jacob,

2 Chron. 26. 18.

Ainſworth:

Jacob for the weakneſſe, Amos 7.2,5,8. and Iſrael for the ſtrength of his faith. For theſe words, they ſhall put incenſe before thee, Hebr. it is, in thy noſthril, or anger, becauſe Gods anger is pacified hereby, Numb. 16.46. And in this the high Prieſt figured out Chriſt, Rev.8.3,5. and the Levites teaching the weak and ſtrong, his care to have his lambs fed as well as his ſheep, Joh. 21.15,16.

Verſ. 11. Calvin.

Bleſſe (Lord) his ſubſtance, and accept the work of his hands, ſmite through the loines of them that riſe up againſt him, &c.] This, ſaith Calvin, is added for the comfort of the Levites in reſpect of worldly things, becauſe they had none inheritance amongſt their brethren, they might have feared, leſt they ſhould want ſuſtenance, therefore that they might cheerfully intend the ſervice committed unto them, and not care and toyl for the world after the manner of other men, he bleſſeth their ſubſtance, hereby putting them in hope, that they ſhould never want, but be abundantly ſupplyed out of the tythes and offerings of the Lord.

and accept the work of his hands] This, he ſaith, may be underſtood generally of that labour, which is about getting food, and of the work of their miniſtry about the tabernacle, that it might be as fruitful to them to bring in neceſſaries for this life, as the labours of others in tilling the ground. And becauſe the miniſters of God executing their office faithfully, ſhall alwayes have enemies of the wicked, that cannot abide the light, or to have their ſins impugned, he terrifieth them with ſtriking through their loines, and caſting them down ſo, that they never riſe up again. So Jeremiah is promiſed, they ſhall fight againſt thee, but ſhall not prevail. This was proved true in Chorah and his company, and it is a great comfort to all Gods faithful Miniſters, and a terrour to thoſe that hate them. The word חולו rendred, his ſubſtance, ſignifieth either power or ſubſtance, the firſt is followed by the Sept. and this word is put for an army, Ezech.37.10. and Maimony ſaith, the Levites wage not war, like other Iſraelites, but they are the power or army of God, as it is written, bleſſe, Lord, his power, and they are called an army or hoſt, Numb.4.3. the other of ſubſtance is followed by the Caldee; we may may take it for both, for they that ſerve God at his altar ſhall not only be liberally provided for, that they may not ſeek worldly lucre, but alſo be found to have great power through God againſt the enemy aſſaulting his people, and in all dangers, and againſt all that hate them, and thus the laſt clauſe anſwereth well to this firſt.

Jer. 1.19. Numb. 16. Note.

Maimony treatiſe of releaſe, c. 13.

Rabanus rendring it, Bleſſe, Lord, his fortitude, applyeth it myſtically to the Martyrs of God, who are here propheſied of, that they ſhould be of invincible courage in the midſt of all their torments, and the backs of their perſecutors are threatened with ſtriking through, which is, when unawares, they not foreſeeing it, horrible judgments come, as it were upon their backs, when, as it is in the book of wiſdom, they ſhall repent with over-late and unfruitful repentance, ſaying, theſe are they, whom we had in deriſion, and taunted at them, we ſenſleſſe men thought their life a madneſſe, and their end without honour, how are they now counted amongſt the ſaints of God, and their lot is amongſt his ſons?

Rabanus. The Myſtery.

Verſ. 12.

And of Benjamin he ſaid, the beloved of the Lord ſhall dwell in ſafety by him, and the Lord ſhall cover him, &c.] Benjamin was the youngeſt of all Jacobs children, and yet he is here put next unto Judah and Levi, becauſe his lot was by Judah, between him and Joſeph, Joſ.18.11. and he calleth him the beloved of the Lord, becauſe Jeruſalem, which was in this tribe, was choſen by the Lord to place his name there, Joſh.18.28. wherefore he ſaith, he ſhall dwell in ſafety by the Lord, and under the covert of his wings, as Pſal.91. and by dwelling, is meant his continuance in the truth, and adhering to the choſen Kingdom of Judah, when others fell away, 2 Chron. 11.1,2,3,12,13.

Ainſworth. and he ſhall dwell between his ſhoulders.] This Ainſworth underſtandeth of the Lord dwelling within the coaſts of Benjamin, which in the Hebrew phraſe are called ſhoulders, as we do read, Numb.34.11. of the ſhoulder of the Sea of Chinnereth, that is, the coaſt thereof. But Calvin rejecting this as forced, will have Benjamins dwelling, as it were, between the Lords ſhoulders meant, a compariſon being taken from a mother, which holdeth her child, whom ſhe greatly tendereth, between her armes: and this I prefer as beſt, becauſe both Benjamins dwelling by the Lord only is ſpoken of, and although a nook of land by the Sea in form of a ſhoulder is ſo called, yet the coaſts of any tribe had never yet any ſuch name given unto them.

Calvin.

Verſ. 13. And of Joſeph he ſaid, Bleſſed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, &c.] In this bleſſing Moſes ſpeaketh ſingularly according to the bleſſing of Jacob before, Gen.49.22. as he doth not of any other tribe, to confirm that, which was then ſaid the more, as Calvin hath it. Wherefore the expoſition may be ſeen there, he bleſſeth his land with exceeding great fruitfulneſſe, yea his very hills and mountains, and him with victory over his enemies.

Verſ. 14. For the pretious things brought forth by the Sun, and the pretious things brought forth by the Moon.] Here his earthly bleſſings are amplified more, then they were before, the natural cauſes of fruitfulneſſe being mentioned, the heat coming from the Sun, and the moiſture from the Moon making all things to grow and flouriſh. Sol. Jarchi ſaith, the Moon ripeneth ſome fruits, as Cucumbers and Gourds, as the ſun, to which Joſeph's land lay open, ripened grapes and other fruits. Cazkuni by Moons, underſtandeth the moneths, in one of which the ſummer fruits were gathered, in other olives, and another dates.

Sol. Jarchi in Deut 33.

Verſ. 15. For the precious things of the ancient Mountains, &c.] The Mountains are called ancient, not becauſe they are more ancient then the earth, but becauſe they were firſt dryed from the waters of Noahs floud, and ſo were firſt made fit to bear fruit. Calvin thinketh, that they are called ancient for honour, becauſe of their fruitfulneſſe. And they are named in particular, to ſhew how fruitful this land was, when the very hills abounded with fruit, as is ſhewed of mount Ephraim, Judg.17.1. and the mountains of Samaria, Amos 3.9. By the epithite of everlaſting and perpetual, the mountains and hills are alſo ſet forth, Hab. 3. 6. being ſo called, becauſe they continue alwayes from the beginning to the end of the world.

Calvin.

Verſ. 16. and for the good will of him, that dwelt in the buſh, Let bleſſings come upon the head of Ioſeph.] Calvin miſliking this reading, hath it, let the good will of him that dwelt in the buſh come upon the head of Ioſeph; the fountain of all bleſſings being hereby ſhewed, even the good pleaſure of God, that in great mercy had appeared to him, the buſh like a flame of fire, and this the Hebrew will bear without ſupplying the word bleſſing, which is ſupplyed by others. The Sept. for good will, have, the things acceptable to him, that appeared in the bramble buſh; the Vulgar Latine, the bleſſing of him, that appeared, &c. The Lord is here thus deſcribed, becauſe his almighty power was thus ſhewed, when the buſh burned, but was not conſumed, and becauſe there and then he declared himſelf to be the God of their fathers, ready to bleſſe them for their ſakes, which things are mentioned in the deſcription made by Jacob, Gen. 49.25. ſo that he being both able and willing for his love to Jacob his father, who loved him ſo dearly, he might certainly expect this bleſſing.

Calvin.

Verſ. 17. His glory is like the firſtling of his bullock, his hornes like unicorns, with them he ſhall puſh the people together, &c. the Cald. the chief of his ſons his glory; this, ſaith Cazkuni, was Joſhua, who came of Joſeph, and conquered the land, puſhing the people, as with Unicorns horns, ſee Numb.23.22. And he is compared to the firſtling, that is, the beſt and goodlieſt of bullocks in in Joſephs land, and to the Unicorn which is the King of beaſts, and therefore a King may well be compared unto it. Laſtly, ſhewing, who they were, that were thus bleſſed and ſhould prevail, he ſaith, the ten thouſands of Ephraim, and the thouſands of Manaſſeh, becauſe Ephraim was bleſſed by Jacob with a greater increaſe of people, then Manaſſeh, and had many more men, Numb. 1. 33. yet Manaſſeh had more afterwards, Numb. 26. 34. But Moſes reſpected Iacobs bleſſing, and what Ephraim ſhould again be, when he ſhould be the head of a Kingdome. Sol. Jarchi ſaith, by the ten thouſands of Ephraim, Ioſhua is ſet forth, and his men; by the thouſands of Manaſſeh, Gideon and his men. Hugo will have Jeroboam meant, that was firſt King of the ten tribes, and was an Ephraimite, when Ioſeph is compared to a principal bullock, and he ſaith, the horns of an unicorn in the plural are aſcribed to Ioſeph, and not an horn, to denote two tribes that ſhould come of him. And in Ephraim with his ten thouſands, he ſaith, are figured out the Gentiles, and in Manaſſeh with his thouſands, the Jews, becauſe the Gentiles are as the younger brother, and yet are preferred before the Jews, who are as the elder, and the faithful of them are many more, ſee Rev. 7. 9.

Cazkuni.

Gen. 48. 19.

Hugo Card.

And of Zabulun he ſaid, Rejoyce Zabulun in thy going out, and Iſſachar in thy tents, they ſhall call the people to the Mountain, &c.] Here are two tribes put together, ſaith Calvin, becauſe they ſhould be placed near together, but their divers condition is in theſe words declared; Zabulun he ſheweth, ſhonld be induſtrious, making many expeditions by ſea into forraign parts to get wealth, as his dwelling being near the ſea was fit for this purpoſe; but Iſſachar ſhould keep at home, and lead a more quiet life, and being made wealthy, he ſheweth, they ſhould not forget God the author of their proſperity, but come up to Jeruſalem, and bring ſacrifices to him, in that he ſaith, they ſhall call the people to the Mountain, and there they ſhall offer the ſacrifices of righteouſneſſe, for they ſhall ſuck of the abundance of the Seas, and of treaſures hid in the ſand: for by the mountain, the temple ſtanding upon mount Moriah in Jeruſalem is meant, to which they though dwelling far off ſhould come to worſhip, inviting one another ſo to do, as the like is ſpoken of, Pſal. 122. By the abundance of the ſeas, and the treaſures hid in the ſand, the gain coming in by Merchandiſe is ſet forth by a figure, and not golden ſands or treaſures hid in the ſands, as ſome do fondly imagine, ſaying, they ſhould have ſuch abundance, that they ſhould hide gold and ſilver there. That of Calvin is confirmed by the Sept. turning it, the merchandize of the nations, that dwell by the ſea. Hugo will have either their going out of Egypt, or their goings to ſea to be meant in the firſt words, and Iſſachars dwelling in ſafety in the next. For their calling of the people to the Mountain, he alſo expoundeth it of Jeruſalem, to which they ſhould repair to utter their merchandize, many flocking unto them thither to buy it, and then they ſhould in thankfulneſſe for their riches do ſacrifice; and by the hid treaſure in the ſand, he will have pearles and gold oft times found in the ſands by thoſe, that go to ſea, meant. Theſe two tribes are alſo ſpoken of by Jacob, to the ſame effect, and put one immediately after another, Gen. 49. 13, 14. Iſſachar is noted by Ainſworth to be the elder brother, yet Zabulon his younger is placed firſt, and Gen. 49. 13. whereas Iſſachars dwelling in tents is ſpoken of, he alſo noteth, that his countrey was fruitful of corn, and therefore he reſted quietly at home and followed his husbandry. But for their calling of the people to the Mountain, he ſpecially noteth, out of Sol. Jarchi, that this is to be applyed to Iſſachar, whoſe ſons are ſaid to have had underſtanding for the times to know, what Iſrael ought to do, the heads of them were 200, and all their brethren were at their command. Jarchi ſaith, they were heads of the counſel imployed hereabout, that is, ſitting quietly in their own land they obſerved the new Moons and the times of other feaſts, giving all Iſrael warn-

Ver. 18, 19.

Calvin.

Hugo Cardinalis.

Ainſworth.

Sol. Jarchi.

1 Chron. 12. 32.

ing thereof, that they might then go up to Ierusalem the place which God had chosen. And of the Gentiles, it is said, All peoples shall flock unto it, and say, come let us goe up to the mountain of the house of the Lord; so that by the people the Gentiles may also be understood, who trafficking with Zabulon, were by them drawne to the worship of the true God.

Esa. 2. 2, 3.

Vers. 20. And of Gad he said, blessed be he that inlargeth Gad, he dwelleth as a Lion, and teareth the arme, &c.] Jacob had foretold, that a company should overcome Gad, but he should overcome at the last, wherefore the inlargement of Gad here spoken of may best be understood of his inlargement by shaking of the dominion gotten over him by his enemies, so the word inlarging is used, Psalm. 4. 2. This was fulfilled by Jephtah Iudg. 11. He is compared to a Lion, because in Davids time there were of the Gadites that had faces like Lions, and were most strong and valiant. For these words, and teareth the arme with the crown of the head, the Septuagint have, he shall break the arme and the ruler, the Cald. he shall kill rulers with Kings, and by the arme is meant strength, by the crown of the head, principality, so that it is meant, none should be so strong or so high, but he should overcome them. Of Gad it is also thus said for his going with the Reubenites before the other tribes to fight against the Canaanites, Ios. 1. 12, 13, 14. to incourage him in that enterprize. And therefore to denote his ingagement to this precedency in those warres made to subdue the Canaanites unto Israel, it is added:

Gen. 49. 19.

1 Chron. 12. 8.

Vers. 21. He provided the first part for himself, because there in a portion of the Law-giver he was saved, he came with the heads of the people, and executed the justice of the Lord, and his iudgements with Israel; The Septuagint, he provided in the beginning, or at the first, that is, he with the Reubenites seeing the land of Iazer, that it was fit for cattle desired to have his part there, and had it granted before that they went over Iordan, and parts were on the other side of that river given to the rest of the brethren.

Numb. 32.

Sol. Iarchi. Sol. Iarchi, he provided to receive his portion in the land of Og, which was the beginning of subduing that land, Hebr. it is, He saw a portion for him, but by seeing is meant providing. For these words, There in a portion of the Law-giver he was saved, Hebr. There a portion of the Law-giver covered, and it is a description of the land of Gad, it is said to be covered, as Calvin who following this reading well noteth, because it was not known till they desired that Countrey, that it should be a part of the inheritance of the children of Israel, and it is called a portion of the Law-giver, because Moses by the direction of the Lord assigned it unto them, and hereby he confirmeth it, that there might be no further controversie about it afterwards: but it was at the first covered or hid from Moses himself, that they should have a possession there, wherefore he reproved them and the Reubenites for desiring it. But being better informed by the Lord, he gave it unto them, and now saith, it is a portion of the Law-giver at the first covered. Some he saith will have it thus called, because the body of Moses was here covered or hidden, and some that it belonged before to the nobles of the Amorites, who had there ceiled Palaces, but he rejecteth both these. Iunius rendereth the words, there in a portion of the Law-giver he was protected, expounding it of the strength of the place, and the protection of the Lord over it, when he was gone to fight with his brethren against the Canaanites their wives, children and cattle being placed there in the mean season; and this is followed by Ainsworth, but I prefer the former, as agreeing to the words without any variation.

Calvin.

Iunius.

Hugo Card. Hugo following the vulgar Latine; And he saw his principalitie, and that in his part a Doctour was reposed, &c.] Perverteth the sense by expounding it as a propheſie of some Prince and wise men that should arise out of this Tribe. The next words, He came with the heads of the people and executed, &c. are to be understood of his going with the formest to fight against the Canaanites, naanites, and to destroy and root out that impure generation, which was a thing that God in his just judgement had decreed against them for their great abomination; and to this Calvin applieth, that Psalm 149. 6, 7, 8.

Vers. 22. Ainsworth.

And of Dan he said, Dan is a Lions whelp, he shall leap from Bashan. This seemeth, as Ainsworth hath it, to be a prophesie of singular exploits of this tribe, as against Leshem, Ios. 19.47. which they assaulted and subdued, and against another place, upon which they came suddenly, as a Lion leapeth upon his prey when they were secure, Iudg. 18. 27. From Bashan, this belonged not to that tribe, but to Manasseh, Numb. 32. 33. Ios. 13. 7, 8. yet because it was near, and Lions used to leap out from thence, this comparison is used, it being meant, he shall leap upon his enemies, as a Lion from Bashan; so Cazkuni. The Cald. not so to the purpose, His land shall be watered with the rivers running from Bashan. For thus it hath no agreement with that of the Lions whelp before spoken of.

Cazkuni.

Vers. 23.

And of Naphthali he said, O Naphtali satisfied with favour and full with the blessings of the Lord, possess thou the West and the South; the vulgar Latine, Naphtalim shall inioy abundance, hereby was shewed, that his land should be also very fruitfull, and mystically, because he propheseth abundance of favour, and fulness of blessing to be shewed here, the Lord Iesus his dwelling in this land, and doing miracles here first, and causing the light of the Gospel to shine is poin ed at. For in the land of Naphtali he first preached, Matth. 4. 13. and Capernaum called his City, Marc 2. 1. Matth. 9. 1. was in this tribe, and here he did many mighty works, Matth. 11. 23. Here also Cazkuni saith, were the first ripe fruits. For these words, possess thou the West and the South, Hebr. it is, the sea and the South; the Cald. the Sea of Ginosar, Hebr. the Sea Chinnereth, in the N. T. called Genesaret, Luc. 5. 1. and hereby the West was commonly named.

Cazkuni.

Numb. 34 11.

Vers. 24.

And of Asher he said, let Asher be blessed with children, and let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oyle, &c.] Asher signifieth blessing, and accordingly he is pronounced blessed either with children, because he should be very populous, or amongst the children, of Israel, intimating that he should be more blessed then other tribes, as is expressed in the next words, Let him dip his foote in oyle, and thy shoes shall be iron and brass, and as thy dayes so shall thy strength be, and let him be acceptable to his brethren, much like that of Jacob, he shall yield royall dainties, and his bread shall be fat; he should abound so with wheat and oyle of the best, that all should seek unto him therefore. Calvin will have his acceptableness to be for his staid wit and good manners, Iob 29. it is likewise said, I did wash my feet in butter, to set forth abundance. By his shoes shod with iron and brasse, mines of these mettals in his land are generally understood, or we may hereby understand his great strength, and so the next words are an exposition of these, as thy dayes so shall thy strength be, the word rendred thy strength Hebr. is רבאך onely here used, which Cazkuni saith is the same with ראב weakness or old age, as Chebes is the same with Chesed a Lamb, there being onely a metathesis of the letters, wherefore the vulgar Latine rendreth it, as thy youth, so shall thy old age be, meaning strong and lusty; yet both the Septuagint and Cald. render it strength, the sense according to all is the same; hereby it is prophesied, that the men of this tribe should be strong and able of body unto the end; Hugo saith, to the old age of the captivitie.

Vers. 25.

Gen. 49. 0.

Cazkuni.

Hugo Card.

Vers. 26.

And hitherto of the blessings of every tribe, now followeth the conclusion, v. 26. There is none like unto the God of Iesurun, that rideth upon the heauen in thy help, and in his excellencie on the skie. Of Iesurun see before, Deuteronomy 32. 15. Moses having blessed each tribe apart, now endeth with an admiration of the Lords power and excellency, who was the author of all these blessings, and with an admiration of Israels happinesse through him. He ſaith, none is like unto him, that is, amongſt all the tutelar gods of the heathen, hereby ſeeking to draw all Iſrael to a continuall love and fear of him. He is ſaid to ride upon the heavens for his honour and ſpeed in coming to help his, ſo Pſalm. 68. 34. likewiſe he is ſaid to ride upon the Cherubs, 2 Sam. 22. 11. and to ride upon Chariots and horſes of ſalvation, Hab. 3. 8. How he rode to help Iſrael, ſee Ioſ. 10. 10, 11. in his excellency in the skie; this is added to explain the former words; his riding is to ſhew his excellency and magnificence, that all might honour him.

Verſ. 27. The eternall God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlaſting armes, &c.] The word rendred refuge ſignifieth an habitation or manſion, and ſo God is ſaid to have bin the dwelling place of his people in all generations, Pſal. 90. 1. By theſe words it is ſhewed that the protection of the Lord was both above and under Iſrael, ſo that he was moſt ſafe and ſure, above that it was the firſt words ſhew, the eternal God, who hath bin already ſaid to be above riding upon the heavens, and the ſecond the next words doe declare; and underneath are the everlaſting armes, that is, as Calvin hath it, God ſtretcheth out his Almighty armes, ſo that Iſrael is held as it were by them being put under, and the firſt is ſaid to be eternall with reference to all times paſt, and the ſecond everlaſting with reference to all times to come. Of his eternity thus underſtood, ſee Pſal. 55 20. 74. 12. Col. 1. 17. Pſal. 90. 1. Eſa. 44. 6. And he ſhall thruſt out the enemy before thee, and ſhall ſay deſtroy, Although God would uſe Iſrael to deſtroy and drive the Canaanites out of the Land; yet he ſheweth here, that it was by Gods power alone.

Calvin.

Sol. Iarchi. Sol. Iarchi expoundeth it thus, underneath his manſion doe all ſtrong armed dwell, even Sihon and Og, who were the armes of the world, but were weakneſſe before him; but this agreeth not.

Verſ. 28. Iſrael then ſhall dwell in ſafetie alone, the fountain of Iacob ſhall be upon a land of corn, &c.] Iſrael is to dwell alone, becauſe he is not reckoned amongſt other peoples of the world, Numb. 23. 9. of his ſafe dwelling, ſee Jeremy 49. 31. Jeremy 23. 6. this is chiefly accompliſhed in Chriſt, and before in Solomons dayes who was a figure of him. Hugo ſaith, Iſrael ſhall dwell alone, that is by his own Lawes, and for the next words, he hath it, The eye of Iacob in a land, &c. that is, ſhall behold ſuch a land. But howſoever the word here uſed ſignifieth both an eye and a fountain, yet fountain is beſt underſtood, and it is as if he had ſaid, the ſtreams that flow from the fountain Jacob, that is, his children ſhall bee in a land of Corne and Wine. So it is ſaid, Pſalm. 68. 27. and much like this Eſay 48.

Hugo Card.

Calvin. If yet with Calvin any man taketh it for an eye, as if the meaning were, plenty ſhall alwayes be before his eyes, I reject it not.

Verſ. 29. Happy art thou (O Iſrael) who is like unto thee, &c. As the Lord is admired for his excellency, verſe 26. ſo Iſrael here for that which the Lord would doe for him, none like unto God, and none like his people Iſrael, and God rideth upon the Heavens, and his people upon high places, as it followeth; And thou ſhalt tread upon their high places, Deuteronomy 32. 13. The word ride is uſed, as here before of the Lord. Where alſo ſee what is meant by their high places. Saved by the Lord, the ſhield of thy help and the ſword of thy excellencie; He had ſaid before, Which rideth upon the Heavens for thy help, and in his excellency, now that all things might concinly anſwer that, he ſpeaketh of help and excellency in Iſrael; of Gods Angel with a ſword according to the letter coming to help Iſrael, ſee Joſ. 5. 13, 14. Pſalm. 44. 4, 7. Thine enemies ſhall be found liers unto thee that is, as Cazkuni hath it, they that are enemies unto thee in heart ſhall for fear deny it unto thee, feining themſelves friends, and ready to do thy pleaſure as the Gibeonites did. And thou ſhalt tread upon their high places; the Sept. upon their necks; the Cald. upon the joints of the necks of their Kings, as Joſ. 10. 24. was done, Pſ. 66. 12.

Cazkuni.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXIV.

AND hitherto of the tenth Particular, now followeth the eleventh and laſt touching Moſes his death and praiſe in this Chapter, which was written, as the Hebrews hold by tradition, by Joſhuah, unto theſe words, verſ. 6. but no man knoweth of his ſepulchre to this day, that which followeth of the praiſe of Moſes, and Joſhua his ſucceeding him, verſ. 7,8, &c. by Eſdras, when he reſtored the Bible, being burnt by the Caldees, and he alſo put titles to the Pſalmes. Calvin leaveth it doubtfull, whether Joſhuah or Eleazar the high Prieſt wrot it.

Partic: 11.

Hebræi.

Calvin.

And Moſes went up from the plains of Moab to the mountain of Nebo, &c.] Here Moſes doth as God hath bidden him, Chap. 32. 48, 49. when hee had firſt made his laſt will and teſtament as it were, bequeathing for Legacies, ſeverall bleſſings to the tribes of Iſrael. He pleadeth no more to be ſpared from dying yet, as ſometime hee did; but knowing it to bee the abſolute will of God, hee without any reluctng now ſubmitteth to it, teaching us by his example to doe likewiſe.

Verſ. 1.

Numb. 27. 12.

Deut. 3. 25.

Of the Mount Nebo, ſee before, Numbers 27. 12. that and Piſgah, ſaith Calvin, were two diſtinct tops of mount Abarim, being moſt high, and ſtanding near the land of Canaan, but they were near together, and Piſgah was the higheſt; for it is ſaid, he went up unto mount Nebo, to the top of Piſgah. Comeſtor will have mount Abarim and Nebo to bee two diſtinct, ſaying, he went by Abarim to Nebo, the toppe whereof was called Piſgah: And from thence the Lord ſhewed him the land, as hee ſaith alſo, Deuteronomy, 3. 27. All the land of Gilead unto Dan. Gilead was on this ſide Jordan, and already conquered, ſo that there was no need, that the Lord ſhould now ſhew him that land; therefore Cazkuni more according to the meaning rendreth it; he ſhewed him all the land from Gilead unto Dan, that is, from the ſouth part already had in poſſeſſion to the furtheſt north part, which was Dan, but thus the particle eth is expounded by min from Jonathan; ſaith theſe two places are mentioned, Gilead for Jephteh, that was of Gilead, and Dan for Sampſon, that came of Manoah of the tribe of Dan, theſe mighties to come, ſaith he, God ſhewed to Moſes in the Spirit. But the litterall ſenſe is plain, and therefore rather to be followed.

Cazkuni.

Ionathan in Targum.

And all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manaſſeh, and all the land of Iudah to the utmoſt Sea; In naming the places ſhewed unto Moſes, he beginneth with the moſt remote, lying next unto Dan, as Naphtali, and ſo cometh to thoſe nearer as Ephraim, and Manaſſeh in the midſt of the land of Samaria, and to Judah nearer to Jordan in the South, by theſe principall places named here, and verſe 3. all parts of the land being meant. Jonathan and Sol. Jarchi ſay, that theſe ſpecially were named, Naphtali for the Captains of Naphtali joyned wito Barak and Ephraim for Joſhuah, who was of that tribe, Manaſſeh for Gedeon, who was of Manaſſeh and Judah for the Kings that came of Judah, all moſt famous in Iſrael.

Verſ. 2.

Ionathan in Targum.
R. Solomon.

And the ſouth and the plain of the valley of Iericho the city of palm trees unto Zoar.] The land of Judah was before mentioned, verſe 2. to the utmoſt ſea, which was the weſtern coaſt, Deut. 11.24. but now of this tribe he ſhewed him the ſouth coaſt alſo, which is meant here by the ſouth, ſee Nu. 34. 3. this was by the land of Edom; the plain of Jericho was that along by the river Jordan next unto Zoar, being neareſt unto the place where Moſes now ſtood, and therefore it is deſcribed by Jericho, verſ. 1. right over againſt Iericho; and this Jericho the firſt conquered after their paſſing over Jordan is called the city of palm trees, becauſe they grew abundantly there, and from hence, becauſe balſam alſo and other fragrant fruits grew grew there, it had the name Jericho, ſignifying odoriferous. As Moſes was ſhewed the land from the north to the ſouth, and the pleaſanteſt part laſt of all, ſaith Ainſworth, ſo Abraham before had proceeded in his viewing of the land, Gen. 12. 6, 7, 8, 9. How Moſes from one place could diſtinctly perceive all theſe places, I have ſhewed before, Numb.27. 12. viz. God inabling him miraculouſly.

Verſ. 3.

Ainſworth.

But what favour was it to him to ſee this land, ſeeing he never muſt come into it?

Anſw. It could not yet, but be a great delight unto him, in regard of the promiſe made long before of it to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, to ſee it before he dyed, and to be certified, where each tribe ſhould be planted, eſpecially becauſe although he went not into this land, yet he knew, that when dyed, he ſhould forthwith go into a better, as Ferus reaſoneth, who alſo addeth, that the ſhewing of him this bleſſed land, but denying him to enter, was done to figure out the law ſhewing the way to life, but not inabling any man to enter into it, ſo that they, who by the law ſeek it, ſhall never obtain it.

Ferus.

And in ſhewing Moſes this holy land, myſtically he ſhewed him heaven, whereof it was a type, and all the comforts and benefits coming by Chriſt unto his ſoul.

Verſ.5,6. So Moſes, the ſervant of the Lord dyed there in the Land of Moab, &c. and he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab over againſt Beth-Peor, but no man knoweth of his ſepulchre to this day.] He is called the ſervant of the Lord for honour, becauſe this is the greateſt honour in the world. As Aaron, Numb.20.28. ſo Moſes dyeth upon the top of a mountain, having the bleſſed land of promiſe in his eye, to ſhew, that the ſervants of God are lifted up on high at their death in their minds, the world and all worldly things being contemned, and the eye of their mind being fixed upon the heavenly Canaan, and thereby comforted againſt the terrours of death. In that he dyeth ſo ſoon as he had ſeen the land of promiſe, Ainſworth noteth, that hereby was figured out, that the Law given by Moſes dyeth, and is of force no more, when the Goſpel appeareth, Gal. 3. 25. Rom. 7. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Ainſworth.

And he buried him] Never was the like honour done to any man, to be buried by the Lord; ſome will have this done by the miniſtry of angels, ſome by Michael, that is, Chriſt, becauſe it is ſaid, he ſtrove with the devil about the body of Moſes, the myſtery whereof they will have to be, that Chriſt buried, that is, aboliſhed the law, and ordinances given by Moſes, Rom.8.3. Gal.3.13. Col.2.14,16. But this myſtery will hold, as well if God ried him, ſeeing Chriſt is God. Calvin ſaith well, God needed not the miniſtry of Angels to bury him, ſeeing all things are ready to obey his will, and at his beck the earth might open and receive Moſes into the boſom thereof. But it is to be noted, that he dyeth upon a mountain, and is buburied in a valley, to ſhew, that the ſouls of the faithful are above, although their bodies ſleep below in the duſt. Of Beth-Peor, ſee Deut.3.28.

Jude verſ.9.

Calvin.

and no man knoweth of his ſepulchre to this day.] This is noted, as a thing of no ſmall moment, as alſo in that it is ſaid, Michael ſtrove with the devil about the body of Moſes: the Lord hid the ſepulcher of Moſes, leſt the Jews being prone to ſuperſtition ſhould ſeek unto him and worſhip him, as all agree. Moreover herein was a myſtery, as Ferus noteth, the aboliſhing of the Moſaical law ſo, as that no man knoweth the place where the rites of it were performed, being ſet forth hereby, or ſo as that none ſhould ever be able to reſtore them again, according to Ainſworth, and this was propheſied of, Hoſ.3.4,5.

Ferus.

Ainſworth.

Verſ. 7. And Moſes was 120. yeares old, when he died, his ſight was not dimme, neither was his naturall force abated. This was as Jonathan noteth, the ſame day that he was born; for he ſaith, it is a tradition, that he was born the 7 day of Jonathan in Targum.

of the moneth Adar, or February, and dyed the ſeventh day of that moneth, and this is noted by Ainſworth to be in the year of the world, 2553.

his ſight was not dimme,] Hebr. his eye. Cazkuni taketh it for his face, that ſhined ſtill, as Exod.34.30. Cazkuni.

nor his natural force abated] The Vulgar Latine, his teeth were not moved, and the word לחי here uſed, ſignifieth his cheek. Ainſworth rendreth it his natural moiſture. Junius, viriditas ejus, the meaning is, he dyed not for any decay in nature, which even at this great age continued the ſame, only it was the Will of God now to take him away. This, ſaith Ainſworth, figured out the ſtrength of the law in the conſcience of a ſinner, it weareth not away by length of time, but then is aboliſhed, and comfort brought, when the grace of Jeſus Chriſt cometh. Junius. Ainſworth:

To me this paſſage ſeemeth moſt remarkable, as figuring out the eſtate to come, ſeeing Moſes converſed familiarly with God, from whoſe preſence ſuch virtue came, that his natural body, although very aged, decayed not at all, much more then it is hereby intimated, that when our bodies ſhall be raiſed again, they ſhall be through God, that ſhall be all in all unto us in perpetual viridity world without end. For if a man ſo much toyled, and vexed by coming often to God, was upheld in ſuch an eſtate in this life to theſe years, why ſhould not the immortal unchangeable eſtate to come be believed, when we ſhall have nothing to vexe or grieve us, and be alwaies in Gods preſence, and ſee him face to face.

And the children of Iſrael wept for Moſes in the plaines of Moab thirty dayes, &c.] Thus long they alſo mourned for Aaron, Numb.20.28. ſee the Notes there. Verſ. 8.

And Ioſhuah, the ſon of Nun, was full of the Spirit of wiſdom, for Moſes had laid his hand upon him, &c.] See this done, Numb. 27. 18. Where alſo the Spirit is ſaid to be in him, and thus he was made an able ſucceſſour of Moſes in Government, and the great care of the Lord over his people appeared, in that one ruler being dead, without whom that Common Wealth could not have ſubſiſted, he now placeth another ſo ſufficient over them. Verſ. 9.

And there aroſe not a Prophet ſince in Iſrael like unto Moſes.] This, ſaith the Ordinary Gloſſe was added by Eſdras, and it ſerveth, as to purchaſe authority to the writings of Moſes, that they might be a conſtant rule for all Prophets and Teachers ever after to go by, ſo to put it out of doubt, that, till Chriſt came, that Prophet promiſed like unto Moſes, Deut. 18. 18. was not amongſt all the Prophets to be found. One thing where Moſes is noted to excell, is his familiarity with the Lord, of which before, Numb. 12. another, the mighty ſigns and wonders, which he did, wherein none that followed him did equal him, untill that Chriſt came, of whom he was but a figure and ſhadow. For he was much more approved by ſignes and wonders, Act. 2. 22. and Act. 3. 21. Heb. 2. 4. and to him Moſes and all the Prophets gave witneſſe, Act. 10. 40, 43. and to know and to believe in him is eternal life, Joh. 17. 3. 1 Joh. 5. 20. Verſ. 10. Gloſ. Ordin.

AND thus have I through the aſſiſtance of God, and help of many learned Commentaries gone through theſe five Books of Moſes, ſhewing both the ſenſe literal and myſticall. Neither doth any thing now remain, but to let the Reader underſtand, how the Hebrewes anciently diſtinguiſhed theſe Books into Sections or Lectures, which they call paraſhah, noting every one with theſe letters פפפ, and theſe Lectures are fifty four, one of which was read every Sabbath day, and becauſe there are but fifty two Sabbaths in the year, they read upon two two of them four Lectures, putting two of the shortest together, and they began this reading alwayes the Sabbath after the feast of Tabernacles, so Maimony. Whereby we may understand, what is meant by the reading of Moses every Sabbath day, Act. 15. 21. and by the Lecture of the Law, Act. 13. 15. of which I have written somewhat also, as upon the lecture of the Prophets upon that place.

Maimony in Misneh, treat. of prayer, c. 13.

In Genesis there were twelve Lectures: 1. From the beginning, to Chap. 6. vers. 8. 2 To Chap. 12. 1. 3 To Chap. 18. 1. 4 To Chap. 23. 1. 5 To Chap. 25. 19. 6 To Chap. 28. 10. 7 To Chap. 37. 1. and here two Lectures are put together, this being called Seder, and diversly noted by ᗡᗡᗡ, intimating it to be more compleat. 9 To Chap. 41. 1. 10 To Chap. 44. 12. 11 To Chap. 47. 28. 12 To the end of Genesis, but this is noted diversly with ᗡ standing for Sethumah, that is, a close, because, as R. Abraham hath it, this is the key and seal of this Book, yea of the whole law, and of all the Prophets, unto the dayes of Christ. For in Jacobs blessing are shewed all the Captivities and Deliverances of Israel, till the Teacher of Justice come, as it is written, untill Shiloh come. And because the time of Christ was unknown, and none could or should understand it, therefore this Section is continued with the former with little distinction. And hence it is, that some make but fifty three lectures, counting these two last for one, which I have followed upon Act. 13. 15. and indeed forsomuch as the seventh and eighth are also put into one, they may well be counted but fifty two.

R. Abraham in Zeror Hammor.

In Exodus the Sections or Lectures are eleven; first, from the beginning, to Chap. 6. 2. and this is Lecture 13. 2 from thence to Chap. 10. 1. and this 14. 15 to Chap. 13. 17. 16 from thence to Chap. 18. 1. 17 to Chap. 21. 1. 18 to Chap. 24. 1. 19 to Chap. 28. 20. 20 to Chap. 30. 12. 21 to Chap. 35. 1. 22 to Chap. 38. 21. 23 From thence to the end.

In Leviticus the Lectures are ten: 1 Unto Chap. 6. 4. and this is lecture 24. 25 to chap. 9. 1. 26 unto chap. 12. 1. 27 unto chap. 14. 1. 28 unto chap. 16. 1. 29 unto chap. 19. 1. 30 unto chap. 21. 1. 31 unto chap. 25. 1. 32 unto chap. 26. 3. 33 from thence to the end of Leviticus.

In Numbers the Lectures are also ten: 1 to Chap. 4. 21. and this is Lecture 34. 35 from thence to chap. 8. 1. 36 to chap. 13. 1. 37 to chap. 16. 1. 38 to chap. 19. 1. 39 to chap. 22. 2. 40 to chap. 25. 10. 41 to chap. 30. 1. 42 to chap. 33. 1. 43 from thence to the end of Numbers.

In Deuteronomy the Lectures are eleven: 1 to chap. 3. 23. and this is lecture 44. 45 to Chap. 7. 12. 46 to chap. 11. 26. 47 to chap. 16. 18. 48 to chap. 21. 10. 49 to chap. 26. 1. 50 to chap 29. 10. 51 to chap. 31. 1. 52 to chap. 32. 1. 53 to chap. 33. 1. 54 from thence to the end of Deuteronomy.

In expounding these Books, I have alwaies sought unto the Hebrew text in every difficulty to find out the true sense, because although translations differ, yet this remaineth in all ages as a most pure and nothing varying Fountain, as we are constantly to hold against those, that are of a contrary mind: For first it cannot be, that God in his providence should suffer it to be corrupted in any thing, it being an ever abiding treasure, which he hath given unto his Church, as the sure ground and piller of truth. Wherefore the Jews hold, That God hath more care of the letters and syllables of the Law, then of the Stars of heaven, and it may seem, that our Lord alludeth to this when he saith, till heaven and earth passe, not one jot or tittle of the Law shall passe. 2. The Jews, to whom these Oracles were committed to keep, have been so careful at all times, that no corruption might creep in, that they have numbred every letter, how oft it is found found in the whole Bible, and if one word hath been altered, either in the line or margin by the Scribe, it is held by them not allowable, nor to have any holineſſe of the Law in it at all, becauſe of ſuch corruption; yea if there be but one letter wanting, or one redundant, or one toucheth another, or be ſo obſcurely written, that it cannot be read, they allow it not to be read in their Synagogues, but only by children that learn to read, ſo Maimony. 3. Our Lord, who reproved the falſe gloſſes upon the Law made by the Scribes and Phariſees, never ſpeaketh againſt any corruption in the text, which he would doubtleſſe have done, if there had been any.

Matth. 5. 18. Rom. 3. 1, 2.

Maimony in Sepher Thorah, c. 10.

Matth. 5.

Touching Maimony ſo often cited, although he be of no great antiquity, for he lived about Anno 1200. of our Lord, yet he abridged the large Volumes of Jewiſh Records, and hath ſet down in the Hebrew tongue the Expoſitions, Canons, and Traditions, according to which the Lawes of God are in them interpreted ſo far beyond all that have gone before him, that it is ſaid of him amongſt the Jewes, for Moſes, the Prophet to this Moſes the ſon of Maimony, there was none like unto him. R. Judah Hannaſi about the year 150. gathered into one Volume ſuch private Records and Writings, as he could come by; After this a Talmud or Book of doctrine ſetting forth the practice of the law of old in their Church and Common-Wealth was compiled by others, having in it many fables and corrupt expoſitions. And Anno 230. the Talmud Hieruſalemi was finiſhed; and laſtly, Anno 500. the Talmud Babeli, according to which the Jewes live at this day. But all theſe were by Maimony brought into one, many fables and frivolous diſcourſes being left out. Jonathan, that made his Targum, is ſaid to have been a diſciple of Gamaliel, at whoſe feet Paul was brought up. And of theſe Writers good uſe may be made, the chaffe being ſeparated from the wheat, for the better underſtanding of many things, that are ſet forth in the Law of Moſes.

FINIS.

A Table of the principall matters contained in this Book

GENESIS.

*Ch.*1.*v.*6. THe waters above the firmament.

9 The earth called אֶרֶץ in Hebrew

11 The world created in Autumn in September.

13 No thorns nor poiſonous things at the firſt.

14 Mens proneneſſe to worſhip the hoſt of heaven provided againſt. Judiciary aſtrology how far forth allowable?

Queſt. 6. Of the greatneſſe and number of the ſtars.

20 Fowls, whether made out of water or earth?

24 The beaſts ſoul comes from the earth as the body doth.

Queſt. 5. Of Mules and Leopards, and monſters, whether any were made at the firſt, or creatures coming of conjunction?

26 The excellencie of man by his creation in nine things.

Queſt. 2. Man why called Adam?

Queſt. 3. Whether the woman were not after Gods image? man after Gods image in ſoul and body.

Verſ. 28. queſt. 5. What dominion over the creatures man had, and hath?

28 Men lived upon herbs and fruits onely at the firſt.

Chap. 2. verſ. 1. The Sabbath-day ſanctified from the beginning.

7 The perfect ſtature of man at his creation.

8 Where the garden of Eden was?

9 The tree of life, of what vertue?

15 Idle man was not in Paradiſe.

16 The ſin of Adam, not a ſingle, but a manifold ſin.

17 Death corporall, and ſpirituall, and eternall by Adams ſin.

Queſt. 3. Whether man onely, or both man and woman were forbidden eating?

21 The Church made out of Chriſt prefigured in Evah. The opinion that Adam was at the firſt both man and woman confuted: אִישָׁה, a woman containeth the name of God יה, the conceit.

24 Adam and Evah, why not aſhamed of going naked.

Chap. 3. verſ. 1. The queſtion about the Serpent fully handled and reſolved: of beaſts ſpeaking at ſometimes as well as the Serpent.

3 Evah ſinned three wayes in anſwering the Serpent: Four truths in the Serpents ſpeech.

6 Seven ſins in Evahs ſinning of eating the forbidden fruit. Adam in eating ſinned alſo ſeven wayes. Whether Adam or Evah ſinned moſt? Upon what day moſt probably they ſinned, and were caſt out.

7 Three wayes of being blinde, and having ones eyes opened. Womens uncovering of their nakedneſſe in former times.

12 The four degrees whereby ſinners proceed.

13 The Devil ſaid to go upon his belly, how? How he vitiates the end of mens actions, when he cannot the beginning? Serpents moſt probably went erect at the firſt.

16 The womans ſorrows in conceiving and bringing forth. The puniſhment of the woman for ſin threefold.

17 The puniſhment of man alſo three-fold.

20 Evah ſo called for the celebration of Gods mercy, whereby man died not presently.

21 Against pride in apparel, which should rather humble us.
22 By keeping man from living here ever, he is necessary to seek.
Chap. 4. verse 3. Who taught sacrificing first, and whence the Gentiles had it?
4 How Gods accepting of Abel appeared?
7 How the words of Cain may be best understood?
Chap. 4. v. 11 Abels blood crying, Christs blood better. Cain figured out the Jews, wherein?
15 The sin of Cain was sevenfold.
16 The land of Nod so called from Cains wandring there.
17 Of divers Cities pretended to be the first built in the world.
18 Lamech the first of all others that had two wives.
26 By Seth prayers in families in corrupt times begun.
Chap. 5. verse 2. Seth how said to be in Adams own likenesse? Adam most probably believed, and was saved.
25 Methushelah died the same year that the flood came.
24 How rest came to men by Noah?
32 Whether Noah lived single till 500 years? The ground of applauding a single life of old taken away.
Chap. 6. verse 3. Who the Sons of God were? The danger of marrying for beauty.
4 What Giants before the flood were?
6 How God is said to repent, and to be unchangeable?
10 Men and women came together openly.
17 The Arke, and the manifold mystery.
Chap. 7. v. 2 The number of beasts clean and unclean.
4 Of the Phœnix, and its singularity.
11 The fountains of the deep broken up what? and upon what particular mountain the ark rested?
Chap. 8. verse 12. The mystery of the Raven and Dove.
20 No coming together of male and female in the flood.
Chap. 9. vers. 2. How the fear of man was upon savage beasts?
3 The Question whether flesh might be eaten before the flood?
4 Reasons why eating blood is forbidden.
6 Of murther there are four sorts.
14 The Rainbowe most probably first appeared after the flood.
21 The drunkennesse of Noah, and drunkards sin now?
23 The failes of faithfull Pastours not to be divulged.
25 One punisht for anothers sin, why and how?
27 Of the conversion of the Europæans: a Prophecie against zealous hereticks, and for the simple.
28 Noah lived after Abrahams birth 51 years. All things in the writing of Moses not allegoricall.
Chap. 10. verse 8. Kings that are tyrants are after Nimrod.
9 How Nimrod is said to be an hunter?
10 The originall of Bel, otherwise called Baal.
11 From whence Ashur had this name first.
23 Job came of Huz, the first-born of Aram, son of Shem.
Chap. 11. vers. 1. The Hebrew tongue the onely language at first.
5 Vain-glory condemned in the builders of Babel. The Lord said to come down how?
7 How many languages men spake?
12 Canaan more in the Septuagint's Translation then in the Hebrew.
26 A most difficult question about Terah his age resolved.
31 Of Terah his conversion by Abram.
Chap. 12. verse 1. To forsake Countrey, kindred and fathers house, what?
2 The league betwixt God and the faithfull.
13 Whether Abram sinned in saying Sarai was his sister?
17 The great danger of adulterers
Chap. 13. vers. 15. The word לעולם: for ever, how to be understood?
Chap. 14. verse 14. Conditions required that a war may be lawfull.
Chap. 15. verse 2. Dying to the faithfull nothing but a loosing.
8 Of asking signes to be more confirmed in faith.

9 The manner of making covenants of old To the ſacrificing of our ſelves three things required.

10 Evil or by-thoughts coming in prayer, to be driven away.

14 The afflictions and deliverance of the Church fore-ſhewed Of the four hundred yeers ſervitude of Abrams poſterity.

16 The iniquities of a nation grown to the full, when?

Chap. 16. verſ. 3. Of Polygamy, and Abrams going in to Hagar.

4 Hearers coming to knowledge deſpiſing Paſtours, like to Hagar.

Chap 17. verſ. 2. The myſteries in the name Abram turned to Abraham.

11 Rules about circumciſion followed by Jews.

Chap. 18. verſ. 5. Why three appeared to Abraham, if the Trinity?

21 Judges not haſtily to proceed againſt malefactours

Chap. 19. verſ. 1. Three Angels came to Abraham, but two to Sodom.

5 A leſſer evil may not be done to avoid a greater.

17 Why Lot muſt not look behinde him?

26 An everlaſting covenant called a covenant of ſalt. Why Lots wife was turned into ſuch a pillar?

32 Drunkenneſſe above all ſins to be taken heed of.

Chap. 20. verſ. 6. Sins of ignorance dangerous. Of the ſin of adultery, the greatneſſe.

16 A double deliverance of the Jews from Egypt and Babylon.

Chap 21. verſ. 7. Mothers ought to nurſe their children.

9 How Iſhmael mocked Iſaac? Of deriding grace.

31 Why ſwearing is Hebr. שבע, coming of ſeven?

33 Divers trees dedicated to divers gods. In groves why worſhipping God was forbidden?

34 The allegory of the grove planted by Abraham.

Chap. 22. verſ. 1. God tempteth man how? and the Devil how?

2 Mount Moriah firſt deſigned for Gods worſhip.

11 Iſaac a figure of Chriſt in ſeven things.

15 God ſwearing by himſelf; the meaning thereof.

Chap. 23. verſ. 1. Of mourning for the dead.

4 The reſurrection commonly beleeved.

10 A ſhekel of three ſorts.

Chap. 24. verſ. 1. Of putting the hand under the thigh in ſwearing, the reaſon. Of ſwearing any, or adjuring them.

10 Of Camels and Dromedaries.

62 Four reaſons of covering the face.

66 In Iſaac and Rebecca, Chriſt and his Church figured out.

Chap. 25. verſ. 1. Keturah, who ſhe was? A myſtery in her children, as well as in Hagars.

7, 8 He was gathered to his people, in what ſenſe ſpoken? The immortality of the ſoul intimated hereby.

20 Things promiſed to be obtained by prayer.

23 The Jews ſerving Gentiles prefigured.

27 Whom the Scripture cals a ſlain man? Hunters, how more wicked then others? Affection in parents overſwayeth reaſon.

29 The birth-right, what, and how great a dignity? All the firſt-born Prieſts till Aaron. In eating, ſin committed five wayes. Five ſins in Eſau his ſelling his birth-right.

34 The types in Eſau and Jacob.

Chap. 26. verſ. 13. Admirable increaſe in ſome grounds.

19, 20 Iſaacs digging of wels of water figurative.

27 The troubles of the righteous, fathers and ſons. To Heaven God brings his divers wayes. The converſion of the Jews pointed at.

Chap. 27. verſ. 1. Gods promiſes and threatenings take effect in time.

2 Of childrens asking their parents bleſſing.

6 Of lying and diſſembling in Jacob, divers opinions.

40 Of a ſervant, the properties.

Chap. 28. verſ. 8. In what minde Eſau married into Iſhmaels family. Carnall men ſeek to pleaſe God in part onely.

10 Bethel vvhere Jacob lay, not the houſe of God: upon a ſtone he layeth his head, and ſeeth Angels.

12 Of Jacobs Ladder, the ſceals nine. Chriſt ſet forth by this Ladder, how? He that profiteth not in grace declineth.

17 The place of Gods ſpeciall preſence terrible.

18 Of Heathens anointing ſtones with oil.

Chap. 29. verſe 1. Chriſt and his Church typified in Jacob and Rachel.

10 Of mens kiſſings of women divers ſorts.

15 The force of beauty in wiving. Of dowries given to wives in marrying.

27 Rachel given to Jacob within ſeven dayes after Leah: the great ſin of Laban in cozening Jacob. The myſtery of Jacobs marrying two ſiſters.

Chap. 30. verſe 2. For keys in Gods keeping, of rain, of food, the womb, and ſepulchre. The myſtery of Jacobs children by maid-ſervants.

Myſteries in the hiſtories of the Old Teſtament.

37 Of the fantaſie, the force in the conception. The ſubtile dealing of Jacob excuſed.

38 Of the divers pieled rods, the myſtery.

Chap. 31. verſ. 23. What a Teraphim was? Whether Rachel were a worſhipper of idols?

53 Laban feared God, and ſerved idols?

Chap. 32. verſe 3. How Eſau came to live in mount Seir?

23 The Lord with whom Jacob wreſtled an Angel. His wreſtling was both corporeall and ſpirituall. Jacob made lame by wreſtling, why?

27 Why Jacob was now called Iſrael?

29 Why God would not tell Jacob his name?

30 How Iſrael ſaw God face to face?

32 Not eating of the ſinew whether ſuperſtitious? Chriſts ſuffering the Jews to prevail againſt him.

Chap. 34. verſe 2. The devils tempting allegorically ſet forth in Dinah.

25 Arguments brought to juſtifie the fact of Simeon und Levi. Of the ground won by Jacob with his ſword.

Chap. 35. verſe 2. Why in repentance they changed their apparel? In what deteſtation idolatry ſhould be had?

5 How to come to Gods houſe to be accepted of?

19 The falling of the Jews ſet forth.

Chap. 36. verſe 25. The firſt founder of the generation of Mules.

Chap. 37. verſe 2. Joſeph a type of Chriſt in goodneſſe.

21 Enemies turned to favour the righteous.

35 The word Sheol, not hell or limbus patrum, but the grave.

36 Joſeph a figure of Chriſt in many things.

Chap. 38. verſe 2. The ſonnes coming with Jacob into Egypt.

24 Adultery diverſly puniſht in divers Nations. A wicked woman with childe not to be killed before delivery.

29 The converſion of Gentiles before Jews, then of Jews.

Chap. 39. verſe 9. A rare example of chaſtity.

Chap. 40. verſe 8. Of the divers ſorts of dreams.

21 Keeping birth-dayes with feaſting. Joſeph a type of Chriſt in interpreting dreams.

Chap. 41. verſe 8. Wiſe men and learned ſhould be about Kings.

33 Preachers not onely to interpret, but to exhort.

41 Gold rings given as enſignes of dignity.

47 What age fit to rule in Church or Common-wealth.

56 Joſephs exaltation after his interpreting dreames, figuring out Chriſts exaltation.

Chap 42. verſe 1. Afflictions the beſt have here, the wicked hereafter.

7 The ſituation of the land of Egypt.

15 Ioſephs ſaying, By the life of Pharroh, no oath.

21 Of affliction, the benefit.

25 Wickedneſſe puniſhed in the kinde. Of the wicked, the perplexities in death.

38 Ioſephs brethren hardly uſed, a figure of the Jews.

Chap. 43. verſe 33. The figure in

Ioſephs

Ioſephs ſitting by himſelf at meat, &c.

Chap. 44 verſe 5. Of divining divers wayes amongſt divers.

2 Theft moſt hatefull to ſome.

15 Of Ioſephs committing his brethren three dayes, and the fourth day letting them out, the myſtery.

Chap. 45. verſe 3. The fear of the wicked at Chriſts coming.

8 Divers wiſe men for their wiſdome fathers to Kings.

27 Joy as well as ſorrow oppreſſeth the ſpirits.

28 Ioſephs revealing himſelf to his brethren, &c. applied unto Chriſt in many things.

Chap. 46. verſ. 34. The juſt an abomination to the wicked. Iſraelites ſhepherds, how? The rule of man over man not naturall.

Chap. 47. verſ. 22. Proviſion for Prieſts made by Heathen Kings. The vertues of the Prieſts of Heathens.

29 Reaſons of burying, and in what place. Of Ioſephs ſpeaking to Pharaoh for his brethren, and teaching them what to ſay, the Allegory.

Chap. 48. verſe 13. A figure of Chriſts croſſe in Jacobs croſſing his hand. Of the Gentiles preferring before Jews, a figure.

17 Chriſt ſet forth by an Angel.

Chap. 49. verſe 6. The Jews falling from their excellency, ſet forth by Reuben.

8 The Scribes and Phariſees cruelty to Chriſt.

10 How the principality held in Judah till the Son of God came?

13 Chriſts riding on an aſſe, death, &c. propheſied of.

16 Antichriſt figured out in Dan.

20 Of the Churches increaſe, and overcoming in fine.

26 The bleſſings of Ioſeph applied to Chriſt.

28 Paul propheſied of in Benjamin, being of that tribe.

Chap. 50. verſe 1, 2. Of imbalming dead bodies, and burying diverſe wayes in divers Countreys.

10 Of mourning for the dead by the Egyptians.

15 Fear cometh by ſin alwayes after.

22 Wronging one in his goods or perſon forgiven, how?

EXODUS.

Chap. 1. verſe 7. The time of Iſraels abode in Egypt 210 years. Of Jacobs comming into Egypt, and his ſeed multiplying after Joſephs death, the myſtery.

8 What Kings were in Egypt after Joſephs death.

10 Malum conſilium conſultori peſſimum. Sin puniſhed in the kinde in Egyptians. The Iſraelites diverſly abuſed by the Egyptians.

15 The Iſraelites idolatrous in Egypt, and therefore long puniſhed.

Chap. 2. verſe 5. How great the learning of Moſes was.

11 Moſes a figure of Chriſt in divers things.

16 Moſes his father in lawes three names.

24 Moſes in driving away ſhepherds, &c. a type of Chriſt.

Chap 3. verſe 1. Mount Sinai and Horeb one and the ſame.

2 The Angel appearing to Moſes, the Son of God. The Church in affliction as the buſh on fire not conſumed.

3 The Spirit of God like to fire, wherein? Of divers miraculous fires in ſundry places.

4 Calling one by name a ſigne of favour. Bare-footed in ſerving God ſome are. Reverence and heavenlines of minde.

Chap. 3. verſe 6. Of men being covered before God, a reaſon.

8 Of Canaan, the exceeding fruitfulneſſe, and now barrenneſſe.

10 The unwillingneſſe of ſome to the Prophetical Office.

14 Of the name I am, divers reaſons of divers.

15 Of the names of God, and the name יהוה.

19 The law ſaveth not, but Gods grace and power. Humane learning uſed to edification, ſet forth by the riches of Egypt.

Chap. 4. verſe 2. Chriſt figured out in Moſes his rod.

13 Chriſt to be ſent for our deliverance pointed at.

24 Why God was ſo wrath with Moſes for Gerſhoms uncircumciſion.

26 Zipporah a figure of the Church of the Gentiles.

Chap. 5. verſ. 6. Of evil thoughts yeelded to therefore.

10 Coming from under the Devils dominion troublesome.

Chap. 6. verſ. 2. God not known by the name Jehovah.

20 Matches of Prieſts with the bloud royall.

Chap. 7. verſ. 7. Of Inchanters, Wizards and Aſtrologers,

8 The Devil can do no miracles,

14 Judgements by all the elements and in all the ſeaſons,

Chap. 8, verſ. 7, Deſtructions of countreys by frogs and mice, Frogs repreſenting hereticks. In things wherein men ſin they are puniſhed, 18 The Spirit of God called the finger of God, why?

20 Children diſobedient to parents like flies,

Chap. 9. verſ. 8. The adulterous, as thoſe that had boils in Egypt.

18 A miraculous hail in France.

22 The laſt judgement ſet forth by the hail. The thief loſeth more then he getteth.

Chap. 10. verſ. 4. Plinies hiſtory of Locuſts.

8 Reprobates obey in ſome things, but not in all.

18 Flatterers like unto Locuſts, wherein.

22 Hells torments ſet forth in the ten plagues of Egypt.

Chap. 11. verſ 9. Covetouſneſſe cauſeth the death of faith. Chriſts coming to judgement at mid-night.

Chap. 12. verſ. 1. The moneths of the yeer, how reckoned by Hebrews.

6 Chriſt proved the Meſſiah by the Jews Cabala. Chriſts coming to Jeruſalem in the time figured.

8 Two wayes we muſt receive Chriſt, beleeving and eating. In receiving the Lords Supper rules to be obſerved.

11 Standing not enjoyned in eating the Paſſeover.

12 To haſten our repentance without any delay.

36 Humane learning of good uſe for Divines

Chap. 13. verſ. 6 What the Phylacteries of the Jews were: the ſuperſtitious uſe of Scripture.

21 Of the cloudy pillar, five benefits. Many miracles continuing in the wilderneſſe. Chriſt figured out by the pillar of a cloud and fire.

Chap. 14. verſ. 27. Alexander paſſing on foot over ſea with his army. Subject to temptation the baptized till death.

31 Beleeve in man, how we may?

Chap. 15. verſ. 1. The firſt ſong in Scripture made in verſe. The beginning of dancing of men and women. The wicked world as an horſe ridden by the Devil.

4 Chriſt propheſied of as God and our Salvation. By what weapons Chriſt fought againſt the Devil.

10 Sin, as lead ſinking to hell the committer.

20 Whether women Propheteſſes may teach?

20 Chriſts Croſſe ſweetens the bittereſt affliction.

Chap. 16. verſ. 4. Baptiſme muſt be before the Lords Supper.

8 Fleſhly rites ſet forth under the Law, and clear light under the Goſpel.

13 Quails brought two ſeverall times Quails a moſt dainty meat.

14 Chriſt comes down in the word.

16 Of worldly things none have more then another.

19 Againſt worldly cares, and to depend upon God.

27 Againſt late repentance.

35 Manna, why called Angels food? Manna figured Chriſt in how many things? The word of God, wherein like unto Manna.

Chap. 17. verſ 11. Chriſt and his Spirit figured out in Moſes, with his hands ſupported by Aaron and Hur.

14 Amalek a figure of Antichriſt, to be rooted out.

Chap. 18. verſ. 15. In going to law Gods judgement to be ſought.

21 The people to have an hand in the choice of officers. Seven things required in a Ruler.

24 The Gentiles ſhall teach the Jews the truth.

Chap 19. verſ. 1. Pentecoſt kept according to the day of giving the Law.

10 How we muſt be ſanctified before hearing the Word.

16 God appeared diverſly, as the occaſion required.

Chap. 20. verſ. 1. The things figured out in the rites of the Law.

24 An altar of earth, or unhewen ſtone, why made? Chriſt figured out hereby.

25 Quaint preaching, as hewen ſtones for altars.

26 God not pleaſed with externals, but with the heart.

Chap. 21. verſ. 2. None ſervants now under the Goſpel. The difference between ſervants Jewiſh and Heathenish.

8 A fathers ſelling his ſons allowed.

14 Sanctuaries amongſt Chriſtians and Heathens.

15 Againſt ſtriking, reviling, or killing parents.

19. Divers mulcts for ſtriking.

28 Satisfaction for hurts by beaſts to be made.

Chap. 22. verſe 3. Theft puniſhable by death, in what caſe?

25 What uſury is, and how it is ſinned hereby.

29 Our firſt fruits to be given to God, what?

Chap 23. verſe 8. The great corruption that is in gifts.

10 Of the reſt in heaven, the Sabbaticall year a type.

14 Come together in one place, why we muſt?

18 No good work to be left undone till death.

Chap. 24. verſe 1. Of expelling the Canaanite, the myſtery.

2 Amongſt men degrees to Godward.

9 How man at any time hath ſeen God?

Chap. 25. verſe 3. Faith, confeſſion hereof, and preaching ſet forth by gold, ſilver and braſſe.

16 Chriſt figured out by the Ark, in how many things?

22 The Scriptures figured out in the Cherubims.

31 The word, Lords Supper, and prayer typified in the ſhew-bread, and frankincenſe.

39 Chriſt and his Miniſters figured by the candleſtick.

Chap. 26. verſ. 3, 6. Church Militant and Triumphant typified.

Chap 27. verſ. 1. Chriſt and the heart typified in the brazen altar.

21 Lights in the Church alwayes neceſſary here.

Chap. 28. v. 30 Five things wanting in the Temple after the captivity.

39 Chriſt, unity, glory, Deity, ſet forth in the High Prieſts ornaments. Miniſters ſolemnly ordein'd, their duties. Miniſters, their vertues typified in their garments.

Chap. 29. verſe 4. Seven points of holineſſe ſet forth. Between Chriſts anointing and ours, the difference.

13 The fat heart and luſt to be burnt.

15 The purging of the conſcience typified by waſhing the inwards.

30 The Apoſtles to ſtay at Jeruſalem ſeventy times ſeven dayes.

35 None but the ſanctified to eat the Lords Supper. Againſt reſerving any of this bread to be adored.

40 The Maſſe not the continuall ſacrifice, but prayer.

Chap. 30. verſe 11. Chriſt typified by the altar of incenſe in his glory. Corruption cleaveth to our beſt actions.

35 By prayer the Devil driven away. Prayer abuſed to vain-glory abominable.

Chap. 31. verſe 1. The miniſtery an honourable calling.

3 The rare inventions of men from Gods Spirit.

12 Of keeping the Sabbath two reaſons.

18 Three ſorts of writing of Gods Commandments.

Chap. 32. verſe 1. Of all corruption in the Church four cauſes.

4 Humane wit and eloquence abuſed to idolatry.

6 Spirituall adultery and corporall go together.

15 Of writing ſpirituall things, the commendation.

34 Chriſt the angel, and now another angel. The Jews deſtruction by Romans imputed to idolatry.

Chap. 33. verſe 18. Of the ſupream power, the burthen.

21 The converſion of the Jews in the end.

Chap. 34.

Chap. 34. verſ. 1. Three things figured out by renuing the allegory.

6 Paſſages amongſt the Rabbins touching Chriſt.

12 Idolatry called whoredome, why?

Chap. 35. verſe 1. Of the Sabbath often repeated, the reaſon.

LEVITICUS.

Chap. 1. verſ. 2. Difference between Laws morall and ceremoniall. Hereſies about ſacrifices. What ſacrifices the Heathen offered.

3 Four ſorts of ſacrifices under the Goſpel.

7 Fire coming from Heaven in the Temple till Manaſſeh.

Chap. 2. verſ. 3. Knowledge, almſdeeds, and prayer.

11 Leaven ſometime to be offered with unleavened. A moderation in all things, and no extream.

Chap. 3. verſ. 1. Women as well as men accepted of by God.

16 Fat and bloud ſetting forth Chriſt.

Chap. 4. verſ. 2. Sins of ignorance onely expiable. What wilfull ſinning is, for which no ſacrifice.

13 Bloud fetcht from Chriſt ſeven times.

35 The High Prieſt, whole Church, and the moſt eminent ſubject to ſin.

Chap. 5. verſ. 3. Of ſwearing, four ſorts.

16 The greatneſſe of ſinning about holy things. Of ſin three names in Hebrew.

Chap. 6. verſ. 8. The Spirit of God ſet forth by fire.

11 Our good deeds remembered in Heaven.

27 Of the baptized, ſome as earthen veſſels to be broken.

Chap. 7. verſ. 16. Chriſt his reſurrection the third day, and ours.

19 The vertues of the wicked vices, ſpecially of conſulters with wizards.

Chap. 9. verſ. 1. Touching the eighth day, remarkable things.

22 Lifting up of hands in prayer, &c. why?

24 Of fire coming from Heaven upon ſacrifices, five reaſons. Of this fire, four rare properties.

Chap 10. verſ. 2. Of falſe worſhip, and teaching corrupt doctrin, danger.

5 Burying in holy garments, ſuperſtition.

6 Of rending garments, reaſons; and againſt the Prieſts doing of it. The Prieſts ſin redounds to the people.

Chap. 11. verſ. 4. Meditating upon the Word, and diſtinguiſhing betwixt good and evil.

12 Againſt tyranny and violence.

14 Againſt ſlie and ſubtill wicked perſons. Againſt defaming others.

16 Laying up treaſures here, to be worldly-minded. Mothers neglecting their children, forbidden. Againſt vain talk, hypocriſie, deadneſſe in adverſity.

17 Againſt puſillanimity and intemperance. Worldly wicked gain, baſe and vile.

18 Againſt worldly-mindedneſſe and cruelty.

19 Againſt unadviſed anger, fleſhly luſts, and fleſhlineſſe. Againſt worldly thoughts in ourprayers, &c.

21 To live as pilgrims here; to fight again the Devil.

29 Againſt ſtealing, idleneſſe, and truſting in worldly things.

30 Againſt worldly ſubtilty and grief for loſſes here: againſt temporizing and vain-glory,

33 Deceit in executours and flattery, Waſhing by repentance for ſin in the godly, 36 Doctours wicked corrupted, but not their doctrine.

Chap. 12. verſ. 3. Originall ſin requires much repentance, The womans ſin double to Adams at the firſt.

8 Of churchings of women, three reaſons,

13 Of the power of binding or looſing from ſin, Confeſſions to be made of what ſins,

3 Breaking of any one Commandment,

6 To bear patiently Church-cenſures, not to ſin again,

15 To aſcribe no juſtice to our ſelves,

37 How to judge of an heretick.

Of

Of baldneſſe, and hair on the head.
46 Sin as the plague of leproſie.
Chap. 14. verſe 7. Chriſts two natures, the blood and water comming out of his ſide, &c. figured out.
10 Ceaſe from every ſin, or do nothing to proceed in grace by degrees.
Chap. 15. verſe 12. Uncleanneſſe by hearing corrupt teachers.
Chap. 16. verſe 29. In keeping a faſt five things required.
Chap. 17. No ſervice done to God acceptable, but by his Church.
Chap. 18. v. 3. Inceſtuous marriages common amongſt the Heathen.
6 Inceſtuous copulations againſt nature. Diſpenſations of Popes for inceſtuous marriages.
18 Againſt the lawfulneſſe of Polygamy. Marriages forbidden, which God forbids not: againſt marrying of cozen-germans.
19 Againſt blazing anothers ſins abroad.
22 Againſt the males lying with the male, lawes.
Chap. 19. verſe 9. Of liberality to the poor, examples of the Heathen.
12 Touching common ſwearing, obſervations.
13 Againſt with-holding wages in part from a ſervant.
18 Rare examples of forbearing to revenge.
19 Againſt joyning circumciſion to baptiſme, and the law to the Goſpel.
25 Fruits of the earth and meats to be ſanctified, then eaten.
26 Of divinations divers ſorts, and their vanity.
28 Cutting the fleſh, or whipping the body, as Papiſts, Heatheniſh.
29 Fornication puniſht with death.
32 The honour of the aged in Sparta.
Chap. 21. verſ. 9. The Jewiſh Synagogue typified in an whore, whom a Prieſt might not marry, and by a Prieſts daughter burnt.
15 To be a Virgin fit for Chriſt, what required.
20 The Prieſts perſon amongſt the Heathen excellent. Againſt ignorance in Miniſters, unſoundneſs in doctrine, tolerating any ſin, living in any ſin, timerouſneſſe to reprove, uncharitableneſſe, covetouſneſſe, falling away from any goodneſſe, pride, detraction, fleſhly luſts, and ſaying, but not doing.
21 Miniſters to be outwardly unblemiſhed, if it might be. Of miniſters wearing black or white.
Chap. 22. verſe 18. Prayers blemiſhed by wandring thoughts.
Chap. 23. verſe 5. The Jews ſtrictneſſe in keeping the Sabbath-day.
14 Chriſt figured in the ſheaf, and his two natures.
16 A new way of ſerving God under the Goſpel, old Rites ceaſing.
17 The Spirit of God prefigured by Leaven at Pentecoſt.
24 Why ſounding of trumpets of rams hornes was appointed? Preparation before keeping the day of atonement.
36 We muſt live here as ſtrangers. The Lords day, and reſt in heaven figured by the eighth day. Divers graces by the divers branches taken.
Chap. 25. v. 10. The word לעולם, for ever, taken three wayes.
15 By Chriſt freedome obteined, ſet forth by the Jubile: alſo reſt at the end, and by the ſeventh year reſt in death.
28 Chriſt our Redeemer in the redeemer of land typified.
Chap. 26. verſ. 1. The ſuperſtition of kneeling upon a ſtone in Popery.
6 By beaſts great and little men deſtroyed.
16 Of fear, three ſorts.
30 Of Idols, the baſeneſſe, Jupiter Hammon, why ſo called? Whileſt the body lieth unburied, in what ſtate the ſoul?
31 Of the Synagogues and ſchools of the Jews.
34 Seventy years deſolation, why?
Chap. 27. verſ. 7. Chriſtians eſteemed of before God more or leſſe.
10 Duties to be done by each one for himſelfe, not by another.
30 Of tithe two ſorts, yea three ſorts.

NUMBERS.

Chap. 1. verſ. 2. Onely Iſraelites, not ſtrangers numbered, and men, not women or children, why?
47 Prieſts not to ſerve in the wars.

*Chap.*2. verſe 1. To do all things in otder, what? Four notable obſervations about the forme of the campe.

*Chap.*3.v. 37. The Levites figuring Mininiſters of the Goſpel, wherein?

38 The power ſecular and ſpirituall ſhould joyn together.

39 Gods miniſters feweſt, all the Tribes.

Chap. 4. verſ. 1. Why the Levites began not their ſervice till 25, &c. Of the covering of all things, the myſtery.

16 Eleazar, as an Arch-Biſhop, Ithamar a Biſhop.

18 To admit the unworthy to miniſter, is to cut them off.

34 The Levites dignitie above thoſe of other Tribes.

*Chap.*5. verſe 5. Without confeſſion no remiſſion of ſins.

13 In what caſe a wife ſuſpected was tried.

31 Of adulterous women, divers trials. This way of the jealous husband a figure of Gods dealing with the Jews

*Chap.*6.*v.*1. Rules about Nazarites.

4 To drink wine held unlawfull by Tatians. Water like wine on the day that Chriſt turned water into wine. Of things forbidden to the Nazarites, the myſteries. Holy meditations ſet forth by the Nazarites hairs.

9 Shaving hair in the unclean, and offering, ſignifie what? The leaſt ſin defileth; ſin committed by the juſt fruſtrates his juſtice, the cleanſed their cleanneſſe.

24 The Trinity ſet forth in the bleſſing of Aaron. In a Prieſt bleſſing, ſix things required. Chriſts bleſſing figured out in Aarons bleſſing.

*Chap.*9. verſe 1. The paſſeover kept in the wilderneſſe, why and how?

9 What journey makes unfit to keep the paſſeover.

14 The Jews converſion figured out in the paſſeover the ſecond moneth, and other gentiles by the third.

Chap. 10. verſe 2. Two ſilver trumpets at firſt, 120 afterwards.

9 The trumpets blown two dayes, every moneth alike. Of a juſt war, 12 cauſes.

10 What muſick and ſongs were uſed at feſtivals. Preachers ſet forth by Prieſts ſounding with trumpets, and the four uſes of preaching.

11 The 3 journeys of Chriſtians.

12 Of the wilderneſſe of Paran a deſcription.

14 Four things in coming to heaven typified in four Tribes.

16 Gods miniſters to be followed, Religion chiefly intended.

Chap. 11. verſe 1 A fire ſent three times in judgement to Iſraelites. Sinning after Covenant making moſt dangerous.

5 Cooks not deſired amongſt the Romans. Leeks, garlick and onions deified by Egyptians.

6 Carnall Chriſtians grow either weary, or to undervalue the beſt things, and overvalue the worſt.

14 Of good Rulers, the properties. Death may not ſimply be deſired by any.

16 None to miniſter in ſpirituall things but allowed by Moſes. Divers Courts of Rulers in and about the Sanctuary & Temple, and elſewhere. The age of Elders, Judges and Magiſtrates.

17 Gods Spirit, how called the ſpirit of Moſes.

18 Three reaſons why God giveth ſinners their deſires.

20 Of Eldad & Medad, the myſtery.

30 The employment of the great Synedrion.

34 To go from the ſpirit to the fleſh, deſtruction.

*Chap.*12. *verſ.*2. The ambition of thoſe in high place. Againſt Profeſſours oppoſing their Teachers. The Lords taking the Gentiles for his Church figured out.

3 Meeknes an incomparable vertue.

6 Three wayes God revealed his will, and two more.

10 The ſhutting out of the Church of the Gentiles figured in Miriam.

*Chap.*13.verſe 32. How the land of Canaan ate up the inhabitants. Onely two ſorts of Preachers incourage to heaven.

*Chap.*14. *verſ.*1. Sinners like the murmuring Iſraelites in five things. Sinners being pardoned muſt ſuffer here, not do penance.

22 Iſrael murmured ten times.

*Chap.*15.*v.*15. Sincerity and charity as one is able, myſtically ſet forth.

19 To acknowledge all our graces to come from God. (for commiſſion.

24 For ſins of omiſſion ſacrifices as well as 31 Preſumptuous ſinning puniſht with death
38 The ſuperſtition in their fringes, as Papiſts in croſſes.
39 To remember to keep all, even the leaſt Commandment.
Chap.16.verſ.5. Every one at the laſt day made to appear as he is. (incenſe.
12 The prayers of the wicked as Korahs
36 Deviſers of new formes of Church-government like Korah.
41 Hereticks books how to be uſed.
46 No praying for the dead but for the living onely.
Ch.17.v.6. Chriſt ſet forth by Aarons rod.
8 The miniſter, the word, and regeneration ſet forth in Aarons rod.
Chap.19.verſe 10. Chriſt typified in the red heifer, he the truth. The unbelieving Jews made unclean by Chriſt, but towards the end of the world ſhall be clean. A man dead in ſin moſt unclean of all unclean things.
20 Some defilement needing cleanſing, yea even in preaching; to cleanſe others. Sprinkled in baptiſme typified in holy water.
Chap. 20 verſe 10. The rod of Moſes and Aaron all one.
12 The greatneſſe of the ſin of Moſes. Unbelief, a very great ſin. Not keeping the law, nor ſacrificing ſaves, but Jeſus. The unbelief of others fruſtrates not Chriſts paſſion to us.
14 The Edomites a figure of the Jews denying the Apoſtles free paſſage in preaching.
21 Not to ſtrive, but to avoid contention.
24 The ſouls of the faithfull live after death. The ceaſing of Aarons prieſthood figured out. Sacrifices for ſin purged not from ſin.
Chap.21.v.2. Of anathematizing 3 kindes.
8 The figure of the ſerpent and brazen ſerpent in ſeven things.
17 Water miraculouſly given them the (third time.
26 Till pride be deſtroyed, the devil reigneth
35 The neerer death, the more terror from Satan.
Chap.22.verſe 6. Of curſing enemies, and ſacrificing to overcome them. (good not.
7 Wicked prophets propheſie for reward, the 26 How God dealeth with ſinners to convince them.
28 The ſimple of this world choſen to confound the wiſe. Of dumb beaſts ſpeaking, relations of divers.
41 Balaam a type of Prieſts and Scribes, Balak of the devil.
Chap.23.verſe 21. Standing up to hear the Word uſed by Conſtantine. (Chriſt.
22 Of the Unicorn, and in reference to Chap. 24. verſe 14. The counſell given by Balaam to Balak in ſecret.
17 Chriſt ſhall ſubdue all Nations. (pheſie.
24 Of Alexander and the Romans, a Pro-
Chap.25.verſe 3. Baal-peor the Moabites Idol, why ſo called? (niſh them not 4 The peoples ſins, the Rulers ſins that pu-
12 Phineas living alwayes in dignity in his poſterity. The zealous onely againſt ſin to be preferred
14 The Antichriſt ſet forth in Zimri
Chap.26. verſe 14. The Iſraelites more in number ſtill after 600000 deſtroyed Chap.27. v.1. By what degrees one comes to be accepted of God (Jews laws
7 Who is heir of fathers inheritance by the 13 The faithfull dying go to their friends
21 The King to be directed by the high prieſt
Chap. 28.verſe 2. A ground of tranſubſtantiation laid hold upon by Jeſuits
10 Of 6 lambs to be offered on the Sabbath, Ezek. 46.4. the myſtery, the Sabbath how to be kept 11 The putting off the old man and putting on Chriſt prefigured. Twelve moneths dedicated by Romans to twelve gods Chap.29.verſ.12. Sin decreaſing in the faithful, but ſtill remaining (moſt Chap.31.verſ.34. Gods miniſters rewarded
Chap.32.verſ.33 Biſhops and Rulers moved to fight for worldly profits, come ſhort of Canaan (myſterie.
Chap.33. verſ.33. Of the 42 manſions, the Chap.35.verſ.4. Miniſters dwelt in Colledges by themſelves. (Chriſts death.
25 The leaſt ſins not remitted, but by 26 The people muſt frequent Sermons. Of the truly penitent, the qualities.
27 The danger of ſinning after repentance.
Chap. 36. verſ.8. Of Iſraelites marrying within their own Tribes.

DEUTERONOMY.

Chap.4.verſ.4. To hold hereſie, an adding to the Word.
9 The Jews confidence in good things written 15 Every one to pray as he or ſhe is able.
Chap.7. verſ.7. Sins ſet forth by the ſeven Nations; to be expelled the ſins in a great number coming from them. (why?
22 Some ſins ſtill remaining in the beſt, and Chap.11. verſ.14. The two times of the firſt and latter rain.
Chap.12.v.17. Of tithes two ſorts, of the one of which they might eat. See more, Ch.14. 28

To

*Chap.*14. *verſ.*28. To ſee Gods glory, not our own, in all our children, 9 A charge againſt ſetting up other Miniſters before Levites,

*Chap.*13. *verſ.*3. How many wayes things to come are foretold, The differences between true and falſe Prophets, mhe Jews convinced by their own counting touching Chriſt, Who are fenced againſt deceivers, and who not,

*Chap.*14. *verſ.*27. Againſt thoſe that will not give tithe under the Goſpel,

*Chap,*17, *verſ,*1, That which God hath not commanded in his ſervice, forbidden,

18 Kings to write out, and read the Book of God,

14 Of Wizards, Diviners, Witches, and Inchanters,

15 For Diviners the Jews had Prophets to go unto,

*Chap,*19, *verſ,*14, mhe great ſin of removing land-marks myſticall, Of adding to the Word, or taking from it,

*Chap,*20, *verſ,*1, What wars are lawfull, Anabaptiſts objections againſt war anſwered.

5 Of dedicating an houſe, the manner. Three things exclude from heaven, as three from the war.

10 Seven commandments given to Noahs ſons

19 Husbandmen ſpared in time of war.

20 In fighting Gods battels againſt ſpirituall enemies to be without fear. Preachers firſt to offer peace, the yeelding to be ſpared.

*Chap.*21. *verſ.*9. The cutting off ſin, and ſorrowing therefore in the penitent.

15 The birth-right; a double portion, dominion, the prieſthood.

18 A rebellious ſon executed.

*Ch.*22. *v.*4. A King helping up a beaſt fallen in the way. To help up ſuch as fall into ſin.

5 Women putting on mens apparell unblameably.

7 The leaſt of Gods Commandments keeping brings a bleſſing. Of a birds neſt found, the myſtery.

13 The manner of marrying amongſt the Jews. Paſtours not to remove without the approbation of a Synod.

*Chap.*23. *verſ.*1. Gelding of any creature held unlawfull by Jews. Four courts of Gods houſe, for Prieſts, men clean, women clean, for the unclean, & for the aliens. He in whom the ſeed of the word abides not, excluded.

2 Baſtards excluded from Paleſtraes amongſt Athenians.

3 Hereticks not to miniſter, though recanting

9 Evil thoughts defile a man, and repentance muſt be therefore.

14 Sin covered by repentance, otherwiſe God will be gone.

*Chap.*24 *verſ.*1. Sin put away, never to be reſumed again.

6 Fear and hope, as the nether and upper-mill-ſtone.

14 Four ſins in detaining the labourers hire.

*Chap.*25. *verſ.*1. The manner of proceeding in beating offenders.

5 How long it muſt be before a widow marrieth. A man may not now marry his brothers wife.

10 Chriſt after whoſe name the faithfull are to be called, figured out in the brother dead without iſſue.

11 The hand to be cut off, errour in point of juſtification,

*Chap,*26, *verſ,*1, The ſolemn manner of bringing baskets of firſt-fruits.

*Chap,*27, *verſ,*24, Hatred in the heart mutder, Of ſmiting there are divers ſorts accurſed, 26 Of the accurſed ten ſorts, or ten words to ſet them forth.

*Chap,*28, *verſ,*13, Of the promiſes of bleſſing made to the righteous,

53 The miſeries of the Jews at the deſtruction of Jeruſalem,

68 Spirituall judgements ſet forth by corporeall,

*Chap,*29, *verſ,*29, The ſecrets of the Lord of divers ſorts,

*Chap.*31. *verſ.*9. The book of Deuteronomy read by the Kings Law.

*Chap.*32. *verſ.*2. Heavenly doctrine ſet forth by rain and dew.

6 To render evil for good, evil for evil, good for good, good for evil.

8 The Angels ſet over ſeverall Nations.

10 Mans heart like the wilderneſſe in three things.

14 The wheat, honey, milk, and butter in the cburn.

21 Of the vocation of the Gentiles and Jews abjection.

43 Of the uniting of Jews and Gentiles in the faith.

*Chap.*33. *verſ.*11. Miniſters enemies deſtroyed unawares.

18 The heads of Iſſachar obſerved, the times, how?

*Chap.*34. *verſ.*5. The rites of Moſes his Law never to be reſtored.

7 After the reſurrection no waxing old any more.

Concluſion.

The ſeverall lectures in theſe five Books, the incorruption of the Hebrew Text in any part of Maimony, the Targum Hieroſol. the Targum Babyl. and of Jonathan when he lived, and were compoſed.

FINIS.